The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII....NO. 8520. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

POLITICS OF THE NEW-YEAR

DISCORD AMONG OHIO DEMOCRATS.

A CLUB WHICH WANTS TO GIVE A SELECT DINNER AND THE QUARREL WHICH HAS FOLLOWED—THURMAN AND THE GOVERNORSHIP.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 31.—Just now there are heard low mutterings of discord in the ranks of the Ohio Democracy, brought forth by the action of the Young Men's Democratic Club of this city. The club is mostly composed of young men, a large number of whom are looking after the loaves and fishes, and who are known as latter-day converts to the Democratic faith. In the organization there are three candidates for Mayor, two of whom are members of the City Council, and at war with each other at nearly all points and on all occasions. There are some in the club who are now and have always been Democrats, but they are by no means in the majority, and the latter-day element seems to have the upper hand, and, as a rule, carries the day.

At a meeting held some time ago it was decided that a grand banquet should be given, under the auspices of the club, on the evening of Jan. 8, in commemoration of the battle of New-Orleans, or, as it is now termed, "St. Jackson's Day," the number of invitations to be limited to 300, and the tickets placed at $3 each. Invitations were sent to the leading Democratic politicians in this and other States, requesting them to be present on this occasion. It is expected that Senator Thurman, Gen. Ewing, Congressman Blackburn, of Kentucky, and several other champions of the cause will be present and speak words of wisdom and consolation. This is all very fine for the managers, but the old followers of Jackson look with suspicion upon this un-Democratic way of celebrating "St. Jackson's Day," and are shrewd enough to foresee that the party cannot be brought out of its present state of despondency and assume the offensive so long as the organization is controlled by young men working only for self-interest. The trouble commenced in the Young Men's Democratic Club between those who desired to be leaders of the party and the simon-pure Democrats, the former insisting upon having a fine time among themselves and guests, when the plans could be arranged for the future guidance of the party, and a general exchange of views indulged in. The opposition demurred, and claimed that it was an insult to the men to whom the party owed its existence, and whose votes gave the State to the Democracy a little over a year ago. These Democrats were in favor of having an old-fashioned Democratic celebration, where all would be permitted to hear the addresses of the leading men of the country, and converse with them. They believed that arrangements could and should be made to have several banquets, and the admission placed at a low figure, and then those who were able might have the feast and die as many as their means would justify. This they believed would have the effect of holding the party together and show to the laboring men that the Democratic Party was what it professed to be, a friend of the laboring man. A member of the club, who favored the latter course, says: "We are fast losing our hold on Democrats in Franklin County by professing one thing and practicing another. The new additions made to the party of late are Democrats only to secure positions of honor and trust, and not Democrats from principle. Were I a candidate for Mayor I would run as independent. I believe any good man can be elected over those Democrats."

It is quite evident that the aristocratic portion of the club has become aware that its action will have a most damaging effect, the subject having received the most severe criticism among the voters, who threaten to show the aspirants that their votes count. There are members of this organization who openly say that they will have nothing whatever to do with the entertainment; that if a lot of the "kid-glove gentlemen" think they can carry the Democratic Party around in their pocket for their own benefit the sooner they find out their mistake the better.

The question, Will Senator Thurman stick to the decision made public that he would not be a candidate for Governor? appears to be the one which now agitates the Democratic mind, and leads to much discussion. The majority of the party expresses the opinion that Mr. Thurman is the strongest man that can be brought forward, and believes that if he cannot hold Ohio for the Democracy no one can, and that he owes it to the party to accept the situation and make the fight. Gov. Bishop, doubtless, leads all other candidates, (except Thurman,) especially among the rural districts. He is popular, but the politicians and "wire-pullers" who generally rule the State conventions seem more inclined to put Gen. Ewing forward. Nearly every hill-top, vale, and dale in the State has a statesman who is willing to offer himself as a sacrifice upon the Democratic altar, but those mentioned are the most prominently spoken of. Doubtless a gathering of the clans will bring together a large number of politicians. The General Assembly convenes on Jan. 7, and the sentiments then expressed will doubtless foreshadow what the future action of the party will be on the financial question, and who will be the most available candidate for Governor.

SCRAMBLE FOR OFFICE IN MAINE.

DEMOCRATS AND GREENBACKERS COMPLETING THEIR COMBINATIONS—REPUBLICANS LOOKING TO THE FUTURE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 31.—The Democrats and Greenbackers of the Legislature are rapidly perfecting their combination, and but little doubt is apprehended that it will be brought about. The power seems to be in their hands, and they are bound to use it. The scramble among them seems to be for offices, from the Governorship down to the position of folder. It is gratifying to notice that the Republicans stand on their own platform, and are desirous of making no combinations whatever with the Greenbackers or Democrats, although temporary advantages may accrue therefrom. They will so act as to go into the campaign again next year with clean hands. A conference of the opposition was held to-day, lasting several hours, and, though there was considerable plain talk, the operations in the main seemed to indicate unanimity in the election of all the State officers and those of both branches. The caucus this evening pointed at the same result.

There is little hope that Conner's name will be sent to the Senate. Smith is losing ground, and Garcelon is coming up. Curiously enough, the Greenbackers think it will strengthen their cause next year to have Garcelon chosen, while the Democrats believe Smith will be the best man for them, could he be elevated to the Gubernatorial chair. Possibly, the election of Governor may be reached this week.

The Republicans, in Senate caucus to-night, nominated J. Manchester Haynes for President, and Samuel W. Lane for Secretary. In the House caucus the Republicans nominated Joseph A. Locke for Speaker, and Commander Smith for Clerk, both by acclamation.

The Democrats in the Senate caucus nominated Edmund Madigan for President and L. H. Murch for Secretary.

In a caucus of Greenbackers and Democrats combined, M. P. Frank was nominated Speaker, and B. L. Staples, Clerk of the House.

MR. POTTER'S HUNT FOR FRAUD.

THE SUB-COMMITTEE RESUME WORK AT NEW-ORLEANS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Dec. 31.—The Potter sub-committee met this morning. There were present Hon. Clarkson N. Potter, Chairman, and ex-Gov. Oscar Arroyo, Secretary of State, produced the records of his office relating to the election of 1876.

P. G. Deslinde, Secretary of State under Gov. Kellogg, testified to affixing his signature to the first set of Republican Electoral certificates; he signed them Dec. 6; did not recollect signing any second set during Christmas week; witness also testified that he furnished to Gov. Kellogg during August, 1876, blank commissions for Supervisors of Registration and clerks, to be used by George L. Smith, at present Collector of this port, while running for Congress in the Fourth District.

Judge Billings, of the United States District Court, testified that a request had been made to him to return the first set of Republican certificates, as it was alleged they were informal. Judge Billings declined to grant the request, and subsequently a second set was handed in to him.

Peter Joseph, a Republican Elector, testified to the facts already published about the signing of the first and second sets of Republican certificates.

J. D. Kennedy was next examined. He declared that he had not spirited away the negro Kelly, as had been charged by some Northern papers; in fact, Kelly was now, and had been for months, in Washington.

Messrs. Raymond, Lloyd, and Maloney, clerks in a carpet-house here, testified to having found in their store on Sept. 19 a bundle of documents, left there by Mrs. Agnes D. Jenks. These documents were produced before the committee. The most important was one purporting to be the alleged original "Sherman letter." Chairman Potter made a statement to the press to the effect that these documents had been dropped by Mrs. Jenks for the purpose of imposing upon the committee. He declared that the so-called copy of the "Sherman letter" was a forgery.

The committee then adjourned until Wednesday morning.

ASKING FOR A VERDICT OF GUILTY.

OPENING ARGUMENT FOR THE PROSECUTION IN THE CHARTER OAK TRIAL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 31.—A brief cross-examination of Insurance Commissioner Stedman, which developed nothing new in the Charter Oak trial to-day, closed the testimony, and both sides rested. Upon consultation with the court, it was decided that there should be three arguments on each side, Mr. Buck to open for the State, Mr. Perkins, of the defense, to follow. Mr. Foster of the State's counsel to come next, Mr. Hyde, for the defendants, next, followed by State Attorney Hamersley, and Mr. Swett to close for the defense.

Mr. Buck began his argument at about 10:30 A. M., and spoke until nearly 1, when a recess was taken until 2, and he then closed, after having occupied altogether two hours and a half. He first set out the honorable methods by which men acquire wealth, and contrasted them with the means which enabled men, by stealth and under the form of law, to possess themselves of riches, and showed that the worst kind of robbery was that which took advantage of helpless people by conspiracy. He then traced the manner in which Furber and his associates obtained possession of the company, and held that it proved a combination to effect an unlawful purpose, and that the statements of the company's condition, made in 1875 and 1876, were misrepresentations calculated to deceive the policy-holders, the defendants knowing the company to be insolvent. He paid considerable attention to the Furber contract, based upon the retention of $500,000 to the assets, and pointed out that under this contract there could be a liquidation within five years, the time in which it was to run, with the consent of the company. Further, Furber made himself, so that Furber had in fact made a contract with himself, and ran no risk, though the contract provided for a final payment to compensate for the risk involved. Though the testimony had not been absolutely clear, the counsel said, there was a strong inference from the letter of Furber to White, and from the books and the negotiations with Mathews that the mortgage of $500,000 which was put on the books was a piece of financial juggling, and that under the contract Furber was able to pay out of the funds of the company for the stock which put him in control. In the 20 months of his management Furber drew out, under the contract to pay him a percentage on the premium receipts, and 50 per cent. of the saving on purchased policies, an average of $13,542 a month. He claimed that the contract had to run he would have been entitled to $1,112,625. Wiggin and White, who also held contracts for 7½ per cent. on premium receipts, were entitled during the 20 months of their management to $76,776 each. Though they drew out nothing, yet the fact that they had contracts showed a combined purpose to get the money of the company outside of large salaries. In closing, Mr. Buck said: "I believe the evidence as against Furber, Wiggin and White was irresistible, and so far as they were concerned, the jury should bring in a verdict of guilty under the charge of conspiracy.

It was announced that Judge Foster was ill, which confused the arrangements as to the assignment of counsel, and in the expectation that he might be able to attend to-morrow, the court adjourned to 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, with the understanding that there might be a further postponement to the next day.

CHICAGO'S REVIEW OF THE YEAR.

GRATIFYING RESULT OF THE BUSINESS OF 1878—A GRAND INCREASE OF VALUES OF $55,000,000.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—The review of the trade of Chicago for 1878, as prepared by the Tribune, exhibits a most gratifying result. The receipts of breadstuffs reached the enormous aggregate of 134,856,193 bushels, an increase of 35,920,780 bushels, or of 36.3 per cent. over 1877. Of this, the wheat receipts were 29,901,220 bushels, and shipments, 25,033,741 bushels. The number of hogs received was 6,339,636, and the number killed here, 5,128,000. The number killed in 1877 was 3,076,639. Their value was $44,810,000, and the value of the whole hog product was $55,500,000. The value of the live stock received in Chicago was $93,400,000, being an increase of $5,200,000 over last year. The increase in the value of the manufactures of the city over last year is $22,000,000. The total of the wholesale sales in 1877 was $276,500,000, and of the like sales in 1878, $280,000,000. The values given are in currency. Reduced to gold the value for 1878 is $277,900,900; for 1877, $265,100,000, showing an increase in coin value of $12,800,000. The capital invested in wholesale trade is about the same as last year, not including the increase in the value of the currency. There is an increase in the value of sales of dry goods of $2,000,000; oysters, $1,000,000, and tobacco, $1,000,000. There is a falling off in the value of dried fruits, coal, and oils. The value of produce received was $219,700,000, an increase in coin value of $14,850,000 over 1877.

A general review of the entire business of the city, including produce, wholesale, and manufactures, shows a grand increase in coin value of $55,000,000 over 1877. The average decline in prices since a year ago has been about 17 per cent.

SEEKING YELLOW FEVER'S CAUSE.

NEW-ORLEANS, Dec. 31.—In the Yellow Fever Commission Senator Eustis stated that the Sergeant-at-Arms reported that Dr. Smythe declined to appear before the Commission. Mr. Hooker moved that subpœnas be issued for such witnesses as the committee thought proper to call. The motion was carried, and the Sergeant-at-Arms instructed to issue hereafter subpœnas to witnesses whose evidence was desired.

Dr. C. B. White, formerly President of the Board of Health, was called and said persons might come here from infected districts and even die of fever without causing a spread of the disease. He believed that yellow fever could be imported; did not believe in the germ theory. Quarantine strictly enforced would diminish the fever epidemic here. The fever of the past Summer was similar to previous epidemics, except that a larger number of children were attacked. He gave his experience in regard to disinfection. He favored both quarantine and local disinfection. Mr. Hooker requested Dr. White to furnish the commission with such data as could be obtained from his reports.

IN PRISON FOR LIFE FOR MURDER.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 31.—A dispatch to the Pioneer-Press says: "The jury in the case of William Chase, who was on trial at Chippewa Falls, Wis., for the killing of Frank Goodhue, on Dec. 13, to-night brought in a verdict of murder in the first degree, and the prisoner was immediately sentenced to imprisonment for life. The case has created much excitement in Chippewa County. Chase was once taken from jail by the mob, and barely escaped with his life. He was strongly guarded during the trial."

SUICIDE OF A TRAVELING LECTURER.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 31.—A dispatch to the Pioneer-Press from Waseca says that a man calling himself Prof. Renaé de l'Anotire, and claiming to have been a fellow-traveler of Dr. Livingstone in Africa, committed suicide with poison here to-day. He was a peripatetic lecturer, and had become financially embarrassed.

DEFENDING HIMSELF SUCCESSFULLY.

NASHVILLE, Dec. 31.—At Sparta, last Saturday, two brothers named McPherson attacked Joseph Dibrell, son of the Congressman of that name. Mr. Dibrell killed one instantly with a shot-gun and dangerously wounded the other.

PLENTY OF GOLD DOLLARS.

THE TREASURY READY TO RESUME SPECIE PAYMENTS.

ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS IN GOLD IN THE NEW-YORK SUB-TREASURY BESIDES A LARGE AMOUNT OF SILVER—SECRETARY SHERMAN CONFIDENT OF MAINTAINING REDEMPTION—THE DECEMBER DEBT STATEMENT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—There are now in the Sub-Treasury at New-York $100,000,000 in gold coin with which to begin the work of redeeming the legal-tender notes, and in addition to this round sum in gold there is also at New-York several million dollars in silver coin. This sum in coin is regarded as sufficient to maintain specie payments, and Secretary Sherman expresses the fullest confidence in the ability of the Treasury to maintain the legal-tender notes at par. The Secretary said to-day that he has no further anxiety about the success of maintaining United States notes and gold on a parity, and feeling perfectly secure in this, he is now devoting himself to pushing the refunding operations. He regards specie payments as fully and permanently accomplished, and being in a great measure relieved of this responsibility, he is moving forward with the unfinished business of replacing the 6 per cent. bonds with those bearing 4 per cent. interest.

The debt statement for December, which will be issued on Thursday, will show an aggregate coin balance of $226,000,000. Of this balance the exact amount owned by the Government cannot now be stated, but it is likely to reach $145,000,000. The coin certificates have been reduced from $36,000,000 on Nov. 30, to about $25,000,000. During the month the coin in the Treasury has been largely increased by reason of holders of current gold obligations accepting payment in legal-tender notes. This increase in coin, however, will not be shown in the forthcoming statement, because the money paid in December on account of interest is not really due till January, and goes into the settlement for that month.

The following is a statement of the United States currency outstanding at this date:

Old demand notes	$62,035 00
Legal-tender notes, all issues	346,681,016 00
One-year notes of 1863	50,265 00
Two-year notes of 1863	14,600 00
Two-year coupon notes of 1863	23,750 00
Compound-interest notes	258,760 00
Fractional currency, all issues	16,108,158 95
Total	$363,208,584 95

The following is a statement of the operations of the National Bank Redemption Agency for the month and six months ending this day, as compared with the corresponding periods of last year:

National Bank-notes Disposed of.	For the Month.	For Six Months.
Notes fit for circulation assorted and returned to the banks of issue	$5,813,800	$62,484,900
Notes unfit for circulation assorted and delivered to the Controller of the Currency for destruction and replacement with new notes	2,707,800	19,231,700
Notes of failed, liquidating, and reducing banks deposited in Treasury	336,100	3,413,450
Total for 1878	$8,857,700	$85,130,050
Total for 1877	$17,466,100	$106,754,400
Decrease	$8,608,400	$21,624,350

"CHOPPED" TRADE DOLLARS.

LARGE NUMBERS OF MUTILATED COINS CIRCULATING IN CHINA—A CONSEQUENT DECREASE IN THEIR VALUE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Some time ago announcement was made that large quantities of trade dollars were being accumulated by speculators at commercial centres in China, the purpose being to return such dollars to the United States, in the expectation that Congress would give them the legal-tender quality. Reports received at the State Department from American Consuls show that in many parts of China these coins have been so mutilated as to make them useless as currency. The Consuls at Amoy, Foochow, and Ningpo report that the American trade dollar has been so mutilated by "chopping" by the Chinese merchants at the places named, as to render them undesirable as a circulating medium. This practice which had its origin in a rule made by mercantile houses in the south of China, requiring each firm to guarantee the genuineness of dollars paid out by affixing to each coin its "chop," or firm name, and which was done by stamping with a die upon the surface of the coin, has grown into such an abuse that current dollars are defaced beyond all possibility of recognition, and not infrequently coins are found in circulation through which holes have been punched. In some cases there is reason to believe that the die has been displaced by a gouge, and a small portion of the metal has been taken from the coin. This practice also prevails at Hong Kong. Coins thus mutilated would not, of course, be accepted at their face value in the United States, even should the trade dollar be given the legal-tender quality, and holders of them would be forced to dispose of them as so much bullion. To the extent, therefore, that trade dollars have suffered mutilation by the "chops" of Chinese merchants the amount of those coins outstanding for all purposes of money may be said to be reduced.

THE REDEMPTION OF 5-20 BONDS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The Secretary of the Treasury to-day issued the seventy-sixth call for the redemption of 5-20 bonds of 1865, consols of 1867. The call is for $10,000,000, of which $6,000,000 are coupon and $4,000,000 are registered bonds. The principal and interest will be paid at the Treasury on and after the 1st day of April, 1879, and the interest will cease on that day. The following are descriptions of bonds:

Coupon bonds, dated July 1, 1867, namely: $50, No. 1 to No. 5,000, both inclusive; $100, No. 1 to No. 5,000, both inclusive; $500, No. 1 to No. 6,000, both inclusive; $1,000, No. 1 to No. 6,000, both inclusive. Total coupon, $6,000,000.

Registered bonds, redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after the 1st day of July, 1872, as follows: $50, No. 1 to No. 182 both inclusive; $100, No. 1 to No. 1,500, both inclusive; $500, No. 1 to No. 1,050, both inclusive; $1,000, No. 1 to No. 3,700, both inclusive; $5,000, No. 1 to No. 1,150, both inclusive; $10,000, No. 1 to No. 1,000, both inclusive. Total registered, $4,000,000. Aggregate, $10,000,000.

ARMY AND NAVY AFFAIRS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The following order has been issued from the War Department:

Officers of the Army visiting the seat of Government on leave of absence, or who may be stationed there, are at liberty to advocate or oppose, either verbally or in writing, any pending measure of legislation touching military affairs, but leaves of absence must not be granted to enable officers to visit the seat of Government for the purpose of influencing legislation. Officers absent from the seat of Government may send to Congress or to members thereof, either directly or through military channels, any petition relating to pending legislation on military matters. General order No. 32 of 1873 is modified accordingly.

Commodore George M. Ransom will be ordered to command the Boston Navy-yard, vice Commodore Spicer, deceased. Lieut. F. Augur Miller has been ordered to the Ticonderoga by the steamer of Jan. 2.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 31.—An Admiral's salute was fired at Newport to-day in memory of Admiral Hoff.

REPORTS OF INDIAN AGENTS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—A telegram received by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to-day from Agent Wilbur, dated Yakima, Washington Territory, yesterday, says: "Moses is now at the agency, together with some of his people and nearly all of Smoballa's band." Agent Wilbur also reports that no attempt has been made, and that none will be made, to force the Indians upon the reservation, but efforts will be continued to induce them to remove there with a view to remaining. The volunteers and Indian Police have all returned without firing a gun.

Agent Connoyer, writing to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs from the Umatilla (Oregon) Reservation, under date of Dec. 12, says: "Three Indians have been sentenced to death at Pendleton, in this county, during the month for the murder of Coggin last July. The others that were indicted at the same time were acquitted. The Grand Jury that indicted these Indians had in their possession the names of certain persons who could give them information sufficient to indict the murderers of Ill-a-he Jim, an Indian who was murdered last September, but for some reason or other they were not called before the Grand Jury. Upon adjournment the jury reported some unfinished business, which was laid over until the next session, and I suppose this case was deemed of such small importance that it was laid over."

SECRET SERVICE REORGANIZATION.

SECRETARY SHERMAN'S ORDER CHANGING THE ORGANIZATION OF THE BUREAU.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The following is the order reorganizing the Secret Service Division of the Treasury Department, which takes effect to-morrow. Although dated more than a month ago, its publication has been withheld until now:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 23, 1878.

Secret Service Division.

The report of Assistant Secretary French, and the papers therein, referred to as the investigation into the Secret Service Division, have been considered by me, but action thereon has been delayed from an indisposition to change the custom of business, founded upon the order of Secretary Chase of Dec. 22, 1863. Upon the full examination that has been had, however, I think that order should be modified, as follows:

First—The appointment of all commissioned operatives and clerks in the service, like other appointments in the department, should be made by the Secretary upon the recommendation of the chief of the service, approved by Assistant Secretary Hawley, but assistants and agents of a lower class may be appointed, as heretofore, by the chief of the service, subject only to the Solicitor as to their compensation.

Second—Inasmuch as advancements for prospective service, which cannot legally be made by the regular disbursing officers, are essential to the efficiency of this service, Assistant Solicitor Robinson will continue to act as disbursing agent under my letter of June 20, 1877, making payments upon vouchers to be approved by the Solicitor of the Treasury for the ordinary purposes of preventing counterfeiting and illegal coinage. Disbursements for any other purposes than these will be made only by special direction of the Secretary or of Assistant Secretary French.

Third—It is proper that the chief of the service should constantly advise with, and be directed by, the Solicitor of the Treasury in the conduct of his investigations, and this should be continued as heretofore.

Fourth—It would seem that the organization of this service would be complete without an assistant chief, and that the duties naturally devolve upon an assistant chief are performed by the Chief Clerk, and therefore the appointment of an assistant chief will be discontinued.

To avoid confusion, this order will go into operation on the 1st day of January next, when the commissioned operatives and clerks will receive their appointments as herein provided.

JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary.

INDIAN TERRITORY GOVERNMENT.

IMPORTANT CHANGES PROPOSED BY THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON TERRITORIES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Senators Patterson, of South Carolina; Garland, of Arkansas, and Grover, of Oregon, who, in behalf of the Senate Committee on Territories, have conducted an inquiry into the condition of affairs in the Indian Territory, by taking testimony in Washington, last session, and in that Territory during the recess of Congress, will be ready next week to report to the full committee. They have agreed to recommend the enactment of legislation by Congress which shall provide, first, for the establishment of a United States court in the Indian Territory, to possess both criminal and civil jurisdiction; second, that all the Indians comprising the Five Nations shall be made citizens of the United States, subject to their local laws, and competent to serve on juries in the United States courts; third, that the lands now held in common shall be divided and held in severalty, but inalienable for a limited term of years. The sub-committee do not at present recommend the establishment by Congress of a regular Territorial Government for these Indians, but merely that they shall be entitled to representation in Congress by a delegate. This sub-committee will probably advise the insertion in the proposed bill of a proviso that the conditional land grants which the various railroad companies desiring the settlement of this Territory have announced themselves willing to relinquish, shall be formally relinquished. The recommendations of the sub-committee will probably be approved by a majority of the full committee, but the entire project is strenuously opposed by the legal representatives of the Five Indian Nations.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31, 1878.

The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. loan to-day were $7,450.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $321,845 29, and from Customs $384,981 46.

The Presidential party, including Secretary Evarts, Gen. Sherman, and Attorney-General Devens, returned from New-York this afternoon.

A circular from the Internal Revenue Office modifies existing regulations concerning the payment of tax upon brandy distilled from apples, peaches, or grapes exclusively, so that hereafter Collectors will not report to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for assessment the amount of such tax which becomes due and payable on the 10th day of the month, except in default of payment within four months from such 10th day of the month.

The following appointments have been made in the internal revenue service: W. G. Morrow, J. A. Fanning, M. C. Myers, S. A. Sain, A. M. Salmon, and J. W. Clarke, to be Store-keepers and Gaugers for the Sixth District of North Carolina; Thomas Wood, Store-keeper and Gauger for the Fifth District of Illinois; William B. White, Gauger for the Second District of New-York; Albert M. Morse, Gauger for the Twenty-fourth District of New-York.

The Superintendent of the New-Orleans Mint has arrived at his post and the Mint will be opened in about two weeks. The Superintendent will then begin the purchase of silver bullion in lots not exceeding 10 000 ounces, the price to be paid being fixed by the Mint Bureau of the Treasury Department. It is expected that in buying silver he will procure large numbers of Mexican and trade dollars, especially the former, at the bullion price fixed here. When lots of more than 10,000 ounces of bullion are to be purchased for the Mint, it will be done at the regular weekly opening of bids at the Treasury.

The joint Congressional committee having in charge the subject of the proposed transfer of the Indian Bureau from the Interior to the War Department are now individually examining the testimony. The committee were at first required to report by the 1st of January, but being unable to do so, the time was extended to the 1st of February. Senator Saunders, the Chairman, is of opinion, however, that the committee will be prepared to report before that date. As the members have not had a conference since the completion of the testimony, it is not yet known how they will stand on the questions involved.

The Teller sub-committee have postponed the time for their departure for New-Orleans from Thursday evening until Friday morning next at 7 o'clock. They will be accompanied by James Redpath, as clerk; W. E. Creary and G. W. Collinson, Assistant Sergeants-at-Arms of the Senate, and Joseph Cover and John McCrary, stenographers. The sub-committee expect to be absent from Washington only two or three weeks on this trip; but if they conclude to take testimony at other points besides New-Orleans or Charleston before returning, the period of their absence may be considerably extended. There will be no meeting of the full committee until after the return of the sub-committee, which includes five of the nine members, and several of them will not be in Washington prior to the sub-committee's departure for the South.

A TANNERY READY TO MOVE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORT JERVIS, Dec. 31.—For the past four years the extensive leather manufactory of Cooper & Swasey, at Sparrowbush, two miles west of this place, has been idle, causing the removal of over 300 men and their families from that place. One month ago this large property was offered for sale at auction, but no portion of it was disposed of, although several representatives of large tanning interests were in attendance. Since then, however, the Ellenville Tanning Company, of Ellenville, Ulster County, N. Y., has been negotiating for the purchase of the property at Sparrowbush in bulk, proposing to bring its business to Sparrowbush. For this purpose Mr. Harrington, one of the proprietors of the Ellenville Company, and Mr. Hammond, the superintendent, visited this place yesterday and conferred with Charles Cooper, the present owner. They in company called upon several business men with reference to securing aid and encouragement toward removing the Ellenville business here. A meeting is called for Thursday evening to consider the matter.

EUROPE'S OLD QUARRELS.

PROGRESS OF ENGLAND'S WAR IN ASIA.

A FRIENDLY LETTER FROM THE CHIEF OF THE KUNAR VALLEY—PROBABLE ANNEXATION OF SEVERAL AFGHAN DISTRICTS TO INDIA—KHYBAR PASS COMMUNICATION CLOSED BY HOSTILE MOUNTAINEERS.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Viceroy of India reports that Major Cavagnari has received a friendly letter from Syed Mahomed, Chief of the Kunar Valley, announcing his intention of coming in. The Times, in its article on the military situation, says: "This may be heralded as the forerunner of intelligence already hinted at, that the districts of Chitral, Swat, and Kunar will be incorporated into the Indian Empire. By the occupation of this tract of country an easy and direct road will be opened up from the Punjab to Yarkand and Kashkar, presenting far fewer difficulties than that now followed by the Central Asian Trading Association, which traverses the high mountain ranges of Cashmere and Ladak, crosses the terrible Karakorum Pass at an altitude of nearly 19,000 feet, and then, crossing another range over 16,000 feet in height, descends to Yarkand, which is barely 4,000 feet above the sea level."

LONDON, Jan. 1.—A dispatch to the Standard from Lahore says: "A strong force of mountaineers has stopped all traffic through Khyber Pass, and cut the telegraph wires. Three companies of troops, with two guns, have been sent to clear the pass."

At Hazaripir four mountaineers were publicly hanged for murdering a camp-follower of the Kuram column, and two others were flogged for plundering.

A dispatch to the Daily News, from Peshawur, says the Khyber Pass has been reopened.

RUSSO-TURKISH NEGOTIATIONS.

ALI PASHA APPOINTED TURKEY'S SECOND NEGOTIATOR FOR A DEFINITIVE TREATY—A MIXED OCCUPATION OF EASTERN ROUMELIA PROPOSED—ALARMING RUMORS FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Constantinople says: "Ali Pasha, President of the Council of State, has been appointed second negotiator on behalf of Turkey for a definitive treaty of peace with Russia.

In the Eastern Roumelian Commission, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, the English representative, has proposed a mixed occupation of Eastern Roumelia in certain contingencies, and its organization on the model of Lebanon. Marechal, a Frenchman who obtained a contract from Prince Dondoukoff-Korsakoff relative to the tithes in Eastern Roumelia, endeavored to provoke Sir Henry Drummond Wolff and Mr. Willitaker (editor of the Constantinople Messenger) to a duel on account of their action in exposing that affair, but the British Consul-General interfered.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 31.—Admiral Hornby has informed Sir Austin Henry Layard, British Ambassador at Constantinople, that his fleet will return to Ismid, arriving there on Thursday evening. The Admiral's return is in consequence of the difficulty of getting provisions and receiving letters at Artaki.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Times' Vienna dispatch reports that alarming news comes from Constantinople of financial and general destitution, and apprehended riots. The correspondent believes that the cry of alarm has been raised by a section of the official class which thinks its interests are threatened or injured by the present Ministry.

ENGLAND'S DEPRESSED TRADE.

A LARGE NUMBER OF FAILURES DURING THE YEAR—DISTRESS AMONG THE ARTISAN AND LOWER MIDDLE CLASSES—A GLOOMY OUTLOOK.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Times, in its financial summary for 1878, says: "Industries have been disorganized, credit shaken, and failures multiplied on every hand. It is stated on good authority that the failures of this year will be nearly 5,000 in number more than last year, and it would be difficult to say where the distress will end. Not only have wages been reduced and many thousands of artisans thrown out of employment, but many thousands of those above the artisan class are either in actual want or on the confines of it. The increasing numbers of persons driven to grant bills of sale on their effects is one significant proof of what is going on in the ranks of the lower middle class."

At a meeting of the Executive Council of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, to consider the resolution of the London Iron Trades' Employers' Association to increase the number of working hours, it was unanimously decided to resist the proposal to the utmost. It is understood that a general organization of the trades to resist an extension of the number of working hours is intended, and there is said to be already a large amount of funds available for the purpose of resistance, in addition to $250,000 which the engineers have on hand.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

CAPTURE OF A FRENCH COUNTERFEITER—A VICTORY FOR THE ROMAN CATHOLICS IN SWITZERLAND—MONCASI'S WIFE PLEADING FOR HIS LIFE.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—A man named Tropmann, brother of the Tropmann who murdered a whole family near Paris a few years ago, has been apprehended at Mulhouse for counterfeiting coin. He lately removed thither from Cernay, and no suspicion was excited against him until his reputed mistress at Cernay was detected in the act of uttering counterfeit coin, whereupon the Police went to Tropmann's room and arrested him, after a desperate resistance. The Police found ample proofs of his guilt.

At its meeting to-day, the French Committee on the Franco-American Treaty of Commerce gave M. Leon Chotteau final instructions previous to his departure for the United States.

The Seine is rising with alarming rapidity.

GENEVA, Dec. 31.—The Swiss Roman Catholics having received permission from their superiors to vote at the elections of parish priests, instead of leaving the Old Catholics the monopoly of the privilege, they have just carried by 4,000 votes to 25 the election of the Roman Catholic Priest at Saigelegier, in the Bernese Jura.

BELGRADE, Dec. 31.—Warrants have been issued for the apprehension of the Pretender Karageorgewitch, his son, and six other persons, for high treason in plotting against the life of Prince Milan, of Servia. The Government applies to the house and foreign authorities to assist in the capture of the accused.

DRESDEN, Dec. 31.—The report published in L'Univers, of Paris, that the Archduke Rodolphe, Crown Prince of Austria, would shortly be betrothed to a niece of the King of Saxony, is not believed in well-informed circles here.

MADRID, Dec. 31.—Moncasi, counsel and his wife and child were given audience by King Alfonso to-day. They have presented to the Minister of Justice a petition praying for mercy signed by 7,000 persons, including two Bishops. Furthermore, Señors Sagasta and Castelar have interceded with Señor Canovas del Castillo in behalf of Moncasi.

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—The North German Gazette inveighs against the Danish Court for giving an official reception to the Guelph deputation, which presented a Hanoverian address of loyalty to the Duke of Cumberland at his wedding with the Princess Thyra. The Gazette says this reception oversteps the bounds prescribed by the rules of international intercourse. Germany is surprised to see Denmark favoring an anti-German tendency and disregarding considerations which she is bound to observe in dealing with the German Empire.

The Empress gave audience yesterday to the widow of the late American Minister, Bayard Taylor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 31.—The Council of the Empire has approved the new rates of taxation proposed by the Minister of Finance affecting stamps, liquors, and cotton other than Asiatic.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Application for a third patent on behalf of Thomas A. Edison was lodged on Saturday.

A dispatch from Madrid to the Standard says: "Moncasi's brother and counsel have had interviews with King Alfonso and Princess Isabella, of Asturias, the King's sister. The King told them he could not interfere with the decision of his responsible Ministers. The wife of Moncasi is now seeking an audience. The final decision of the Council of Ministers relative to Moncasi will probably be known on Friday."

The revenue of Great Britain for the year 1878 shows an increase of £1,803,485 above that of the year 1877.

A Paris dispatch to the Times says Gen. Hidalgo, one of the leaders of the revolution of 1868, and a prominent person at the time of the abdication of King Amadeus, has been ordered to quit Madrid within 24 hours.

The Times' Berlin correspondent is trustworthily informed that if the Pope would yield on the question of nomination of the clergy, a modus vivendi might be found. The Government inflexibly insists that the Catholic clergy shall receive their education in Germany alone.

The Times' Paris correspondent denies that Italy is endeavoring to aggravate the difficulties between France and Tunis. Such interference is improbable, as Italy has been distinctly informed that France would resist, even by force and arms, the attempt of any European power to establish itself in Tunis.

PREPARING FOR HUNTER'S HANGING

THE SHERIFF SEEKING OFFICIAL NOTICE—THE TRIAL OF HUNTER'S ACCOMPLICE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 31.—Sheriff Calhoun and Prosecutor of the Pleas Jenkins, of Camden County, visited the Executive Department at the State-house this afternoon, for the purpose of being officially informed of the refusal of Gov. McClellan to convene a special session of the Court of Pardons to take action upon the petition to have the death sentence of Benjamin Hunter commuted to imprisonment for life. Sheriff Calhoun has determined to have the execution take place in the jail yard, instead of in the court-room, as was contemplated. He says that Hunter does not realize or believe that he will be hanged, and sleeps and eats the same as usual. Every precaution is observed to prevent his making away with himself, and two keepers are with him night and day. He is still confined in the "iron cage," and under the strictest surveillance. The execution, which is to take place on Friday week, Jan. 10, will be as private as possible and not more than 100 persons, including officials and members of the press, will be admitted thereto.

Prosecutor Jenkins says that the trial of Graham, Hunter's accomplice, will be among the first business transacted at the next term of the Camden County Oyer and Terminer, which will open on Jan. 14. Graham, who has not been placed at the bar to plead, will probably be charged on that day. On the coming Thursday a new bill of indictment will be assigned to defend him, and the trial be proceeded with without unnecessary delay. Mr. Jenkins

BORN, MARRIED, AND DIED.

VITAL STATISTICS OF THE METROPOLIS FOR 1878.

A SLIGHT INCREASE IN THE DEATH-RATE—AN INCREASE ALSO IN THE NUMBER OF MARRIAGES AND BIRTHS—THE AGES AT WHICH MEN AND WOMEN MARRY—DEATHS IN TENEMENT-HOUSES.

From no department of the City Government are statistics procured of more general interest or importance than those furnished by the Bureau of Vital Statistics. In no department are statistics of greater value if accurate, or more useless if carelessly collected or imperfectly tabulated. But a few years have elapsed since the Register of Statistics in the Board of Health established the system now adopted for keeping the records of life and death for the City. Yet it has been so thoroughly systematized that the statistical reports of the City's health, the deaths, births, and marriages are more complete than those of any other city on this continent, and rather in many respects than those of any city of Europe, and are supplemented by exchange reports from cities in all parts of the world. Every year the Deputy Register, Dr. J. T. Nagle, sends the report of the mortality of this City to the principal cities of the world, accompanied by blanks to be filled in with the information required to make comparisons of the relative health of New-York and other cities. The comparisons for 1877 were completed late in 1878, and it is interesting to observe that while the rate of deaths per 1,000 of population in New-York was 24.50, in London it was 21.79; in Liverpool, 26.38; in Dublin, 27.9; in Vienna, 29.84; in Trieste, 34.97; in Paris, 26.32; in Breslau, 30.08; in Chicago, 25.41; in Milwaukee, 16.37; in New-Orleans, 31.94, and in Boulder, Col., 4.29. In this City for 1878, as compared with 1877, the report of the number of deaths is unfavorable for 1878, but the increase in the mortality is not alarming. In 1877 there were 26,203 deaths, while in 1878 there were 27,005, or an increase of 802, thus increasing the percentage from 24.50 to 25.28. The increase is not found to be large in any one class of diseases. The report shows that the deaths from zymotic diseases were fewer in number than they were in 1877, and that there was an increased mortality from constitutional, local, and developmental diseases. As the zymotic diseases are those supposed to be controlled in a great measure by sanitary precautions, the report speaks well for the efficiency of the Health Board in preventing sickness and death.

The greatest number of deaths from any one disease was phthisis, and the next most destructive disease was diarrhœa. The deaths from small-pox were two only, the number being the smallest reported for any year since 1824. This small mortality is attributed to the activity of Dr. Vacuitar Corps for several years past. It is believed by President Chandler that this good result is an indication not to be questioned of the efficiency of vaccination, and of the great importance of maintaining the strength of the force. The Board of Health during the year has had a lively experience in the courts. It emerges, however, at the beginning of 1879, almost clear of litigation. In the spring sundry complaints were made against its officers, resulting later in an indictment of the board. This indictment was quashed by Judge Sutherland but a few days ago. Complaints against the Health Officer engendered in 1873 for the removal of night-soil brought upon the board suits to recover, which were successfully defended, and resulted in verdicts for the City for more than $50,000. The Commissioners complain that the public do not adequately appreciate the importance of maintaining an efficient Board of Health. While about $28 per capita is collected from the population for all expenses, the board is allowed but $200,000, or about 29 cents per person, for all sanitary work, including the clerical work in the Bureau of Statistics, and the cost of removing night-soil from the City limits.

The number of deaths in 1878, as compared with that of 1877, is given in the following table, the diseases being given by general classification:

Classes of Disease.	1878.	1877.
Total deaths from all causes	27,005	26,203
Total zymotic diseases	7,635	8,042
Total constitutional diseases	6,422	6,800
Total local diseases	10,197	9,720
Total developmental diseases	2,751	2,619

The principal causes of death for the past year are set forth in the following table, in which the returns of 1877 are given for the sake of comparison:

Causes of Death.	1878.	1877.
Deaths by violence	1,004	1,026
Small-pox	2	14
Measles	273	153
Scarlatina	193	983
Diphtheria	1,010	951
Membranous croup	499	472
Whooping-cough	381	440
Typhus fever	1	3
Typhoid fever	241	275
Puerperal diseases	213	298
Diarrhœal diseases	2,984	2,957
Alcoholism	118	100
Cancer, ulceration, &c	571	496
Phthisis Pulmonalis	4,477	4,044
Bronchitis	1,248	1,033
Pneumonia	2,271	2,148
Heart diseases	1,098	879
Direct effect of solar heat	52	21
Apoplexy	445	350
All diseases of the brain and nervous system	2,416	2,378
Bright's disease and nephritis	1,155	1,139
Death by burning	137	148
Deaths by drowning	182	194
Deaths of children under 1 year of age	7,090	7,418
Deaths by influence of the first stage	9,708	9,912
Deaths of children under 5 years of age	12,354	12,307
Deaths over 70 years	1,600	1,600

The deaths from diphtheria and scarlet fever are seen to be but slightly greater in number in 1878 than in 1877. An examination of the returns of the ward in which these two diseases have prevailed to the greatest extent was the Nineteenth. The Fifteenth Ward has enjoyed almost complete immunity from the ravages of these two scourges of childhood. While the theory that sewer-gas has caused diphtheria has been abandoned, and it has been found impossible to demonstrate that the diseases have clung to the lines marked by original sewer-courses, there has been abundant evidence that both of these diseases have been aggravated by sewer-gas and bad drainage.

The board has not yet been able to secure the strict observance of the law requiring clergymen to fill out and furnish to them records of marriages. The importance of keeping these records, however, becomes more thoroughly appreciated year by year, and a better understanding of the objects of the Register has led many clergymen who have hitherto neglected their duty to apply for blank forms and to furnish the desired information. The number of marriages and births reported for the year are given by months in the following table, in which the returns of 1877 and 1878 are compared:

	—Marriages.—		—Births.—
Month.	1878.	1877.	1878.	1877.
January	699	555	2,482	2,110
February	607	526	1,897	1,886
March	687	526	2,331	2,234
April	635	585	1,958	1,787
May	665	693	1,797	1,753
June	684	619	1,774	1,975
July	555	540	2,332	2,173
August	672	604	2,209	2,206
September	670	596	2,230	2,052
October	730	706	2,320	2,211
November	745	692	1,957	2,091
December	706	617	2,541	2,697
Total	7,629	7,123	25,729	25,569

Of the persons married, 5,988 males were united in matrimony for the first time, and 6,127 females; 1,104 males and 387 females wedded for the second time; 71 males and 83 females for the third time, and only 2 males married for the fourth time. There were 777 Irish brides and 633 Irish grooms; 1,606 German brides and 2,271 German grooms. The ages of persons who married young or in old age is shown by the following table:

	Males.	Females.
Under 20 years of age	189	1,950
Between 60 and 65	113	39
Between 65 and 60	66	14
Between 60 and 65	24	1
Between 65 and 70	17	2
Between 70 and 80	10	1
Between 80 and 90	1

It is of interest to know that but one mother bore triplets during the year, while 1,606 mothers gave birth to twins. One mother of 14 gave birth to a child, 2 mothers of 15 gave birth to their second children, and 442 mothers over 50 bore children. The following table shows the number of mothers who have given birth to an extraordinary number of children by singles, twins, or triplets:

Sixth child	1,579	Twelfth child	87
Seventh child	1,117	Thirteenth child	52
Eighth child	821	Fourteenth child	20
Ninth child	541	Fifteenth child	10
Tenth child	340	Sixteenth child	3
Eleventh child	190	Seventeenth child	3

During the year there were born dead, 2,292 infants. The Coroners had of all classes of cases 2,980. The number of transcripts of records of birth issued was 200; of marriages, 188, and of deaths, 1,160. The record contains the names of 15 persons whose ages at the time of their death was said to be 100 years or more. Of this number but three were men, and all but three of the alleged centenarians were born in Ireland. The record is as follows:

Jan. 12—Patrick Corrigan	106	Ireland
Jan. 25—Mary Bermingnam	100	Ireland
Feb. 5—Ellen Howard	100	Ireland
Feb. 7—Mary Mcvoy	106	Ireland
March 6—Catherine Cosgrove	105	Ireland
March 4—Catherine Buckley	104	Ireland
April 30—William Mcloan	104	Ireland
May 2—Mary Davis	104	Ireland
June 19—Rosa Oliver	100	New-York
July 28—Fanny Powell	102	Ireland
Sept. 17—Mary A. Maroney	100	Ireland
Oct. 16—Rebecca Anderson	102	Maryland
Nov. 17—Mary Curtin	102	Ireland
Nov. 17—Eliza Thompson	104	New-York
Nov. 26—Robert Mulhern	101	Ireland

During the year there were 1,156 deaths in institutions, 2,102 deaths in tenement-houses containing three families or less, 3,727 deaths in houses containing four or more families, and 88 deaths in boarding-houses and hotels.

STEALING A CAMEL'S HAIR SHAWL.

A youth named Charles Carrigan was arrested yesterday afternoon by Detective Holly Lyon, of the Central Office, who caught him in the act of endeavoring to pawn a camel's hair shawl, valued at $200, at a pawnshop in the Bowery. While being taken to Police Head-quarters he broke away from the officer and ran off, but was pursued and captured. He at first said that the shawl was given him by another youth, but subsequently confessed that he had stolen the shawl from John Lynch, of No. 625 Broadway, where he was employed. Carrigan was taken to the Essex Market Police Court for examination.

VIRGINIA'S DEBT.

A FUNDING PLAN WHICH IT IS CLAIMED HAS THE APPROVAL OF THE LEGISLATURE AND THE BONDHOLDERS.

The bonded debt of the State of Virginia is $29,350,826 38, divided into tax-receivable consolidated bonds, the coupons of which are receivable at maturity for taxes, and what are known as the "peeler" bonds. Interest on both is at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, a sum that the State feels itself unable to pay. The interest on the consolidated bonds is in default about $1,000,000, and that on the peeler bonds very nearly $4,000,000. The last Message of the Governor contained allusions to a proposition from the council of foreign bondholders in London to fund the debt and overdue interest into new 4 per cent. gold bonds, and a nearly similar suggestion from certain large bondholders in this City. The Legislature is almost to a man unfavorable to either proposition, because they include the overdue interest, and because no provision is made for any distinction between the two classes of bonds. The consolidated bonds, because of the tax-receivable properties of their coupons, sell on the market at from 56 to 60 per cent., and the "peelers" at from 36 to 40 per cent. It is, therefore, not considered probable that either plan will be accepted, though the Legislature has invited the bondholders to a conference to be held in January next. The Funding Association of the United States of America, formed in this City about a year ago by ex-Secretary of the Treasury Hugh McCulloch, the officers of the First National Bank, and others, have devised a plan for the funding of Virginia's debt, which they claim has been privately submitted to prominent members of the Legislature of that State, and has received their unanimous approval. They also assert that President Fry, of the Bank of New-York; Drexel, Morgan & Co.; L. Von Hoffman & Co., and several other large representatives of bondholders in this City favor the plan, and that the London newspapers unanimously indorse it. It proposes the issue of new 4 per cent. interchangeable coupon or registered bonds equal in amount to the principal of the debt as recognized by the act of March 14, 1878. The bonds to be dated July 1, 1879, and to run 45 years, but redeemable after 10 years in the order of issue. Both principal and interest to be exempt from taxation and the coupons to be made receivable at or after maturity for all taxes, debts, dues, or demands due to the State. Certificates bearing 2 per cent. interest to be issued for the amount of accrued and unpaid interest on all classes of bonds up to July 1, 1879, except on bonds funded under the acts approved March 30, 1871, and March 7, 1872. These to receive certificates calculated on the basis of but two-thirds of the interest. A sinking fund to be established which shall secure annually an amount equal to one-half of 1 per cent. of the principal of the debt. This, and the interest on the new bonds and certificates, to be provided for by the issuance and sale of tax-receivable scrip.

The association proposes to guarantee the State against any failure of the plan by offering to fund a given amount of bonds whenever favored legislation is had. The holders of the two classes of bonds are left to settle the difference in the respective values of their securities between themselves.

JUSTICE PINCKNEY'S DEFENSE.

The trial of the charges against Civil Justice Walter S. Pinckney was continued yesterday afternoon before Referee Buell, in the office of the Corporation Counsel. Mr. Henry W. Bookstaver, a lawyer, testified that he was counsel in a number of cases tried before Justice Pinckney, and that there was nothing unusual in the conduct of the latter. Mr. T. F. Neville, a lawyer, who attended the Justice's court every Saturday during several months, for the purpose of acquainting himself with the practice of the civil District Courts, said he was impressed with the regularity of Justice Pinckney's attendance. Mr. Weeks W. Culver, also a lawyer, said that he tried some cases in the court, and that the Justice's conduct appeared to him to be entirely proper; his reputation was that of a good Judge and an able lawyer. Mr. Leopold Wallick, a lawyer, and John MacDonough, a City Marshal, gave similar evidence. The latter said in addition that he was obliged to pay $2 to James R. Davies for every dispossess warrant signed by him. H. E. Nugent, an Assistant Marshal, testified that he attended the court very often, and that he never observed anything peculiar in the conduct of Justice Pinckney; witness had had papers in summary proceedings signed by James R. Davies, who demanded $1 for furnishing the blanks and for filling out the documents; Justice Pinckney was never present when Davies received money from him. Joseph Yoamans, a book agent and ex-Custom-house clerk and speculator, swore that he attended the September City-seventh-last Court very often, and that he never saw anything objectionable in the conduct of Justice Pinckney.

ERIE'S NARROW GAUGE.

It is expected that narrow-gauge freight trains will be run regularly on the New-York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad to-morrow and thereafter. A train of 32 narrow-gauge box freight-cars ran from Jersey City to Port Jervis yesterday. The first through train of narrow-gauge freight-cars, which left Buffalo Monday night, is expected to arrive at Jersey City to-morrow morning. The new narrow-gauge locomotives are being fired up and sent to various stations along the road, and in a few days will all be in use. As a consequence of the introduction of the narrow gauge, a material reduction is expected in the running time of trains. The Paterson people hope to be landed in New-York in 40 or 45 minutes after leaving their city. Instead of retarding, it will speed the journey. The railroad from the west side of the Bergen Tunnel to the "Junction" at Paterson, is owned by the Paterson and Hudson River Railroad Company, which built it in 1831-2, and leased it about 18 years ago to the Erie, the lease being transferred with other property of the Erie to the New-York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad Company. It expires shortly, and there is a rumor afloat to the effect that the old local company will not renew the lease, at least not at the present rate, (9 per cent. on the capital stock.) It has no outlet to New-York, having formerly run into Jersey City over what is now the Pennsylvania Railroad, from West End. It could, perhaps, make a similar arrangement again, or could get permission to run through the new tunnel of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad. The lessors have always retained the control of the stock and have kept up their organization.

TWO MEN KILLED BY A SAND-BLAST.

Late on Monday afternoon William Merritt and David Edwards, laborers and quarrymen, lost their lives by a premature explosion of a sand-blast on the Hoge place, at Penny Bridge, about a mile south of Tarrytown. The two men attempted to rend a rock by an ordinary drill-blast, but only succeeded in making a considerable fissure; to complete the disruption effectually, they proceeded to arrange a powerful sand-blast. A keg of blasting powder was pounded into the fissure, and sand was added to pack the charge, which Merritt and Edwards then began carefully to tamp, their operations being watched by about a dozen men spectators. Suddenly there was an explosion, and on the instant it was discovered by the bystanders that Merritt and Edwards had been blown away and killed. Their bodies were horribly mangled. One body had its head severed, and the other had been cast up into a tree close at hand with such force as to impale it upon a broken limb, and there it hung gibbeted until removed. Coroner Schirmer, of White Plains, arrived at the scene of the accident at 11 o'clock, and spent the remainder of the night in making a searching inquest; but it did not appear that blame in the matter could be imputed to any one but the unfortunate men themselves, who had been imprudent in arranging for a sand-blast so soon after the discharge of the drill-blast, the theory of the premature explosion being that ignition probably came from an unconsumed piece of the fuse used in discharging the drill-blast. Merritt and Edwards were men of middle age, and each leaves a large family.

ANOTHER PADRONE'S VICTIM.

On Tuesday afternoon Superintendent Jackson, of Castle Garden, telegraphed to Mr. Irving Halsey, of Memphis, asking whether he had authorized Antonio Sicco to bring from Italy a girl to be employed in his household. Yesterday an answer was received from Mr. Halsey saying that he had given no such order; that there must be some mistake. Offic. Chiardi, of the society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, called at Castle Garden yesterday and questioned the girl, Angela Maria Margherita Galla, whom Sicco brought to this country under the suspicious circumstances described in yesterday's TIMES. She said positively that Sicco bought her of her father, paying 200 francs, of which 120 francs was in gold, and that her father told her that she no longer belonged to him, but to Sicco, and that she must go with the latter wherever he went and do whatever he said, forever. She was placed in Officer Chiardi's charge and Sicco was informed that he could not obtain possession of her until he should prove to the satisfaction of the authorities that he has no immoral object in view in claiming her.

BUSINESS IN THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE.

District Attorney Phelps has issued the report of the business of his office during the past year. The cases received during the year numbered 4,648, and those acted on by the Grand Jury 3,248. Indictments were found in 2,705 cases, 538 were dismissed by the Grand Jury, and 1,772 convictions were obtained. During the six years of Mr. Phelps' administration 28,934 cases were received, and the large number of 9,997 convictions obtained. During the 12 preceding years, under the Tammany regime, 23,849 cases were received, out of which only 8,810 convictions were obtained; in other words, 5,085 more cases were received in six years under Mr. Phelps than in the 12 years preceding his administration, and 1,187 more convictions were obtained during the same period than in double the number of years under Tammany.

TRYING TO SAVE A CHURCH.

A MEETING OF TRUSTEES.

HEAVY INDEBTEDNESS OF THE SOCIETY OF THE CHURCH OF THE MESSIAH—A MEETING TO DEVISE MEANS OF RAISING $123,000.

One of the many churches in this City which have been struggling for years under a tremendous load of debt, is the Church of the Messiah, (Unitarian,) situated at Park-avenue and Thirty-fourth-street. The church, a handsome brown-stone building, was begun in 1865, and finished two years later. It has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons, with a handsome chapel adjoining, seating 400 persons. When the society first proposed to build the new church it was fully intended not to run in debt a cent. They engaged an architect, who drew up plans for a building which he assured them would cost only $120,000, which, with the ground, would make $195,000, and they had the money to pay that amount in full. After the architect had gone on awhile, the money disappeared so rapidly that the committee became alarmed, and called on him for an accounting. When the account was rendered they were astonished to find that, if the architect was allowed to finish the church according to his plans and specifications, the church alone would cost $350,000. They put a stop to further proceedings on that line, struck $100,000 from the specifications at one sweep, and curtailed expenses elsewhere as much as possible, so that, when completed, the actual cost of the building was $245,000. This left them with a heavy debt on their hands, which amounts, at the present time, to $123,000. Of this, the first mortgage bonds, amounting with accrued interest, to $70,000, are held by the Mutual Life Assurance Company, and the balance, $53,000, is in second and third mortgage bonds, held partly by members of Dr. Bellows' Church, and partly by members of the Church of the Messiah. When the church was built, Rev. Dr. Osgood was pastor, and it was looked upon as prosperous. After awhile he left the church and entered the Episcopal denomination, and Rev. Dr. George H. Hepworth succeeded him. Finally Dr. Hepworth changed his denominational views, and, going over to the Congregationalists, became Pastor of the Church of the Disciples, in Madison-avenue. Then Rev. Dr. Alger took charge of the Church of the Messiah, but a few months ago he accepted a call to the pastorate of a church in Colorado, and since his departure the Church of the Messiah has been without a regular Pastor. The society has been kept together, however, and services have been held every Sunday. The money to pay the expenses of these services has been raised from week to week by a committee appointed for the purpose, of which Mr. Dexter A. Hawkins was Chairman. This has been going on for the past three months, but the mortgages are all due, and something must be done at once, or the first mortgage will be foreclosed and the church sold. Formerly the church had a permanent membership of about 200 families, but its financial troubles have driven some away, others prevented from coming, until not more than 25 are now left, and although several of the members are well-known men of wealth and influence, they object to carrying the load any longer.

Yesterday being the last day of the church year, it was thought a good time to take the matter in hand, and either close the church and allow it to be sold, or make an effort to save it by raising the money to pay off the debt; and a meeting was held in the chapel last evening for that purpose. Mr. John Babcock presided. Dr. G. Q. Colton was elected to fill an existing vacancy in the Board of Trustees, after which the financial condition and prospects of the church were thoroughly discussed. Dwight H. Olmstead said that a reference had been ordered, and that within two months, unless something was done, the church would be sold under foreclosure of the first mortgage. He was informed, however, that there were a number of wealthy men in the society who had pledged themselves to subscribe $50,000; that the American Unitarian Union had agreed to give $25,000, and that the members of Dr. Bellows' Church offered to surrender the bonds held by them. With that amount of money in hand, he thought the better way would be to allow the church to be sold and bid in, provided no deficiency judgment be taken out against them. But they run a risk, as he knew there were one or two other societies who were anxious to get hold of the property. After considerable discussion, a young man, who was evidently a stranger to those present, said he thought it would be hazardous to offer the church for sale, because he believed on the market there were parties who would bid $200,000 for it, and one would lose it. He knew of one society who was anxious to buy it. He was morally certain that $25,000 could be raised among the wealthy Unitarians of New-England in three months if a proper effort was made, because he knew that the feeling among Unitarians was, and that they were anxious to save the Church of the Messiah to the denomination. He gave his name as Royce, and stated that at present with his wife and children's Aid Society in this City. He felt certain that he could raise the money, and would willingly give his time for that purpose, for the sake of saving the church. Mr. Royce's offer was received with much favor by the meeting, and the Chairman was authorized to appoint a committee to take charge of the matter of raising the money to pay off the mortgage, and to make any arrangements with Mr. Royce that they thought best. The committee are Dexter A. Hawkins, Joseph P. Hale, T. C. Eastman, Thompson Dean, and George H. Penniman. It is understood that, in order to make any of the subscriptions binding, the whole amount must be subscribed.

A committee, consisting of W. H. Wait and Dr. Colton, was then appointed to provide for weekly services, and provided that no new debt should be incurred during the society in debt, pending the settlement of the debt question, after which the meeting adjourned.

RECEPTION BY THE LINCOLN UNION CLUB.

The Lincoln Union Club of the Fifth Assembly District, which was organized Dec. 13, held its first reception last evening in the club-rooms, No. 27 Bedford-street. None but Republicans are eligible to membership, and the principal object of the club is to afford a comfortable head-quarters in the district for active Republicans, where they can meet, read the papers of the day, and be furnished with general political information. The officers of the organization are as follows: President, George F. Fowler; Vice-President, J. D. Hawes; Secretary, D. P. Smith; Treasurer, John Murphy; Sergeant-at-Arms, John Mcqueen. The reception last night was largely attended, in every way enjoyable, and the Committee on Arrangements, it was generally voted, deserved praise for the result of their efforts. Ex-Senator Abraham Lent, of the Fifth Assembly District, was one of the speakers, and he was followed by Alderman John W. Jacobus, ex-Senator Michael Norton, (one of the few Democrats present,) Mr. John C. Limbeck, President of the Twelfth Assembly District Republican Association; Mr. John R. Brady, President of the Fifth Assembly District Republican Association, and Col. F. C. Mann. Among the singers were Messrs. Frank Russel and C. H. Patterson; Mr. Frank Browne presided at the piano, and Prof. Butler and Charles H. Seward played solos on that instrument. One of the pleasing events of the evening was a solo on the violin performed by Mr. Lucius M. Poole. The festivities were prolonged until a late hour.

A LUNATIC AT LARGE.

It was reported to Inspector Dilks at the Central Office last evening that Gustave Textor, a lunatic, was at large, and the aid of the Police was invoked to secure him. Textor is a drug-clerk by occupation, and lived with a Mr. Kesselmark, at No. 435 West Thirty-sixth-street. He is a native of Germany, 23 years of age. For some time past he shown symptoms of insanity, and his friends determined to send him to the Flatbush Insane Asylum. Dr. Schmetzer, of Brooklyn, was sent to this City Monday afternoon by direction of the Commissioners of Charities of Kings County to examine the lunatic prior to his admission to the asylum. Yesterday afternoon Dr. Schmetzer had an interview with Textor at his residence. While talking to him the lunatic suddenly sprang from his seat, and, drawing a knife which he had concealed about his person, made an attack on the Doctor. Dr. Schmetzer raised a chair to defend himself, and the lunatic knocked him down and ran out of the house, and has not since been seen. A general alarm was sent out last night to all the Police stations in this City, directing the Police to arrest the lunatic.

THE PRESIDENT'S MOVEMENTS.

President and Mrs. Hayes and party left this City for Washington soon after 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The party were driven to the Desbrosses-Street Ferry, escorted by members of the Historical Society Reception Committee in carriages. At the Pennsylvania Railroad Depot the Presidential party took possession of a special car attached to the limited express train, which left the depot at 10:05 o'clock. Vice-President Wheeler remained in this City.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OF AN ENGLISHMAN.

Dr. Hobby, of No. 211 East Thirteenth-street, reported at the Seventeenth Precinct Station house last evening that John Bryan, a native of England, 30 years of age, boarding at his house, had taken a large dose of laudanum with the intention of committing suicide. His condition was discovered promptly and the necessary remedies were applied, and it is expected that the young man will recover. Dr. Hobby refused to divulge the motive which had prompted Bryan to commit suicide, but it is reported that the attempt was the result of some domestic difficulty. The whole affair is shrouded in mystery.

THREE OIL-CAN THIEVES.

Charles Stoddard, of No. 163 Meserole-avenue, Charles Hirschfeldt, of No. 288 North Fifth-street, and Robert Primrose, of No. 69 Franklin-street, Brooklyn, were arrested by Detective Folk and Special Officer McConnell, last night, charged with swindling the firm of Charles Pratt & Co., oil refiners of No. 126 Pearl-street, this City. Primrose was employed by the firm as truckman, and was in the habit of taking empty cans from their factory and delivering them to Stoddard and Hirschfeldt, by whom they were sold. The proceeds were then divided. The firm estimate their loss at $408. Semonite Brothers, of Fulton-street, Brooklyn, to whom some of the cans were sold, becoming suspicious, notified Pratt & Co.

BROOKLYN OFFICERS INDICTED.

TRUE BILLS FOUND AGAINST COMMISSIONERS BENNETT AND FLAHERTY.

The long-expected indictments against Commissioners Flaherty and Bennett, of the Brooklyn Board of City Works, were yesterday brought in by the Kings County Court of Sessions Grand Jury. With the Commissioners named two subordinate officers of the Board of City Works—Water Purveyor Milne and Superintendent M. J. Dady—are also indicted. The indictment contains three counts, and each count is made up of 50 or 60 allegations, all charging a conspiracy between the indicted officers to defraud the City out of $50,000 by means of certifying to claims for work never done. There are, it is said, four other indictments, in which the Commissioners are charged with felony and their subordinates with misdemeanor. The first count in the indictment is for conspiracy to defraud the City of Brooklyn out of $50,000, by putting various names on the pay-roll in the Department of the Water Purveyor and in that of Sewer Maintenance, the heads of those bureaus certifying that the men had worked for so many days and the Commissioners certifying that the city was indebted to the amount on the pay-rolls. The second count is practically the same as the first. It charges that Messrs. Flaherty, Bennett, Dady, and Milne, being persons of evil minds and dispositions, wickedly intending to injure and defraud the City of Brooklyn, did fraudulently, maliciously, unlawfully, and corruptly conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together, and with divers other persons, to the jurors aforesaid unknown, to defraud the city and the people out of $50,000, by knowingly, willfully, and wrongfully, unfaithfully and corruptly certifying and approving of false and fraudulent claims against the city, to be made and presented in favor of various parties. That in pursuance of that conspiracy, the heads of the bureaus certified falsely that certain parties had due them from the city various amounts. About 75 names were thus certified falsely, it is claimed. The third count charges that they were guilty of putting men on the pay-roll who did no work for the city, and conspiracy is further charged in that the accumulated parties alleged that these men worked a certain number of days and that the city was indebted to them for certain amounts.

The indictments and their probable effect on local politics were discussed extensively in Brooklyn yesterday. The Independent Democrats claimed that the accused officials would be triumphantly acquitted. Politics alone, they asserted, procured the indictments of Messrs. Flaherty and Bennett. Aaron Howell and F. A. Massey, President of the Board of City Works, claimed that politics had nothing to do with their efforts in procuring evidence against, and securing the indictments of, the implicated officials. Mr. Flaherty is an Independent Democrat, and Mr. Bennett is a Republican. Both obtained their present places by a combination in the Board of Aldermen between the Republicans and the Anti-Ring Democrats made for the purpose of ousting the Ring men from control of the various commissions by which the City is governed. Whatever of truth may be contained in the charges preferred against Commissioners Flaherty and Bennett—if there is any truth at all in them—it is certain that the departments as conducted by them is managed a thousand times more honestly than when it was under the control of Fowler and the other Ring men. During Ring rule the sinecures in the department were numbered by hundreds. Almost any man in Brooklyn at all familiar with politics can point out persons who held sinecures under Ring rule. And these sinecures were not confined to any class. Members of nearly all the trades and professions, including journalists, held sinecures under the Ring, whose stealings in other directions amounted to millions of dollars. Messrs. Flaherty and Bennett, it is fair to say, although they had precedents to guide them, if otherwise, claim that their administration of the office has been marked, not only by economy, but scrupulous honesty. They express themselves ready to prove their innocence before any tribunal.

BANK-NOTE COMPANIES.

PROPOSED CONSOLIDATION OF THE THREE INSTITUTIONS IN THIS CITY.

Measures have been taken by the officers of the three bank-note companies doing business in this City—the American, National, and Continental—for a consolidation of the three companies into one joint stock concern. The volume of business has been so greatly reduced that it is thought that a consolidation will return greater benefits to the stockholders than if the three companies should continue separately. The plans have not been fully matured yet, but a basis of agreement has been decided upon, which will be submitted to meetings of the stockholders of the three corporations, to be held on Friday, Jan. 31, and it is expected that they will ratify the consolidation, as the majority of the stockholders of the several companies have expressed their favorable opinion of the scheme. If the stockholders sanction the consolidation, the necessary legal steps will be immediately taken for the completion of the organization. The new company will keep the name of the American Bank-note Company, and the officers will be chosen from the stockholders of the three companies, to be in each will be represented. The amount of capital stock for the new concern has not yet been determined.

At the office of the American Bank-note Company it was stated, yesterday that the consolidation was decided upon for the interests of all concerned, as the volume of business had been reduced and expenses would be much less. The Directors and Trustees of all the companies had agreed to the consolidation, and it only remained now for the stockholders to sanction their agreement, and it was expected that they would. It was not thought that there would be any material reduction in the force of workmen employed, which aggregates nearly 1,000, as there would be sufficient work to keep them.

The American Bank-note Company, which is the largest of the three concerns, has a capital of $1,000,000, is located at No. 142 Broadway, the officers being: President, Albert D. Goodall, and Secretary, T. H. Freeland. The National Bank-note Company has its main office at No. 70 Wall-street, and a large printing establishment at No. 53 Broadway. It was incorporated November, 1859. The officers are: President, J. H. Vanantwerp; Vice-President, J. MacDonough; Treasurer, A. D. Shepard; Secretary, James E. Currier. The Continental Bank-note Company is located at No. 144 Greenwich-street. Its nominal capital is $60,000. The officers are: Homer H. Stuart, President, and Jared K. Myers, Secretary.

THE MURDERED POLICEMAN.

Coroner Woltman yesterday concluded the inquest in the case of Officer Asa H. Furness, the murdered policeman. The testimony of the witnesses shows that Officers William Ryan and Thomas Burns, who were sent to the Metropolitan Hotel to assist Officer Furness in arresting the lunatic Palmer, acted in a disgracefully cowardly manner. As soon as Furness was shot Burns and Ryan both ran away and hid themselves. Burns admitted that when Palmer drew his revolver he sprang behind Furness, "because," said he, "if Furness hadn't been in front of me Palmer would have shot me." Burns ran into a room and closed the door. When William Vaughan, the hall-man, ran to the spot after the firing, Burns cautiously poked his head out of the half-open door of his hiding-place and asked, timidly, "Where is he?" Ryan also ran off. Detective Keeley pursued the murderer, and finally captured him. After Palmer was well out of the hotel, and Furness had also dragged himself away, Burns and Ryan emerged from their hiding-places and disappeared. The two officers admitted these facts on their cross-examination by the Coroner yesterday. The jury found a verdict against Palmer, and Coroner Woltman notified the Bellevue Hospital authorities to guard the insane man with extra vigilance, and to turn him over to Capt. Brogan, of the Fourteenth Precinct, as soon as he was able to leave the hospital. The Police will then hold Palmer to await the action of the Grand Jury. The wound in his left hand is still in a dangerous condition, and gangrene is feared by the surgeons.

AN IRISH GIRL'S CHARGE.

A short time since an Irish girl, named Mary Moore, who came to this country about four years ago, applied to the Commissioners of Emigration for assistance, stating that she would soon become a mother and that she was without adequate means of support. She alleged that her betrayer was Cameron Smith, of No. 84 West Fifty-sixth-street, a real estate agent, who seduced her under promise of marriage. The Commissioners caused Smith's arrest, and Justice Kilbreth, yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, gave a hearing to the case for the third time. Dr. Flynn was present, as were several members of his church, who appeared to take much interest in the proceedings. The young woman, who is about 22 years old, and a brunette of prepossessing appearance, was a member of the Church of the Holy Trinity. She alleged that Smith used to visit her clandestinely at the house where she lived, No. 67 West Forty-fourth-street. The accused denies the charge, and seeks to prove that the complainant's character is grossly bad. Justice Kilbreth adjourned the case to procure further testimony.

THE STEAM-SHIP GLAMORGAN.

The steam-ship Glamorgan, concerning the safety of which considerable anxiety had been felt in this City, and which arrived at Quarantine at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, had fine weather after passing Gibraltar until longitude 45° west was reached, when head winds and seas were encountered, and running short of coal, Capt. Buck put into Bermuda for a fresh supply. On the 19th of December, after a delay of three days, the steamer sailed again. Owing to the strong north-west gales and heavy seas her progress was slow, and on Dec. 24, when 130 miles south-east of Sandy Hook, a high-pressure cylinder gave way. Although it was blowing a gale from the north-north-west, all sail was set and the Glamorgan was headed to the north-ward, making, however, little or no progress. The forward engine, which was uninjured, was got to work as speedily as possible. The gale continued from the north-north-west, accompanied by a heavy sea, in which the steamer labored violently, and with her head still to the north-ward made little in that direction, and was drifting fast to the eastward. On the morning of the 27th, the wind shifted to the north-east and blew strongly, with considerable snow. The vessel then stood back to the westward, and at midnight the Nantucket light-ship was passed. After that, fresh north-west winds were experienced up to her arrival. After lying at anchor until the afternoon, the Glamorgan was towed up to the City.

THE SPREAD OF SCARLET FEVER.

REPORT OF DR. DAY, SANITARY SUPERINTENDENT—WHAT HE HAS TO SAY ON THE SUBJECT.

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday, Dr. Day, Sanitary Superintendent, presented a report on the prevalence of scarlet fever. He says: "While scarlet fever cannot be said to be epidemic, and while it is true that we expect an increase in all contagious diseases during those months of the year in which their contagion is intensified by closed doors and windows, and people are more closely associated with each other, the disease is evidently on the increase, and it is the part of wisdom to exhaust all means to retard its progress. For the last year, by the direction of the board, I have sent a daily list of persons sick with contagious diseases to the Board of Education, and I have notified the families of those sick with contagious diseases that, during the period of liability to their spread, the children of such families should not be allowed to attend any school. An inspector, especially detailed for the purpose, has visited the cases occurring in tenement-houses, with a view to investigate unsanitary surroundings, and to impress upon the parents the necessity of all possible isolation. The Disinfecting Corps have, at their especial request, performed the necessary disinfection and fumigation, although in the better class of houses we have often been compelled to trust to the physicians in attendance that the needful precautions were taken to prevent the disease from spreading.

It is often impossible to ascertain the source of contagion in a given case. No doubt the disease is sometimes propagated by persons who are about to be attacked with the disease, or who have recently recovered from it, and a frequent cause may well be the transportation of soiled linen to the laundry in our close street cars. There is scarcely a conductor on a crowded line who attempts to enforce the health ordinance, and huge bundles and baskets of foul linen infected with disease from the bodies of unreported cases are thrust beneath the noses of the unsuspecting passengers. When remonstrated with the excuse is given by the conductor that he has no means of knowing the contents of the bundles. At such a time as this, however, it would seem not unreasonable to and genial, who died on Nov. 27, was almost equally well known. William Niblo, of Niblo's Garden, in this City, died on Aug. 21, and Arthur Cleaver, proprietor of the Global Theatre, London, on Oct. 15. Professor De Leon, famous Zouave drill master, died on Dec. 4. Finally may be mentioned the deaths of Messrs. Cotton, Hopkins, O'Brien, and Keene, four California millionaires, whose yearly income of fortune gained almost within a decade is equally double the dependent with the possibilities of their future and discourages plodding but ill-paid laborers.

NEW-YORK CITY AFFAIRS.

During the year members of three departments of the City Government have been indicted for official misconduct. On May 24 the residents of the East Side procured the indictment of the Health Board, and the President of the Board of Police, W. F. Smith, for licensing establishments which made life in that district unhealthy, if not absolutely unendurable, by reason of the stench arising from such processes as boiling bones, rendering fat, or making glue. The quashing of the indictments in the last week of December was the last decision of Judge Sutherland's long judicial career. The Board of Aldermen was another department which fell under the Grand Jury's censure. On May 8 the board passed, over Mayor Ely's veto, an ordinance permitting the erection on a sidewalk of a stand for selling newspapers. On the next day Recorder Hackett especially charged the Grand Jury as to this illegal conduct of a board "reveling in its power," which compliment the board speedily reciprocated by bitterly discussing the Recorder personally, and appointing a committee to inquire into his "mental and other qualifications." The Recorder had the best of the fighting, however, for on June 1 the members of the Board of Aldermen, with two exceptions were indicted, (1.) for maintaining a nuisance in the shape of an obstruction to the streets, and (2.) for passing an ordinance permitting the nuisance, contrary to the provisions of the charter of the City. Judge Barrett quashed the indictment just three weeks later, on the ground, generally speaking, that the City ordinances are in such confusion that it is almost impossible to know what the City's laws are, and that, construing one part of them in connection with another, it did not sufficiently appear that the Aldermen were guilty of the offenses charged. The Excise muddle has had during the year as many, if not as interesting, changes as a kaleidoscope. In January Dr. Phillip Merkle was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the flight of Owen Murphy with some $50,000 of the $110,000 deposited with the Excise Board by liquor-sellers applying for licenses. It certainly was not Mr. Murphy's fault that he did not take the whole amount with him, but Mr. Henry Bowman, one of the contributors to his traveling expenses, was so decidedly of the opinion that his associates were careless in their charge of the money intrusted to them, that on June 21 he preferred charges against their official conduct to Mayor Robinson. On the same day Commissioner J. M. Patterson promptly resigned with a prudence that was amply vindicated by the removal from office of his colleague, G.W. Morton, only 24 hours later. Mr. Richard C. Morrison was appointed to fill the vacancy left by Mr. Patterson. But Mr. Morton was not satisfied. He promptly tested the legality of his removal by a suit for salary accrued, and Judge Sedgwick, in deciding that he was entitled to his salary, also decided that he was still a Commissioner, on the ground that his removal was a nullity, for, he held, the office of Excise Commissioner is a local one, the power of removal from it does not belong to the Governor, and the term is for six years. Then reappeared Mr. W. H. Stitser, whom Mayor Ely temporarily appointed in 1874 to fill the Excise Commissionership vacated by J. R. Voorhis to accept a place in the Police Board. Nor does the list of "charges" against the City's officers end here. About the middle of September the Register, Sheriff, and County Clerk were all put on their defense by allegations of extortion of fees in excess of those fixed by law. A very clear case was easily made out against them, even independently of the investigations of a special committee which was appointed by the Bar Association, and which reported on Dec. 10. But at the time of writing the officers had not been removed from office by the Governor, nor had they been called upon to answer anything more serious than rumors of an indictment. During the year there were three notable fires. On Sunday night, Feb. 17 the Excelsior Building, (216 to 226 West Twenty-third-street,) the West Twenty-third-Street Presbyterian and the Third Reformed Presbyterian Churches were nearly totally destroyed, involving a loss of about $600,000. On Nov. 16 the Fulton Fish Market was burned. On March 26 Nos. 261, 263, 265, 267 Canal-street were damaged by fire to the amount of over $100,000. The failures of savings banks during the year were not so numerous as in 1877, but one surpassed through the mismanagement and another through the criminality of its officers. On March 27 the Sixpenny Savings Bank suspended, with a deficit of $82,000. There was ample evidence of neglect and incapacity among the Trustees, but no proceedings were instituted to punish them. William Wells was the President. W. F. Russell was appointed Receiver, and he has already paid one dividend. On April 24, the business of the Teutonia Savings Bank was stopped by an injunction obtained by the Attorney-General, on the report of Bank Superintendent Lamb that a deficiency existed of nearly $150,000. Mr. Hahn, the Secretary, having been indicted for making false statements of the bank's condition, turned State's evidence, and disclosed a scarcely credible story of organized theft and fraud among the bank's officers. They were accustomed, the swore, to charge bonds in the bank at an advance on the cost, to charge bonuses for making weekly-secured loans, and to divide the proceeds of such and similar frauds by a regular system of percentages. Criminal and civil proceedings are both pending against the Directors and Trustees. In the first week in September the drivers on the Second, Third, Fourth, and Sixth avenue lines of street cars unsuccessfully struck for higher wages. In the second week of December the drivers on the Third-avenue line struck again, and again unsuccessfully, the pretext in this case being the discharge by the company of two of the leaders of the earlier organization. At the election on Nov. 6 a one-sided victory for the combination opposed to Tammany Hall, Edward Cooper being elected Mayor by 78,887 votes, against Schell's 60,677, and B. K. Phelps being re-elected District Attorney by 79,227 votes, against Smith's 60,898. On Oct. 20 Alderman J. J. Morris was dangerously stabbed by a person still undetected. On the 2d of April Stewart's hotel for working-women was opened, but it at no time sheltered more than 50 of such women as it was intended to benefit, and in two months it was opened on a business basis, as the Park-Avenue Hotel. No other event of the year so much affects the everyday life of so many residents of the City as the building of the rapid transit railroads. The old West Side road, on Greenwich-street, opened its double track to Fifty-ninth-street in the first week of June. Its East Side track was opened to Forty-second-street in the last week of August, to Eighty-fifth-street in the first week of December, and to Harlem on the last day of the year. The Gilbert, or Metropolitan, Elevated Road, on Sixth-avenue, was opened to Fifty-ninth-street on June 1, and is rapidly pushing northward on Ninth-avenue.

DISASTERS OF THE YEAR.

The record of the disasters of 1878 is an appalling one. On Sept. 3 the iron screw collier Bywell Castle crashed into the slightly-built excursion steamer Princess Alice, as both were rounding the bend of the Thames at Tripcock's Point, and sank her almost instantly. Exactly how many lives were lost will never be known. Seven hundred is a low estimate, and as the majority were women and children cut for a day's pleasuring, the collision is certainly the most distressing affair in marine history. The report of the official inquiry declared that the collision was caused by the bad and careless steering of the Princess Alice. On March 25 the Eurydice capsized in a squall off Dunnose, Isle of Wight, as she was within a half hour of her anchorage, and carried down, in sight of their homes, 300 lads who were being trained for the British Navy. There were but two survivors; but happily their testimony established that the disaster was due solely to the danger of the seas. The German Navy also suffered a severe loss. On the last day of May a squadron was engaged in naval manœuvring in the English Channel when the Grosser Kurfurst struck and sunk the Koenig Wilhelm as they were wearing ship to avoid a merchantman. Two hundred and ninety lives were lost, including 13 officers. The verdict attributed the collision to a "mistake" of the Koenig Wilhelm's helmsman. On the night of Nov. 25 the iron bark Moel Elfian ran down and sank the Pommerania, one of the finest steamers of the Hamburg-American Line. About 55 lives were lost by this collision. Seventeen lives were lost by the collision on Oct. 31, off Tuscar Light, between the National Line steam-ship Helvetia and the British cutter Fanny, and about 150 by the Byzantin-Rinaldo collision in the Dardanelles on the night of Dec. 18. At home, there were but few notable marine disasters. On the 31st of January, in the same south-east gale which caused the loss of seven lives at Manhattan Beach by sweeping several houses into Sheepshead Bay, the Metropolis, bound to Fara, went ashore on Currituck Beach, on the North Carolina coast, and about 20 miles north of the scene of the wreck of the United Haven. Ninety-one lives were lost. Murder or manslaughter, however, are the only words properly descriptive of the loss of 15 lives by the explosion of the Adelphi's boilers on the 28th of September at New Gregory's Point, in Long Island Sound. On the inquest it was shown that the boiler needed patching within a month after its inspection, and that it exploded within a month after the repairs. The iron of the boiler was only one-half the reported thickness, and was the thinnest it was actually only one-thirty-second of an inch thick. Twenty lives were lost by the collision on Dec. 7 between the Mississippi river steamers Cotton Valley and Charles Morgan, and '36 by the foundering, on Dec. 10, of the Emily B. Souder, on her trip from New-York City to Kingston, Jamaica. The shocking disaster, which Sept. 26 called the accident, was the explosion on Oct. 6 of an excursion train on the Old Colony Railroad with a freight train which was being switched. Twenty-two persons were killed, and 130 were wounded. The largest found the conductors of both trains and the switchtender guilty of flagrant gross and, as one conductor testified that he was switching his train because "supposed" the excursion train had passed, and, when he saw it approaching, sent out no signals because he "supposed" the engineer had done so, he was held only indicted, but tried for manslaughter. The accident is estimated to cost the railroad company $325,000. Another engineer, employed by the Pittsburg, Cincinnati, and St. Louis Company, whose watch was slow, but who "supposed" he had time to go on, killed 15 persons by dashing his train into another on Aug. 7. The five other railroad accidents may be closed by mentioning the loss of 14 lives by the breaking under an excursion train of the bridge over the Farmington River, on the line of the Connecticut Western Railroad. The accident occurred on Jan. 16, and it is not yet certain whether the bridge broke because it was not originally strong enough or because it had been suffered to decay, or whether the accident was not caused by train-wreckers. An explosion of fire-damp in the Abercorn Colliery, South Wales, caused 265 deaths. On Oct. 11 the audience of the Colosseum Theatre, in Liverpool, in their mad rush for escape from the building at a careless or malicious, but shameful groundless, alarm of fire, trampled 37 of their number to death.

DEFALCATIONS OF 1878.

On April 20 O. C. Zeller, Cashier of the Tiffin (Ohio) National Exchange Bank, went away with $45,000 of the bank's cash. On Aug. 17 was announced the "clean steal" of $120,000 from the Pullman Palace Car Company by Charles W. Angell, who was arrested about Nov. 20 in Lisbon. Eighty thousand dollars was found in his carpet-bag. Benkard & Hutton, dry goods merchants of this City, after having employed R. A. Pedrick for half a generation, discovered at last that he had stolen from them at least $108,000 by using money intrusted to him to pay Customs dues. The defalcation of $15,000 by W. W. Burnham, an employe of the Dock Department of this City, who was arrested on Nov. 12, deserves mention from the fact that the Commissioners personally reimbursed the stolen money to the City. On the last day of July, B. B. Conant, Cashier of the Eliot National Bank of Boston, confessed that he had stolen $70,000. The case is redeemed from commonplace by this fact—Conant was arrested and indicted, and it seemed likely that he would get his deserts, when the market for California mining shares, in which he had been speculating with the bank's funds, suddenly took an upward turn, his deficiency was made good, and the case was "settled out of court." It is very rare that a corrupt agreement is put into a written contract, with formal and minute provisions for the distribution of the proceeds. That was done, however, when Messrs. J. G. Tappan, Durant, and Cheever, all officers of the Boston Belting Company, entered into an agreement by which Tappan, without authority, indorsed the notes of a private firm as Treasurer of the Belting Company, and the proceeds of the paper which was thus discounted on the credit of the corporation were placed in the hands of his two associates, for use for the common benefit. The profits were to have been divided among them. But, unfortunately, there were no profits. On the contrary, there was a loss estimated at $800,000, and the deficit seriously embarrassed the company named, and also the New-York Belting and Packing Company, and ruined the McKillop & Sprague Commission Agency. The defalcations of S. A. Chace, G. T. Hathaway, and C. P. Stickney, of Fall River, Mass., form a group by themselves. They were among the very chief of their business city. Chace was the first discovered. On June 24 he was sentenced to 12 years in State Prison for taking various small sums from the Union Mills, of which he was Treasurer. The whole story of his stealings was not, and scarcely could have been, told in the indictment. Many of his transactions had been closed, and were thus concealed, but at the time of his conviction there was a deficit in the company's treasury of $500,000. Hathaway was next found out, and on Oct. 14 he was sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment on an indictment charging him with embezzling $100,000. That amount is about one-fifteenth of the sum of his stealings from the Border City and the Sagamore Mills, of both of which corporations he was Treasurer. He was a cousin of Chace, and when he was sentenced he said that he was put upon the downward track by his relative in order that he might be the more efficient as a tool. Stickney, the last of the three, seems to have been cognizant of these thefts, and perhaps to have profited by them, but he is not known to have personally committed any overtly dishonest acts until he was commercially ruined by indorsements of the notes of the mills just named. Then he took from the Manufacturers' Gas Company, of which he was an officer, amounts which have not been exactly and publicly stated, but which will probably reach a total of $500,000. John Bonner, of this City, was a better work: man than many of his company, and his method of operation was that so widely made known to the public by Netter & Co. under the name of "rehypothecation;" that is, he would sell or borrow money on securities which had been deposited with him as collateral for loans to other persons. In this way he thus managed to secure about $700,000 of other people's money, and got clear away on the first day of the year with a snug fortune, which has not been stated in exact figures. The last heard from him was a grocer in Kansas City, Mo.

In this connection may be mentioned the cases of several officers of banks and insurance companies who proved faithless to their trusts. On Jan. 25 S. S. Lambert, President of the American Popular Life Insurance Company, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for perjury in making false statements of the company's business. He will not go to State Prison, however, until his appeal is argued. Benjamin Noyes, President of the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company, now serving out a term of 18 months' imprisonment for conspiracy to defraud, will be released on June 1, and will have to pay a fine of $250 when he is released. Vice-President Wetmore, of the Security Insurance Company, has, during the year, paid a fine of $250 and served 10 months' imprisonment, in satisfaction, in effect, of a total of two months for good conduct in prison, of his sentence of a year, for conspiracy to defraud. President Case, of the same company, has also been convicted, but his appeal is not yet decided. The banks of New-Jersey have suffered from dishonest officers even more than the insurance companies of New-York. On April 6, E. E. Rose, Director of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company of Paterson, was fined $500 for conspiracy to defraud, and J. F. Preston, Cashier, was fined $1,000 for the same offense, and sentenced to one year's imprisonment for embezzlement. He was pardoned in November. Judge Rogers was acquitted of the charges against him of defrauding the same bank. All the indicted officers of the People's Bank, of Newark, were also acquitted. On Feb. 5, J. R. Freese, of the State Bank, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for embezzlement and two years' for conspiracy to defraud, after having, as the Judge in passing sentence said, attempted, in violation of common decency and common honesty, to charge the crimes on his sons. They were sentenced each to six months' imprisonment.

OTHER CRIMES OF THE YEAR.

On Oct. 14, the jury in the Jesse Billings murder case declared that they were unable to agree, and were discharged. They stood 11 to 1 for acquittal. Mrs. Billings was shot in the head through the window of her sitting-room, in Northumberland, on the evening of June 4. On June 1, Rev. G. B. Vosburgh, Pastor of the Madison-Avenue Baptist Church, Jersey City, was acquitted of attempting to poison his wife. He endeavored to resume his professional position, but resigned in a few weeks. Rev. H. H. Hayden, Pastor of the Methodist Church of Madison, Conn., is another clergyman who has fallen under suspicion of taking life, the alleged motive in his case being his desire to conceal his relations with Mary E. Stannard, who was found in a lot near her father's house, in the town named, with her throat cut and her brains dashed out with a stone. Mr. Hayden was "acquitted" in his examination before Justice Wilcox, but was subsequently indicted, and remains untried. In a series of confessions, extending through the first days of November, W. W. Bishop, of Norwich, alleged that he poisoned his wife, who died in February, and that Mrs. G. H. Cobb, Jr., poisoned her husband, who died in June, in order that these living obstacles to the gratification of their illegal love might be removed. He bravely laid the chief guilt on Mrs. Cobb, but their respective crimes have not yet been legally passed upon. The third Connecticut case involved the killing at Bridgeport of "Stuttering Jack," who was chloroformed to death by Mrs. Alexander and Frank E. Bodet, in order that they might obtain his body for dissection. She was convicted and sentenced to prison for life, but Bassets remains untried. On July 3 Benjamin Hunter was convicted of having killed on Jan. 23, J. M. Armstrong, the latter's native being to procure possession of $26,000 insurances on Armstrong's life, the policies for which stood in Hunter's favor. Hunter's appeal is still pending. On the 1st day of August R. B. Smith, a Police officer, of Jersey City, was found beaten to death in bed. His wife declared that he had been killed by her side without her knowledge, but the verdict on the inquest charged her with the crime, and she now lies in jail awaiting trial. In this City, on Sept. 17, Edward Mallory, a detective, was "accidentally" shot dead by "Pike." Allen, in the gambling saloon at No. 615 Broadway. Allen was cleared by the inquest, but a subsequently found indictment is now pending against him, he being at large on bail. The mystery which for some weeks surrounded the finding, on Sept. 15, of a young woman's body near Silver Lake, on Staten Island, is probably to be explained by the killing of Mary Ann Degnan by E. Reinhardt, who now lies in jail awaiting trial. On Dec. 18 John Kehoe, the killer of the Mollie Maguires, was hanged for the murder of F. W. S. Langdon, in 1862.

The two most notable robberies of the year—of over $3,000,000 in securities and cash from the Manhattan Savings Institution on Sunday, Oct. 27, and of $5,000 worth of right-hand gloves on Sunday, Dec. 2—are still an freak in the public memory that it is

JANUARY 1, 1879

On Aug. 9, a tornado swept through Wallingford, Conn., destroying $150,000 worth of property, and injuring upward of 100 persons, of whom 32 were killed outright. On June 1, a scarcely less destructive cyclone visited Richmond, Mo.

On Oct. 2 the City of Glasgow Bank failed, with liabilities of $6,000,000, and assets of $30,954,915. The bank had 55,000 depositors, but they will probably all be repaid in full by the operation of the Scotch law, making shareholders in Scotch banks liable for their entire debts to an unlimited extent. Consequently, it is the shareholders who will suffer most, and of the whole 1,250 nearly all will be financially ruined. One hundred and fifty-three have been shaken the West of Scotland and South Wales Districts and the Caledonian—have already suspended. The case of the Caledonian Bank is one of peculiar hardship. It owned four £100 shares of the Glasgow Bank, which, at the estimated value of the "calls" to be 28,000. That sum was tendered to the Glasgow liquidators, who refused to return a receipt in full. As offer of the Caledonian's paid-up stock for £150,000 was next tried, with the intimation that it would be applied "on account," but that a release from all demands upon those four £100 shares would not be given unless the managers of the Caledonian Bank would pay the liquidators whatever sum the nominal equity, or $600,000. The Caledonian Bank failed, although its own affairs were upon the soundest basis.

On the 27th of March, by a vote of 19 to 12, the Senate sustained John F. Smyth, Superintendent of the Insurance Department of New-York State, of the Governor's charges that he had illegally procured the payment from insurance companies of $64,000, accounts of the expenses of examining their condition, which expenses should have been paid out of the State funds, after having been audited by the Controller.

During the year, three phenomenal horses rose into sudden prominence. At Cleveland, Rarus trotted a mile in 2:14, at Milwaukee Hopeful trotted a mile in 2:14¾, and at Hartford Edwin Forrest covered a mile's length in 2:14¾, but he is not known to have personally committed any overtly dishonest acts until he was commercially ruined by indorsements of the notes of the mills just named. Then he took from the Manufacturers' Gas Company, of which he was an officer, amounts which have not been exactly and publicly stated, but which will probably reach a total of $500,000. John Bonner, of this City, was a better work: man than many of his company, and his method of operation was that so widely made known to the public by Netter & Co. under the name of "rehypothecation;" that is, he would sell or borrow money on securities which had been deposited with him as collateral for loans to other persons. In this way he thus managed to secure about $700,000 of other people's money, and got clear away on the first day of the year with a snug fortune, which has not been stated in exact figures. The last heard from him was a grocer in Kansas City, Mo.

In this connection may be mentioned the cases of several officers of banks and insurance companies who proved faithless to their trusts. On Jan. 25 S. S. Lambert, President of the American Popular Life Insurance Company, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for perjury in making false statements of the company's business. He will not go to State Prison, however, until his appeal is argued. Benjamin Noyes, President of the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company, now serving out a term of 18 months' imprisonment for conspiracy to defraud, will be released on June 1, and will have to pay a fine of $250 when he is released. Vice-President Wetmore, of the Security Insurance Company, has, during the year, paid a fine of $250 and served 10 months' imprisonment, in satisfaction, in effect, of a total of two months for good conduct in prison, of his sentence of a year, for conspiracy to defraud. President Case, of the same company, has also been convicted, but his appeal is not yet decided. The banks of New-Jersey have suffered from dishonest officers even more than the insurance companies of New-York. On April 6, E. E. Rose, Director of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company of Paterson, was fined $500 for conspiracy to defraud, and J. F. Preston, Cashier, was fined $1,000 for the same offense, and sentenced to one year's imprisonment for embezzlement. He was pardoned in November. Judge Rogers was acquitted of the charges against him of defrauding the same bank. All the indicted officers of the People's Bank, of Newark, were also acquitted. On Feb. 5, J. R. Freese, of the State Bank, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for embezzlement and two years' for conspiracy to defraud, after having, as the Judge in passing sentence said, attempted, in violation of common decency and common honesty, to charge the crimes on his sons. They were sentenced each to six months' imprisonment.

OTHER CRIMES OF THE YEAR.

On Oct. 14, the jury in the Jesse Billings murder case declared that they were unable to agree, and were discharged. They stood 11 to 1 for acquittal. Mrs. Billings was shot in the head through the window of her sitting-room, in Northumberland, on the evening of June 4. On June 1, Rev. G. B. Vosburgh, Pastor of the Madison-Avenue Baptist Church, Jersey City, was acquitted of attempting to poison his wife. He endeavored to resume his professional position, but resigned in a few weeks. Rev. H. H. Hayden, Pastor of the Methodist Church of Madison, Conn., is another clergyman who has fallen under suspicion of taking life, the alleged motive in his case being his desire to conceal his relations with Mary E. Stannard, who was found in a lot near her father's house, in the town named, with her throat cut and her brains dashed out with a stone. Mr. Hayden was "acquitted" in his examination before Justice Wilcox, but was subsequently indicted, and remains untried. In a series of confessions, extending through the first days of November, W. W. Bishop, of Norwich, alleged that he poisoned his wife, who died in February, and that Mrs. G. H. Cobb, Jr., poisoned her husband, who died in June, in order that these living obstacles to the gratification of their illegal love might be removed. He bravely laid the chief guilt on Mrs. Cobb, but their respective crimes have not yet been legally passed upon. The third Connecticut case involved the killing at Bridgeport of "Stuttering Jack," who was chloroformed to death by Mrs. Alexander and Frank E. Bodet, in order that they might obtain his body for dissection. She was convicted and sentenced to prison for life, but Bassets remains untried. On July 3 Benjamin Hunter was convicted of having killed on Jan. 23, J. M. Armstrong, the latter's native being to procure possession of $26,000 insurances on Armstrong's life, the policies for which stood in Hunter's favor. Hunter's appeal is still pending. On the 1st day of August R. B. Smith, a Police officer, of Jersey City, was found beaten to death in bed. His wife declared that he had been killed by her side without her knowledge, but the verdict on the inquest charged her with the crime, and she now lies in jail awaiting trial. In this City, on Sept. 17, Edward Mallory, a detective, was "accidentally" shot dead by "Pike." Allen, in the gambling saloon at No. 615 Broadway. Allen was cleared by the inquest, but a subsequently found indictment is now pending against him, he being at large on bail. The mystery which for some weeks surrounded the finding, on Sept. 15, of a young woman's body near Silver Lake, on Staten Island, is probably to be explained by the killing of Mary Ann Degnan by E. Reinhardt, who now lies in jail awaiting trial. On Dec. 18 John Kehoe, the killer of the Mollie Maguires, was hanged for the murder of F. W. S. Langdon, in 1862.

The two most notable robberies of the year—of over $3,000,000 in securities and cash from the Manhattan Savings Institution on Sunday, Oct. 27, and of $5,000 worth of right-hand gloves on Sunday, Dec. 2—are still an freak in the public memory that it is

OTHER THINGS WORTHY OF REMEMBRANCE.

The yellow fever epidemic of the year was one of the worst in history. Although the point is disputed, it seems probable that it was introduced into New-Orleans on the Sounder, and it was certainly carried up the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers by the tug John Porter, which left New-Orleans on July 25. In New-Orleans there were 526 deaths in the first week of September; in Memphis, in the second week, there were 687 deaths. Smaller towns, notably Grenada and Holly Springs, (Miss.,) were depopulated. The total number of cases throughout the Southern States was about 100,000, and of deaths, 20,000. The epidemic is now being investigated in its scientific aspects by committees from each house of Congress, by representative homeopathic physicians, and by a commission headed by Dr. S. M. Bemiss, and appointed by Surgeon General Woodworth, at the suggestion of the Public Health Association. That body warmly discussed a report of the commission's progress at its sessions on Nov. 19, 20, 21, and 22.

On Feb. 11, the notorious woman, Ann Lohman, generally known as Mme. Restell, was arrested by Anthony Comstock, and on April 1 she ended her career by cutting her throat with a carving-knife in a bath-tub in her Fifth-avenue residence.

On Nov. 10 six hotels and 20 cottages were burned at Cape May, N. J., involving a loss of $400,000.

On March 25, a fire at Fourth and Arch streets, Philadelphia, destroyed property worth $1,000,000. On June 6, Colgate's factory in Jersey City, was damaged by fire to the amount of $300,000.

On Aug. 9, a tornado swept through Wallingford, Conn., destroying $150,000 worth of property, and injuring upward of 100 persons, of whom 32 were killed outright. On June 1, a scarcely less destructive cyclone visited Richmond, Mo.

On Oct. 2 the City of Glasgow Bank failed, with liabilities of $6,000,000, and assets of $30,954,915. The bank had 55,000 depositors, but they will probably all be repaid in full by the operation of the Scotch law, making shareholders in Scotch banks liable for their entire debts to an unlimited extent. Consequently, it is the shareholders who will suffer most, and of the whole 1,250 nearly all will be financially ruined. One hundred and fifty-three have been shaken the West of Scotland and South Wales Districts and the Caledonian—have already suspended. The case of the Caledonian Bank is one of peculiar hardship. It owned four £100 shares of the Glasgow Bank, which, at the estimated value of the "calls" to be 28,000. That sum was tendered to the Glasgow liquidators, who refused to return a receipt in full. An offer of the Caledonian's paid-up stock for £150,000 was next tried, with the intimation that it would be applied "on account," but that a release from all demands upon those four £100 shares would not be given unless the managers of the Caledonian Bank would pay the liquidators whatever sum the nominal equity, or $600,000. The Caledonian Bank failed, although its own affairs were upon the soundest basis.

On the 27th of March, by a vote of 19 to 12, the Senate sustained John F. Smyth, Superintendent of the Insurance Department of New-York State, of the Governor's charges that he had illegally procured the payment from insurance companies of $64,000, accounts of the expenses of examining their condition, which expenses should have been paid out of the State funds, after having been audited by the Controller.

During the year, three phenomenal horses rose into sudden prominence. At Cleveland, Rarus trotted a mile in 2:14, at Milwaukee Hopeful trotted a mile in 2:14¾, and at Hartford Edwin Forrest covered a mile's length in 2:14¾, but he is not known to have personally committed any overtly dishonest acts until he was commercially ruined by indorsements of the notes of the mills just named. Then he took from the Manufacturers' Gas Company, of which he was an officer, amounts which have not been exactly and publicly stated, but which will probably reach a total of $500,000. John Bonner, of this City, was a better work: man than many of his company, and his method of operation was that so widely made known to the public by Netter & Co. under the name of "rehypothecation;" that is, he would sell or borrow money on securities which had been deposited with him as collateral for loans to other persons. In this way he thus managed to secure about $700,000 of other people's money, and got clear away on the first day of the year with a snug fortune, which has not been stated in exact figures. The last heard from him was a grocer in Kansas City, Mo.

In this connection may be mentioned the cases of several officers of banks and insurance companies who proved faithless to their trusts. On Jan. 25 S. S. Lambert, President of the American Popular Life Insurance Company, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for perjury in making false statements of the company's business. He will not go to State Prison, however, until his appeal is argued. Benjamin Noyes, President of the New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company, now serving out a term of 18 months' imprisonment for conspiracy to defraud, will be released on June 1, and will have to pay a fine of $250 when he is released. Vice-President Wetmore, of the Security Insurance Company, has, during the year, paid a fine of $250 and served 10 months' imprisonment, in satisfaction, in effect, of a total of two months for good conduct in prison, of his sentence of a year, for conspiracy to defraud. President Case, of the same company, has also been convicted, but his appeal is not yet decided. The banks of New-Jersey have suffered from dishonest officers even more than the insurance companies of New-York. On April 6, E. E. Rose, Director of the Merchants' Loan and Trust Company of Paterson, was fined $500 for conspiracy to defraud, and J. F. Preston, Cashier, was fined $1,000 for the same offense, and sentenced to one year's imprisonment for embezzlement. He was pardoned in November. Judge Rogers was acquitted of the charges against him of defrauding the same bank. All the indicted officers of the People's Bank, of Newark, were also acquitted. On Feb. 5, J. R. Freese, of the State Bank, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment for embezzlement and two years' for conspiracy to defraud, after having, as the Judge in passing sentence said, attempted, in violation of common decency and common honesty, to charge the crimes on his sons. They were sentenced each to six months' imprisonment.

"FLUNKEYIZING" THE NEW WORLD.

PROF. GOLDWIN SMITH CRITICISES THE NEW SOCIAL REGIME IN CANADA.

Letter to the Manchester Examiner.

SIR: Simultaneously with the conquest of Afghanistan, another Jingo enterprise of great pith and moment is in progress—the attempt to flunkeytize the New World. The new Governor-General has issued, through his military secretary, the following proclamation:

THE VICE-REGAL DRAWING-ROOM.

His Excellency the Marquis of Lorne and her Royal Highness the Princess Louise will hold a drawing-room at 9:30 P. M. to-day in the Windsor Hotel. Ladies are to wear low-necked dresses, without court trains, and gentlemen are to be in full dress. Ladies whose health will not admit of their wearing low-necked dresses may, on forwarding to the A. D. C.-in-Waiting a medical certificate to that effect, wear square-cut dresses. Dresses fastening up to the throat are not to be worn.

Ladies and gentlemen are to bring with them two cards each, with name written thereon, one of which to be left at the door, the other to be given to the A. D. C.-in-Waiting. E. G. P. LITTLETON, Governor-General's Military Secretary.

At Halifax, a similar proclamation set forth the appearances of any vehicles excepting landaus, berouches, and broughams, with pairs of horses, and properly attired drivers, in the procession that was to escort the Governor-General through the city.

Comment on these two edicts is needless if your readers know anything about Canadian society, the Canadian climate, Canadian incomes, and Canadian equipages. Some one proposed that in the case of ladies desiring dispensation from wearing low-necked dresses, the certificate of a clergyman should be received as well as that of a medical man.

To prepare the inhabitants of the New World for the worship of Mumbo Jumbo, a little treatise on "Court Etiquette" was seasonably drawn up by Prof. Tanning of this city, who describes himself on the title page as a "teacher of fashionable dancing, under the highest patronage of Their Graces the Earl and Countess of Dufferin," &c. Prof. Tanning devotes the first part of his work to court presentations, and the first section is on "the special etiquette of the throne, the veil and the glove." The opening paragraph breathes the spirit of the whole:

"The first presentation is generally the formal début of a fashionable life. The members of the nobility and gentry always manage to get their daughters presented, and it is regarded as a patent of social rank by the latter. What on this earthly sphere is more enchantingly exclusive than her Majesty's court! The impression made by her débutante is a lasting one in England, and consequently art is brought to bear; and the courtesies, the walk, the extending of the arm for the train, and each physical movement are practiced carefully before some competent teacher of deportment, who charges well for the lessons. But money is no object to the aristocracy of England when it comes to presentation to court."

Part of the treatise is in the form of a catechism:

Q.—Should a lady in visiting her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales appear gloved or ungloved? A.—Both the right and left gloves off.

Q.—Should the above rules be adhered to at our Canadian court? A.—Same as ladies, right-hand glove off.

Q.—Should the above rules be adhered to at our

The Best Family Paper in the World. Every family should have a copy. Sent to any address for $1 per year. Address, Tribune Association, New-York City. Specimen copies sent free. Agents wanted everywhere. Liberal terms. Send for circulars, containing full particulars, testimonials, &c. Agents wanted for the Tribune Almanac for 1879. Sold by newsdealers everywhere. Price 25 cents. Contains more information than any other publication of the kind. Agents wanted for the Tribune Extra, containing the Declaration of Independence, Constitution of the United States, and Lincoln's Proclamation of Emancipation. Price 10 cents. Agents wanted for the Tribune Tract, containing the Declaration of Independence, Constitution of the United States, and Lincoln's Proclamation of Emancipation. Price 5 cents. Agents wanted for the Tribune Tract, containing the Declaration of Independence, Constitution of the United States, and Lincoln's Proclamation of Emancipation. Price 5 cents. Agents wanted for the Tribune Tract, containing the Declaration of Independence, Constitution of the United States, and Lincoln's Proclamation of Emancipation. Price 5 cents.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—DEC. 31.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 5s, '81, R. $10,000 ..... 109⅛
U. S. 6s C. '81. 5,000 ..... 106⅜
U. S. 5s, '81, C. $16,000 ..... 109⅛
U. S. 5s, '81, C. $2,000 ..... 109⅛
U. S. 4½ R., '91. $2,000 ..... 104⅛

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—11:15 A. M.

U. S. 6s R. '81. $10,000 ..... 109⅛
U. S. 5s R. '81. 10,000 107
U. S. 5-20 C. '67. $10,000 ..... 108⅛
U. S. 5-20 C. '67. $10,000 ..... 108⅛
U. S. 4½ R., '91. $2,000 ..... 104⅛
U. S. 4s C. 1907. $21,000 b.c. 100⅜

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

N. Y. C. 6s, sp. t. 1 del. $10,000 ..... 97⅜
10,000 ..... b.c. 98⅛
10,000 ..... b.c. 98⅜
D. of C. 3.65s C. 10,000 ..... 79⅛
Tenn. 6s, new, ex. int. 5,000 ..... 67⅛
International 1st, with int. cer. 1,000 90
M. & St. P. 1st, L. C. 4,000 ..... 83.110
Mich. S. & N. P., C. & R. 1,000 ..... 110½
Can. So. 1st g'd. 5,000 ..... 92½
L. S. & M. S. 1st. 1,000 ..... 92½
Lake Shore Div. 1,000 ..... 71⅛
Mich. Cen. 8s, 1882. 2,000 ..... 111⅛
Mich. So. & L. R. 1,000 101
Can. So. 1st g'd. 7,000 ..... c. 78½
6,000 ..... 78½
5,000 ..... 76½
5,000 ..... 76⅞
Western Pacific. 5,000 ..... 105⅝
Un. Pac. 1st. 2,000 ..... 108⅞
Un. Pac. 7s, l. c. 2,000 ..... c. 108⅞
K. P. 1st 7s, L. R. with coup. cer. 1,000 42
K. P. L. D. N. P. with cp. cer. 1,000 ..... c. 71⅛
C. C. & I. C. 1st. 5,000 ..... 58⅜
A. & T. H. 2d, pf. 1,000 103
L. & N. con. '98. 1,000 105
Tol. & W. 1st. 1,000 ..... c. 107⅜
Canada Southern. 2d, 1908. 5,000 ..... 77½
Chic. & N. W. con. sk. ex coupon 1,000 60
St. L. K. C. & N. R. E. 7s, '95. 5,000 ..... 89½
Dubuque. 500 ..... b.c. 15
Buckeye. 300 ..... b.c. 50
Delaware & Hud. 200 ..... b.c. 87⅜
200 ..... 87⅝
1,000 91
19,000 ..... 90⅛
20,000 ..... 89⅞
107,000 ..... 103⅜
Erie 2d P. con. 5,000 95
E. T. Va. & Ga. 1st. 3,000 104
C. P. & A. new. 13,500 ..... 110⅜
Continental Bank. 75
American Ex. 15 ..... b.c. 46½
Wells-Fargo Ex. 100 ..... b.c. 95½
Adams Express. 100 ..... b.c. 95½
Pacific Mail. 1,000 ..... b.c. 14
Western Union. 100 ..... b.c. 95½
Illinois Central. 200 ..... 79⅞
Michigan Central. 200 ..... 74⅝
100 ..... 74⅝
100 ..... c. 75
50 75
1,000 ..... x.d. 68½
500 ..... 69⅜
500 ..... 69⅝
1000 ..... b3. 22½
100 ..... b3. 22½
100 ..... s30. 22
700 ..... b3. 22¼
2,000 ..... 22½
2300 ..... 22½
400 ..... 22½
100 ..... c. 78⅜
100 ..... 78⅜
100 ..... 78⅝
40 ..... b.c. 113
132 ..... opg. 113
100 113
300 ..... 113⅜
100 ..... b3. 22½
100 73
100 ..... 73⅛
100 ..... 73⅜
100 ..... 73⅛
100 .....

JAN 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—4th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th & 7th cols.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BOARD WANTED—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th and 7th cols.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st and 2d cols.
COAL AND WOOD—Sixth Page—4th col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Sixth Page—4th & 5th.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—2d col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
DRY GOODS—Sixth Page—4th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—5th col.
EUROPEAN—Sixth Page—4th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—4th col.
ICE-CREAM—Sixth Page—4th col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—4th col.
INSURANCE—Sixth Page—4th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Sixth Page—4th col.
MACHINERY—Sixth Page—4th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Seventh Page—7th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Sixth Page—7th col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—2d col.
SAVINGS BANKS—Seventh Page—5th col.
SHIPPING—Sixth Page—6th and 7th cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—4th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STATIONERY—Sixth Page—4th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Sixth Page—7th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—4th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Sixth Page—4th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 1, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

UNION-SQUARE.—The Banker's Daughter.
FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Rip Van Winkle.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—Uncle Dan'l. Matinée.
STANDARD THEATRE.—Almost a Life. Matinée.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—At Last.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—Evangeline. Matinée.
PARK THEATRE.—Babes in the Wood. Matinée.
COMIQUE.—Christmas Joys and Sorrows. Matinée.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO HALL.—Love's Endurance. Matinée.
NIBLO'S GARDEN THEATRE.—Peep o' Day.
MASONIC HALL.—Tom Thumb Troupe. Matinée.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

THE DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
THE DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
THE SUNDAY EDITION, per annum..... 2 00
THE SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum..... 2 50
THE WEEKLY TIMES, per annum..... 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

THE TIMES Up-town Office—No. 1,253 Broadway.
Paris Office of THE TIMES—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
THE TIMES is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

☞ Advertisements for THE WEEKLY TIMES must be handed in before 6 o'clock this evening.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day, in this region, southerly winds, cloudy weather, falling barometer, occasional rain or snow.

By the terms of the law the redemption of United States legal-tender notes begins to-day, but the practice of observing New Year's Day as a holiday will postpone the actual beginning of the operation until to-morrow. Meanwhile, with the banks and with many of the larger commercial houses, payments in gold have been made for some time, whenever desired. The formal commencement of resumption, therefore, will not be marked by any specially noteworthy transactions. The notes being known to be as good as gold, and redeemable at will, are much more convenient for all domestic uses than the coin, and will be preferred. For the present, redemption will take place only at the Sub-Treasury in this City, but before many days it will be effected at all the Sub-Treasuries of the country, and there will be no difficulty in exchanging notes for gold whenever and wherever wished.

The goal at which the country has finally arrived has not been reached without great effort and with much painful sacrifice. If the wealth which was based on depreciated paper, nominally worth much more than its real value, was illusory, the losses which the reduction of values to their solid substance has caused have not been in the least so. In the grades of society where incomes were considerable the process has involved only the surrender of luxuries, but in others it has brought a great deal of hard self-denial, and in still others it has brought men wholly innocent of extravagance to want and pinching poverty. It is the chief advantage of the new order of things that it gives us an opportunity to build more surely in the future, and makes the gains of frugal industry or of perseverance, activity, and skill more secure. The boon will be the richest to those whose earnings are the smallest, and the greatest blessing we have to be thankful for as a nation on the threshold of the new year is the increased solidity in the groundwork of our finances and of our general business.

Mr. Goldwin Smith, who is nothing if not serious, takes in dead earnest the rather ridiculous ceremonial rules enforced in Canada regarding the receptions of Lord Lorne and the Princess Louise. He sees in them an attempt of "the aristocracy and the court" to "corrupt and degrade a young civilization," and he prophesies that they "will sow the seeds of future enmity between the people of the United States" and those of Canada. We venture to think that Mr. Smith attaches too much importance to the foolishness of our friends over the border. Probably the royal element in their society will sadly tax both their revenues and their good sense, and there are not lacking signs that it has already gone far to bankrupt some of them in respect of both. But we do not believe that they will be "corrupted" or "degraded" as a body, and we are quite sure that we and they shall not be enemies from any such cause. The snobs among them will look down on us, of course, but we have too many snobs among us to resent that, and the reasonable persons on both sides, who are the great majority, will visit, and buy, and sell, and smuggle, as amicably as if every lady in Canada could appear before the Princess with her shoulders covered without a physician's certificate.

Is Gov. Robinson the "man on horseback," who, at the head of a disciplined Militia, is to override the laws and trample our liberties in the dust? We submit the question in all sincerity to those Democrats whose souls were alarmed by the military propensities of President Grant. Gov. Robinson has just taken exception to an order of the Supreme Court, at Albany, requiring him to make a return for review of his proceeding and decision in reference to a decision of a court-martial dismissing a Captain of the Thirteenth Regiment, National Guard, State of New-York, for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. So far as the interests of the Militia service are concerned, we have little doubt that it would be better that the authority of the Governor touching such matters should be discretionary and beyond review. But the spectacle of a Democratic Governor defying the courts in his character as a military commander is not without an aspect of inconsistency. Editors of Democratic organs should remember that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

The sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Territories, intrusted with examining the question of changing the government of the Indian Territory, will disturb a hornets' nest. Their report, it is said, contains these propositions: The establishment of United States Courts in the Territory; constituting the Indians citizens of the United States; and the division of their lands into possessions to be held in severalty. This means that the present Chinese wall around the Territory shall be broken down, and that the lands now held in common shall be divided up among the present owners. The trouble with the Indians of the Five Nations is that they do not recognize the right of the Government of the United States to interfere with anything inside of their boundaries. They accept from the Government the moneys claimed to be due them, but they disclaim any connection with our system of law. If Congress breaks up the travesty of a government which now amuses the Five Nations, it will theoretically declare a war of invasion.

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR."

It is only by those who have ceased to regard the past with tenderness or the future with hope that the salutation of the day will be regarded as impertinent or meaningless. To-day may be much the same as yesterday in all its prospects and possibilities; it may be regarded as but the turning-point in a division of time whose beginning has as little practical reference to the mutations of human lives as it has to that aspect of infinitude which it seeks to measure by terms of finite duration. But neither the cynic nor the metaphysician has much chance of getting a hearing to-day. Nor will the severe moralist who insists that it were more fitting to mourn over the wasted opportunities of the past than to make merry over the uncertain possibilities of the future, have any better chance of an audience. While men and women are fit for struggle and for action, they will persist in believing that they can do better in the year that is coming than they did in the year that is gone. While youths and maidens continue to see the life before them tinged with the golden hues of promise, they will find in New Year's Day the opening of a new vista of joyful anticipation, another rift in the cloudy curtain that conceals the bright reality of coming achievement. Let the stern teaching of experience rob us of what illusions it may, it is long before it can strip from the future the possibility of having something in store for us which we have missed in the past.

If the sentiments and relations of life were adjusted on a strictly philosophical basis, we might be so acutely conscious of the absurdity of giving a sort of mystic significance to a mere arbitrary division of time, that the mirth of the season would be hushed and its well-wishes left unsaid. But in this, as in sundry other matters, men's instincts are more trustworthy than their reason; the imagination takes the place as a stimulus of human action which the understanding is inadequate to fill. Hope may be "but the dream of those who wake," but if we did not expect much we should accomplish nothing. The resolutions with which we begin each new year have become the most commonplace illustration of human folly, but the faith which prompts them is at least an evidence that we have in us the possibility of beter things. It is true wisdom that impels men to hold fast to any associations which create joy and lightness of heart, for the race is beginning to experience that what is true of the individual is true of the mass, "he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow." The problems of society grow faster than the ability to solve them, and it needs all the warmth of feeling that we can get from anniversaries like that of to-day to sustain us in the belief that selfishness and cruelty and greed are not, after all, the strongest impulses in human nature and the most powerful forces in molding the future of manhood.

The time-honored customs of the day may be perverted, and all its brightness may be tarnished by a ridiculous travesty of its sentiment and its duties. The desire for ostentation needs to be carried but a short way to render the New Year's festival worse than meaningless and the New Year's kindly greeting a dismal burlesque of a heartfelt blessing. And there are those to whom the season can bring no gladness because of the bitterness of their lot or the stroke of the destroyer which has fallen beside them. There are shadows enough to dim the brightness of the day, look at it how we will. There are crosses enough in the lot of the most favored of mortals to remind them that life is a checkered business at the best. Yet are its inequalities not quite so numerous as some people imagine, nor are its contrasts so striking as is commonly assumed by those who regard merely the material aspects of existence. "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith" is a saying of the wise King which reveals the secret spring of human happiness, and helps us to understand how the inequality of what are called "the gifts of fortune" is corrected. In many a humble dwelling the New Year's salutation will ring with more earnestness and more meaning than amid all the evidences of luxury and wealth. So that we ourselves can look with hope and cheerful confidence to the days before us, let us cast aside all envy of the estate of those who have in profusion what we think most necessary to our happiness. The year is hanniest begun and best spent that is pervaded by faith in Divine Providence and love for our fellow-men.

OUR RELATIONS WITH MEXICO.

The diplomatic correspondence upon Mexican affairs now in course of publication by installments may seem at first to have merely a historic interest and importance. Undeniably, the border status described in the striking letter of Aug. 13 from Secretary Evarts to Minister Foster no longer exists. Since its date the Mexican Government has tried to do something to stop Indian raiding, and, as might have been expected, was successful on the first trial. A hasty campaign by a handful of regulars, aided by Kickapoo scouts, overwhelmed the Lipans. Should the remnants of this band be transferred to the Pacific coast, as is contemplated, their raids on Texan ranches will be over.

Thus it turns out that Mr. Evarts' accusations that no effective step has been taken by Mexico to check raiding, and that the Mexican Government seems to be powerless to check it, are now out of date. Nevertheless, this admission does not diminish the probability that this very letter, which reads almost like an ultimatum, drove the Mexican Government to make a military demonstration against the Lipan cattle-thieves, such as it ought to have made long before, for its own credit, and in discharge of its international obligations.

It should also be noted that the easy success of this first campaign fulfilled the predictions of Lieut.-Col. Shafter, made to the Congressional committee last Winter. Although that officer has been one of the most active leaders of our search-parties, he testified that the Mexican authorities could themselves, if they chose, stop all the cattle-thieving with the slightest exertion. He reckoned the entire number of Lipan raiders at only about two hundred, while the regular Mexican troops on the border are probably twice that number of thousands. Though pursuit, he said, by our troops, was always baffled by the nature of the country and the connivance of the people who profited by the raids, a Mexican campaign against the Lipans would succeed at once. The testimony of Gens. Sheridan and Ord to the same effect has also been substantiated by the event, which accordingly justifies the strong and almost imperious language of Mr. Evarts' remonstrances, as well as the famous orders for crossing the boundary in pursuit of raiders, issued by the War Department over eighteen months ago.

Doubtless, a firm attitude at Washington, backed up by military energy tempered with prudence on the Rio Grande, alone avails anything in dealing with the frontier troubles of Mexico, so long as the latter country is rent with factions ever ready to break out into revolt. In no country is a yielding, however just, to foreign demands or foreign influence more quickly seized upon for making the Government unpopular; hence, Mexican administrations often fear to discharge international obligations by just restrictions upon their people. President Jackson, after repeatedly asking for the settlement of American claims against Mexico, at last peremptorily insisted, and only then was a commission appointed which adjusted them. Dilatoriness in acceding to foreign demands was at that time declared by him to be a recognized trait of Mexican diplomacy. The policy thus found to be necessary, more than forty years ago, is the one which has been indicated afresh by the events of the past few months. Secretary Evarts took pains to express confidence, in all his letters to Mr. Foster, in the desire of President Diaz to stop the frontier cattle-thieving, but did not conceal his conviction that the Central Government was afraid to take the proper steps for that purpose. There has never been any reason to doubt the sincerity of Gen. Diaz in his professed desire to rid the river region of its thieving pests. But his Government, like its predecessors, has exaggerated the supposed dangers to its own stability of enforcing law and order in the outer provinces. The campaign in Chihuahua is over, and yet the Diaz Government is stronger than ever. It is a sorry compliment for any Government to pay the inhabitants of a region infested by smugglers, footpads, moon-shiners, or horse-thieves, when it acts as if they were too much in sympathy with these gentry to approve the execution of the laws against them.

The Evarts-Foster correspondence, however, has more than a merely historic value. If it does attest the worth of a firm policy toward a Government too fearful of its equilibrium to pursue, of its own accord, the path of international duty, it also indicates what may be expected for the future. The Mexican frontier question is by no means settled. Even supposing the Lipans to be removed bodily to the Pacific coast, which has not yet been done, they are not the only Indian thieves on the border. The Kickapoos, who have just fought their old enemies, the Lipans, have been engaged in the same thieving business, and presumably enjoy a species of Government favor and immunity for their late services. Two or three other bands or branches of the great Apache stock have the same instincts and aptitudes for plunder, which have been exercised in this region for more than a century, and are not to be be stifled at once. The announcement by Mr. Evarts of the policy of frontier protection at all hazards is, therefore, as fresh and valid to-day as before it stimulated the Mexican Government to tardy action. It would be too much to expect that next Spring will be wholly free from demonstrations like those of last Spring, which left trails of blood, ashes, and rapine in the western counties of Texas. What may be hoped for is that the campaign against the Lipans, being followed by no recoil against the Diaz Government, will encourage the latter to go on with its task of properly policing the river frontier. The visit which high Mexican officers are now making in Texas, as guests of Gen. Ord and his post commanders, indicates that the Mexicans believe that they have already done something to secure a welcome, and will do more.

Mr. Evarts, in his letter to Mr. Foster, repels, with quite needless irritability, the insinuation that the Government contemplates conquest and annexation in Mexico, and protests, with much fervor of antithesis, that the only "invasions" are from the other side. If our Government or people were really bent on annexation, it would go to work with rather more alacrity than now, and would find no difficulty in inventing pretexts, should there be a lack of them. As to the armed pursuit of armed parties across the boundary, this, very likely, is technically invasion, but Mr. Evarts has no need to juggle with the word. Such invasion, for such a purpose, in a well-attested emergency, forms an exception to the rule of frontier inviolability, as clearly defined, both in the books and in practice, as the rule itself. It has been illustrated by precedents on this continent as well as in Europe; and not only by our former dealings with Mexico, but by certain justifiable Canadian crossings of our lines. The real danger and wrong is not in making the exception, but in continuing it through ignorance or recklessness when the exigency is past. Mr. Evarts tells Mr. Foster that the desire of the Mexican Government for the revocation of Gen. Ord's orders cannot "now"—that is, then—be entertained; but he adds that just as soon as Mexico will undertake to pursue and punish the thieves, the United States forces will be very glad to allow her to do it entirely. That is a good rule to keep in mind, and to act upon.

IS THERE A PLACE FOR THE QUARTERLY?

The North American Review begins the new year as a monthly publication, and the change is to be regarded as another, if not the final, step in an important transformation which has been taking place in the character of the class of periodicals to which it belongs. During the two years that it has been in the hands of the present managers the old North American has undergone a complete regeneration, and while it retains something of the prestige of its long career, it has no similitude to the ponderous and soporific quarterly that was wont to convey to a limited but studious public the learned lucubrations of the sages of Boston and Cambridge. It has, no doubt, gained something in popularity, been oftener quoted and talked about, and consequently has had a wider circulation, and probably brought a larger revenue to the publisher. To those who regard this last as the main purpose of such a publication, it will appear to have been, so far, more successful than ever before. At the same time it has exerted a decided influence upon other publications of its class. Since the Review left Boston, the Atlantic Monthly has been edging its way into the same field at the risk of losing what it had of a distinctive character, and its other rivals have been spurred into activity in following in its wake. Whether they gain anything by such purely imitative emulation may be doubted, but the result has been to give us an entirely new class of reviews and to leave the field of the old quarterlies, so far as this country is concerned, practically vacant. A similar change has been going on in England, where the Nineteenth Century, the Contemporary, and the Fortnightly, which is really a monthly, have become, to a large extent, the vehicles of current thought and discussion, while the older and more ponderous periodicals have fallen into the background.

The question may be fairly raised whether the change that has come about in this particular field of periodical literature is in every sense and to its full extent an improvement. Doubtless, there was need of an awakening and an increase of vitality and vigor. There was no longer a sufficient demand for long and learned disquisitions on subjects that took no hold upon popular sympathy, and had no connection with the events and the problems which occupied the minds of men who made up the active public of the day. The true function of a review in these modern times is to bring to bear upon questions which are of vital importance and living interest the best thought, the widest experience, and the most profound study which can be brought under command. But it is far from desirable that real importance in topics and thoroughness and ability in treatment should be sacrificed to the meretricious attractions of an exciting controversy or the superficial work of those who have a transient notoriety, but little literary capacity. The tendency of the reviews of the day, in straining after popularity and present success, is to take up questions which happen for the moment to be uppermost in men's minds, regardless of their real importance, and to call to their treatment men whose names are before the public, and are supposed to have the power of arresting attention to whatever they may say, without reference to their actual qualifications or any proved excellence in the work accepted or invited. Though the result may be an increase of transient sales for the successive numbers of a review conducted on this principle, it is not calculated to build up a solid reputation or lay the foundation for an enduring and increasing success, and it is certainly fatal to the influence, the power, and the usefulness which ought to be at least as prominent an aim as mere "circulation."

The field which the reviews reduced to monthly periods of publication seem anxious to press into is one more especially belonging to the newspaper, and one which it can far more effectively occupy. There may be few that worthily fill it, but that does not make it any more available for magazines. With the hasty and superficial work that is admitted into these transformed reviews, they do not justify any claim of making up for the shortcomings of newspapers. It is a common mistake to assume that because a journal is published daily, its literary work is necessarily of a hurried or ill-digested character. In the discussion of current questions, the elucidation of principles, and the advocacy of public policies, they may be thorough and complete, notwithstanding their continuous daily publication and the frequent necessity for quick work. The men whom they employ make it the business of their every-day life to keep informed upon passing events, and to study the history and the philosophy which have a bearing upon ever-recurring questions of politics and public administration. They are constantly prepared to deal with the new phases which these questions may present, and the leader that has to be the direct work of a few hours may be the actual result of years of preparation. In fact, each year's work and study are in themselves the best preparation for the tasks of the future. Nor is it altogether a disadvantage that newspapers must deal with these subjects from day to day in brief space. Long lessons are not only distasteful, but unprofitable. While single articles are necessarily short, a newspaper may, in the course of months, give a subject more exhaustive treatment than it could receive in a review, with the advantage of not tiring its readers and of adapting its expositions to the varying attitude of the question and of the public mind. In the end it furnishes more enlightenment than a monthly or bi-monthly publication can possibly do. In point of fact, the actual influence exerted over the popular mind on matters of public moment comes almost wholly from the newspaper press. Take any of the recent questions of vital interest and importance, such as those concerning our national finances or a reform of the civil service, and it will be hard to trace to the reviews or magazines any perceptible share of the effect produced through their discussion.

But is there not, after all, a place for the review, be it quarterly or monthly? There are men who through inclination or circumstances have been led to make an exceptionally thorough study of some interesting or important subject; others have had long or fruitful experience in public affairs, or in some department of human knowledge; still others have had opportunities for varied observation and the collection of valuable facts; and, yet again, there are persons who have an exceptional power of analysis and unusual force and skill in presenting a subject and drawing practical conclusions. These men are capable of presenting to the public through a proper channel what the public would very gladly receive. They should be drawn upon, and the review is a proper medium for bringing to the light the elaborate discussions which they are prepared to furnish. Whether monthly reviews, especially those conducted on the method now prevalent, serve any useful purpose may be questioned, but there seems to be a place for something corresponding to the old quarterlies, provided they bring into their service the best thought, the deepest study, the widest research, and the highest literary power, applied to topics of living interest.

THE ALCOHOL QUESTION.

One of the leading English journals, the Contemporary Review, has presented to its readers, in the last two numbers, seven brief but highly instructive essays by as many physicians of eminence upon the advantages and disadvantages of alcoholic drinks. A dispassionate treatment of this subject by scientific men, on purely physiological grounds, is in the highest degree desirable. What is the use of alcohol, and to whom is it useful? When, and to whom, is it deleterious? These questions must be resolved before a definite and final conclusion can be reached with respect to the just and proper aims of a temperance reform. It is vain to expect that men generally will voluntarily abandon any article of food or drink which they really believe to be conducive to their health and promotive of long life. A chivalrous philanthropy may lead individuals to forego what they consider a positive advantage to themselves for the sake of shielding others to whom strong drink is hurtful, and who are slaves to the power of example. But asceticism from such a motive will not become general in society. On the other hand, let it be clearly ascertained that liquors capable of intoxicating are physically baneful, even when taken in less quantities, and let there be something like a concurrence of opinion among experts on this point, and a most powerful weapon is put into the hands of teetotalers. Of course, it will not follow that a beverage will be given up because it is known to impair the vital energies. Appetite may continue to prove stronger than reason and conscience. Yet the tide will set in the right direction. Eventually it may be hoped that the force of enlightened opinion will be adequate to the expulsion from ordinary use of things which are fully acknowledged to be destructive of health and life. One reason, certainly, why advocates of temperance have failed to win to their side in a greater degree the intelligent portion of the community is, that they have laid down doctrines respecting the physical effect of alcoholic drinks which the body of medical and scientific experts have refused to sanction. It is surely true of a multitude of persons that they only wait to learn precisely how far beverages of this character are wholesome or unwholesome, and are quite ready to conform their habits to the teachings of science.

In the last few years public attention in Great Britain has been more and more directed to the mischiefs of intemperance, and a perceptible check has been applied to this baleful evil, which prevails among all classes of people, but is especially ruinous in its effect upon laborers. Now that the subject has been fairly brought before the attention of the British public, it is likely to be thoroughly studied. The essays to which we have referred may be considered as one among various signs of a thorough awakening of the best people in England to the ravages wrought by this kind of self-indulgence, and as indicating a determination to provide a remedy.

Without attempting any full analysis of the papers in the Contemporary, we may point out some of the conclusions of several of the authors, who, it is understood, are distinguished medical practitioners. The writers appear generally to agree that alcohol acts mainly, and almost exclusively, not as a stimulant, but as a sedative. Thus, Sir William W. Gull states that nerve diseases are held to "run, for the most part, a physiological course, and that alcohol has but a subordinate value, which is due chiefly to its action on the nervous system as a sedative." Alcohol, he says, is now given to a patient in acute disease, not to cure him, but to calm the nerves. It is serviceable as a narcotic in cases of fatigue and exhaustion, but Dr. Gull thinks that probably some kinds of food might take its place. "If I am myself fatigued with overwork," he adds, "I eat raisins instead of taking wine." Dr. S. Wilks explains more at length the proposition that the stimulating effects of alcohol are quite inconsiderable, compared with its narcotic influence. Thus, he remarks, a glass of brandy and water will quell a severe toothache. This new doctrine that the operation of brandy, wine, and beer is sedative in its nature essentially modifies the use of these drinks in cases of bodily weakness or disease.

Sir William Gull, in his instructive paper, strongly maintains that wine or alcohol are of no advantage in intellectual work. They quicken, but do not improve, the movements of the intellect. They do not give strength. "I am persuaded," he says, "that nothing better could be done than that lecturers should go about the country instructing the people upon the disadvantages of alcohol as it is daily used. People will not listen to the temperance societies because they carry their theories too far." This able writer and his associates in the Contemporary do not admit that there is no use in alcohol and no good in wine. They hold that they may be profitably taken in small quantities by persons advanced in life or afflicted with special infirmities. As to the extent to which it may be taken without harm, they are not entirely agreed. Dr. Wilks says: "I believe alcohol soothes a worried, nervous system, and, by preventing wear and tear, actually supports the frame: but, discarding its stimulating properties, I denounce its use in delicate children and in women who feel 'low.'" On the whole, the authority of these learned writers by no means encourages the general use of intoxicating drinks, even in small quantities, by persons in health, and inculcates far greater caution with respect to the prescription of them as remedies than medical men have been accustomed to practice.

There is one other point made in these discussions which deserves notice. Sir William Gull decidedly rejects the notion that intemperance is to be considered a form of insanity, rather than a moral transgression. A man may be insane while he is drunk, but in making himself so he exercises a free and responsible agency. Hence, drunkenness, whenever it makes a public exhibition of itself, is to be punished by the civil authority; and penalties are among the potent means to be employed for the repression of the vice.

The merchants assembled in trade conventions at Chicago and New-Orleans should have taken a leaf out of the records of their German colaborers who recently came together to urge upon their Government the advantages of a system of protection to native industries. These last-mentioned business men came to the conclusion that what the Government needed more than anything else was practical information, and that this could be had by the appointment of a Board of Merchants, to be consulted by Parliament whenever mercantile subjects came up for consideration. During the past two or three years the men who are managing the Texas Pacific Railroad job, the Western river improvement scheme, and the plan for subsidizing ocean steamers have been working to enlist the support of various Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce in large and little cities all over our country, and we are sorry to say, their shrewdness has, in too many instances, led to victory. But the strength thus gained is not cohesive enough to make it effective, and hence a semi-official board of respectable merchants, nominated by these same trade organizations, who could at all times have access to the private ear of Congressmen, would be an acquisition to those who are seeking to obtain Government credit, whose value it would be hard to overestimate. Native talent must, indeed, be declining when Yankee cuteness is thus outrun by German sagacity.

With the exception of those who have made a study of classical art, few Americans seem to have any idea of the vast difference that exists between the rude methods of bodily development of the present time and the physical culture of the ancient Greeks. It is not that we are wanting in opportunities, for we have more, and more varied, means of exercise than were possessed by the Greeks, but the general controlling purpose which gave unity to their practices and symmetry to their forms seems with us to be almost wholly wanting. One man will be noted for his prowess at the oar, and as a consequence will exhibit arms, shoulders, and chest developed to an abnormal extent. Another gains commendations by his skill in walking, running or jumping, and the chances are that with him the muscles of the leg are heavy enough to sustain a man of twice his weight above the waist. It sometimes happens though, that one meets with a person who has not this "lop-sided" physical frame, and who is for this reason spoken of as a type of manly beauty. But taking the Greek ideal as a standard, such a person will usually be found to be greatly out of the way. The type at which we apparently aim is a huge muscular creature whose knotted cords and sinews, even when the body is in repose, show themselves in great irregular masses beneath the surface of the flesh. In short, our type of highest excellence in bodily development is of the same character as that the Greek sculptors used when they wished to depict a strong but ill-bred barbarian. A native of Athens or Sparta, in the days of their ascendency, desired to obtain, by physical exercise, beauty of form as well as strength, and so employed himself that when his body, materially speaking, was at its best, its uniform outline was unbroken by the appearance of underlying muscles. It may be that we shall come around in time to this higher form of training; but the road is a long one, and what is more, we have had our tastes in this respect corrupted by a succession of artists, from the "Old Masters" of Italy downward.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, now containing a population of about 100,000, is reputed to be the richest city of its size in the whole world. If its wealth were equally divided among its inhabitants, every man, woman, and child would have, it is said 20,000 marks, or some $5,000 apiece. There are, as may be supposed, a good many very poor people in the town; but the citizens are, as a whole, in unusually comfortable circumstances, more so, probably, than the citizens of any other capital in Germany or Europe. It is asserted that there are 100 Frankforters worth from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 each, and 250 who are worth $1,000,000 and upward. The city is one of the great banking centres of the globe. Its aggregate banking capital is estimated at $200,000,000, more than one-fourth of which the famous Rothschilds, whose original and parent house is there, own and control. The annual transactions in bills of exchange are in excess of $100,000,000. Its general trade and manufacturing industries have greatly increased since the formation of the German Empire, to which Frankfort was originally averse, being a free city and an opponent of Prussia until coerced, in July, 1866, by Gen. Von Falckenstein, who entered it at the head of an army and imposed a fine of 32,000,000 florins for its insubordination. Frankfort is such a place for conventions and assemblies of all sorts that it is very apt to be full of strangers, and is consequently very expensive and by no means satisfactory to tarry in.

Notwithstanding official contradictions, there are many reasons for thinking that King Alfonso's friends and advisers are slowly but surely pushing him toward a second marriage. The name most prominently associated with his in this connection is that of the late Queen's sister, Christiane; but this would involve a union which the Roman Catholic Church does not freely allow, and though, considering the social and political standing of both persons, Papal dispensations could easily be had, it does not seem likely that the unwilling thoughts of the King would be forced into a path where they would encounter a grave religious obstacle at the outset. It is highly probable that King Alfonso will be compelled to make one of those customary marriages of convenience, even at the cost of shattering certain theories on this subject which he has entertained, which were thoroughly sound if they were sentimental. He has repeatedly said that a prolonged stay at Vienna caused him to have a thorough dislike and distrust of what might be termed official marriages between members of royal families. It was not that the head of the Austrian Empire was unhappily wedded, for his was essentially a love-match; but his capital has been for years past the favorite retreat of dethroned Kings, Princes, and Dukes, and one in the position of a claimant to the Spanish throne had, while staying there, an admirable opportunity of seeing how ill-suited these indifferent family relationships were to stand the strain of every-day life under adverse circumstances. It is something to King Alfonso's credit that he was willing to openly admit, when once on the throne, the uncertainty of his continuance there, and that he had the manliness, in the face of opposition, to shape his course with a view to possible political misfortunes; but now he will be asked to recognize the demands of his position, and sacrifice personal comfort and prudence to the necessities of State.

A good deal of mistletoe is brought here from England about Christmas-time, and sold at high prices. Why it should be brought across the sea when it is quite common in this country, it is hard to understand. It grows (the native species, of which there are 76, is Phoradendron flavescens of Nuttall) not much south of this, from New-Jersey far westward and southward to Mississippi and Florida. It is generally found on the branches of elms and hickories—a yellowish-green, woody-stemmed parasite, with a jointed stalk, having opposite and whorled branches, thick, obovate leaves, small flowers in axillary spikes, shorter than the leaves, and fruit of white glutinous berries. The American mistletoe is prettier, and could be got much easier and cheaper than the English mistletoe. The association of the mistletoe with the Druids is probably ill-founded. Only that was held sacred which grew on the oak, and it so very rarely grows there that it is quite likely the Celtic priests mistook another plant for it. According to tradition, it was cut from the oak with great ceremonies on the first day of the new year, and consecrated to their chief deity on account of its presumed extraordinary virtues. There are so many poetic superstitions and myths connected with it that we wonder it is not sent here in quantities from Southern New-Jersey, from Maryland and Delaware. It might be made as much a fashion that all the women who receive New-Year's Day would think their drawing-rooms incomplete, unless garnished with mistletoe. Kissing under the mistletoe is a relic of Scandinavian mythology. Loki hated Balder, the northern Apollo, and as everything that springs from the four elements had been sworn not to harm the divine favorite, the spirit of evil made an arrow of mistletoe and gave it to blind Hoder to test. Hoder shot the arrow and killed Balder. Having been restored to life at the earnest petition of all the celestials, the mistletoe was consigned to the custody of the goddesses of love, and all who might pass under it received a kiss to show that the plant was the emblem of love, not of death.

Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, who recently asked the Pope to relieve him of his ecclesiastical and financial responsibilities, (the monetary embarressments of the Archiepiscopate as represented by "Father" Edward Purcell have already been mentioned,) on account of his advanced years, has seen a great many changes in the city of his adoption. The Archbishop, who will be 79, the coming February, went from Mt. St. Mary's College, (Emmettsburg, Md.,) of which he had been President, to Cincinnati, and was made Bishop in 1833. There was then but one Roman Catholic Church in the town—it was formerly the Cathedral, but is now known as St. Xavier's—and there are at present about 40 churches of that denomination. Forty-five years ago, only 13 priests were in all Ohio; now there are some 400, with three Bishops. The number of communicants of the Roman Church in Cincinnati is estimated at 100,000—not far from one-half of the whole population—not counting the nominal Catholics; but the estimate—evidently a sectarian one—must be grossly exaggerated. The Archbishop, who became such in 1855, had a debate on theology many years since with Dr. Alexander Campbell, founder of the Disciples of Christ, the former defending and the latter assailing the claims of the Roman Church. The debate created much interest at the time, and, naturally, the advantage was claimed by the adherents of both creeds. The priests of the diocese have been looking to and trying to arrange for some assistance to the distinguished prelate, who feels, however, that he is entitled to absolute rest. He begged to be allowed to resign the cares of his office during the life of Pio Nono; but his petition was gracefully declined. If his present request should be granted, his ecclesiastic rank and dignity will not be changed. The Archbishop, a native of Ireland, we believe, though he came very early to this country, is much respected by all sects and classes in Cincinnati, where he has always been regarded as liberal and high-minded. He was a stanch, uncompromising supporter of the Union during the civil war, hoisting the stars and stripes, it is said, upon the spire of the cathedral. At the last Ecumenical Council he was, it is understood, one of the few dignitaries who stoutly opposed the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, and yielded to it at last with reluctance and regret. He afterward favored it, of course, as he felt bound to do—a loyal representative of the so-considered Holy Apostolic Church.

AMUSEMENTS.

GENERAL MENTION.

Those minute actors, Gen. Tom Thumb and wife, may now be seen every afternoon and evening at Masonic Hall in one of their amusing performances.

There will be matinée performances to-day at the Park Theatre, Booth's, the Standard, Broadway, Niblo's, the Theatre Comique, the Aquarium, and at the San Francisco Minstrels.

A new play, probably an American one, is the attraction this week at the San Francisco Minstrels. It is pleasantly called "Love's Endurance," and its brief action is accompanied by ceaseless hilarity.

There will be considerable interest to see and hear Mrs. Scott-Siddons again, as it is two years or more since she last appeared in this City. She will give her new readings on Friday evening at Chickering Hall.

"Christmas Joys and Sorrows" is the name of the piece in which Messrs. Harrigan and Hart now appear nightly at the Theatre Comique. It will give place to something at the close of this gladsome holiday week.

The illness of Herr Wilhelmj, who is at present at Chicago, will necessitate a change in the arrangements for the third public rehearsal and concert of the Symphony Society of New-York, which will take place at Steinway Hall to-morrow afternoon and Saturday evening. The services of Herr Wilhelmj will not, however, be lost to the society, as an agreement has been made with his agent, Mr. Strakosch, to have the distinguished virtuoso play at the fourth public rehearsal and concert. The programme for to-morrow and Saturday is as follows:

Unfinished Symphony in B minor.....F. Schubert
Air from "Xerxes".....Handel
Miss Anna Drasdil.
Concert for piano-forte, with orchestra.....Ed. Grieg
Mr. Franz Rummel.
"La Captive".....H. Berlioz
Miss Anna Drasdil.
Symphony in C.....R. Schumann

OBITUARY.

GEORGE J. WHITNEY.

The announcement of the death of George J. Whitney at Rochester yesterday was received with surprise as well as sorrow in this City. Although in his sixty-first year, Mr. Whitney was a man of magnificent physique, and was when last seen here in apparently vigorous health. He succumbed to kidney disease after an illness of six weeks' duration. He was born in Rochester, and succeeded to his father's milling business. The latter—Warham Whitney—was the originator and proprietor of the "W. Whitney" brand of flour, which was famous in the days when Genesee wheat was regarded as the pick of the market before Minnesota Spring wheat was thought of. Mr. Whitney was a man of extraordinary activity and public spirit. He had been identified with all the progress of his native city during the last half century, and had been a prominent officer of many of its public institutions. At the time of his death he was President of the Citizens' Gas Association, President of the Board of Managers of the Western House of Refuge, and Trustee of the Rochester Savings Bank. He was a great lover of horses, and to his energy is due the establishment of the Rochester Driving Park, one of the finest race-courses in the United States. Two years ago he was President of the association having it in charge. He was often asked to accept of political preferment at the hands of his fellow-citizens. A few years

WELCOMING THE NEW YEAR

A GLAD GREETING TO 1879.

OLD TRINITY'S FAREWELL TO 1878—THE NEW YEAR USHERED IN WITH CHIMES AND THE DIN OF WHISTLES AND TIN HORNS—SCENES IN THE STREETS—WATCH-NIGHT SERVICES IN THE CHURCHES.

Eleven thirty, of Dec. 31, 1878. Old Trinity is lighted, and the moon, sinking in the west, throws the broad shadow of the church across Broadway. A light mantle of snow rests upon the graves in the church-yard, and the tombs of sandstone rise black against the white background. Before the railing of the church, peering through at the light streaming from the stained windows, is a throng of men, women, and children. Up and down the street this crowd extends, and across the street to the opposite side. They watch the hands of the clock as it slowly moves toward the minute that will denote the passing away of 1878 and the incoming of 1879.

This was the scene at Trinity Church when a reporter of THE TIMES climbed the stairway to the belfry in search of Mr. Thirlwall, the ringer of the chimes. Up in the belfry he was found, walking back and forth in the little square room, waiting impatiently for the moment when his last task for the year should begin. A curious room is that in which the ringer of Trinity chimes is housed. Four walls of stone, with four quarter-foil windows, too high for purposes of observation, except toward the sky, a rough stairway leading steeply to the chimes above, and dust, thick and ancient, in all the crevices. The ringer's music was arranged on a shelf over the handles that controlled the chimes, and six candles blazed from the shelf. Against a post was the programme of music for the occasion, arranged by Mr. Thirlwall and approved by Rev. Dr. Dix, the Rector.

Eleven, forty-five of December 31. The chime-ringer drew off his coat, and while the boys and men outside were tuning their tin horns, and the sounds of singing bands were heard faintly rising from the street, the chimer rang the changes on eight bells. The reporter, seeking for a good point of observation, ventured to climb to the floor above the chimes, through narrow passages and up narrower stairways, blacker than the night without, to the landing, from which a parapet is reached. Here was found a point of observation indeed. The view obtained included the City and the rivers, with Brooklyn and Jersey City and Hoboken, the lights of the streets, the red and green signals of the ferry-boats and landings, and over the whole scene the moon shone with rare brilliancy. In Broadway the crowd was dense just about the church, while in the clear spaces beyond the throng, weird shadows followed the men who moved about under the gas-light. At the moment the bells rang out there was an increase in the noise from the neighboring streets. A moaning chorus of the horns arose. As the minute-hand of the clock approached the hour this atrocious chorus increased. The noise of thousands of feet upon the pavement was lost in this crescendo of inharmonious sounds. Two or three weird ming hymns had been played, and then there was a pause in the ringing. The minute and the hour hand almost touched. The sound of the horns had almost ceased. The clock rang out the warning chime, and then the deepest bell, the marker of the hours, sounded the first stroke of 12. It was the signal for letting pandemonium loose. From every side arose the shrieks of whistles, the ringing of bells, the firing of guns and pistols, and from below, in all the streets and alleys, a demoniac blast from countless horns, so vast and resonant that it swallowed up all other sounds. In Church-street, where the trains of the elevated railroad had just stopped running, the engines were standing, resting after a day of puffing, filling, and backing. When the worst of the roaring welcome of sound had been heard, an engineer seemed to have thought of his whistle. A single blast was blown from the shrill pipe, and then there followed a scream loud enough to fear that it would startle the dead in the vaults beside the old church. The crowd outside, gathering fresh breath for another blast of welcome to the New Year, swelled the chorus of unearthly sounds. From every side there rolled these sounds of welcome, until the noise seemed to come from miles away. It lasted for a few moments only, and then died away. The chimes rang out "The Blue Bells of Scotland," and 5,000 people listened. Then the programme of 15 joyful songs was continued, lasting for nearly an hour. As the familiar sounds of "Home, Sweet Home," fell upon the throng it began to move away. The tin horns were brought again into use with renewed vigor on the part of the boys and men who blew them. Wayfarers were stunned with the din made by organized bands of men, who marched along, blowing as they marched, and making the air to quake with the volume of outrageous sounds that they produced. The bands of serenaders resumed their singing, and the boys took up the chorus of many familiar airs with a zest that denoted the fullest sympathy with the New Year's rejoicing.

The streets of the City were last evening gay with the bustle of preparation for the New Year holiday. Up town, about the great shops, which were all ablaze with light, and thronged with purchasers, the streets were crowded with people. Business was uncommonly good, even for the holiday season. The groceries were overrun with customers, and the bakers' shops were hard pressed to supply the demand for New Year's goodies—the iced abominations with which ladies tempt their callers.

The markets were open until nearly midnight, and the stands along the streets, where poultry was sold under flaming and smoking torches of kerosene-oil, were patronized by throngs of women and men, who staggered home with baskets bursting under the pressure of fat turkeys and geese. It was a never more busile or business on a New Year's Eve, and the market men were glad. The New Year came in with many good omens, and they gave their customers the customary greetings with rather more than common cordiality.

MIDNIGHT WATCHES IN THE CHURCHES.

Between 9:30 and 10 o'clock last night, at St. Paul's Church, the congregation came gliding in by twos and threes so silently that the vast interior seemed to be filling with shadows. The light was dim, and there was something singularly impressive in the large concourse of bowed figures. In the pulpit, kneeling motionless, were Rev. Dr. Tiffany, the Pastor; Bishop Harris, Rev. Dr. Deems, Rev. Howard Crosby, D. D., of the University of the City of New-York, and Rev. Dr. Fowler, editor of the Advocate—a group representing different denominations, but met together to see the old year out and welcome in the new in the pious fashion that the Methodists have nearly transformed into a general custom. The organ was playing a kind of voluntary composed of notes so minor and remote that they struck the fancy as coming from another world, when Dr. Tiffany rose from his knees, announced the hymn; the congregation lifted their heads, and the services began. Dr. Crosby led with a brief, but fervent and appropriate prayer; Dr. Deems read the New-Year's hymn, and then Bishop Harris, with his deep and impressive voice read some selections from the Psalms of David. Rev. Dr. Fowler took for his text a passage from Paul's Epistle to the Romans: "For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God," and from this text deduced the thesis of spiritual leadership. This thesis, he said, brings our minds at a single sweep in contact with the great conflict of to-day and of the ages—the conflict between the Church and the world. There were those who were inclined to regard the claims of Jesus to be the Son of God as infinite egotism. But they who had had their lives transformed and their hearts regenerated by the Spirit of God knew it to be the most infinite condescension. In like manner, there were many who regarded the special claims of the followers of Jesus to regeneration and holiness of life as infinite egotism; but they who knew that the assertion blessed it as an infinite reality—the highest and most beautiful reality on earth. What is the life of man? said Dr. Fowler, stepping from behind the desk. Here is man, a poor, weak creature. Yonder is the heavenly Jerusalem, and the journey must be made. It can be made only ones; if by any great mistake the race is lost, it cannot be run over again. The way thither is full of pitfalls; the air full of flying missiles; death maps momentarily at the runner's heels; there is not a step of the road where he has the slightest immunity from the jaws of the destroyer. From this terrible exordium, Dr. Fowler proceeded to expatiate upon the lessons of the year that is past, and the hopes and duties of the year that is to come. After the sermon, Dr. Tiffany prayed, a hymn was sung, and the clock striking 12, the congregation was dismissed with the benediction.

The musical chime of a pretty French clock standing upon a marble-topped table on the rostrum, near a fairy-like pot of the azaleas last night in the Madison-avenue Church of the Disciples, and a moment later the strains of the organ floated softly through the building, opening with music the watch-night services that were to see the old year out and the new in. Dr. Hepworth, having delivered a prayer of thanks for the gracious guidance of God during the year just dying, the congregation sang the familiar hymn:

> "I need Thee every hour,
> Most gracious Lord."

Carlos Florentine sang several verses alone in a full, rich voice, the congregation joining in the chorus. A selection from the Psalms was read, and then Dr. Hepworth prayed fervently for God's help in the coming year to sustain men in their journey toward Zion. "O happy day, that fixed my choice on Thee" was next sung with much spirit, and, as the notes died away in echoes at last, Rev. Mr. Reed delivered a short address, in which he urged the sanctification of the memory of the past—which was unfavorable, and the looking forward with cheerfulness and courage to the future. Mr. Florentine sang very finely, to an organ accompaniment, the solo: "O, Paradise! O, Paradise! So beautiful, so grand." Dr. Hepworth spoke eloquently of the thoughts suggested to him by the going out of the old and the coming of the new year, and, after the singing of a hymn by the congregation, introduced Dr. Behan, of Baltimore, who spoke to the injunctions of the Bible in favor of the keeping of such occasions as gathered the congregation together that evening, and urged that occasions similar to the "watch service" could not be too frequent, as they made the hearts and mind to meditate upon themes, the consideration of which tended to make men better. Mr. Florentine having effectively sung an alto solo, prayer was delivered for God's blessing upon those whose life during the last year was one of burdens and tribulations, and the congregation sang "O, think of that home over there." When the singing had ceased, Rev. L. Bevan delivered the address. He spoke pathetically of the sin-stained and troublous records that marked the past, and of the many mercies that had come from the great Master, against whom man had done so much wrong. A word of prayer by the Pastor, imploring Divine blessing upon good resolutions for the future, followed Dr. Bevan's affecting remarks, and was succeeded by a moment of silent prayer, during which the clock upon the rostrum rang out its musical strokes announcing midnight and the close of 1878. The Lord's Prayer was repeated as the chiming ceased, and then the organ pealed forth the hymn, "Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow," in the singing of which the congregation joined. They were then dismissed with the benediction, and many good wishes for "a happy New Year" were exchanged among the parishioners.

THE WEATHER.

SYNOPSIS AND INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—1 A. M.—The barometer is high off the Middle Atlantic coast, with easterly winds and cloudy, rainy weather. It is low in the East Gulf States, and lowest on the California coast. North-east winds, cloudy, rainy weather prevails in the East Gulf States; northerly winds, with rain, in the West Gulf States; south-west winds and cloudy weather in the lower lake region. The rivers fell on Tuesday at Cincinnati, Cairo, Memphis, and Vicksburg.

INDICATIONS.

For the Middle Atlantic States and Southern New-England, southerly winds, cloudy weather, falling barometer, occasional rain or snow.

For the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, north-east winds, falling barometer, warmer, cloudy, and rainy weather followed in the latter section by colder northerly winds and rising barometer.

For the West Gulf States, cooler northerly winds, rising barometer, cloudy and clearing weather.

For Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, north-east, backing to north-west winds, cooler, cloudy weather, with rain or snow falling, followed by rising barometer.

For the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, lighter north-west winds, rising barometer, and clearing weather.

For the upper lake region, falling, possibly followed by rising, barometer, north-westerly winds, cooler, clear, or partly cloudy weather.

For the lower lake region south-west winds, slightly warmer, cloudy weather, falling barometer, and possibly snow.

For the North Pacific coast clear or partly cloudy weather.

For the Middle and South Pacific coasts, rain, followed by clearing weather.

The rivers will fall, except in the Gulf and South Atlantic States.

Cautionary off-shore signals continue at Indianola and Galveston, and are ordered for Port Eads, and cautionary signals continue at Cape Henry, Kitty-Hawk, Cape Hatteras, Cape Lookout, and Macon.

IN THIS CITY.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature for the past 24 hours, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy:

	1877.	1878.		1877.	1878.
3 A. M.	27°	22°	3:30 P. M.	37°	32°
6 A. M.	25°	20°	6 P. M.	30°	30°
9 A. M.	29°	27°	9 P. M.	29°	28°
12 M.	34°	29½	12 P. M.	21°	28°

Average temperature yesterday.....27°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year.....28½°

LOSSES BY FIRE.

A fire in Helena, Ark., yesterday originated in the dry goods establishment of D. Trieber, on Commercial-row, and destroyed eight two-story buildings. The losses are as follows: Summers & Watson, hardware, $13,000, insurance, $7,000; D. F. Stone, dentist, $700, insurance, $350; H. Frink, dry goods, $8,000, insurance, $4,000; S. Wise, boots and shoes, $14,000, insurance, $9,000; D. Trieber, dry goods, total loss, insurance, $7,000; E. Ehrman, Honors, $10,000, insurance, $7,000; E. Wolf, dry goods, $20,000, insurance, $14,000; Charles Willman, boarding-house, $2,000, insurance, $1,000; Mayfield & Co., grocers, $10,000, insurance, $5,000; J. P. Clopton, dry goods and groceries, $800, covered by insurance. Four of the buildings destroyed were owned by Jack & Co., and were insured for $6,000; one was owned by T. L. Avery & Co., New-Orleans, insurance, $1,000; one by Seelig & Bender, insurance, $2,000; one by H. Frink, insurance, $3,000; one by E. D. & J. S. Pillow, insurance unknown. The names of the companies in which the insurance is held are not given.

Burt's dry goods store, Huntington's boot and shoe store, and Smith's saloon, at Saginaw, Mich., were destroyed by fire Monday night. The loss is $5,000, and there is no insurance.

The extensive photographic gallery of John A. Scholton, at Olive and Tenth streets, St. Louis, was burned between 9 and 10 o'clock last night. The loss is about $10,000.

A fire at Davison, Mich., yesterday morning, destroyed the saw and grist mill owned by Charles Flint. The loss is $12,000, and the insurance $3,000.

Cooper's brick block at Paris, Mo., has been burned. The loss is $40,000, mostly covered by insurance.

GRAIN IN WESTERN WAREHOUSES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Chicago elevators contain 5,556,662 bushels of wheat, 1,945,988 bushels of corn, 427,933 bushels of oats, 226,684 bushels of rye, and 1,166,762 bushels of barley, making a total of 9,324,029 bushels, against 9,060,977 bushels a week ago, and 2,800,698 bushels at this period last year. Vessels in this harbor are loaded with 56,085 bushels of wheat, 378,110 bushels of corn, and 25,685 bushels of oats. Milwaukee warehouses are stored with 2,567,385 bushels of wheat, 32,980 bushels of corn, 191,428 bushels of oats, 94,013 bushels of rye, and 551,655 bushels of barley.

WESTERN PASSENGER RATES REDUCED.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 31.—The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad Company has made sweeping reductions in passenger rates, to take effect to-morrow. The rate is reduced to 4 cents a mile on the main line and all branches in Kansas, Colorado, and New-Mexico. This is a reduction of over 33 per cent.

FAVORING CHARTER REPEAL IN MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 31.—At an adjourned mass-meeting of citizens to-night resolutions favoring the unconditional repeal of the city charter were passed.

CRUSHED BETWEEN TWO CARS.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Thomas Toomey, a laborer in a coal-yard here, was crushed between the bunkers of two cars to-day, and died in five minutes.

JUDGE DOWLING'S ESTATE.

An application was made yesterday to Surrogate Calvin, by the Administrators of the estate of the late Police Justice Dowling, for the examination of Mrs. Mary J. Keeler, sister of the deceased, who has in her possession bonds of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad of the face value of $50,000, which are registered in the name of the deceased. The application was granted, and Mrs. Keeler testified that her brother gave her the bonds previous to his death. The Administrators claim that the bonds belong to the Dowling estate because, if the deceased had given them to Mrs. Keeler, he would have had them registered so that she could control them.

PASSED OVER THE MAYOR'S VETO.

Alderman Sauer called up the resolution in the Common Council yesterday, which was recently vetoed by the Mayor, authorizing the Harlem, Morrisania and Fordham Railroad Company to extend their tracks across Harlem Bridge to a point near One Hundred and Twenty-ninth-street and Third-avenue, so as to connect with the rapid transit road. He presented a petition in favor of the measure, which he said was signed by 4,000 persons, one-half of whom were ladies. The resolution was then passed over the Mayor's veto.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

John Hanley, aged 14, of Seventh-avenue and Fifty-seventh-street, employed at the Ellis Flats, No. 964 Eighth-avenue, was crushed to death last evening between the platform of the elevator and the wall. His body was terribly mangled. Coroner Ellinger gave a permit for the removal of the remains of the lad to his late home, and will hold an inquest.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH NEWS

THE MANHATTAN BANK.

REDUCTION OF ITS EXPENSES—AN OFFICIAL STATEMENT OF ITS CONDITION—THE INJUNCTION CONTINUED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—Superintendent Lamb has received a letter from Edward Schell, President of the Manhattan Savings Bank, dated Dec. 28, stating that the officers and Trustees of the bank had declared a reduction of 20 per cent. upon all salaries, to take effect on the 1st of January. It was also determined to dispense with three clerks on the 28th. A further reduction of 20 per cent. was declared, to take effect at the same time. These reductions will be, in effect, a reduction of 50 per cent. upon the expenses of the bank before the burglary. The Superintendent has also been shown a letter to Mr. Schell, from the Controller of the Currency, stating that the Treasury Department will be ready to issue the new registered bonds as soon as the bank can officially inform the Treasury of any assignment of the original bonds, or that none have been assigned. The following circular has been issued by the bank:

NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

This institution has been forbidden by an order of the Supreme Court from paying out for the present any money for any purpose. The application for this order was made by the Attorney-General, at the instance of the Superintendent of the Banking Department, in the interest of depositors, and it is expected to be temporary. Efforts are being made, with every prospect of success, to duplicate the registered securities which were stolen from the institution on Oct. 27 last. It is expected that as soon as the same shall be so duplicated the institution will resume business and pay its depositors on demand.

Then follows a statement of the condition of the bank, showing a surplus, with the stolen bonds duplicated, of $418,642 92, to which, it is stated, "any part of the stolen bonds ($241,000) that may be recovered will be added."

The order granted by Judge Ingalls on the 23d inst., restraining the bank from paying out deposits and requiring the Institution to show cause at the Special Term to-day why the injunction should not be continued, was brought to a hearing and an order made to continue the injunction until the further order of the court, leave being given to either party to apply to the court to have the injunction modified or vacated. The injunction is only intended to protect the institution, which expects to be in a position to go on with its business by the 20th of January.

A MILITIA CAPTAIN'S SUIT.

HAS THE SUPREME COURT POWER TO REVIEW THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICIAL ACTS.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—An unusual, though interesting, military case came up in Special Term to-day. In the early part of last Summer Noah L. Cochen, Captain of Company I, Thirteenth Regiment, of Brooklyn, N. G. S. N. Y., was tried by court-martial for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, and dismissed. He appealed to Gov. Robinson, as Commander-in-Chief, who affirmed the decision of the court. Cochen then, through his counsel, Mr. Foster, procured a writ of certiorari from Justice Pratt, returnable before the Special Term in this city to-day, in which the Governor was required to make return of his proceedings and decision in the matter for review. When the matter came up Gen. Hughes appeared for the Governor, and presented Justice Learned with a note from his Excellency, in which, with all respect to the court, as stated by Gen. Hughes, he took exceptions to the power of the court to compel him to make return of acts done in his discretion, which were imposed on him by the Constitution. In addition, Gen. Hughes moved to quash the writ, on the ground that it was irregularly issued, and that it showed the action of the Governor was simply the action he was required to take under the Constitution.

Mr. Foster opposed this on the ground that no notice had been served, and then Justice Learned decided that as no return had been filed and there was no affidavit of service of writ, there was nothing before him.

Mr. Cocheu then made affidavit as to service of the writ, and Mr. Foster, waiving his right to notice of motion, Gen. Hughes proceeded with his argument. In his reply, Mr. Foster intimated that if the motion was denied, he would probably, at some future time, move for an attachment against the Governor for contempt in failing to make return to the writ.

After hearing arguments on the motion to quash the writ, Justice Learned took the papers and reserved his decision. A question involved is whether the Governor or Supreme Court is the higher power. Major Timmons, Judge Advocate of the court-martial, appeared for the tribunal.

THE KINGS COUNTY SHRIEVALTY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—In the case of Jacob Worth against Thomas M. Riley, the latter having been awarded the certificate of election to the office of the Sheriff of Kings County, the former to-day appeared before the Attorney-General and made application for a suit to try title to the office, filing his papers. Mr. N. C. Moak, on behalf of Riley, requested a hearing before the issue of the papers, which the Attorney-General granted, and appointed 7th of January as the day for the hearing. In conversation to-day the Attorney-General said that his duty was simply to decide whether there was a case for a suit on the part of the people or not. The prima facie case is shown, it will be his duty to begin a suit, as every citizen has a right of appeal to the courts. If the application is based on mere quibbles he will reject it, though he stated very positively that there was every likelihood that a suit would have to be instituted, if only on the ordinary right of the citizen. On a question of fact, he, as Attorney-General, has no presume to decide. The complaint of Mr. Worth charges false counting.

PORT JERVIS REJOICING.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORT JERVIS, Dec. 31.—Among the more important measures for the prosperity of this place, and one which has caused considerable interest, is the transfer of the Erie repair shops, now at Jersey City, to this place. The report has many times been made public that this change was to take place, but until to-day nothing that has been deemed authentic has been given. An official, holding a high position in this place, stated to-day that ground would be broken upon the company's extensive property here in less than six weeks, and that the work upon the buildings would immediately follow. A large force of men is now engaged in building a culvert over a stream running at this place, and along the track, upon which tracks are to be laid to accommodate the increased freight traffic of the Erie. The culvert will terminate at the present site of the large shop. It is rumored that on the completion of the repairs, the shops are to be removed across the track and upon the unoccupied property of the company, the land made vacant by the removal to be filled with switches, thereby supplying a decided need of the company.

ASKING PAYMENT FOR A DEAD HUSBAND.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 31.—Action has been commenced in the Monmouth County Court at Freehold, against the Long Branch Pier Company, by the widow of John Syms, of Glen Gardner, N. J., to recover damages for the death of her husband, who was buried alive a few weeks ago, while assisting in excavating the bluff for the approaches of the iron wharf. It is claimed by Mrs. Syms' counsel that the pier corporation is responsible for the death of Syms, as no protection was made by the builder of the pier by bracing the bluff under which Syms and others were at work. The Coroner's jury in the case was three days in arriving at its verdict, one of the jurymen dissenting because it did not censure the contractor.

COAL OPERATORS CONSULTING ON PRICES.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 31.—At a meeting of the Lehigh Valley coal operators held in this city to-day, it was decided to take immediate action on the question of prices, and a committee was appointed to meet next Thursday to adjust that matter. The Schuylkill operators have also deemed it advisable to issue no January circular at this time, but they have informed their customers that the following figures will rule for the present for line and city trade: Egg and broken, $2 15; stove, $2 25; small stove, $3 50; chestnut, $2. When the present orders are exhausted, it is believed that prices will show another decline.

MONEY MADE AT THE MINT.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 31.—The total coinage at the United States Mint for the year just closing was as follows: 22,754,389 pieces, valued at $25,226,278 50. Of this amount there were double eagles, 543,645; eagles, 73,800; half eagles, 131,740; three dollars, 82,324; quarter eagles, 286,260; dollars, (gold,) 3,020; dollars, (silver,) 10,509,550; trade dollars, 900; half dollars, 1,379,400; quarter dollars, 2,260,800; twenty-cent pieces, 500; dimes, 1,678,800; five-cent pieces, 2,350; three-cent pieces, 2,350; cents, 5,799,850.

PAYING THEIR ASSESSMENTS.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Dec. 31.—At a conference of stockholders and directors of the Wrought-Iron ocean pier at Long Branch last evening, the stockholders expressed their entire satisfaction with the action of the board, and to-day have paid into the First National Bank here the amount of the first assessment of 10 per cent. on the capital stock of $60,000.

SWINDLING RELIGIOUS PEOPLE.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 31.—A man purporting to be an agent of the Methodist Book Concern, calling himself Wallace Evans, was arrested at Zanesville, Ohio, yesterday, and placed in jail in default of bail for obtaining money under false pretenses. He had succeeded in ingratiating himself with several prominent Pastors and Sunday-school men, leading the services in the Seventh Street Church Sunday-school on Sunday, and soliciting money, as he said, for subscriptions to Sunday-school papers, &c., before his real character was discovered. He is believed to be the same fellow who successfully practiced the same swindle in Columbus, Ohio, recently.

REDRESSING HIS WOUNDED HONOR.

HORSEWHIPPING A MAN ON THE FLOOR OF THE CINCINNATI CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 31.—The Chamber of Commerce had a first-class sensation during business hours to-day in the public cowhiding of one of its members. Charles Maguire, of the grain firm of Mullane & Co., was standing near the quotation-board, when a man approached and struck him in the face, telling him at the same time that he had come to shoot him. The man was J. W. Morgan, from Morgan County, Ky., formerly a resident of Cincinnati. Upon being struck, Maguire turned to run, when Morgan drew a cowhide from beneath his coat and gave chase, laying the whip over his head and shoulders as they ran. The spectators soon rushed in and captured the infuriated Kentuckian and put him out the front door, where he was taken in charge by a policeman and locked up in the station-house. The affair created great excitement on the floor and hundreds of men surrounded the unfortunate grain man with inquiries as to what it was all about. Maguire's only answer was that he did not know; he supposed the offense might have grown out of some business transactions.

Subsequent investigation, however, showed that there was a woman at the bottom of the case. Three years ago Morgan was married to Maguire's house in this city. Since then the families had been intimate, and, according to Morgan's account, there was more intimacy between his wife and Mr. Maguire than was safe. It was hence, Morgan says, an attempt to disgrace Maguire publicly. A loaded pistol in Morgan's pocket showed that he had come prepared to settle the matter in Kentucky fashion if occasion required.

A DRUNKEN MAN'S CRIME.

ARREST OF A FORMERLY RESPECTED RESIDENT OF COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 31.—Much excitement was caused in this city to-day by the arrest of Charles W. Doty, Superintendent of the gas-works at the Central Insane Asylum, charged with committing a brutal assault on a child 6 years of age. About two weeks ago Doty secured rooms at Corgodis' Hotel for himself and daughter, age 14. Yesterday he requested that Mr. Corrodis' child be permitted to room with his daughter, as she felt lonely, Mrs. Doty having gone on a visit to Kentucky. The request was cheerfully complied with. Last night Doty returned to his hotel, occupied the same bed with the children, but the facts were not known until this morning, when the little girl complained of illness. Two physicians were summoned, and from what can be learned it was believed there would be no serious result. The father of the little girl was not told of the facts until after the Police had the criminal safely in the station-house. Mr. Corrodis made an attempt to get at Doty this afternoon, but was prevented by the Police. As a precautionary measure the prisoner was removed to the County Jail this evening.

Doty formerly occupied a high social position. He was popular and had many friends, but of late years he has been in the social scale on account of a too free indulgence in stimulants, although always considered strictly honorable. He is well connected, and 15 years ago married the daughter of Gov. Gruener, who acted in that capacity during the administration of President Taylor. Doty appears completely crushed and attributes the crime to liquor. Doty will be arraigned before the Mayor to-morrow morning on the charge of incest and attempt to commit rape.

MARINE DISASTERS.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 31.—The British steamer Lufra, hence for Baltimore, has put back with her machinery damaged.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The British steamer Royal Minstrel, Capt. Taylor, from Cardiff, for the United States, was passed on Dec. 20, in latitude 46° north, and longitude 25° west, with her machinery broken down.

The British ship King Arthur, Capt. Nelson, from Charleston, S. C., Nov. 25, for Liverpool, is ashore on the rocks at Barrow. The crew was saved.

NEW-YORK, N. B., Dec. 31.—The Globe, in its review of the shipping, says that during 1878 45 vessels, of 17,154 tons, owned or registered in St. John, were lost—an increase of 16 vessels and 1,436 tons over the year 1877, and 17 vessels and 6,493 tons over the year 1876. The value of the vessels lost is estimated at $410,000, against $480,000 in 1877, $380,000 in 1876, and $240,000 in 1875.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 31.—The steamer Tunis, before reported ashore at Cape Henry, got off last night, and is on her way to Norfolk, apparently uninjured.

NIAGARA'S BRIDGE OF ICE.

NIAGARA FALLS, Dec. 31.—A bridge of ice formed over the river below the falls on Sunday, and has been crossed by large numbers of people. So fine an ice-bridge has not formed so early in the season for many years, and there is every prospect of its remaining for several weeks at least. The weather is clear and cold, and there is good sleighing. The thickly-frozen spray on trees and buildings, especially at Prospect Point, and near the Cataract House, while it gives it a fairy appearance, detracts from the beauty of which has not been equaled since the similar exhibition in the Winter of 1874.

WHAT A GRAND JURY DID NOT DO.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 31.—The United States Grand Jury, after a brief session to-day, adjourned until Jan. 14. This action was taken partly on account of the holidays, and partly because Judge Kreckel is too sick to hold court. It is stated this afternoon, on what is said to be perfectly trustworthy authority, that the jury has ignored the bill against Capt. James B. Eads, failing to find any evidence against him to justify an indictment; also, that the Jury has not decided to indict any of the Directors of the old Bank of the State of Missouri.

AUBURN PRISON MANAGEMENT.

AUBURN, N. Y., Dec. 31.—The accounts of the Auburn State Prison for 1878 were closed this afternoon. Every item against the prison was paid in full. The estimate by the late management for the December expenses, exclusive of convict deposits, and an item for November expense, was $10,396 86. The actual expenses for the same were $10,024 44. The earnings for the month were $10,147 65. The estimated general expenses for January are $9,768 54, and the estimated earnings for that month, $10,600.

THE SIX-PENNY SAVINGS BANK.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—T. B. Westbrook, Referee in the case on the Six-Penny Savings Bank, reports that the cash in the hands of the Receiver in November was $194,724 95. The Receiver has disbursed $1,105,480 52, on which he should be allowed $27,637 01. The amount remaining in his hands is $2,583 28, and he should be allowed $5,000 additional.

EMBARRASSED IN BUSINESS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Lovell Kellogg, druggist, failed to-day. M. S. Converse is the Assignee. The liabilities and assets are unknown. The liabilities of Henry J. Gladke, clothing merchant, are $21,000; assets, $14,000.

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—James Stenhouse, ferrier, has failed. A writ of attachment has issued against John S. Brazeau, a trader, who has fled.

MYSTERY OF A KIDNAPPING CASE.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 31.—A special dispatch says the kidnapping of Maggie Lehre, at Peoria, Ill., mentioned in Saturday's dispatches, continues to be a mystery. The girl lies in a speechless condition, and communicates what she has to say by means of a slate and pencil. The Police pronounce her story a hoax, and think her crazy. Dr. Johnson, in whose family the girl is employed, says she is perfectly sane, and the victim of foul play.

GALVESTON'S MILITARY VISITORS.

GALVESTON, Dec. 31.—Gen. Trevino, of the regular Army of Mexico, arrived here last night. He was accompanied by his staff officers, Gen. Ord, commanding the Department of Texas, other American officers, and citizens of Mexico and San Antonio. The visitors were received by civic and military committees, and were honored by a salute of 15 guns. The day was spent in visiting public buildings.

MURDER FOLLOWED BY SUICIDE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—Thomas Crosaly, a shoe-maker, residing at No. 954½ Howard-street, shot and fatally wounded his wife, and then cut his own throat with a shoe-knife, causing instant death. Mrs. Crosaly refused to state the cause of the tragedy.

CONTESTING A SEAT IN CONGRESS.

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Sebastian Duffy, Greenback and Democratic candidate for Congress in the Oswego-Madison district, announces that he will contest the seat of Hon. Joseph Mason on the ground of bribery.

INJURED BY A BOILER EXPLOSION.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 31.—The head of a boiler in the meat-packing establishment of C. Dillman, at Jackson, Mich., blew out to-day, seriously scalding John Lack, the engineer, and injuring William Coulson.

LOUISIANA'S DEBT.

NEW-ORLEANS, Dec. 31.—There seems to be no alternative but for the State to default in the payment of the January coupons on consols. The State authorities express a belief that the entire interest will be paid within three weeks.

A MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION.

WHAT FOLLOWED A QUEER SMELL OF GAS.

A HANDSOME UP-TOWN MANSION BADLY DAMAGED AND ITS OWNER SERIOUSLY INJURED.

An explosion of gas occurred in the cellar of the residence of Mr. George W. Stanton, No. 24 West Fifty-second-street, last evening, and Mr. Stanton was seriously injured. The lower portion of the house was badly damaged by the explosion, the origin of which is a mystery. It appears that for several days a strong odor of street gas has been perceptible in the houses on both sides of the block in Fifty-second-street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, and this odor became so disagreeable that on Monday the Metropolitan Gas Company, whose main runs through the street, was notified. They sent a number of plumbers and laborers, yesterday, to attend to the matter, and an investigation showed that there was a leak in the gas-main in front of the house No. 23 West Fifty-second-street, which is immediately opposite Mr. Stanton's residence. It was also found that the escaping gas had made its way through the earth into the cellars of the houses on both sides of the street, and the domestics in the residences were warned not to enter the cellars with lights, as an explosion might be the result of such imprudence. Before the gas company's workmen had finished stopping the leak darkness had set in, and they departed. When Mr. Stanton returned to his home last evening, he was greatly annoyed by the strong smell of gas which permeated the house, and which seemed to come from the cellar. At about 6:45 P. M. he went into the cellar to look for the leak, which he supposed to be in the service-pipe. The ladies in the house say that Mr. Stanton took no light with him, but in the light of subsequent events, it is evident that they must be mistaken, or that Mr. Stanton struck a match after he had entered the cellar. He had been there but a few minutes when a terrific explosion shook the house, and alarmed the entire neighborhood. The explosion was followed by the sound of crashing timbers and breaking glass. The ladies were greatly alarmed and ran to the front doors and windows calling loudly for help. The servants, who were in the basement at the time, were thrown to the floor by the force of the explosion, and by their screams added to the confusion and excitement.

Patrolman Roe, of the Nineteenth Precinct, who was on Fifty-first-street when the explosion occurred, ran to the house and made his way into the cellar, where he found Mr. Stanton groping about in a dazed manner, endeavoring to make his way out into the open air. With the aid of some of the neighbors, who had flocked to the house, Mr. Stanton was brought out of the cellar and taken to his bedroom. He was found to be suffering severely from the shock, and his clothing was severely burned. His scalp was almost denuded of hair, and his head was cut and bleeding. He had evidently been thrown down by the force of the explosion, and by their screams added to the confusion and excitement.

Patrolman Roe, of the Nineteenth Precinct, who was on Fifty-first-street when the explosion occurred, ran to the house and made his way into the cellar, where he found Mr. Stanton groping about in a dazed manner, endeavoring to make his way out into the open air. With the aid of some of the neighbors, who had flocked to the house, Mr. Stanton was brought out of the cellar and taken to his bedroom. He was found to be suffering severely from the shock, and his clothing was severely burned. His scalp was almost denuded of hair, and his head was cut and bleeding. He had evidently been thrown down by the force of the explosion, and by their screams added to the confusion and excitement.

The house is a handsome four-story and basement brown-stone residence. The windows of the rear basement, used as a kitchen, and those of the dining-room, which is situated directly behind the parlors, are shattered, and the window-casings are entirely demolished. The stairway leading from the cellar to the basement is partially demolished, and the banisters and casing of the staircase leading from the basement to the parlor floor are destroyed. The rear doors of the basement are blown out, and all the windows on the basement floor are broken. The damage to the premises is estimated at $1,000.

THOMAS IN CINCINNATI.

HIS PERSONAL HABITS—SOME DREADFUL TALK ABOUT NEW-YORK—THE CHRISTMAS PERFORMANCE OF THE "MESSIAH."

Correspondence of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 27.

In visiting the College of Music in Cincinnati, he who is accustomed to American ideas of the fitness of things will be astonished to find that the affairs of the institution are presided over and attended to personally by two gentlemen of extreme wealth, who give their time and business talents to further the success of the school, and all for glory. Mr. Nichols, the President, a son-in-law of Longworth, evidently works here just for the love of it, and his talk about music, evinces not only enthusiasm, but knowledge. Mr. Neff, the Treasurer, has long been identified with the public benevolences and institutions of Cincinnati. Since the inauguration of the school and the outrageous descriptions of the banquet which were instituted by simon-pure malace, various reports have been circulated that Mr. Thomas had given himself and his talents away to the pleasures of inebriety and drink. We are glad to assure those who feared the truth of this that it is totally false. Mr. Thomas appeared in better health and spirits than ever before. His appearance is further removed from that of one who is addicted to intemperance. He bustled about his work in his private office in a busily and merrily as a man in Spring-time. A talk with him elicited some answers worth noting. Asking how he was pleased with his removal from New-York to Cincinnati, he replied:

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pkgs.	46	Oil, bbls.	100
S. W. Flour, pks.	255	Oil-cake, pks.	486
Beans, bbls.	541	Oil, Lard, bbls.	50
Cotton, bales.	5,284	Pease, pks.	1
Corn-seed oil, bbls.	623	Pork, bbls.	501
Dried Fruit, pks.	415	Beef, bbls.	80
Eggs, pks.	2,000	Oat-meals, pks.	2,093
Flour, bbls.	19,197	Lard, tcs.	2,351
Corn-meal, bbls.	425	Lard, kegs.	25
Wheat, bushels.	79,700	Butter, pks.	3,102
Corn, bushels.	23,900	Cheese, pks.	2,254
Oats, bushels.	10,160	Dressed Hogs, No.	157
Rye, bushels.	1,450	Rice, tcs.	1
Malt, bushels.	1,626	Tobacco, hhds.	200
Barley, bushels.	1,100	Spelter, pcs.	1,563
Peas, bushels.	3,200	Skins, bales.	29
Pot-ash, bbls.	120	Starch, pkgs.	2,950
Flax, bales.	87	Stearine, pks.	199
Grease, bbls.	131	Tallow, pks.	645
Braan and, bags.	2,000	Whisky, bbls.	116
Hides, No.	500	Tobacco, hhds.	303
Hides, bales.	20	Tobacco, pkgs.	54
Hops, bales.	1,094	Whisky, bbls.	936
Lead, pigs.	4,348	Wool, bales.	123
Leather, sides.	13,558

ASHES—Pots sell slowly, quoted at $4 50@$4 75; Pearls at $5 50@$5 75 ₱ 100 lb.

BEES-WAX—Yellow quiet within the range of from 26@27½c. for very good to strictly choice ₱ lb.

BISCUIT—Trade has been quite dull since our last in most kinds, with values, however, reported about steady.

CANDLES—Are in limited request, with Adamantine quoted at 12c.@15c.; Paraffine, 19c.@20c.; Sperm, plain, 27c.; do., Patent, 38c. ₱ lb.

COAL—Is quoted about as before, on a restricted movement in most kinds.

COFFEE—Rio fairly active at full prices, with sales of 4,421 bags per City of Rio, 1,108 bags per Laplace, 1,000 bags per Mermon, and 2,101 bags per Great Britain, 60 private terms....Stock in first hands here, 104,608 bags, and at all ports, 171,452 bags. Other descriptions quiet but steady, with sales reported for the week of 6,277 bags San Domingo, 43 bags Jamaica, 247 bags Laguayra, 857 bags Maracaibo, 2,054 bags and 4,000 mats Java....Stocks this evening include 5,870 mats Singapore, 22,507 bags Java, 1,900 bags Maracaibo, 279 bags Costa Rica, 2,622 bags Laguayra, 8,297 bags San Domingo, 800 bags Jamaica, 2,310 bags Savanilla, 1,288 bags Mocha and Jamaica, 1,284 bags Angostura, 300 bags Cera, and 100 bags Curacoa.

COPPERAGE STOCK—A moderate inquiry has been noted for this leading article, with prices firm.

CORDAGE—Has been quiet but firm.

COTTON—Has been quoted weak for early delivery at former quotations, with a moderate movement reported for shipment....Sales were reported for prompt delivery of 1,976 bales, (of which 1,628 bales were on last evening,) including 738 bales to shippers, 522 bales to spinners, 316 bales by speculators, and — bales in transit....Low Middling quoted at 9 1-16c.@9 2-16c.; Strict Low Middling at 9¼@9⅜c.; Middling at 9 7-16c. @9 9-16c.; Fair at 10 1-16c.@10 3-16c....And for forward delivery, Cotton has been less active, but at stronger prices....Sales have been reported since our last of 63,800 bales, (of which 15,500 bales were on last evening, and 47,500 bales to-day,) with 7,400 bales on the calls, on the basis of Middling, January, 9.52c.; 23,300 bales, prices not given, March, 9.93c.; April, 9.95c.@9.96c.; May, 10.08c.@10.09c.; June, 10.19c.@10.20c.; July, 10.27c.@10.29c.; August, 10.33c.@10.35c., with an advance of 4@8 points, closing firm....The receipts at this port to-day were 5,854 bales, and at the shipping ports 21,943 bales, against 27,382 bales same day last week, and thus far this week, 74,877 bales, against 110,485 bales same time last week....The receipts at all the shipping ports since Sept. 1, 1877, have been 2,642,125 bales, against 2,430,299 bales in the preceding Cotton year....Consolidated exports (three days) for the week from all the shipping ports, 29,699 bales; to the Continent, 6,526 bales; to France, 4,406 bales; to the Channel, — bales; consolidated stock at the ports, 962,977 bales....Stock in New-York to-day, 100,072 bales.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Uplands,	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	7 9-16	7 11-16	7 11-16
Strict Ordinary	8	8⅛	8¼
Good Ordinary	8	8⅛	8¼
Strict Good Ordinary	8 1-16	8 5-16	8 5-16
Low Middling	8 1-16	8 9-16	8 9-16
Strict Low Middling	8¼	8 11-16	8 11-16
Middling	9 7-16	9 9-16	9 9-16
Good Middling	9 13-16	9 15-16	9 15-16
Strict Good Middling	10 3-16	10 5-16	10 5-16
Middling Fair	10⅞	11	11
Fair	11 11-16	11 13-16	11 13-16

Stained.

Good Ordinary	7 11-16	Low Middling	8 1-16
Strict Good Ordinary	8 1-16	Middling	9 1-16

FERTILIZERS—A limited inquiry prevails for most kinds on the previous basis as to values.

FISH—Most kinds have been slow of sale and values have been quoted as a rule, weak.

FLOUR AND MEAL—Business in State and Western Flour has been again of very limited proportions, whether for home use or for shipment, and indicate no further important changes in values, like adverse features, continuing in favor of purchasers....Sales have been reported since our last of 11,900 bbls. of all grades....Included in the reported sales were 1,200 bbls. low Iowa, for shipment, within the range of $3 50@$4 10, (mainly $3 75@$3 90); 500 bbls. went at $3 75; 500 bbls. City Mill Extra, mostly for the West Indies, at $4 65@$5, the latter for fancy in new pks., the bulk going at $4 65@$4 75; and for English markets quoted at $5 70@$3 85; 1,500 bbls. Minnesota and Wisconsin clear, (these at $3 50@$5, the latter for fancy, mostly at $3 75@$4 50, of which about 800 bbls. for export, mainly at $3 85@$4 10); 1,850 bbls. straight Extras, (these at $4 25@$5 85 for very choice to strictly fancy, mainly at $4 50@$5 20); 1,100 bbls. Patent, (chiefly at from $5@$7 75;) 2,950 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (these at $3 65@$5 60, largely at $3 90@$5 for poor to choice, of which 1,300 bbls. for export at $4 25@$5, and $5 25@$5 60 for strictly choice to fancy;) 3650 bbls. Patent Extras, (these at $5 75@$7 50;) 1,050 bbls. Superfine, (these at $3 for very inferior to $3 60 for fancy; of which 500 bbls. choice White at $3 50;) 1,000 bbls. Rye Flour at $4 40@$4 90,) mostly at $2 50@$2 85; and sundry lots unsound and Sour Flour at from $3 25@$3 50....Total sales 30,750 bbls., including 5,000 bbls. Southern Flour has been in slack demand here at about previous prices....Sales reported of 950 bbls., chiefly Extras, at $3 75@$5 for Superfine, for very poor to very choice, the bulk within the range of from $4 50@$5 50, part for shipment. And for Baltimore delivery, sales rumored of about 1,500 bbls. at current rates....Rye Flour in limited request, with sales reported of 300 bbls., including about fair to choice Superfine State at $2 80@$3 15, (some fancy brands as high as $3 25,)....Corn-meal in moderate demand, with sales reported of 1,000 bbls. in lots, of which mainly Western Yellow, at $2 15@$2 50, the latter for fancy, chiefly at $2 25, and Brandywine at $3 50@$3 60....Buckwheat Flour quiet, with the range of from $1 50@$1 75 for ordinary to strictly choice ₱ 100 lb., (fancy held higher.)....Buckwheat dull; quoted at 4½c.@5c.

FRUIT—A light movement has been reported since our last at somewhat irregular prices....Sales include 1,200 bxs. Layer Raisins at $1 55@$1 60; 1,000 bxs. Loose, $1 60@$1 65; 2,200 half-bxs. Valencia, 6½c. @6¾c.; 175 bbls. Currants, 3¾c.; 50 qrs. Turkey Prunes, 5¾c., and 250 cases Sardines, quarter-bxs., at 11c.

GRAIN.—Trade in Wheat has been on a very moderate scale, chiefly in Winter grades, which, in the instance of Red and Amber again yielded slightly, though these qualities have not been pressed for sale. Desirable lots of White have been offered with reserve, and quoted nearly, (although no transactions transpired, owing to early arrival at current figures,) but not in urgent request. Spring Wheat has been quoted essentially unchanged as to values, with never more inquiry for export....Sales have been reported to-day of 391,000 bushels, of which 265,000 bushels for early delivery, including 127,000 bushels Extra White, at $1 09¾@$1 11, 2,000 bushels White State at $1 09¾@$1 10; 28,000 bushels No. 1 White at $1 09½@$1 10; 3,000 bushels do., steamer grade, at $1 08; 3,200 bushels No. 2 White at $1 06¾@$1 07; 1,200 bushels No. 1 White at $1 02; 5,800 bushels ungraded White at $1 06@$1 09; 1,600 bushels No. 1 Red at $1 09¾@$1 10; 11,000 bushels No. 2 Red at $1 09¾; 64,000 bushels do., January options, at $1 09@$1 09¼, chiefly at $1 09¼; 3,000 bushels do., same option, car-lots, at $1 09; 24,000 bushels do., February options, at $1 09; 25,000 bushels ungraded Red at $1 02@$1 08½; 21,000 bushels No. 2 Amber at $1 05½@$1 05¾; 16,000 bushels do., January options, at $1 05¾@$1 06; 16,000 bushels do., February options, at $1 07, with 6c. March options quoted at $1 07¾, bid and $1 09 asked; 23,000 bushels ungraded Amber at $1 04@$1 08¼; 8,000 bushels No. 2 Milwaukee Spring, old, on private terms; 16,000 bushels No. 2 Chicago Spring at 99c.; 9,000 bushels New-York No. 2 Spring, January option, at 96½c.; 64,000 bushels No. 3 Spring at 89c. @90c.; 16,000 bushels rejected Spring at 78c.; 17,000 bushels ungraded Spring at 90c.@92c.; 12,000 bushels No. 2 Milwaukee Spring at 84c.....A freer movement has been noted in Corn chiefly in the option line, at about steady prices from early decline, with the opening weaker toward the close rather firmer in the way of options....Sales have been reported of 296,000 bushels, (of which 64,000 bushels for early delivery,) including New-York No. 2 at 47½c.@47¾c., the latter for very choice; do. in store, 16,000 bushels, at 46¾c.; New-York No. 2, January option, 83,000 bushels, at 47c. @47¾c., chiefly at 47¼c.; do., February, 72,000 bushels, at 45¾c.@46c.; new No. 2 January, quoted at 45½c. @46¼c.; do., February, 46½c.@47c.; New-York No. 3 Mixed, December option, 8,000 bushels in settlement at 47c.; do., January, 32,000 bushels, at 44¾c.; do., February, 16,000 bushels, at 44½c.@44¾c.; Mixed Western, ungraded, 46c.@47¾c.; New-York No. 3, 44½c. @44¾c., chiefly at 44¾c., (about 25,000 bushels,) New-York No. 2 White, new, 2,500 bushels, at 46c.; Yellow Southern at 49½c.; Old White Western, 2,000 bushels, at 48c.....Rye quiet but quoted about steady, with prime State quoted at 59c., about; 12,000 bushels sold on private terms; car-lots sold at 57c.; and a load of No. 1 at 58c.; No. 2 Western nominal.....Barley held more firmly, on a moderate demand and lighter offerings; ungraded Canada last sold at $1 02@$1 03, and 5,000 bushels Western rumored sold without reliable particulars....Barley-malt has been in slack demand at about former rates, with closing quotations very nominal, quoted at $1 10@$1 25; six-rowed State at 95c.@$1 05; two-rowed State at 90c.@$1 05 for old, with new do. held at $1 05, (fancy lots of the several grades quoted at a higher figure.)....Canada Peas dull, quoted nominal at about 73c.@75c., in bond.....Oats have been inactive, but without important change in values....Sales have been reported since our last of 24,000 bushels, including New-York Extra White quoted at 33c.@ 33½c.; White at 32½c.; White quoted at 34c.@New-York No. 2, White, 5,400 bushels, at 32c.; New-York No. 2 White, 2,100 bushels, at 32c.; New-York No. 1 quoted at 31½c.; New-York No. 2, at 30½c.; New-York No. 3, at 29½c.; White Western, 4,000 bushels, at 32½c.@ 34½c.; Mixed Western, 3,500 bushels, at 29½c.; White State, 4,200 bushels, at 33c.@36c.; Mixed State, 1,900 bushels, at 31c.@31¼c.; No. 2 Chicago graded, at 30c., and, in store, 29½c. bid, and 30c. asked.....A moderate call has been noted for Feed, which has been quoted about steady, at 40 to 40 2c. affoat, most attention, and selling generally at $14; 80-lb. at $14@$15; 100-lb. weak at $15@$17; Sharps at $16@$20; Rye Feed, $14 50@$15 50....Rye Stock, $18@$19 in demand, the main inquiry being for the better qualities, which ruled about as before.....Seed dull at about previous quotations.

GUNNY BAGGING—Domestic dull at 9c.@10½c. Other kinds neglected and unsettled.

HEMP—Has been very quiet, at irregular prices.

HIDES—A moderate trade has been reported at unchanged quotations. Sales include 2,900 Dry Texas, 350 Dry-salted Texas, 4,400 Central American, 700 Dry California, and 842 Montevideo Seconds, on private terms.

LATHS, LIME, AND LUMBER—Trade has been light since our last, yet values have been quoted about as before....Eastern Spruce Lumber, $19 @$21 50; White Pine, $12@$21; Yellow do., $12@$23; Eastern Laths, $1 45@$1 50; Lime, 80c.@90c.

METALS, slow trade, except for Copper at unchanged rates. Ingot, 18c.....Iron has been very dull since our last, yet quoted about as before.....Pig Lead inactive, with Domestic quoted at $4 ₱ 100 lb. Spelter quoted 5¼c.@5¾c., and Domestic Sheet at 6¾c.@7c., but quiet.....Tin has been moderately active, with sales of 2,000 pigs, Cake Plates at 26½; 40 tons Straits, on arrive, on private terms, and 20 tons do., here, at 24¼c., all gold.

MOLASSES—In limited request at former figures.

NAILS—Inquiry has been slow in all kinds on the basis of $3 20@$3 25 for common Fence and Sheathing, and $4 25@$5 25 for Clinch, ₱ keg.

NAVAL STORES—Trade has been inactive within the range of $2 45@$2 47½ for Strained to good Strained; $2 55@$2 62½ for No. 1; $2 70@$2 77½ for No. 1; $3 50@$3 60 for No. 2 to Window Glass ₱ 280 lbs. The very quiet; quoted at $2 25@$2 37½.....City Pitch and Tar dull, but on board.....Rosins Turpentine dull and inactive, with merchantable, prompt delivery, quoted at the close at 23c.@23½c.

OILS—Have been quoted generally firm, but without much animation in the dealings.

PETROLEUM—Refined has been sparingly sought after; quoted for early delivery at 8c. in bbls., 8½c. in cases, and 8c. quoted at 8½c. for Standard to strictly fancy brands. Crude at 7½c. @7¾c., in shipping order....Naphtha at 6¼c.@6½c. Crude, Naphtha, Benzine, nominally, early delivery, quoted at 6½c.....At Baltimore, Refined for early delivery, at 8¼c.....At the Petroleum Exchange sales were reported of 60,000 bbls. United, here, and 186,000 bbls. at Oil City, at 96¼c.@96⅞c., closing at 96⅞c. bid.

PROVISIONS—Mess Pork has been very dull for early delivery, opening at nothing doing, and closing nominal, weaker; Mess left off at $7 10@$7 25 for ordinary to choice; sales, 280 bbls., part at $7 10@$7 20; City Family Mess at $8 12½@$8 25; Extra Prime, nominally, $7 50 old, and $7 50@$8 for new; Prime Mess at $9@$9 50. And for forward delivery, here, Western Mess has been quoted quiet, closing heavy on near, for January delivery, $8 30@$8 45, and old at $8 05@$7 02; and for February, $8 35@$8 40 for new, and $7 05@$7 20 for old; and for March, $8 45 bid for new, and $7 17½@$7 45 for old....Sales have been reported of 750 bbls. new Mess, for February, at $8 40, and 1,750 bbls. new, for April, at $8 50@$8 55....Dressed Hogs have been moderately sought after at somewhat higher prices, with City quoted at 3¾c.@4¼c. for heavy to light, and 4¾c. for Pigs; Western quoted 3¾c.@4¼c. ....Cut-meats have been in more demand, with sales reported of 24,000 ₱. Pickled Bellies, 9 to 14 ₱. average, at 4¾c.@5c., and 40 bxs. Rib Bellies, 8 ₱. average, 4¾c.....We quote Pickled Bellies at 5¼c.; Pickled Hams at 5¾c.@8¾c.; Smoked Shoulders at 3½c.@4c.; Smoked Hams at 8¼c.@7¾c. Western Pickled Hams in good demand, and 200 tcs. first were more sought after and quoted firmer, with Long Clear quoted at 4c. held, and Short Clear at 4¼ 20; sales of 500 bxs. Long and Short Clear, February, at 4 27½, and 800 bxs. do., at Chicago, $3 67½.....Western Steam Lard has been in more demand for early delivery at a firm price, closing, however, nominally easier.....Of Western Steam, for early delivery, sales of 1,000 tcs. at $5 80; also 200 tcs., deliverable Jan. 15, for export, $5 87½, free on board, and 200 tcs., first week February, at $5 87½.....And for forward delivery here, Western Steam Lard has been held more firmly, but closed depressed, with, at the close, February, at $5 77½ bid; February, at $5 82½, and March, $5 90; April, $5 97½; May at 36 02½@36 05, on, however, free dealings.....Sales have been reported of Western Steam to the extent of 500 tcs., at $5 80; 7,250 tcs. for February, at $5 82½@$5 87½; 4,000 tcs. March, $5 87½@$5 90, and 250 tcs., April option, at $5 97½; City Steam Lard has been in light demand and quoted at the close at $5 75@$5 77½; sales of 300 tcs. at $5 75@$5 77½.....Refined Lard quiet; quoted for the Continent, for early delivery, at the close, at $6 Tallow quiet; sales of 500 tcs. on private terms; West Indies at $6 05.....Of Grease, 13,000 lb. sold at 4¾c.....Beef has been slow of sale; quoted at $11@$11 50 for City Packet, $9 50@$10 for Plain Mess, and $10 50@$11 50 for Extra Mess.....Tierce Beef quoted thus: Philadelphia Extra India, $13 50@$14; and City do., $10@$10 50 and Extra Mess.....Beef Hams in slack request, with new Western quoted at $14 75@$15.....A moderately active movement has been noted in Butter and Cheese, at about former rates.....Eggs in fair demand; quoted at 26¾c.@27½c. for best fresh.....Tallow quiet, with prime to choice quoted at the close at 6¾c.@6 11-16c.; sales of 50,000 lb., in lots, at 6⅝c.@6 11-16c.....Stearine less sought after; quoted, 6¼c. for choice Western and 6¼c.@6¾c. for City. Sales of 15,000 lb. at 6¾c., and 120 tcs. Western at 9¼c.

RICE—Has been in less request, but quoted quite firm, with fair to choice Carolina ranging from $5 75@$7; Fair to strictly prime Louisiana at $5 37½@$6 50 ₱ 100 lb.....Rangoon quoted at $2 75@$3, gold, in bond, ₱ 100 lb. Messrs. Daniel Talmage's Sons & Co., Charleston, S. C., telegraph crop reports, dated Dec. 30, 1878, thus: Receipts, 11,765 cks.; sales, 11,430 cks., and stock on hand, 335 cks.; market strong.

SALT—A moderate movement has been reported in the leading kinds, with Liverpool Ground quoted at 85c. @75c.; Liverpool Fine at $1 10@$2 50, from store; Turk's Island, in bulk, 28c.@30c.; Curacoa at 35c.; St. Martin's at 28c.@30c.

SALTPETRE—Crude very quiet at 6c.@6¼c., gold.

SOAP—Has been in less demand, with Castile quoted at 7¼c.@7¾c., gold; Colgate's Family, 7¾c., currency, and Sterling and other brands at proportionate figures, less usual discount.

SPICES—Business has been on a restricted scale, even in the jobbing line, at about unchanged quotations.

STARCH—Corn has been moderately inquired for at 2¾c.@3¼c., in bbls. and bxs., ₱ lb.; Potato at unchanged figures.

SUMAC—Has been very dull, with Sicily quoted at from $30@$35 for inferior to fancy, afloat and from store, and Virginia at from $45@$50 ₱ ton.

SUGARS—Have been more active and firm on the basis of 6¾c. for fair, and 6¾c. for good Refining Cuba, with sales reported of 499 hhds. and 2250 bxs. Centrifugal at 7c.@7 7-16c.; 29 hhds. Porto Rico at 6¼c.; 2,036 bxs. Clayed at 6¾c.; 11,000 bags San Domingo on private terms; 300 hhds. Molasses Sugar at 6c.@6¼c., 700 hhds. New Orleans, to arrive, at 6¼c. ....Refined in fair demand but at easier rates, with Cut-loaf quoted at 9¼c.; Crushed, 9¼c.; Powdered, 9¼c.; Granulated, 8¾c.@8¾c.; Soft White, 7¾c.@8¼c.; Soft Yellow, 6c.@7¾c. ₱ lb.

TEAS—Have been sparingly dealt in, yet quoted as before.

TOBACCO—Trade has been light since our last, but indicative of no important changes as to values.....Sales include 300 hhds. Kentucky Leaf at 9c.@12½c., and 300 cases 1877 Pennsylvania, 14c.@20c.; 130 cases 1878 do. on private terms: 64 bales Yara on private terms; 250 bales Havana, 85c.@$1 10.

FREIGHTS—Trade has been on a limited scale in most lines, and rates have been quoted weak.....FOR LIVERPOOL—The engagements reported since our last have been, by steam, 3,600 bbls. Cotton at 7-32d.@¼d., nearly all at ¼d. ₱ 100 lbs. (the bulk of the freight, and mostly by outport lines;) 2,850 bbls. Flour, mainly of through freight, at 3s. 3d.@3s. 6d., (by outport lines as low as 2s. 9d.;) 2,000 cases Oil, 2,000 bxs. Cheese, 10,000 bushels Grain, prompt shipment to complete loading, at 5d. ₱ 60 lb.; 3,250 pks. Provisions, at 22s. 6d.@22s., through freight by outport lines, and largely at $3 90 ₱ 2,400 bxs. Cheese at 30s.; small lots of Butter at 30s.; 40 tons Leather on the basis of 35s. for Hemlock; 850 bbls. Oil-cake at 20s.; small lots of Sundry Merchandise Goods, in lots, at 20s.@22s. 9d. ₱ ton; 215 tes. and bbls. Provisions, in lots, at 4s. 9d. and 5s. 6d.; 400 bbls. Apples at 3s. 6d.; 350 bbls. Flour, by steam, from Baltimore, (contracts made there,) 4,000 to 5,000 bbls. Flour (part forward shipment) on the basis of 2s. 3d.; 45,000 bushels Grain on private terms, quoted at 6d.@6¼d. ₱ bushel. And to sail from Montreal, 2,000 bales Cotton at ¾d. ₱ lb. Also a British bark, to American ship, and an American bark, to sail from New-Orleans, reported (as chartered there) on the basis of 11-32d. ₱ lb.....FOR LONDON—By sail, small lots of Flour at 1s. 10½d.; 900 bbls. Alcohol at 5s. ₱ bbl.; 110 tons Measurement Goods, in lots, at 12s. 6d. ₱ ton; and, by steam, 2,200 bbls. Flour, of through freight and for rapid dispatch, at 3s. 3d.@3s. 6d., and 1,000 bbls. at 2s. 9d.@2s. 6d., chiefly at 2s. 6d. ₱ 200 lb

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

Considerable business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Tuesday, Dec. 31, the following sales being made:

Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, J. S. Pot-ter, Esq., Referee, sold the two-story brick building, with plot of land 78 by 120, Nos. 2 and 4 Lafayette-place, north-east corner of Great Jones-st., for $63,172, to Home Insurance Company, plaintiff.

Scott & Myers, foreclosure sale, Daniel J. Hol-lan, Esq., Referee, sold one lot (alley-way) 10 by 63.9, No. 232½ East 36th-st., south side, 150 feet west of 2d-av.; also, the three-story brick dwelling and three-story brick factory building, with lot 20 by 98.9 by 50 by 35 by 10 by 11.1 by 20 by 53.8, No. 230 East 36th-st., south side, 180 feet west of 2d-av., for $10,150, to John Higgins: also the three-story brown-stone-front dwelling, with lot 19.7 by 98.9, No. 544 West 42d-st., south side, 494.2 feet west of 10th-av., sold for $7,500, to Anne A. Morss, plaintiff.

V. R. Stevenson, Jr., foreclosure sale, William H. Ricketts, Esq., Referee, sold a plot of land 242 by 74.1 by 100 by 24.8 by 182 by — by —, on East 38th-st., north side, block front between (Nos. 666, 668, and 670) 1st-av. and East River, for $6,000 over and above two mortgages, interest and taxes, &c., amounting to about $58,555, to Abram P. Skid-more, plaintiff.

William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, Frederick Smyth, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story brown-stone-front dwelling and stable, with lot 21.3 by 98.9 by 40 by 22 by 18.2 by 70.9, No. 271 West 40th-st., north side, 59.11 feet east of 9th-av., for $8,000, to William P. Earl.

Bernard Smyth, foreclosure sale, De Witt C. Graham, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story brown-stone-front house, with lot 20 by 65, No. 740 Lex-ington-av., west side, 40.5 feet north of 59th-st., for $12,000, to P.M. Smith.

F. G. & C. S. Brown, foreclosure sale, Gran-ville P. Hawes, Esq., Referee, sold the three-story brown-stone-front house, with lot 16.8 by 100, No. 175 East 80th-st., north side, 166.8 feet west of 3d-av., for $9,323, to Ira Doying.

C. J. Lyon, foreclosure sale, Patrick H. Jones, Esq., Referee, sold one lot, 25.6 by 90, on 4th-av., west side, 25.6 feet south of 83d-st., for $4,050, to John S. Bassett, a defendant in the legal action.

E. F. Raymond, foreclosure sale, E. S. Dakin, Esq., Referee, sold four lots, each 25 by 100.11, on East 101st-st., south side, 100 feet east of 1st-av., for $2,650, to William Nelson, Jr.

The foreclosure sale by E. F. Raymond of two buildings, with plot of land, on 2d-av., south of 98th-st., was adjourned to Jan. 14.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Monday, Dec. 30.

16th-st. n. s., 162.6 ft. w. of 4th-av., 22.6x 100.5; Andrew Soher to Henrietta Winne-heimer..... $22,500

2d-av., s. e. corner of 5th-st., 24.0½x100; John McCullough and wife to William McCullough. 25,000

Boulevard, w. s. 150.3 ft. n. of 137th-st., 150x172.6, 23d Ward; Margaret A. Campbell and others to Susan A. Mullarkey..... nom.

Benson-st., s. s., 150.3 ft. s. of Morris-av., 50x 106.6; John Lynch to James Lynch..... 2,000

Same property; same to Ann Lynch..... nom.

66th-st., s. s., 141.8 ft. w. of 8th-av., 20x100.5; Z. Zacharias to Theodore Harris..... nom.

Harrison-st., No. 10; Philip Embury to Arman Embury..... nom.

48th-st., s. s., 525 ft. w. of 9th-av., 25x100.5; Meta Doscher to William Doscher..... 7,500

2d-av., No. 74, 24.1x100; Jeanetta Mannheimer to John Baier and others..... nom.

47th-st., s. s., 145 ft. e. of Lexington-av., 20x 100.5; James H. Greensward to William H. Arnous..... nom.

Same property; William H. Arnous and wife to David De Venny..... 12,000

1st-av., e. s., 505 ft. n. of 55th-st., 25x75; A. De Witt Baldwin, Referee, to Mary Bolmer..... 5,500

81st-st., s. s., 150 ft. w. of 4th-av., 20x102.2; W. C. Traphagan, Referee, to Manhattan Life Insurance Company..... 12,000

Hamilton-st., s. s., 300.6 ft. e. of Catharine-st., 12.8x100; L. M. Doscher, Referee, to Eliza L. Woolmonoy, Executrix..... 22,000

124th-st., s. s., 205 ft. e. of 4th-av., 25x100.11; G. L. Ingraham, Referee, to Samuel B. Kenyon.

77th-st., s. s., 300 ft. w. of 8th-av., 50x102.2; also, 77th-st., s. s., 250 ft. w. of 8th-av., 25x 102.2; Emanuel Bernheimer to Simon E. Bernheimer..... 3,600

Same property; Simon E. Bernheimer to Fanny Bernheimer..... nom.

Broome-st., No. 454; also, Mercer-st., Nos. 65 and 67; Adolph Bernheimer to Elliot C. Cow-din..... 45,000

Delancey-st., s. s., 25 ft. w. of Lewis-st., 25x75; R. D. Hatch, Referee, to Louis Turnauial..... 10,500

Rivington-st., n. e. corner of Canson-st., 50x89; H. E. Woodward, Referee, to Ann Bussing.... 13,600

Baxter-st., No. 66, 23x70; Max Borck to Solo-mon Jacobs..... 1,850

49th-st., n. s., 130.8½ ft. w. of 9th-av., 13.11½ x100.5; C. E. Miller, Referee, to Eliza J. Hayes..... 3,000

84th-st., n. s., 119 ft. w. of Avenue A, 75x 100.2; Catharine Keyser, Executrix, to Eme-line Johnston..... 681

Same property; Mary L. Keyser, Trustee, to Emeline Johnston..... 681

85th-st., n. s., 119 ft. w. of Avenue A, 75x 102.2; Same to Same..... 681

Same property; Catharine Keyser, Executrix, to Emma J. Johnston..... 681

85th-st., s. s., corner of 80th-st., 25.8½x100; Henry E. Howland, Referee, to Henrietta Wa-ters..... 14,200

St. Ann's-av., n. w. corner of Carr-st., 25.1½x 439; Thomas Rae to Samuel M. Purdy..... 1,500

4th-av., w. s., 60.5 ft. s. of 55th-st., 20x60; Vir-ginia Basin and husband to John J. Lyons.

2d-av., s. w. corner of 56th-st., 100x102.2; P. H. Jones, Referee, to William R. Renwick, Executor..... 10,600

114th-st., s. s., 80 ft. e. of 2d-av., 20x100.11; Same to Same..... 2,000

121st-st., s. s., 150 ft. w. of Morris-av., 75x200; also, 130th-st., s. s., 225 ft., w. of Morris-av., 75x irregular, 23d Ward; Receiver of Security Savings Bank to William H. Payne..... 3,200

Greenwich-st., No. 33; Peter Goelet and others to New-York Loan and Improvement Company. 26,000

81st-st., s. s., 400 ft. e. of 2d-av., 25x102.2; John H. Dean and wife to Elias M. Murray..... 2,500

3d-av., n. w. corner of 52d-st., 25.5x106.4; Theodore M. Roche to Elia W. Blake..... nom.

141st-st., W. s., 240, 25x100.5; Harris Ar-onson and wife to Katharine A. Kingsland.... 16,000

48th-st., n. s., 422 ft. w. of 8th-av., 18x100.5; Theresa Sodenkorn to Barnard Goldman..... nom.

Avenue B, s. w. corner of 10th-st.; also, 10th-st., s. s., 93 ft. w. of Avenue D, 25x92.3; ir-regular; Dry Dock Savings Institution to Theodore Levy..... 15,500

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Beck, Fidel, and wife to Xavier Keller; n. s. 4th-st., 300 ft. e. of Avenue A, 1 year..... $6,500

Dary, Anna M., and husband to Henrietta M. Schwab; n. s. 43d-st., s. of 4th-av., 5 years.... 7,000

Dowdin, Elliot C., to Adolph Bernheimer; No. 454 Broome-st., &c., 5 years..... 25,000

De Venny, David, to The Union Dime Savings Institution; s. s. 47th-st., e. of Lexington-av., 1 year..... 11,500

Fardon, Margaret, to Hayman Leopold; No. 337 West 45th-st., 5 years..... 6,000

Fowler, Anderson, and wife to the Germania Life Insurance Company; n. w. corner 4th-av. and 67th-st., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 20 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 40 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 60 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 80 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 100 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 120 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 140 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 160 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Same to Same; n. s. 67th-st., 180 ft. w. of 4th-av., 3 years..... 15,000

Hake, Casper, and wife to Laura Mott; w. s. 3d-av., 50 ft. s. of 126th-st., 3 years..... 1,500

Johnston, Emma J., and husband to Charles Bazer; s. s. 85th-st., w. of Avenue A, 30 days. 900

Johnston, Emma J., and husband to Isaiah Keyser and others; same property, 6 months. 7,500

Johnston, Emma J., husband, and others to Isaiah Keyser and others; n. s. 84th-st., w. of Avenue A, 6 months..... 7,500

Levy, Theodore, to the Dry Dock Savings Insti-tution; w. corner of Avenue D and 10th-st., &c., 1 year..... 13,000

McNally, Ellen M., to C. G. Brinkerhoff, guar-dian, &c.; n. s. 57th-st., e. of Avenue B, 5 years. Minnesheimer, Henrietta, to Jeanette Sober; n. s. 56th-st., w. of 4th-av., 1 year..... 17,500

Morton, Margaret F., and husband to William M. Kingsland, Trustee, &c.; No. 426 West 27th-st., 5 years..... 500

Munsell, Sarah B., to F. F. Furnald; n. s. 47th-st., 100 ft. w. of 3d-av., 2 years..... 4,000

New-York Academy of Music to Joseph Brandon and another, Trustees, &c.; n. e. corner of Irving-place and 14th-st., 5 years, to secure bonds amounting to..... 70,000

Rose, Mary C., to Teresa B. Rose; s. s. 74th-st., w. of 2d-av., 6 months..... 1,350

Schacht, John J., and wife to J. H. Schacht and wife; n. s. 12th-st., w. of Avenue A, 2 years.. 3,000

Specht, Henry, and wife to W. Blackstone Nos. 64 and 66 Wooster-st., 3 years..... nom.

Thain, M. T., to Joseph R. Howard, 1 year..... 4,500

Tilney, Mary L., to Edward Wood and others, Trustees, &c.; Union-av., 24th Ward..... 7,300

Waters, Maria T., and others to A. W. Sprague, Trustee, &c.; s. e. corner of Broadway and 13th-st., 5 years..... 6,747

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Boylan, Michael, guardian, &c., to Terence C. Boylan..... 6,009

Boylan, Terence C., to Michael Boylan..... $1,500

Barnes to Morrisania Savings Bank to Edward S. Fellows. 11,000

Morrisania Savings Bank to Edward S. Fellows. 2,000

White, John S., Executor, &c., to Mary A. White. nom.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

BULKHEAD WATER-FRONTS, NEAR CITY, for chemical works, factories, refineries, &c. Also, blocks for dwellings. For sale low on easy terms. R. A. YOUNG, Civil Engineer, &c., No. 20 Exchange-place.

PROPOSITIONS WILL BE RECEIVED for lease and improvement of the premises No. 5 Chatham-square, also fronting on Catharine-st. lot, 25 by 61. Apply to JOSEPH D. PAY, No. 7 Nassau-st., New-York.

FOR SALE—ON 80TH-ST., BETWEEN MADI-son and Park-avs., a full-size dwelling; finely fin-ished; price only $35,000. Apply to E. F. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st. and No. 1,130 Broadway.

PROPOSITIONS WILL BE RECEIVED FOR a lease and improvement of the premises No. 190 Chatham-st., (square); lot 20x100. Apply at No. 111 Pulton-st., of PETER A. JACKSON.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, lots, to let and for sale. FOSTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE BY E. F. LUDLOW & CO.

House and lot on 5th-av., near 104th-st., with side lights.

ALSO,

An extra wide corner, 9th-av., near 20th-st.

ALSO,

No. 207 5th-av., near 21st-st., and No. 176 Madison-av., 23.8x80, with extra lot and stable adjoining in rear, on 22d-st.

ALSO,

Madison-square, North, an extra-size house, with or without stable.

ALSO,

No. 10 West 32d-st.; full size and very desirable.

ALSO,

West 36th-st., near 5th-av.; fine large house, with three-story back building.

ALSO,

West 54th-st., near 5th-av.; new and very desirable houses, varying in size; all highly finished.

ALSO,

East 54th-st., near Madison-av.; four stories, very handsome, $25,000.

ALSO,

West 63th-st., just west 5th-av.; two new and elegant houses, superbly finished.

Full particulars of the above and other houses, with lists, sent on application. No charge for registering houses. Sales of stocks and securities, and real estate and furniture, at residences or stores, made by auction.

E. H. LUDLOW & CO.,

No. 3 Pine-st., and No. 1,130 Broadway, near 25th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.

THE FOUR LOTS WITH THE BUILDINGS THEREON,

Situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL,

Will be sold at public auction on FRIDAY, Jan. 3, 1879, at 12 o'clock M., at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, by LOUIS MESIER, Auctioneer.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

A FINE RESIDENCE, HANDSOMELY FUR-NISHED—Large grounds, stable; all improvements; to let, furnished, with immediate possession. Address OWNER, Box No. 126 Times Office.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET IN THE TIMES BUILDING. APPLY TO GEORGE JONES, TIMES OFFICE.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

EXCHANGE.—AN ELEGANT COUNTRY SEAT and fruit farm on the Hudson, north of Poughkeep-sie, cost over $60,000; unincumbered; for a full-sized brown-stone house, (unincumbered,) near 5th or Mad-son av., below 53d-st. Photographs and plans at our office. Also others.

T. S. CLARKSON & CO., No. 149 Broadway.

FINANCIAL.

New-York City

6 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, COUPON OR REGISTERED, payable in 1896.

BUFFALO CITY 5 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1882.

BUFFALO CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1890.

ROCHESTER CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1893.

JERSEY CITY 6 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1891.

ALSO, A CHOICE LOT OF FIRST-CLASS RAILROAD BONDS.

FOR SALE BY

DANIEL A. MORAN,

40 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK.

STATE OF NEW-JERSEY,

WARREN COUNTY

5 PER CENT. BONDS,

MATURING FROM 1880 TO 1888,

FOR SALE BY

GEO. K. SISTARE,

NO. 17 NASSAU-ST., N. Y.

TOTAL DEBT $175,000

ASSESSED VALUATION..... $22,000,000

FINAL NOTICE TO THE HOLDERS OF BONDS OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAIL-ROAD COMPANY.

Under the Plan of Reorganization ratified by the de-cree of the court, the time in which bondholders should be allowed to participate in the benefits of the Plan, by the conversion of bonds into preferred stock, was left to the discretion of the Purchasing Committee. More than three years having passed since this right was given, and more than nine-tenths of the bondholders having converted their bonds, the committee, desirous of closing their labors, hereby give notice that the right of converting bonds into preferred stock will terminate on the 30th day of June, 1879.

Circulars giving information how the conversion is made can be had at the office of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, No. 23 Fifth-av., New-York.

The original stock will be exchanged for stock under the Plan up to the same time.

FREDERICK BILLINGS,
Dec. 18, 1878. Chairman Purchasing Committee.

OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER,
CITY OF ALLEGHENY, Nov. 27, 1878.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF ALLEGHENY 4 PER CENT. RAILROAD COMPROMISE BONDS.—In accordance with section third of an act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania approved April 10, 1862, entitled "An act relative to the funded indebtedness of the City of Allegheny," notice is here-by given that the said City of Allegheny is prepared to retire the following outstanding four per cent. railroad compromise bonds, viz: Numbers 17, 34, 42, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 82, 84, and that the said outstanding bonds not surrendered within six weeks from the date of this advertisement will cease to draw interest thereon, and the holder or holders of such bond or bonds shall look only to the deposit in the Bank of Pittsburg for pay-ment of the same.

JAMES BROWN,
Controller.

FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. SINKING FUND BONDS OF THE

SCIOTO VALLEY RAILWAY CO. OF OHIO.

Principal due Jan. 1, 1886.

Coupons due January and July.

Issued at $13,000 per mile.

A small amount for sale at 95 and interest, by WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.,

No. 26 Nassau-st.

ALL CLASSES GOVERNMENT BONDS.

CITY, COUNTY, AND STATE BONDS

FIRE INSURANCE AND BANK STOCKS,

MARINE INSURANCE STOCKS AND SCRIPS,

GAS-LIGHT STOCKS AND BONDS,

MORTGAGE RAILROAD BONDS,

CITY RAILROAD STOCKS AND BONDS,

HORSE AND ELEVATED ROADS,

CALIFORNIA AND OTHER MINING STOCKS, bought and sold by us 27 years.

ALBERT H. NICOLAY & CO.,

No. 48 PINE-ST., N. Y.

For Sale. First-class 10 per cent. Investment Securities.

THE MARKET NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 14, 1878.

NOTICE.—STOCKHOLDERS ARE HEREBY NO-TIFIED that on the 31st day of December next the cap-ital stock of this bank will be reduced ($500,000) fifty thousand shares. On and after which date new certif-icates will be issued of the remaining shares, and pay-ment made for the reduction, with interest.

A dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. on the reduced capital has been declared, payable at the same time.

The transfer-books will be closed from this date to Jan. 1, 1879, except for transfer of fractional shares.

By order of the Board.

A. GILBERT, Cashier.

WOOD & DAVIS,

BANKERS AND BROKERS,

NO. 31 PINE-ST., NEW-YORK.

GOVERNMENT BONDS, MUNICIPAL AND RAIL-ROAD SECURITIES BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COM-MISSION.

C. D. WOOD. SAM'L D. DAVIS.

WANTED

The following Kentucky county bonds: Bourbon Coun-ty, Fayette County, Clark County, Montgomery County, Mason County;

Also, Second Mortgage bonds of the Kentucky Central Railroad. Address

RANDAL H. FOOTE, BANKER,
NO. 70 BROADWAY, N. Y.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON WILL SELL at auction on WEDNESDAY, Jan. 8, 1879, at 12.30 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, for account of whom it may concern, $12,500 Hicksite-ter and Kensington Railroad Company first mortgage 6 per cent. gold bonds. (Bonds of $1,000 each.) $10,000 of these bonds have coupons of July, 1878, attached, and $2,500 coupons of January, 1877, attached (by postponement.)

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO
Capital, $10,000,000. Surplus, $2,000,000, gold.
NEW-YORK AGENCY, NO. 62 WALL-ST.

Issues commercial and travelers' credits. Remits drafts. Receives orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

FINANCIAL.

FIRST MORTGAGE

SEVEN PER CENT. BONDS OF THE

Sioux City and Pembina R. R. Co.,

Issued at less than $6,000 per mile of road, and GUAR-ANTEED, principal and interest, by the DAKOTA SOUTHERN R. R. CO.

The road is completed, and the net earnings are in ex-cess of the interest on the entire mortgage debt.

Only a few of these bonds remain for sale at 90 and accrued interest.

WALSTON H. BROWN & BRO.,

No. 34 Pine-st., New-York.

VIRGINIA BONDHOLDERS

Whose interest is not already secured are invited to sign-ing the PROPOSITION FOR PROPORTIONATE FUNDING INTO FOUR PER CENTS SECURED BY PAY-RECEIVABLE COUPONS AND A SINKING FUND. This proposition is believed to meet fully the requirements of the case, and has the approval of many leading members of the Legislature. The indications are that it will become a law, and a prompt co-operation by bondholders will secure its passage. Communica-tions may be addressed direct, or through either of the following houses:

BANK OF NEW-YORK, N. WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.
R. A., CHAS. M. FRY. THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK, Petersburg, Va.
DREXEL, MORGAN & CO. HUGH McCULLOCH.
L. VON HOFFMAN & CO.
THE FUNDING ASSOCIATION, U. S. A., (LIMITED.)
Room No. 93 Drexel Building.

WELLS, FARGO & CO., NO. 65 BROADWAY,

Buy and sell Mining Stocks and other Pacific Coast securi-ties, sell Exchanges Telegraphic Transfers and Credits available throughout the West and Europe, and forward Packages and Valuables to all parts of the World.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,

NO. 59 WALL-ST.,

ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

KUNTZE BROTHERS, BANKERS, NO. 13 Wall-st., New-York, issue Letters of Credit or Ci-rcular Notes on the Union Bank of London for the use of travelers in all parts of the world.

DIVIDENDS.

OFFICE NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN AND HARTFORD RAILROAD COMPANY, GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT, CORNER 42D-ST. AND 4TH-AV., NEW-YORK, Nov. 30, 1878.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF Directors of this company, held this day, a dividend of FIVE PER CENT. was declared, payable Jan. 2, 1879. The transfer-books will be closed from Dec. 4, 1878, to Jan. 2, 1879, both days inclusive.

W. A. BURROUGHS,
Treasurer.

FIFTY-THIRD DIVIDEND.

HANOVER

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

A semi-annual dividend of FIVE (5) PER CENT. is payable on demand at the office of the company, No. 120 Broadway.

I. REMSEN LANE,
Vice-President and Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1879.

EXCELSIOR SAVINGS BANK,
6TH-AV., CORNER 23D-ST.

TWENTIETH DIVIDEND.

On and after MONDAY, Jan. 20, 1879, there will be paid to depositors a semi-annual interest dividend, at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on all sums of $5 and up-ward, which shall have been deposited at least one month prior to Jan. 1, 1879. Deposits made later than Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1.

E. N. HAZARD, President.
H. K. THURBER, First Vice-President.
J. S. BARRON, Second Vice-President.
GEORGE C. WALDO, Secretary.

THE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE,
GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THIS COMPANY have this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT. upon the Capital Stock, payable on the 1st day of February next, at this office.

The Transfer-books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on TUESDAY, the 31st inst., and will be reopened on the morning of WEDNESDAY, the 5th day of February next.

R. D. WORCESTER, Treasurer.

THE MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THIS COMPANY have this day declared a dividend of TWO PER CENT. upon the Capital Stock, payable on the 1st day of Febru-ary next, at this office.

The Transfer-books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on TUESDAY, the 31st inst., and will be reopened on the morning of WEDNESDAY, the 5th day of February next.

C. VANDERBILT, Treasurer.

SCIOTO VALLEY RAILWAY COMPANY
COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 24, 1878.

Coupon No. 6, due Jan. 1, 1879, of the First Mortgage Bonds of this company, will be paid on and after that date upon presentation at the banking-house of WINS-LOW, LANIER & CO., No. 26 Nassau-st., New-York City.

JAMES P. CURRY, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 24, 1878.

NASHVILLE AND DECATUR RAILROAD COMPANY FIRST MORTGAGE 7 per cent. coupons.

SOUTH AND NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD Company First Mortgage 8 per cent. coupons.

Coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid on presentation at the offices of Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co., corner of Wall and Broad sts., New-York, on and after that date.

W. HANNEY, Secretary.

NOTICE.—COUPONS OF THE FOLLOWING bonds, maturing Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid on and after Jan. 2, at the office of Messrs. JESUP, PATON & CO., No. 32 Wall-st., New-York:

Chicago and Alton Railroad first mortgage.

St. Louis, Jacksonville, and Chicago Railroad second mortgage.

Joliet and Chicago Railroad first mortgage.

Dubuque and Sioux City Railroad first mortgage.

OFFICE OF WELLS, FARGO & CO.,
No. 65 BROADWAY, Dec. 16, 1878.

THE REGULAR SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of FOUR PER CENT. has been declared by the Directors of this company, payable Jan. 15, 1879, at our office as above.

The transfer-books will be closed from Dec. 6, and reopen Feb. 6.

BANK OF AMERICA, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTORS OF the Bank of America, have this day declared a divi-dend of Four per Cent. for the current six months, free from tax, payable to the stockholders on and after Thursday, Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will remain closed from this date until the morning of Jan. 2, 1879.

ROBERT JAFFRAY, Cashier.

METROPOLITAN NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS OF THE METRO-politan National Bank have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of Four per Cent., payable on the first Monday of Jan. next.

The transfer-books will be closed until Jan. 8, 1879.

GEORGE J. MOGOUBREY, Cashier.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 17, 1878.

THIRTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of Three per Cent., free of tax, out of the profits of last six months, payable 2d Jan., 1879. Transfer-books will close 21st instant P. M., until 2d January.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a semi-annual dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879. Upon the shares as registered this day. The transfer-books will be closed from this date until Jan. 3, 1879, except for the transfer of fractional shares.

C. V. SANTA, Cashier.

THE HANOVER NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Two and a Half per Cent., free of tax, payable on the 2d of Jan-uary next. The transfer-books will be closed on the 21st inst., and will be reopened on the 3d of January.

GEORGE W. PERKINS, Cashier.

OFFICE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY,
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 26, 1878.

THE COUPON DUE JAN. 1, 1879, ON THE Florida Central and Peninsular R. R. Co. Bonds, issued in 1877, will be paid on presentation at the banking house of Messrs. Balzer & Liebenstein, No. 52 Exchange-place, New-York.

AARON LEVY,
Treasurer.

NATIONAL BUTCHERS' AND DROVERS' BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THIS BANK HAVE this day declared a dividend of Four per Cent., free of tax, from the earnings of the current six months, payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will remain closed until that date.

G. G. BRINCKERHOFF, Cashier.

KANSAS PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

The unpaid half of the coupon which matured JAN. 1, 1877, from the SEVEN PER CENT. LAND GRANT BONDS of this company, issued to the extent then in force from coupon certificates, series F, G, and H, will be paid on presentation at the National Bank of Commerce in New-York.

A. MEIER, Trustee.

THE COUPONS OF THE NEW FIRST MORT-GAGE BONDS of the ST. PAUL, STILLWATER AND TAYLOR'S FALLS RAILROAD COMPANY, due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid at our office.

WALSTON H. BROWN & BRO., No. 34 Pine-st.

MECHANICS' NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Four per cent., free of tax, payable on and after 2d of January next. The transfer-book will be closed until that date.

WM. H. COX, Cashier.

FORTY-FIFTH DIVIDEND.

OFFICE PARK FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 49 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

A dividend of Six (6) Per Cent. out of the earnings of the past six months is payable on demand.

C. M. VALENTINE,
Secretary.

BOWERY SAVINGS BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of INTEREST AT THE RATE OF FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $1,000 and under, for the six months ending December 31, 1878, payable on and after Jan. 6, 1879.

By order of the Board.

S. B. HAMILTON, Secretary.

CITIZENS' NATIONAL BANK,
CORNER 6TH-AV. AND 14TH-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

A DIVIDEND OF FIVE PER CENT. HAS been declared, payable on the stockholders on and after the 24th day of January, 1879.

W. H. OAKLEY, Cashier.

DIVIDENDS.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK,
No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF EXCHANGE-PLACE,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

THE FOLLOWING COUPONS, DUE JAN. 1, 1879, are payable at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York:

Sioux City and Pembina R. R. Co. Bonds, and St. Louis R. R. Company, Jan. 1, 1879.

Sioux City and Pembina Railroad Company.

Union Pacific Railroad and Navassa Railroad Company, Union Pacific Railroad Company, First Mortgage.

City of Rochester.

North-western Telegraph Co.

Peekskill Water Bonds.

St. Louis Municipal Stock Yards.

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Registered Interest.

Town of Covington.

Town of Wheatland.

Town of Gainesville.

Town of Bloomingtown.

Town of Wawarsing.

Town of Pavillion.

Town of Middlebury.

Town of German Flats.

JAS. H. OGILVIE, Secretary.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK,
No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF EXCHANGE-PLACE,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 26, 1878.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, Trustee, will pay, on and after Jan. 1, 1879, TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS in gold upon each coupon matured Jan. 1, 1879, on the bonds of the Union Pacific Railway, Southern Branch, which have been deposited with it for the agreement of compromise of 1876. Coupons must be left over night for examination.

EDWARD KING, President.

SOUTHERN MINNESOTA RAILWAY COM-PANY, 92 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.—An inter-est payment of Thirty-five dollars on each $1,000 bond of the Southern Minnesota Railroad Company, represented by certificates of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, will be made on and after Jan. 2, 1879, at the office of said Trust Company. The transfer-books will close December 24 and reopen January 2.

CORNELIUS G. BOLTON,
Chairman Executive Committee.

THE CHATHAM NATIONAL BANK,
No. 196 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

FORTY-SIXTH DIVIDEND.

The Directors of this bank have declared a semi-annual dividend of THREE (3) PER CENT., payable, free of tax, on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed until Jan. 2, 1879.

H. P. DOREMUS, Cashier.

SHELDON & WADSWORTH,

No. 10 Wall-st., will pay interest due Jan. 1, to New-York holders of coupon certificates Little Rock and Fort Smith Railway, on presentation.

W. B. WILBUR, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE CANADA SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE COUPONS DUE JAN. 1, 1879, ON THE new First Mortgage Bonds of this company will be paid at the office of the Union Trust Company, No. 73 Broadway, New-York, on and after Thursday, Jan. 2.

C. VANDERBILT, Treasurer.

BROOKLYN TRUST COMPANY.
No. 177 MONTAGUE-ST., CORNER OF CLINTON,
BROOKLYN, E. D., Dec. 20, 1878.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable Jan. 6, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed from Jan. 2 to the date of payment.

WM. R. BUNKER, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY,
No. 26 EXCHANGE-PLACE, CORNER WILLIAM-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

THE COUPONS OF THE EVANSVILLE AND Crawfordsville Railroad Company, due on Jan. 1, will be paid on and after Jan. 2 at this office.

GEO. P. FITCH, Secretary.

FIRST DIVISION OF THE ST. PAUL AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.—The coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, of mortgage the $7,000,000 first-mortgage bonds of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company will be paid on presentation on and after 2d January, 1879, at the office of Messrs. J. S. Kennedy & Co., No. 41 Cedar-st., New-York.

JOHN S. KENNEDY,
Trustee.

CEDAR FALLS AND MINNESOTA RAIL-ROAD COMPANY.—The coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, upon the mortgage bonds of the Cedar Falls and Minne-sota Railroad Company will be paid on presentation on and after the 24 January, 1879, at the office of Messrs. J. S. Kennedy & Co., No. 41 Cedar-st., New-York.

JOHN S. KENNEDY, President.

THE NATIONAL SHOE AND LEATHER BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

FIFTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS of this bank have declared a dividend of Four (4) per Cent., payable, free of tax, on and after Jan. 2 proximo.

The transfer-book will be closed from Dec. 26, 1878, until Feb. 1, 1879.

J. M. CRANE, Cashier.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of TWO PER CENT., free of tax, payable on and after Jan. 2 next, until which time the transfer-books will remain closed.

A. S. APGAR, Cashier.

IRVING NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of FOUR (4) PER CENT., free of all tax, payable on the second (2d) day of Janu-ary, 1879, until which date the transfer-books will re-main closed.

GEO. E. SOUPER, Cashier.

INTEREST ON LONG ISLAND CITY BONDS.

The interest on the Long Island City bonds, due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid on and after that date at the MARINE NATIONAL BANK, corner of Wall and Pearl sts., New-York City.

JOHN B. MORRIS,
City Treasurer.

MISSOURI PACI

OFFICIAL ABUSES STATED.

THE CHARGES AGAINST MR. LOEW.

COPY SERVED ON HIM YESTERDAY—ALLEGED NEGLECT OF DUTY, MISFEASANCE, MALVERSATION, AND EXTORTION—INSTANCES, SPECIFICATIONS, AND FIGURES GIVEN.

Like drowning men catching at straws, the Register's over-sanguine friends have been hinting for several days that the Governor would take no action with regard to the charges presented against Mr. Loew by the Bar Association's committee, or would at least return them to have them made more definite and certain. They were rather shocked yesterday at learning the reverse. At about 2 P. M., Frederick S. Wait, who is in the employ of J. Adriance Bush, the Secretary of the committee, called on the Register at his office and served a copy of the charges on Mr. Loew personally, as well as a notice, from the Governor with regard to the hearing to be had in the case on the 10th inst. The charges thus served are as follows:

To his Excellency, Lucius Robinson, Governor of the State of New-York:

We, the undersigned, citizens of the City, County, and State of New-York, residents of said City, and counselors-at-law of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York, hereby respectfully charge Frederick W. Loew, Register of the City and County of New-York, with neglect of duty in office, with misfeasance in office, with malversation in office, and with extortion.

First—In this to wit: Upon information and belief, that he, the said Frederick W. Loew, then and there being the Register of the City and County of New-York, in duty bound to keep in his office a book in which should be entered all fees charged or received by him for official services, the time of rendering the same, the persons, if known to him, for whom the same were rendered, and a brief statement of the nature of the services for which any fee is charged or received, and said book should be open for inspection, without fee or reward, at all times when the office of said Register is open for the transaction of business, did not during the period between the 1st day of January, A. D. 1878, and the day of the date hereof, or did not on each and every business day during such period, or particularly did not on the 8th, 9th, 10th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th days of August, A. D., 1878, and on the 3d, 4th, and 5th days of October, A. D. 1878, or on some one of said days, keep such book, or any book conformable to the provisions of the statute in such case made and provided, but wholly failed and neglected to keep such book or books during the period above mentioned, or on some one of the days when the office of said Register was open for business purposes during such period, or on some one of the days more particularly hereinbefore specified; or if he, the said Loew, then and there being the Register of the City and County of New-York, did keep, or cause to be kept, in his office such Register, the book so as above set forth by the statute required by him to be kept, such book was not open for inspection at all times when said office was open for the transaction of business during the period between the 1st day of January, A. D. 1878, and the day of the date hereof, or was not so open for inspection on each and every business day of said period, or was not so open for inspection during the business hours of the 8th, 9th, 10th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th days of August, A. D. 1878, or was not so open for inspection on the 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th days of October, A. D. 1878.

Second—In this, to wit: Upon information and belief, that said Frederick W. Loew, then and there being the Register of the City and County of New-York, upon some day or days during the first 15 days of the month of January, A. D. 1878, fixed or established, or caused to be fixed or established, or permitted to be fixed or established, a certain scale of prices, or tariff, under and according to which fees or compensation should be taken or received for recording in the books or public records of his office certain instruments or legal documents, which said scale of prices or tariff was in substance as follows:

For recording power of attorney, 10 folios or less	$1 25
Revocation power of attorney, 10 folios or less	1 25
Deed, bargain and sale, 17 folios or less	2 25
Mortgage, interest, and insurance clause, 20 folios or less	2 50
Quit-claim deed, 12 folios or less	2 00
Warranty deed, 17 folios or less	2 25
Assignment of judgment, 10 folios or less	1 25
Referee's deed on foreclosure, 12 folios or less	2 00
Lease, 17 folios or less	2 25
Mortgage, interest, and tax, 20 folios or less	2 50
Deed, covenant against grantors, 12 folios or less	2 00
Agreement, 10 folios or less	1 25
Executors' deed, 17 folios or less	2 25
Executors' quit-claim deed, 17 folios or less	2 25
Ordinary lease, 10 folios or less	1 50
Ordinary lease, with extra covenant, 12 folios or less	2 00
Ordinary lease, with extra covenant, 17 folios or less	2 25
Assignment mortgage, 10 folios or less	1 25
Mortgage, without insurance clause, 17 folios or less	2 25
Mortgage, with insurance clause, 20 folios or less	2 50
Mortgage, with tax, insurance, and interest, 24 folios or less	3 25
Mortgage to Emigrant Savings Bank, 24 folios or less	3 25
Mortgage to Mutual Life Insurance Company, 24 folios or less	3 25
Columbia College lease, 28 folios or less	3 25
Sailors' Snug Harbor lease, 26 folios or less	3 75

And furthermore, upon information and belief, that the said Frederick W. Loew, then and there being the Register of the City and County of New-York, in disregard and contravention of the statutes of this State providing and commanding that no officer whatsoever, or other person to whom any fees or compensation shall be allowed by law for any service, shall take or receive any other or greater fee or reward for such service than is in said scale of prices allowed by the laws of this State, during the period between the 15th day of January, A. D. 1878, and the 10th day of September, A. D. 1878, or during one or more of the months included in said period, habitually took or received, or caused or permitted to be taken or received, fees or compensation according to the foregoing tariff or scale of prices for rendering official services, to wit, for recording in the books or public records in the office of the Register of the City and County of New-York, the legal instruments or documents mentioned in said foregoing tariff or scale of prices.

Third—In this, to wit, upon information and belief, that said Frederick W. Loew, then and there being the Register of the City and County of New-York, in disregard and disobedience of the statutes of this State, on or about the several days hereinafter mentioned, took or received or demanded or charged, or caused to or permitted to be taken and received or demanded or charged, for recording in the books or public records in the office of said Register, the legal instruments or documents of the titles and contents hereinafter mentioned, the several sums set opposite thereto, to wit:

1878.
Feb.	18—Assignment, Hesse to Ahrens, 24 folios or less	$3 00
Feb.	18—Lease, Numan to Alexandar, 15 folios or less	2 00
April	2—Mortgage, Appell to Arnheiter, 22 folios or less	2 75
April	2—Mortgage, Lester to Allen, 17 folios or less	2 50
May	7—Referee's deed, Toone to Arnold, 12 folios or less	2 00
May	7—Mortgage, Althause to Althause, 15 folios or less	2 50
May	7—Assignment, Union Dime Savings Bank to Ahrens, 8 folios or less	1 25
June	15—Mortgage, Doeper to Adrian, 17 folios or less	2 50
June	15—Four mortgages, Kilpatrick to Aspinwall, each 17 folios or less	10 00
June	19—Power of attorney, Johnston to Arnold, 8 folios or less	1 50
July	28—Power of attorney, Oliver to Asop, 8 folios or less	1 50
July	15—Power of attorney, Wagner to Arnold, 8 folios or less	1 50
July	17—Quit-claim deed, Blunt to Abrahams, 6 folios or less	1 25
July	17—Quit-claim deed, Levi to Abrahams, 8 folios or less	1 25
Nov.	24—Power of attorney, Eisner to Ameux, 8 folios or less	1 50
July	27—Mortgage, Uhlmann to Appel, 17 folios or less	2 50
Jan.	23—Deed, Sweeny to Bradley, 24 folios or less	3 00
Jan.	23—Deed, Brown to Buchanan, 17 folios or less	2 00
Jan.	31—Deed, Banks to Banks, 5 folios or less	1 25
Feb.	19—Deed, Kenny to Brien, 15 folios or less	2 00
Feb.	19—Deed, Gale to Bush, 15 folios or less	2 00
Feb.	19—Deed, Achilarius to Bonnett, 17 folios or less	2 25
Feb.	19—Deed, Samo to Sama, 22 folios or less	2 75
Feb.	19—Deed, Henry to Block, 15 folios or less	2 00
Feb.	19—Deed, Brown to Bonner, 12 folios or less	2 00
March	14—Six deeds, Turner to Redlow and others, each 45 folios or less	39 00
March	14—Two deeds, Patterson to Bonney, each 15 folios or less	4 00
March	14—Deed, Brown to Bonney, 17 folios or less	2 25
March	14—Deed, Johnson to [illegible] 17 folios or less	2 25
March	14—Two deeds, Fray to Bond, each 12 folios or less	4 00
March	14—Deed, Van Rensselaer to Bywater, 12 folios or less	2 00
April	1—Deed, Herminer to Bergman, 12 folios or less	2 00
April	1—Deed, Bernheimer to Bernheimer, 15 folios or less	2 00
April	1—Deed, Moon to Bonner, 15 folios or less	2 00
April	1—Deed, Brown to Bitan, 15 folios or less	2 00
April	1—Deed, DeForest to Bell, 15 folios or less	2 00
April	2—Deed, Bliss to Brown, 15 folios or less	2 00
May	2—Deed, Ledwith to Bradley, 12 folios or less	2 00

(Then follow 379 similar cases.)

We, the undersigned, moreover respectfully inform your Excellency that at a meeting of the Association of the Bar of the City of New-York, held in said City on the 24th day of September, A. D. 1878, said association duly adopted a certain resolution in the words following, to wit:

Resolved, That within the knowledge of the members of this association here present fees or charges not authorized by law, or in excess of those allowed by law, are, and for many years have been, habitually charged and collected in the offices of the Sheriff, County Clerk, and Register; that the fact of such excessive charges is notorious, and within the constant and almost daily experience of the members of the legal profession; that these excessive charges herein more or less of the character of extortion, and in some cases can be defined by no other term; that a committee of five be appointed by the Chairman, to be charged with the duty of receiving any charges of extortion against the above-named officers which may be made to said committee by any member of this association, and to further the presentation of the same to the Grand Jury.

That under said resolution the undersigned were duly appointed to compose such committee, and that at said meeting, at a meeting of said Association of the Bar of the City of New-York, held at said City on the 16th day of December, A. D. 1878, was duly resolved by adopting thereto the words following, to wit:

"That the committee be empowered and directed to make a careful investigation into the management and conduct of the offices of the Register, Sheriff, and Clerk of this County, and the observance by said officials and their subordinates of the provisions of law relating to said offices and their duties; that said committee take such action as shall most summarily correct the abuses found."

ARTEMAS H. HOLMES,
GEORGE DE FOREST LORD,
CHARLES T. MACLEAN,
HENRY E. KNOX,
J. ADRIANCE BUSH.

Dated New-York, Dec. 28, 1878.

The charges are verified by all of the members of the committee, each of whom deposes that he has read the foregoing charges and statements and knows the contents thereof, "and that the same are true to his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be alleged upon information and belief, and that as to those matters he believes the same to be true." The notice served upon Mr. Loew yesterday, the order of the Governor, and the certificate of service are as follows:

STATE OF NEW-YORK, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, ALBANY, Dec. 30, 1878.

To Frederick W. Loew, Register of the City and County of New-York:

SIR: Take notice that Artemas H. Holmes, George De Forest Lord, and other citizens of the City and County of New-York, have preferred charges of official misconduct, neglect of duty in office, and malfeasance and malversation in office against you as the Register of the City of which is hereto annexed, and that an opportunity of being heard in your own defense will be given you in accordance with an order of which a copy is hereto annexed. Yours, &c.,

D. C. ROBINSON.

Whereas, Artemas H. Holmes, George De Forest Lord, and other citizens of the City and County of New-York have preferred charges of official misconduct, neglect of duty in office, and misfeasance and malversation in office against Frederick W. Loew, Register of the City and County of New-York, and upon such charges have requested the removal of the said Frederick W. Loew from his said office; now, therefore, it is hereby ordered that the said Frederick W. Loew do make answer, in writing and on oath, to each of the said charges and specifications, and show cause before me, in the Executive Chamber, in the Capitol, in the City of Albany, on the 10th day of January, 1879, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why he should not be removed from his said office, in accordance with the statute in such case made and provided.

[SEAL] L. ROBINSON,
By the Governor.
D. C. ROBINSON, Private Secretary.

State of New-York, City and County of New-York, ss.—I, Frederick S. Wait, of the City and County of New-York, do hereby certify that on the 31st day of December, 1878, at the City of New-York, in said County, I personally served the within order and a notice, of which the annexed is a copy, upon Frederick W. Loew, Register of the City and County of New-York, by delivering to and leaving with him said notice, and a copy of said order, and that at the same time and place I delivered to him a copy of the charges mentioned and recited in said complaint.

FREDERICK S. WAIT.

Dated Dec. 31, 1878.

KILLED BY A BEAR.

HORRIBLE DEATH OF A BOY AT PAREVILLE, LONG ISLAND.

A great many visitors were drawn to one of the minor hotels on Coney Island during the past two Summers by the antics of two trained bears chained to stakes in front of the house alluded to. One peculiarity of the bears, and one which provoked much mirth and proved most profitable to the proprietor of the hotel, was their inordinate capacity for beer. The male bear, an animal of unusual size and beauty, for a bear, who was known as Big Ben, has frequently drank as many as 50 bottles of lager-beer a day. He used to stand on his hind feet and holding the bottle with his fore paws swallow its contents. Like many animals of a higher order, Big Ben never knew when to stop, and would often become very drunk. While in this condition he was frequently kicked and cuffed about by the men who had given him the beer. In the Winter time the bears were taken to Parkville and chained in a yard opposite Thom's Road House. On Monday afternoon a party of boys commenced snow-balling the bears, and were driven away by Mr. Thom. About half an hour afterward a lad named Samuel Stretch, 13 years of age, who had frequently played with the bears, approached the larger of the animals for the purpose of petting him. When within reach of the apparently near, Big Ben suddenly sprang on him. Rendered furious by the snow-balling which he had received some time before, the animal clasped the boy with his fore paws, and, hugging him, crushed in his ribs. At the same time the bear sank his teeth into the boy's neck, severing the jugular vein, and inflicting a wound which proved almost instantly fatal.

When young Stretch first found himself being drawn into the fatal embrace of the bear he cried out in terror. A stable man working near by heard the cry, and, armed with a pitchfork, rushed to the lad's assistance, but the hug and bite which sealed the boy's life were the work of an instant. The tragedy occurred in full sight of the neighboring hotels, and in a moment a crowd of men came running toward the bear. Mr. Thom furiously and abused a disposition to fight. Mr. Thom, armed with a hatchet, struck the brute on the head, and Mr. Peter Ravenhall plunged a dirk-knife into Big Ben's body several times. When young Stretch was carried to Thom's hotel he was quite dead. Notwithstanding the stabs from the dirk-knife and the blows from the hatchet, it took five shots from a revolver and two shots from a shot-gun to kill the bear. The female bear, which was chained some distance away, exhibited no excitement during the attack on the boy or the subsequent killing of her mate. The deceased boy resided in the Village of Parkville, about two miles south of Prospect Park, and was the son of a porter employed in this City. Justice McMahon impaneled a jury last evening and will hold an inquest.

THE LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.

RECEIVER SHARPE'S ACCOUNT OF HIS STEWARDSHIP DURING THE PAST YEAR.

Receiver Sharpe, of the Long Island Railroad Company, his submitted his annual report to the State Engineer and Surveyor, for the year ending Sept. 30, 1878. He was appointed Oct. 23, 1877, and took possession three days later. The floating debt was then, as nearly as can be ascertained, $1,103,309 91, exclusive of interest. Since his appointment, the Receiver has been at a large expenditure, made by order of the court, for the payment of real estate mortgages, additional rolling stock, opening of Front-street, and alteration of depot at Hunter's Point and depot at Bushwick. To make a connection for the Brighton Beach business, a track was constructed connecting the Long Island Railroad with the Brooklyn and Jamaica Railroad at Berlin. On Atlantic-avenue additional gates were required and constructed, and at Flatbush-avenue it was necessary to acquire more real estate and extend the depot facilities and tracks to accommodate the increased business at that point. The capital stock paid in equals $3,260,600, the funded debt $1,881,750, an increase of $27,900 over last year, and the floating debt $1,157,860 70, an increase of $194,493 39. Included in the funded debt are 7s of 1900 Atlantic-avenue certificates, held as collateral security for a portion of the floating debt. The cost of road and equipment is set down as $6,160,059 43, an increase of $43,747 52. The receipts from all sources were $1,497,914 30, an increase over last year of $24,736 39, and the expenditures, $1,593,314 92, a decrease of $765,453 83. The expenditures included: Transportation, $1,060,019 02, against $1,060,477 04 in 1877; interest, $196,606 41, against $174,134 22; rentals of other roads, $145,614 20, against $435,891 04; construction and equipment, $126,366 56, against $688,286 45; account of funded debt, $20,000; account of floating debt incurred previous to Oct. 1, 1877, $104,688 73. Taxes were $40,596 74, an increase of $13,414 07, and legal expenses, $13,991 65, an increase of $11,041 45. The net earnings were $497,895 28, an increase of $85,194 41. The floating debt and expenditures on account of construction and equipment for 1878 will be credited with the proceeds of the sale of valuable property at Bedford Station, which it is proposed to sell to the Brooklyn, Flatbush and Coney Island Railroad for their depot and connection with the Long Island Railroad. The balance on hand is left of $371,508 72, against a deficit in 1877 of $275,565 58. The number of passengers carried during the year was 4,157,715, an increase over 1877 of 1,094,284, and the amount of freight transported was 254,580 tons, a decrease of 17,501 tons. There have been added to the line 6 engines and 13 first-class passenger cars. The number of second-class cars has been decreased by 17, and of freight cars by 76. The total number of miles owned or leased by the company is 323, of which 63 miles are double track.

A NEGLIGENT BRIDGE-TENDER.

Coroner Croker held an inquest at Harlem yesterday in the case of Thomas E. Stevenson, who lost his life on Christmas Eve by walking off the Harlem Bridge while the draw was open. Mr. Stevenson was a salesman in the linen department of A. T. Stewart & Co.'s store, and was on his way to his home in One Hundred and Forty-sixth-street when he met his death. The evidence at the inquest showed that when he reached the Harlem Bridge the draw was just being opened, and the gate on the Harlem side of the bridge was shut, so that he and a number of other people had to wait a few moments. The gates were opened either by Police Officer Kavanagh or Bridge-tender Daniel Kelley before the draw was fairly closed again, and Mr. Stevenson stepped forward and plunged into the river. No life-saving apparatus of any kind is kept at the bridge, and before help could be given to Mr. Stevenson he received a shock from which he died shortly after being taken from the water. In charging the jury, Coroner Croker called the bridge "a perfect man-trap," saying that several lives have already been lost there. The jury rendered a verdict blaming the bridge-tender for opening the gates before the draw was closed, and thus causing the death of Mr. Stevenson. They recommended that an extra man be employed to attend to the gates, and that proper life-saving apparatus be procured and kept on the bridge. The Coroner ordered the arrest of Daniel Kelley, and held him in $1,000 bail to answer. Mr. Stevenson leaves a widow and six children.

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

THE NEW CITY GOVERNMENT.

MAYOR COOPER TO GO INTO OFFICE TO-DAY—THE COMMON COUNCIL TO ORGANIZE MONDAY NEXT.

Mayor Cooper will take formal possession of his office in the City Hall at noon to-day. He will be received by Mayor Ely and other officials, and will probably remain to receive the congratulations of his friends until 2 o'clock. Many, if not all of the heads of departments, will doubtless call upon him, but he does not intend to hold a public levee. Mr. James E. Morrison, Col. Tracy, and others will accompany the Mayor, and it is well understood that they will be appointed by him to fill prominent positions on his clerical staff. The venerable Peter Cooper is likely to be present when the Mayor takes his seat as chief magistrate of this City. Many applications have been made for the positions which are directly in the gift of the Mayor, but he has very few to bestow. It is reported that he will retain Marshal John Tyler Kelly, and also Major Hart, the Superintendent of the Permit Bureau, their friends having been prominently connected with the great movement which resulted in his election. Mr. Schroeder, a clerk in the same bureau, is also considered likely to escape the axe, as rumor has it that he has a patron in a prominent German Democrat. These three positions represent some of the best among the comparatively few which the new Mayor has in his gift. And yet the pressure brought upon him to obtain office is as great as if he were the head of a department with a large number of places. All the employes who served under Mayor Ely, except Chief Clerk John Hardy, and Mr. Lloyd, an assistant clerk, have made efforts to be retained. Last evening, the subordinates who knew that their fate was sealed were engaged in packing up their books and papers and sending them by express to their homes. Indeed, the offices which they occupied presented just such a spectacle as may be seen when a dry goods firm, about to move to new stores, are packing up their goods for transportation. The Mayor will, on Monday next, send his first Message to the new Common Council, which will organize on that day. By a singular provision of the charter, the old Board of Aldermen remains in office until the first Monday in January, while the Mayor assumes office on New Year's Day. The new board is composed of six Republicans, seven Anti-Tammany Democrats, and nine members of Tammany Hall. Below is a list of the Aldermen—Republicans in SMALL CAPITALS, Anti-Tammany Democrats in italics, and Tammany Democrats in roman:

MICHAEL W. BURNS,	Joseph P. Strack,
FREDERICK FINK,	Robert Hall,
JOHN W. JACOBUS,	William R. Roberts,
JOHN J. MORRIS,	Thomas Carroll,
HENRY C. PERLEY,	John Cavanagh,
MATTHEW STEWART,	Robert C. Foster,
Jordan L. Mott,	George Hall,
Nicholas Haughton,	Patrick Keenan,
John W. Hyatt,	William Sauer,
Terence Kiernan,	Thomas Sheils,
Bernard Kenney,	James J. Slevin.

The six Republicans and the seven Anti-Tammany Democrats on this list intend to co-operate, and as they form a majority of the board they will be able to confirm any nominations to fill vacancies in the departments that the Mayor may submit to them. Efforts have been made by some of the Tammany politicians to say that the Mayor has promised to be governed by the "combination," as it is termed, so as to create a dead-lock in the board, but they proved unsuccessful. The Anti-Tammany members met on Monday night in the Monument House, and decided that Mr. Jordan L. Mott shall be their choice for President and Mr. Jacob Patterson Clark. These nominations are to be approved at the caucus of the Republican and Anti-Tammany Aldermen to be held in the Westminster Hotel on Friday evening.

THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1879.

FINAL ACTION OF THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT—THE AMOUNT ALLOWED EACH DEPARTMENT.

The Board of Apportionment took final action yesterday on the estimates for 1879. Below is a comparative statement of the appropriations made for 1878, the appropriations asked for by the departments, and the appropriations made for 1879:

Objects and Purposes.	Appropriations Made for 1878.	Appropriations Asked by Departmental Estimates for 1879.	Appropriations Made for 1879.
Common Council	$107,500	$114,500	$118,250
Mayoralty	46,000	42,000	46,000
Department of Finance	225,000	242,500	252,500
State Taxes	3,911,326	3,751,062	3,751,062
Interest on City debt	9,164,383	8,790,153	8,790,153
Redemption of City debt	1,155,297	1,165,599	1,164,446
Armories and drill-rooms—Rents	62,037	62,250	62,250
Judgments	300,000	400,000	450,000
Taxes—Losses in force	70,175	61,200	61,200
Law Department	148,000	143,000	155,500
Department of Public Works	1,611,100	1,796,500	1,576,880
Department of Public Parks	341,000	667,920	479,000
Department of Public Buildings	70,000	75,000	71,500
Department of Public Charities and Correction	1,160,000	1,355,541	1,257,000
Health Department	190,000	218,416	190,000
Police Department	3,999,895	4,106,611	4,048,100
Fire Department	1,220,870	1,291,842	1,254,970
Department of Taxes and Assessments	108,900	106,800	107,900
Board of Education	3,400,000	3,584,000	3,400,000
College of the City of New-York	135,000	140,000	140,000
Advertising, printing, stationery and blank books	133,000	164,200	137,200
Salaries—City Courts	329,800	336,400	329,800
Salaries—Judiciary	853,225	864,025	865,485
Coroners' fees	70,000	80,000	70,000
Sheriff's fees	30,000	40,000	40,000
Election expenses	135,000	143,500	135,000
Miscellaneous	170,726	92,870	117,920
Asylums, reformatories, and charitable institutions	948,840	1,120,181	935,000
Total	30,104,077	30,956,072	30,007,098

Among the items in detail are $30,000 for the Metropolitan Museum of Art; $60,000 to build two new station-houses, one in the Sixth and the other in the Twenty-eighth Precinct; $20,000 for the improvement of Manhattan-square; $50,000 for repairing walks, &c., in parks, and $17,000 for erecting a new bridge over the Harlem River.

CLOSING THE "BUCKET SHOPS."

Judge Lawrence rendered a decision yesterday, in Supreme Court, Chambers, sustaining the injunction in the suit of the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company against Elliott W. Todd and others, and refusing to continue the injunction granted in the suits by Todd and others against the telegraph company. The latter sought to take its instruments from the "bucket shops" kept by Todd & Co., Hastings, and others because they bulletined the quotations for the information of their patrons. Following is Judge Lawrence's opinion:

"I am of the opinion that the motion to continue the injunction in this case should be denied. It appears that the plaintiffs, under their contract with the defendants, agreed that the company should reserve the right to discontinue the delivery of the reports to any party taking them for publication or outside use, or when they should be made use of in any manner detrimental to the company's interest. Notwithstanding the able and elaborate argument of the learned counsel for the plaintiff, I am not prepared to hold that this was not a valid and binding agreement on the part of the plaintiff. An injunction should not be granted pendante lite except in a perfectly clear case, and I do not regard this as such a case. Prima facie the agreement was valid, and the plaintiffs (Todd & Co.) should not be allowed to retain the benefit of such of its provisions as inure to their advantage and reject those which they regard as disadvantageous. It may possibly be that after the trial of the issues raised by the pleadings at the Special Term, and upon the full examination of the testimony which can be had at trial, the court may determine to grant an injunction, but on the affidavits before me I do not feel warranted in continuing the preliminary order heretofore made."

POLICE CAPTAINS' RESPONSIBILITY.

When the Board of Police met yesterday, President Smith offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the counsel to the board be requested to furnish to the board, at his earliest convenience, a legal opinion as to the responsibility of Captains of Precincts in selecting or recommending places of registry and polling-places for election under the law, or under any rule, regulation, or general order of the department heretofore adopted.

Commissioner Ernardt offered as a substitute the following:

Resolved, That the counsel to the Board of Police be requested to report as to whether any further orders of the Police Board other than those now in force are necessary for the purpose of holding the members of the Police force amenable to discipline in the event of any such members reporting a place as suitable for a place of registry or polling-place, if subsequent investigation shows that section 35 has been violated, or that spirituous liquor was sold in such place recommended by him within 60 days prior to using the same.

After some discussion, the resolution and substitute were incorporated into one motion, and in that shape were unanimously adopted.

THE CASE OF "RED" LEARY.

The case of "Red" Leary, the alleged Northampton Bank robber, who is detained in this City pending the issue of habeas corpus proceedings, was again before Judge Cheste, in the United States District Court, yesterday. Leary was in the court-room, hand-cuffed, and guarded by eight Deputy Sheriffs and several of Pinkerton's detectives. His counsel, Messrs. Algernon S. Sullivan and Peter Mitchell, presented to the court telegrams which had been sent by them to the Governors of Massachusetts and of this State, demanding copies of the papers upon which the requests for the arrest of Leary and the surrender to the agents of the State of Massachusetts were based. The object of the application was to obtain proof that the Governor of Massachusetts has evidence connecting Leary with the Northampton Bank robbery. The counsel also presented to the court the replies of both Governors to the telegrams, in which they declined to do so. Subsequently made by Mr. Sullivan that Leary, and Mr. Winchester Britton for the State of Massachusetts, upon the question as to whether the court could compel the Governors to give up the desired information. Judge Choate took the papers and reserved his decision until Friday next.

OVERLAND FREIGHTS.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE PACIFIC RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP COMPANIES.

The result of the recent agreement between the Pacific Railroad Companies and the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company has, it is alleged, developed a policy on the part of those companies to drive the clipper ships out of the carrying trade, and thus secure a monopoly of that business to themselves, and merchants and shippers are very indignant at what they consider an oppression. The following memorial, which is now in circulation in this and the other Atlantic sea-board cities, and has already received the signatures of many of the most prominent jobbing and shipping houses of those places, sets forth the alleged methods which the companies pursue in furtherance of their object:

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The memorial of the undersigned, merchants and ship-owners residing and doing business in the United States, respectfully represents:

That the bill to regulate inter-State commerce and to prohibit unjust discrimination by common carriers, which has passed the House of Representatives, and is now before your honorable body, would, if it should become a law, have results beneficial to the country, to the highest degree, commercial, and other interests of the country.

It has heretofore been the custom of merchants shipping goods from the East to California and Oregon to send the finest goods by rail at high rates of freight, via mediums of steamers, via the Isthmus of Panama, and the coarser goods by clipper ships, via Cape Horn, at lower rates of freight. That the Pacific Railroad Companies have now entered into a combination with the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company and with all the railroads connecting with the Pacific Railroads to divert the carrying of freight entirely from the clipper ships, and have also entered into contracts with many merchants, whereby all such merchants are bound and compelled to ship all their goods to the States of California and Oregon by those roads, and unless they do so, or in case they send a portion only of their goods by the said railroads, a higher rate of freight from them than from those shippers who send all their goods by said railroads is exacted, thus rendering it impossible for those shippers from whom the higher rates of freight have been exacted to compete in the market in the said States with those merchants and shippers who have paid a much lower rate of freight; that is to say, the merchant who pays 12 cents per pound freight would have no chance successfully to dispose of his goods as against the merchant who only pays half that rate.

That, furthermore, to compel the aforesaid merchants and shippers to keep good faith, and to send all their goods by the boards they will be able to confirm any nominations to fill vacancies in the departments that the Mayor may submit to them. Efforts have been made by some of the Tammany politicians to say that the Mayor has promised to be governed by the "combination," as it is termed, so as to create a dead-lock in the board, but they proved unsuccessful. The Anti-Tammany members met on Monday night in the Monument House, and decided that Mr. Jordan L. Mott shall be their choice for President and Mr. Jacob Patterson Clark. These nominations are to be approved at the caucus of the Republican and Anti-Tammany Aldermen to be held in the Westminster Hotel on Friday evening.

THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1879.

FINAL ACTION OF THE BOARD OF APPORTIONMENT—THE AMOUNT ALLOWED EACH DEPARTMENT.

The Board of Apportionment took final action yesterday on the estimates for 1879. Below is a comparative statement of the appropriations made for 1878, the appropriations asked for by the departments, and the appropriations made for 1879:

Objects and Purposes.	Appropriations Made for 1878.	Appropriations Asked by Departmental Estimates for 1879.	Appropriations Made for 1879.
Common Council	$107,500	$114,500	$118,250
Mayoralty	46,000	42,000	46,000
Department of Finance	225,000	242,500	252,500
State Taxes	3,911,326	3,751,062	3,751,062
Interest on City debt	9,164,383	8,790,153	8,790,153
Redemption of City debt	1,155,297	1,165,599	1,164,446
Armories and drill-rooms—Rents	62,037	62,250	62,250
Judgments	300,000	400,000	450,000
Taxes—Losses in force	70,175	61,200	61,200
Law Department	148,000	143,000	155,500
Department of Public Works	1,611,100	1,796,500	1,576,880
Department of Public Parks	341,000	667,920	479,000
Department of Public Buildings	70,000	75,000	71,500
Department of Public Charities and Correction	1,160,000	1,355,541	1,257,000
Health Department	190,000	218,416	190,000
Police Department	3,999,895	4,106,611	4,048,100
Fire Department	1,220,870	1,291,842	1,254,970
Department of Taxes and Assessments	108,900	106,800	107,900
Board of Education	3,400,000	3,584,000	3,400,000
College of the City of New-York	135,000	140,000	140,000
Advertising, printing, stationery and blank books	133,000	164,200	137,200
Salaries—City Courts	329,800	336,400	329,800
Salaries—Judiciary	853,225	864,025	865,485
Coroners' fees	70,000	80,000	70,000
Sheriff's fees	30,000	40,000	40,000
Election expenses	135,000	143,500	135,000
Miscellaneous	170,726	92,870	117,920
Asylums, reformatories, and charitable institutions	948,840	1,120,181	935,000
Total	30,104,077	30,956,072	30,007,098

Among the items in detail are $30,000 for the Metropolitan Museum of Art; $60,000 to build two new station-houses, one in the Sixth and the other in the Twenty-eighth Precinct; $20,000 for the improvement of Manhattan-square; $50,000 for repairing walks, &c., in parks, and $17,000 for erecting a new bridge over the Harlem River.

CLOSING THE "BUCKET SHOPS."

Judge Lawrence rendered a decision yesterday, in Supreme Court, Chambers, sustaining the injunction in the suit of the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company against Elliott W. Todd and others, and refusing to continue the injunction granted in the suits by Todd and others against the telegraph company. The latter sought to take its instruments from the "bucket shops" kept by Todd & Co., Hastings, and others because they bulletined the quotations for the information of their patrons. Following is Judge Lawrence's opinion:

"I am of the opinion that the motion to continue the injunction in this case should be denied. It appears that the plaintiffs, under their contract with the defendants, agreed that the company should reserve the right to discontinue the delivery of the reports to any party taking them for publication or outside use, or when they should be made use of in any manner detrimental to the company's interest. Notwithstanding the able and elaborate argument of the learned counsel for the plaintiff, I am not prepared to hold that this was not a valid and binding agreement on the part of the plaintiff. An injunction should not be granted pendante lite except in a perfectly clear case, and I do not regard this as such a case. Prima facie the agreement was valid, and the plaintiffs (Todd & Co.) should not be allowed to retain the benefit of such of its provisions as inure to their advantage and reject those which they regard as disadvantageous. It may possibly be that after the trial of the issues raised by the pleadings at the Special Term, and upon the full examination of the testimony which can be had at trial, the court may determine to grant an injunction, but on the affidavits before me I do not feel warranted in continuing the preliminary order heretofore made."

POLICE CAPTAINS' RESPONSIBILITY.

When the Board of Police met yesterday, President Smith offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That the counsel to the board be requested to furnish to the board, at his earliest convenience, a legal opinion as to the responsibility of Captains of Precincts in selecting or recommending places of registry and polling-places for election under the law, or under any rule, regulation, or general order of the department heretofore adopted.

Commissioner Ernardt offered as a substitute the following:

Resolved, That the counsel to the Board of Police be requested to report as to whether any further orders of the Police Board other than those now in force are necessary for the purpose of holding the members of the Police force amenable to discipline in the event of any such members reporting a place as suitable for a place of registry or polling-place, if subsequent investigation shows that section 35 has been violated, or that spirituous liquor was sold in such place recommended by him within 60 days prior to using the same.

After some discussion, the resolution and substitute were incorporated into one motion, and in that shape were unanimously adopted.

THE CASE OF "RED" LEARY.

The case of "Red" Leary, the alleged Northampton Bank robber, who is detained in this City pending the issue of habeas corpus proceedings, was again before Judge Choate, in the United States District Court, yesterday. Leary was in the court-room, hand-cuffed, and guarded by eight Deputy Sheriffs and several of Pinkerton's detectives. His counsel, Messrs. Algernon S. Sullivan and Peter Mitchell, presented to the court telegrams which had been sent by them to the Governors of Massachusetts and of this State, demanding copies of the papers upon which the requests for the arrest of Leary and the surrender to the agents of the State of Massachusetts were based. The object of the application was to obtain proof that the Governor of Massachusetts has evidence connecting Leary with the Northampton Bank robbery. The counsel also presented to the court the replies of both Governors to the telegrams, in which they declined to do so. Subsequently made by Mr. Sullivan that Leary, and Mr. Winchester Britton for the State of Massachusetts, upon the question as to whether the court could compel the Governors to give up the desired information. Judge Choate took the papers and reserved his decision until Friday next.

OVERLAND FREIGHTS.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE PACIFIC RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHI

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8521. NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JANUARY 2, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

GENERAL POLITICAL NEWS.

NEW CAPITOL AND NEW GOVERNOR.

INAUGURATION CEREMONIES IN THE NEW MICHIGAN STATE-HOUSE—ADDRESSES BY SEVERAL EX-GOVERNORS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 1.—The new State Capitol of Michigan, just completed at a cost of $1,375,000, was formally dedicated to day at Lansing. There was a large attendance of representative men from all parts of the State, and all the proceedings were witnessed by crowded audiences. The exercises propor took place in the new Representative Hall. Gov. Croswell occupied the chair, supported on either hand by Lieut.-Gov. Sessions and Bishop Gilespie, of the Episcopal Diocese of Western Michigan. Ranged in front were Chief-Justice Campbell, ex-Govs. Felch and Greenly, Blair, Baldwin, and Bagley—all the living ex-Governors of this State, except Gov. McClelland, of this city, whose health is very infirm. Facing these gentlemen were the State Building Commissioners and other State officers. At 9:40 A. M. Gov. Croswell called the assemblage to order, and the exercises began with music by the Lansing Knight Templar Band, followed by prayer by Bishop Gillespie. Judge Campbell, in an impressive manner, then administered the oath of office to Gov. Croswell and Lieut.-Gov. Sessions.

Ex-Gov. Felch was then introduced as the oldest living ex-Governor and Senator of Michigan. He said the occasion was an extraordinary one. The inauguration was to him an impressive ceremony, imposing duties neither light nor trivial. Citizens of a great State joined in an official oath to support the United States Constitution faithfully, and perform each the duties of his station. Heretofore, the Michigan Government had dwelt in tents, but it now went into a grand temple. He spoke feelingly of Stevens T. Mason, the first Governor of this State. Marked changes had occurred since then. The population had increased from 90,000 to 1,500,000, with noble institutions springing up all over the State for their education and care. No State led Michigan in education. Its grand university had a bright future before it. All honor to the early legislators of the State and their successors for this. Those who saw the early organization of the State could best understand the great progress of Michigan during her first 40 years as a State. Since Michigan was admitted, the United States had vastly expanded, and was now among the foremost of the nations of the world. Gov. Felch said it was his fortune to take the Governor's oath 33 years ago, and this occasion carried him back to the fountains whence flow the sweet waters of our prosperity. He spoke reverently of Govs. Mason, Woodbridge, and Barry, and paid a high tribute to their capacity and labors for the State. He closed by expressing great faith in the perpetuity of free government.

Brief music followed, and then ex-Gov. Greenly, who, in 1847, signed the bill making Lansing the State capital, related the history of its transfer from Detroit to Lansing. He also spoke of the progress of the State general y. Ex-Gov. Blair followed, and was intro uced as Michigan's "War Governor." He was received with great applause, and said it was not often that six ex-Governors got a day together for honors. He spoke of his pride upon having been elected on a ticket with President Lincoln, the mention of whose name was greeted with enthu iasm. He said so great was Lincoln's character that it was an honor to have ever stood near him. He hoped the new Capitol would show a more liberal era—better salaries for Governors and Circuit Judges. He hoped also to see a mansion at Lansing for the tovernor. The State now had a grand Capitol, but to be useful it should be occupied by good administrators of government. Legislators should give their attention to public business as well as private scheming. The laws and Constitution should be changed to fit the exigencies of the present. Ex-Gov. Baldwin, who suggested the new Capitol, followed, and recalled the history of the State territory before and after becoming American property, from 1805 to the present time. Ex-Gov. Bagley also spoke in a pleasant vein, thanking God for the prosperity enjoyed by the State: "Let poor and rich alike enjoy its blessings, and may peace be within these walls," he said.

Hon. E. O. Grosvenor then read the report of the Building Commissioners, who then presented the building to the people, through Gov. Croswell, who briefly spoke in acceptance and complimented the Commissi ners. Rev. T. P. Prudden, of Lansing, pronounced the benediction, the band played another stirring air, and thus closed the dedicatory exercises, at 11:55.

The State Legislature organized for a biennial session at noon. The House re-elected its officers of last term, and the Senate chose as its Secretary the assistant of last term, E. S. Hoskins, of Bellevue. Nothing was done to-day but organize and adjourn. The Governo.'s M sage will be read to-morrow. One Representative elected by Nationals acted with the Republicans and entered their caucus. Gov. Croswell is to-night holding a reception, largely attended, in the new Capitol.

OHIO'S NEXT CAMPAIGN.

MR. FOSTER'S CHANCES NOT CONSIDERED GOOD—SECRETARY SHERMAN THOUGHT TO BE THE "COMING MAN"—THE POWER OF THE ANTI-HAYES PARTY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 1.—There has been much written and said in reference to the Ohio Governorship on the part of the politicians and the press at the national capital. The nomination by them of Hon. Charles Foster as a candidate, months before the convention assembles, is looked upon as a piece of unwarranted assumption on the part of a few, who seem not to realize that they form only a small fraction of the voters of the State. In conversation with a number of prominent Republicans on the subject of Mr. Foster's candidacy, the almost universal opinion has been expressed that his nomination would not be advisable; that while Mr. Foster is popular in his own district, an able man and pleasant gentleman, he could not draw out the full Republican vote. A prominent Republican State officer is of the opinion that the coming man will be Secretary Sherman. He believes that should Thurman be compelled to make the fight for the Governorship, which at present seems quite probable, then Secretary Sherman will be the unanimous choice of the Republicans. In speaking of Gen. Garfield in connection with the Governorship, the officer referred to said he was a warm supporter of that gentleman, but he hoped he would remain in the House of Representatives. As a member of Congress he was the leader as well as the ablest man on the Republican side, and he believed his opportunities for doing himself honor and the country service were far greater than they would be were he Governor or Senator.

Gen. Beatty did not desire to express an opinion on the subject, stating that he had little to do with politics. He, however, said there could be no doubt of Republican success next Fall if the party was true to itself and put in nomination a man of character, ability and a Republican true to Republican principles. When questioned as to the talked-of nomination of Mr. Foster, he said: "Mr. Foster could not be elected. There are enough Republicans who will stay at home and not vote, as was the case in 1877, to lose the State. No," said the General, "the people will demand a Republican, a man with an unblemished reputation, and not a man who has sold us out." He believed there were plenty of men in the party who would draw out a full vote and defeat any man the Democracy might put in the field. Among those mentioned were Hon. Aaron F. Perry, of Cincinnati, who he believed would defeat even Thurman. Judge Alphonso Taft, ex-Secretary of War, he believed, would be a most formidable candidate. Congressman Jones, of Delaware County, would also be an acceptable man. "These men," said the General, "are well known to the people of the State, and their Republicanism has never been questioned." Should Senator Thurman be the Democratic standard-bearer, he thought it probable that Secretary Sherman would be the choice of the Republicans. If such was the case, he believed the campaign would be one of the most bitterly contested that had ever taken place in Ohio, if not in the United States. Gen. Beatty thinks the contest of 1880 is too far distant to discuss at present. He will support any good man, but is not favorably impressed with the proposed renomination of Gen Grant, although he believes the Republican candidate will carry every Northern State, and meet the solid South with a North fully as firm.

There can be little doubt that the Republicans who formed the anti-Hayes party in 1877, and defeated Judge West, the Republican candidate for Governor, still exist, and that they are a power cannot be denied. In fact, they are numerous enough to turn the State over to the Democracy at any time. It seems probable that should Mr. Foster or Senator Matthews be nominated by the Republicans, the anti-Hayes party will again come to the front and defeat the ticket. A large number of Republicans who are not prominently connected with political affairs strongly favor Gen. Garfield as Senator and Sherman as Presidential candidate in 1880. It is hardly necessary to add that Gen. Beatty will oppose the renomination of President Hayes.

Senator Thurman telegraphs that he will be present at the banquet on the evening of the 8th and respond to the toast—"Jacksonian Democracy."

MAINE'S GREENBACK-DEMOCRATS.

A HARD-MONEY RESOLUTION TABLED—GARCELON PROBABLY TO BE CHOSEN GOVERNOR.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 1.—The Democrats had an opportunity more closely to ally themselves with the Greenback men to-day. A hard, honest money resolution, which passed the Senate, came down to the House, where it was laid on the table by a vote of 80 to 66. The "eating crow" process was resorted to by the Democrats, all the members of that party, with the exception of two, voting in opposition to the resolution, so that by this act the Democrats have become subservient to the Greenbackers, and the union is perfect. There will be a necessity for only one candidate next year and one platform. The combination had a convention this evening and harmonized in the selection of candidates for State officers. It appears that the Greenbackers have the lion's share. The eastern portion of the State fares poorly in the distribution, and there is some grumbling. There seems to be no question that Garcelon will be chosen Governor.

A caucus of Greenbackers and Democrats combined to-night nominated the following candidates for offices: Secretary of State, E. H. Gove, of Biddeford: Attorney-General, William H. McLellan; Adjutant-General, Samuel D. Leavitt.

The Republicans nominated the following: S. J. Chadbourne for Secretary of State; Henry B. Cleaves, of Portland, for Attorney-General; George L. Beal, of Norway, for Adjutant-General.

NEW-ENGLAND GREENBACK MEN.

A CONFERENCE TO BE HELD AT BOSTON AND GEN. BUTLER TO ATTEND.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—A private conference of representative Greenbackers of New-England is to be held here to-morrow, at which it is expected that Gen. Butler will be present. It is called in response to a recommendation from the head-quarters of the National Party, at Toledo, Ohio, that a general convention should be held here at an early day. The leaders of the remnant of the party here are reticent when asked concerning the objects of the conference. The general statement is made that it is to afford an opportunity for the discussion of the proper methods for conducting the campaign and to arrange for the most prompt distribution of campaign documents. Some of the leaders here are free to say that they do not care to coalesce with the National Party, and they appear to take very little interest in it.

THURMAN'S "FIRST INSTALLMENT."

WHAT HE KNOWS ABOUT ELECTION FRAUDS IN THE NORTH—NEWSPAPER EXTRACTS GRAVELY SENT TO THE TELLER COMMITTEE—THE SENATOR DISCLAIMS PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE OF CORRUPTION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The following letter is self-explanatory:

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 1, 1879.

To Hon. H. M. Teller, Chairman of Select Committee of Investigation:

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 21st ult., inclosing a copy of a resolution adopted by your committee, requesting me to furnish in writing such facts and such evidence as may be in my possession, touching the matter involved in the amendment, made on my motion, to the resolution under which the committee is acting.

Of course the committee does not suppose that the matters embraced in that amendment are within my personal knowledge or that of any one man. They relate to the elections in every part of the Republic, and the allegations are, for the most part, to be found in the public press. In the opening of his speech in support of his resolution (Dec. 11) the Senator from Maine distinctly stated that the resolution was based on accounts given in the press. Well, the press has teemed with statements, which, if true, require the investigation proposed by my amendment, and as I have no doubt that the members of the committee read the newspapers quite as diligently as I do, it is probable they know where to look for the sources of information as fully as I do; and that they are charged with the responsibility of making the investigation, and I am not. I beg leave respectfully to say that I take no part of it upon my shoulders.

Nevertheless, as the amendment was offered in perfect good faith, and with a firm belief that, as the matters it embraces require investigation quite as much as the matters contained in the original resolution, it will be proper for me, especially since the committee has requested it, to furnish such information touching the subject as may, from time to time, come under my observation. I therefore send herewith "instalment No. 1," consisting of:

First—An editorial article cut from this morning's Washington Post.

Second—A copy of a petition of sixty odd citizens of New-York to the House of Representatives, complaining of the illegal and oppressive conduct of John I. Davenport and other Federal officials, at the late election in New-York City, and I am authorized by Hon. Fernando Wood, who presented the petition, to say that its statements are proved by sundry affidavits in his hands, and that he will, if required, furnish the names of the affiants and other witnesses to the same facts.

Third—A copy of an opinion of Judge Freedman touching the rights of certain naturalized citizens of New-York, which rights were grossly violated by said Davenport, as set forth in said petition.

Fourth—I respectfully refer you to that portion of the speech of Senator Wallace, (one of your number,) delivered in the Senate Dec. 17, 1878, which relates to the last election in Pennsylvania. (see Congressional Record of Dec. 18, page 28.) I also beg leave to refer you to a published letter of Hon William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, showing the means employed by Federal officials and others to defeat his nomination and election. You have, no doubt, seen the letter in newspapers. If not, I will have a copy procured for you.

Fifth—An editorial article from the Argus and Patriot, newspaper, of Montpelier, Vt., touching the election at Bennington, in that State.

Sixth—A copy of the President's civil service order of June 22, 1877, and, as showing what attention has been paid to it, and also what means were resorted to by the Republican Congressional Committee of 1878, I inclose a circular of that committee signed by George S. Gorham, its Secretary. This circular, it is said, was sent to nearly every person in the civil service of the Government, and to public contractors and others having relations with the Government.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. G. THURMAN.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATORS.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The State Legislature met this morning. The Senate elected J. B. D. Cogswell President, and the House Levi C. Wade, of Newton, Speaker. Stephen Gifford was elected Clerk of the Senate, and George A. Marden Clerk of the House. Oreb F. Mitchell, of Bridgewater, was elected Sergeant-at-Arms.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 1.—Sailed, steam-ship Pennsylvania, for Philadelphia. Arrived off Holyhead, steam-ship City of Bristol, from Philadelphia.

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

ENGLISH LABOR DISTRESS.

NO CHANGE FOR THE BETTER IN THE INDUSTRIAL CENTRES—STRIKES OF DOCK-LABORERS AND MASONS—END OF THE OLDHAM STRIKE.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The distress among the poorer populace seems about stationary at the great industrial centres. The Lord Mayor of London writes that he considers it inadvisable to start a central fund for London, as he learns that the distress is not at present so exceptionally heavy as to overpower the local relief organizations. The Mayors of Manchester, Preston, Sheffield and Blackburn, replying to official inquiries, state that the local resources are sufficient to meet the distress. This report, however, has provoked indignation in the case of Blackburn, where 14,000 persons are unemployed.

The Mayors of Bolton and Oldham have informed Home Secretary Cross that the local resources are able to cope with the distress at those localities.

Over 1,000 dock-laborers have struck work at Hull.

Contrary to expectation, nearly all the masons at Sheffield have struck against the reduction which they were informed, on Dec. 24, would take effect to-day.

It is expected that the journeymen builders of Sheffield will submit to the reduction of which notice was given by the master builders on the 24th of December, and that a strike will be avoided.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Oldham cotton strike has terminated. At a conference between the employers' and operatives' committees yesterday the latter unconditionally accepted the proposed reduction. It is expected that work will be fully resumed on Monday.

The Oldham masters, at yesterday's meeting, refused to pledge themselves to restore old hands to their former places or exempt carders from the reduction. The loss in wages by the strike amounts to £60,000, besides the expenditure of the union funds and loss of capital by the stoppage of 4,000,000 spindles. The Sun Mill, which is the largest limited company, in Oldham announces a loss of £2,200 during the last three months. This is the greatest loss ever sustained by any company since the cotton famine.

THE AFGHAN HOSTILITIES.

PRELIMINARY MOVEMENTS FOR AN ADVANCE ON KANDAHAR.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Viceroy of India telegraphs that Gen. Stewart reports the completion of a good road, suitable for heavy artillery, over the Ghorazin Pass. Advances were commenced by both the Ghorazin and Kojuk Passes to-day, with the intention of concentrating at Takht-i-pul for the final advance on Kandahar. The most trustworthy reports state that only three or four weak Afghan regiments and a few hundred irregulars, destitute of artillery, are at Kandahar. There is no news from Kabul or from Yakoob Khan.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent with the Quettah column says the artillery has safely passed the Kojuk Pass. The bulk of Gen. Biddulph's division is now in the plain of Kandahar.

The Telegraph's correspondent at Jalalabad states that four regiments have deserted Yakoob Khan, because of a dispute about pay.

CURRENT FOREIGN NOTES.

GREAT FLOODS IN ENGLAND—THE COMING FRENCH ELECTIONS—RUSSIA TO HAVE A NATIONAL EXHIBITION—THE TARTAR REVOLT SUPPRESSED.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The recent sudden thaw has caused numerous floods in England and Scotland. At Nottingham the flood is the greatest which has occurred for 14 years. The country around Darlington and Wrexham is flooded for miles. Much damage is reported at Berwick and Aberdeen.

A dispatch to the Times from Paris says: "Though the coming elections do not endanger the Cabinet, the Ministers have perceived that they ought to ask a kind of reinstatement from the new majority in the Senate, and have agreed upon a programme which will be submitted at the opening of the session, and which will insist that no reform shall be adopted without full discussion."

The Times to-day, in its discussion of the revenue returns, concludes that if no further foreign disturbances ensue, Lord Northcote may, on the whole, be but little worse off than he anticipated.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 1.—United States Consul-general Heap has obtained £300 for Romer's expenses. Romer will leave for America on Jan. 2.

A further enormous depreciation of Turkish paper money has occurred. As a consequence, numbers of bakers' shops have been closed.

MOSCOW, Jan. 1.—A grand national exhibition will be held here in 1880, which will probably be accompanied by great festivities, as it will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Emperor's accession to the throne.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 1.—The revolt of the Tartars at Kazan has been suppressed. Two hundred rioters have been publicly flogged.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Standard's Dublin correspondent says the rumor has been revived that the Duke of Connaught will become Viceroy of Ireland, and meets with rather more credence than formerly.

The Times' correspondent at Berlin says: "A majority of the Federal Council are friendly to the general principle of Prince Bismarck's financial scheme. It is thought that Prince Bismarck's measure for the support of the poorer members of the Reichstag by protecting native corn and cattle. Although the Liberals will determinedly oppose the measure, they are probably aware that their protest will be little more than formal."

A special dispatch to the Times, from Vienna, says: "Reports relative to arbitrary plans for the conversion of paper money raised the price of gold at Constantinople last week to 420, but Government purchases of paper and Police interference reduced this to 176."

MARINE DISASTERS.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The British steamer Laurestina, Capt. Iliff, last reported as having arrived at Reval, Dec. 12, has stranded near Stockholm.

The American ship Cromwell, Capt. Barstow, last reported at Antwerp from Baltimore, stranded at Flushing to-day.

The American bark Rums, Capt. Begna, from Philadelphia, Nov. 5, for Ancona, arrived at Fayal Dec. 16, leaky.

PROVIDENCE AND WORCESTER EARNINGS.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The annual report of the Directors of the Providence and Worcester Railroad for the year shows the income of the road to have been $670,876 19; the expenses, $591,041 10, and net earnings, $279,835 07.

THE NEW CONNECTICUT STATE-HOUSE.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 1.—Controller Hubbard opened the new State-house to the public to-day, and the edifice was visited by thousands of people. The legislative halls and all public offices were thrown open to visitors.

DEATH FOR A BRUTAL ASSAULT.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 1.—The jury in the case of Joseph Benstein, who was on trial for a brutal assault upon Annie Dugan, an orphan, 13 years of age, to-day returned a verdict of guilty. The penalty is death.

DANGER OF SLIDING DOWN HILL.

POTTSVILLE, Penn., Jan. 1.—At Shenandoah, yesterday afternoon, a horse attached to a sleigh ran away, and struck a sled on which some boys were coasting, fatally injuring a boy named Hayes.

CLEVELAND AND PITTSBURG DIRECTORS.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 1.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cleveland and Pittsburg Railroad Company was held to-day, and the following were elected Directors for the ensuing year: August Belmont, Samuel J. Tilden, Charles Lanier, and F. T. Walker, of New-York; S. E. Jones and J. N. McCullough, of Pittsburg; Thomas A. Scott and William Buckwell, of Philadelphia; E. M. Ferguson, of Cincinnati; R. P. Ranney, James F. Clark, and J. V. Painter, of Cleveland. Owing to the absence of several Directors the board did not organize.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT WASHINGTON.

THE RECEPTIONS AT THE WHITE HOUSE AND OTHER OFFICIAL RESIDENCES—SIR EDWARD THORNTON AND THE FAMILIES OF GENERAL AND SECRETARY SHERMAN IN MOURNING.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—New Year's Day in Washington was passed in accordance with a custom as firmly established and as rigidly followed as though regulated by statute. The weather even was of the kind usual upon the first day of the year in this locality. The snow, which began falling about noon, continued throughout the day, with brief intervals of drizzling rain, making pedestrianism unpleasant as well as unsafe. The storm did not, however, discourage the "callers," who were as numerous as upon any previous New Year's Day. All the prominent officers of the Government, including those of the Army and Navy stationed here, and the foreign Ministers, with the exception of Sir Edward Thornton, entertained all who chose to call with liberality, and in many cases with exceptional elegance.

At the White House the usual New-Year ceremonies were observed. At 11 o'clock, the foreign Ministers, arrayed in the glittering costumes prescribed for occasions of grand ceremony by their respective Governments, their breasts covered with the badges and jewels of ancient and honorable orders, and accompanied by the ladies of their families, were admitted to the blue parlor, where the formal reception took place. The absence of Sir Edward Thornton and family from the Diplomatic Corps was particularly noticeable, and was owing to the recent death of the Princess Alice. The place of Sir Edward as Dean of the Corps was supplied by the German Minister, Mr. Von Schlozer. Members of the Cabinet and their families preceded the foreign Ministers, who were followed by the officers of the Army and Navy in full dress uniform. At 1 o'clock the doors were thrown open to the general public, and for an hour a steady stream of callers passed through the parlors, and were received by the President and his family and Vice-President Wheeler. Mrs. Hayes was dressed in a beautiful ivory-tinted silk dress, with a train skirt and high waist. The neck was cut in the shape of a V in front, and filled in with lace. The sleeves and draperies of the skirt were of the same embossed white gauze. She wore no jewelry, her only ornaments being a white plume and ivory comb, which showed to marked advantage in her black hair. Upon her right stood Mrs. Jewett, of Chicago, who wore a lemon-colored silk train skirt and high waist, with a deep fall of point lace. Beyond was Mrs. Gen. Hastings, who were a princess dress, with blue silk ground, brocaded with delicate flowers, through which ran a silver thread, and trimmed with a fringe, into which all the colors were blended. The ladies of the Cabinet and those of the foreign Ministers were costly and magnificent dresses. Gen. Sherman, who leads the Army men upon New Year's Day, made great preparations for calling and his wife for receiving. At 1 o'clock this morning news was received of the death of his brother, ex-Judge Sherman, of Ohio, and this put an end to his calling and closed the reception-rooms of Mrs. Gen. Sherman and Mrs. Secretary Sherman.

CHARTER OAK'S TROUBLES.

OPENING ARGUMENT FOR THE ACCUSED OFFICERS—TECHNICAL AND ACTUAL INSOLVENCY DEFINED—FURBER'S RIGHT TO THE FUNDS HE DREW MAINTAINED—ALLEGED DEFECTS IN THE INFORMATION POINTED OUT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Jan. 1.—As Judge Foster's illness continues, he will not be able to make an argument for the State in the Charter Oak trial, and as he drops out of the case, the prosecution can only have two arguments, one of which was made by Mr. Buck yesterday. It was arranged this morning that only two of the counsel for the defense should be heard. Mr. Perkins, who had been assigned to follow Mr. Buck, was therefore relieved, and Mr. Swett began the opening argument for the accused, and spoke from 10 o'clock till nearly 1, when the court adjourned to to-morrow morning. His address was an exceedingly able one, and attracted the closest attention of a large number of spectators.

At the outset Mr. Swett explained minutely to the jury the difference between the technical standard of solvency applied to a life insurance company by State law and the commercial standard, showing that, while arbitrarily a company could be held on a 4 per cent. reserve to be technically insolvent, yet at the same time it might be abundantly able to pay all its debts. The Charter Oak was impaired under the State law to an extent where $500,000 would, as the Insurance Commissioner told Furber, make it perfectly good. Not that it needed money, for it had enough to pay all its obligations, but the amount named would make it solvent according to the mathematical basis of solvency established by the department under the law. Furber came in with his contribution, which was, by the terms of the contract he made, not a liability, but a contribution to the assets, such as could be held in case of the intervention of the Commissioners and courts for the benefit of creditors. The contract expressly stated that it was not a liability, as affecting any of the assets of the company, which were computed in the department calculations as tests of solvency; but it was to be paid back out of the future profits, such as in no way the Commissioner would take into account in determining the financial status of the company. In point of fact, as the books showed, Furber took out during the 20 months of his management just about the sum which he had contributed—a little short of the whole amount put in and interest added. What the condition of the company was prior to his going in makes no difference in this case. So far as his contribution was concerned, he only drew out what he put in and was entitled to under his contract.

Mr. Swett read the two counts in the information, and held that the second one, which charges that the accused officers conspired to cheat and defraud three policy-holders, who are named, and 20,000 others, unknown, and others who might become policy-holders, was fatally defective, because their legal identity had not been proved. It was just as defective, he said, as if an allegation to cheat the Charter Oak Life Company had not been fortified by proof of the existence of such a company. He quoted extensively from English and domestic authorities on this point, and requested Judge Hovey to charge the jury that all evidence under the second count must be thrown out.

He then took up the statement of the company for 1875, which, it is charged, contained misrepresentations as to the "amount and value" of the assets of the company, and went over it, item by item, to show that the report was only a statement of property taken from the books, and in no sense could be accepted as a presentation of values. As the allegation set out definitely the valuation of assets, and as the report did not purport to show anything of the kind, the pleader had evidently written his information without connecting the report, which was at variance with his pleadings. Moreover, there was no occasion for Furber and the other officers to make any misrepresentations to deceive, as the Commissioner had said that the $500,000 which was put in, and which was included in the assets, made the company perfectly good; and, in fact, the testimony showed that they had nothing to do with making the report, which was left to the employes in charge of the assets.

It is expected that Mr. Swett will occupy an hour to-morrow to finish his argument, when State Attorney Hammersley will follow, and Mr. Hyde will sum up for the defense. The case will be given to the jury probably on Friday.

A CLERK'S DISHONESTY PROVED.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.—The jury in the case of Isaac Mulock, until recently a clerk in the Water Department, charged with embezzlement, this morning returned a verdict of guilty.

CALEB CUSHING SERIOUSLY ILL.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Jan. 1.—Hon. Caleb Cushing is quite ill to-day. As he is 79 years of age, his sickness causes much anxiety among his friends.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Jan. 1.—The proprietors of the Saunders Print Works, in Southbridge, Mass., have failed, with liabilities to five Fall River mill firms amounting to $55,500, and to persons in Providence amounting to $18,000.

SEARCHING FOR ARSENIC.

PROF. C. A. DOREMUS' TESTIMONY AT MRS. COBB'S TRIAL.

THE COURT-ROOM AND WHO AND WHAT IT CONTAINS—TESTIMONY ILLUSTRATED BY EXPERIMENTS—PROF. DOREMUS EXPLAINING HOW HE FOUND THE POISON—HE THINKS THERE WAS ENOUGH ARSENIC IN THE BODY TO FORM A FATAL DOSE.

NORWICH, Conn., Jan. 1.—One of the principal witnesses for the State in the Cobb murder case has been on the stand to-day, giving testimony of great interest. A brief description of the scene in the court-room may not be without interest. The rail which separates the public from the court runs the longest way of the apartment, allotting rather less space to the spectators than to the court. Only the centre one of the three short aisles which thread the region beyond the pale is accessible from outside, and at the lower end of this the gateway in the bar was closed by a cord. The court sits in comfortable easy-chairs instead of upon the old-time bench, behind a rich French walnut, gilt-ornamented desk, overhung by an immense light bronze chandelier. At the immediate right of the Judges are the diminutive pulpit-like witness-box and a small table, at which are seated the court stenographers. Still further to the right, raised upon a low dais, are the 12 chairs of the jury. Stretching out from the stenographers' desk nearly to the bar stands the long table about which are seated the counsel for the State and defense, with the heavily-veiled prisoner, and her mother, sister, and brother beside her, and in the corner, near the door to the Judges' room, is the elevated desk of the High Sheriff, whose dignity is heightened by a buff vest and dark-blue coat. Directly in front of and close to the Judges' desk stretches the table especially reserved for the press. The area behind the reporters, back to the rail, is filled in with chairs and benches, yesterday occupied by the talesmen, but now taken up by members of the Bar.

At the immediate left of the Superior Court Judges is a desk, temporarily occupied by Judge Kellogg, of the City Court, near whom stands its proprietor, Webster Park, brother of the Chief-Justice, whom he somewhat resembles, and Clerk of the Court, with witnesses and other privileged persons grouped near by. Still further to the left, beside the door which opens into the apartments of the State's Attorney, is the prisoner's dock, with its balustrade, thus far left vacant. White, hard-finished walls, chestnut doors and casings, with walnut trimmings, high windows, handsome chairs, a light-colored Axminster carpet with a pretty design, a few large chandeliers, and a large ground-glass rotunda light in the ceiling, complete the room. As was the case yesterday, the seats allotted to the public were crowded when the Judges, a little late, came in, and the trial was resumed, and even the standing-room in the aisles was fully occupied.

The roll of the jurors having been called—seven of them come from the two adjoining towns of Stonington and North Stonington—a brief delay ensued, while the State's next witness, Charles A. Doremus, Professor of Chemistry at Buffalo Medical College, and Assistant Professor at Bellevue College, New-York, was preparing to give his testimony. Col. George C. Ripley, City Attorney, who is assisting the State's Attorney, began the examination, the witness being occasionally interrupted by Mr. Thresher, of the counsel for the defense. Mr. Thresher is the only one of Mrs. Cobb's counsel who seems to follow the scientific thread closely.

The witness first told of his experience in analyses for poison, his general practice as a chemist, and the certainty with which metallic poisons, like arsenic, copper, antimony, &c., could be detected after death, and the less accuracy with which vegetable poisons, except strychnine, could be detected. A minute description was given of the condition in which the vital parts of Cobb were received. Rarely, he said, were specimens put up so securely and so well designed to make analysis trustworthy. The stomach was first taken out. It was tied at both ends. Its contents were pulpy, and amounted to about seven fluid ounces, not bitter to the taste. These were put in one jar, the washings of the stomach in another, and then the tissue of the stomach itself, which was pale, with no signs of severe inflammation. The intestines were treated in the same manner, amounting to 12½ ounces, were alkaline, and some were darker, or greener, or more yellow than those of the stomach; no signs were noticed of severe inflammation. The vessels used in these processes were carefully cleaned, and bought for the occasion. The other organs all seemed to be in a normal condition. The post-mortem examination of June 26 was then described, as was done yesterday, at some length, without any new evidence of importance being elicited. The contents of the bladder were very carefully removed and bottled. The few drops with which a little blood was mingled, found after the bladder was opened, was put in another bottle. All these several packages were specially sealed, and all were deposited and tested in a special apartment kept under lock and seal. The witness also received from Dr. Perkins two vials of morphine and a small box of powdered bismuth. There was also a sample of bismuth, from which this was said to be taken. The course of arsenic in the system was then traced. After being taken into the stomach part of it is absorbed into the blood; there are two kinds of poison, vegetable and metallic; pains must first be taken in tests to separate the former, and then the tissue may be destroyed, which will leave the metallic poison, if it exists which have been used; the tissue being destroyed, the metal remains. The precautions taken to insure the purity of the chemicals used were detailed.

A recess was then taken to allow of apparatus to be brought in for illustrative tests. These were conducted on the table in front of the jury—employed also by counsel—and within 10 feet of Mrs. Cobb, the prisoner, to whom they were doubtless quite as full of interest as to any one else in the crowded room. Her heavy veil so completely concealed her features that any revelation of the emotions which the exhibition excited in her bosom were hidden from the public. Her sister, during the earlier proceedings, manifested a most indifferent composure, but later she put her hand about her chin and lips at times as if in unnatural self-restraint. Prof. Doremus is the son of Prof. Robert Ogden Doremus. He is tall, of young appearance, with dark hair and full Prince of Wales beard, and winning manners. He was assisted in his tests by Prof. Withouse, a gentleman of more advanced years, medium height, yellowish Dundreary whiskers, and eye-glasses. The array of colored solids and liquids in the vials, and of retorts, test tubes, and other apparatus, looked like a cross between a small confectionery shop and a glass-blowing exhibition. These having been arranged, a rubber tube was attached to a gas-burner of the fixture at the end of the Judge's desk, to furnish a flame for the lamp which afforded heat.

Soon after the dissertation on the nature and properties of poison and the processes for detecting it began, Prof. Johnson, of Yale, an expert summoned for the defense, came into the court-room. After the pretense made yesterday that no expert could be procured, the Professor's prompt appearance provoked a smile. He seated himself opposite the witness, observed him closely, and took ample notes. For a single instant Prof. Doremus' face flushed, but if he was really disconcerted he showed it in no other way and quickly recovered his self-possession. The main object of this series of experiments and their explanation was to show with what unerring certainty the presence of arsenic can be proved, and the particular nature of the tests employed.

The witness first went on to tell about the practical application of these processes which he made in the pending case. He took the contents of the stomach, then of the intestines, then the tissue of stomach and intestines together, then a third of the liver and a half of one kidney together; then half the liver, an entire kidney, and the whole spleen, then the brain, then the urine, all in turn, for test. This order of treatment would show whether the poison was recently received or long absorbed. In treating the contents of the stomach he put them into alcohol with a trifle of acid, to extract any vegetable or organic poison. The liquid was then separated, the solids were converted into a solution of hydrochloric acid. Then sulphuretted hydrogen was used, which gave a brownish precipitate. This was saved, washed thoroughly, dissolved in ammonia, filtered, then sulphur, nitric acid, and other materials used in these processes were driven off, and a solution was obtained, and subjected to the pure hydrogen test with the Marsh apparatus. A perfect test for a stain of arsenic was found, showing only a trace of arsenic in the contents of the stomach. The washings of the stomach also showed only a trace.

The contents of the intestines, the washings, and accumulated drippings from all other organs were next tested. All possible vegetable poison was removed by bone-black, the alkaline character being first reversed by tartaric acid. The charcoal was then properly put aside. Alcohol was used to take up such vegetable poison as had not been thus eliminated. The residuum was then purified of organic matter, and was treated to discover arsenic, which was found in a yellow precipitate. This was subjected to processes already described, and yielded a white powder, which was put to the cyanide test, and rendered stains on glass, which he showed the jury. A liquid separated in one of these processes was also subjected to another test, which also gave a red stain, not exhibited. Neither was the trace of poison obtained from the washings of the stomach shown. The Professor had a shallow wooden case, measuring about 19 by 30 inches, in which were contained the bits of glass tube and cards on which the poison was deposited in the several experiments. These were all carefully labeled. The case was carried around and shown to the jurors, with explanations. Only the results of two tests, however, were introduced at this stage of the proceedings.

The noon recess here occurred. Chief-Justice Park presided to-day, taking proper precedence of Judge Culver. Both waived their magisterial dignity so far as to step down and watch the processes and examine the proofs of the poison found. During all of these illustrations, the audience manifested much eagerness to watch them, and it was necessary for the Sheriff to rap the assemblage to order and compel the over-curious sight-seers to sit down.

The Judges returned soon after 2 o'clock, and Prof. Doremus was again called to the stand. He gave the process by which he treated the tissue of the stomach and intestines. He obtained from them, by the same process heretofore described, a yellow precipitate—sulphide of arsenic—weighing eight-hundredths of a grain. He then showed the invariable proportion of arsenic in sulphide of arsenic, and thus knew that the eight-hundredths grain of sulphide contained sixty-four thousandths grain of white arsenic. By Reinsch's test, with a piece of copper, he obtained the arsenical stain which can be proved to be arsenic. The witness here exhibited to the jury the glass tube containing the stain. During the description of the process, Col. Ripley unreflectingly asked Prof. Doremus if oxygen was poison, which elicited a smile. Doremus answered no; that oxygen was the life-giving property of the air. Col. Ripley blushed and sat down. The next step was the examination of one-third of the liver and one-half of one kidney. The witness detailed the process by which four-hundredths grain sulphide of arsenic was found, which contained thirty-two thousandths grain of arsenic. By Marsh's test, he obtained the stain of arsenic. This was the first stain of arsenic he obtained in his investigation; other stains were found subsequent to this. Next he examined one-half of the liver, the whole spleen, and one kidney, obtaining a dark-colored precipitate. Finding it troublesome to wash it free of chlorine, he repeated the process, and obtained four-hundredths grain of the sulphide, or thirty-two thousandths grain of white arsenic.

The witness called attention to the fact that although a very much larger amount of liver was treated, a very little more sulphide was obtained. By the Marsh test a clearly-defined stain of metallic arsenic was obtained. The black stain was then changed to white, which exhibited characteristic crystals of arsenious oxide. This was a most important and distinguishing feature of arsenic. At this point the jury, Judges, and others, looked at the crystals through a powerful microscope. Some jurors took a brief glance, others looked more intently and intelligently. The next step was the analysis of the brain. Prof. Doremus used about two-thirds of the whole brain, and obtained a very small amount of sulphide. This was exhibited on a watch-that also gives the name to the pass through the chain. A small boy, with a pail of piñon nuts, was the only intruder of the vendor order from La Veta. He said he bought his wares from "the Mexicans," who gathered them in the mountains. The nut is a part of the cone of the fir the Mexicans call piñon, and tastes like the beechnut of the North. The Mexicans in seasons of scarcity live largely on these sweet little nuts, and a passenger on his way to some of the mining camps volunteered the information that he and his party lived three days on piñons while lost in the mountains. There was an unpleasant shade of contempt in the tone in which the small vendor said he had bought the nuts from the Mexicans, which was afterward explained by the remark of a person who spoke of the inhabitants as Mexicans and "whites." Evidently our predecessors in the sovereignty of the soil are not regarded as "white" people; and to be white means more than the mere color of the skin, for to do anything that is not "white" is to earn the contempt of the tawniest muledriver on the road. In the strain and hazard of mining life—almost the only life in these mountains—the laws of the survival of the fittest is illustrated with grinding severity on the Mexican. His luxurious nature shrinks from toil unless stimulated by hunger, and having earned a few days' supply of food and a blanket he is disposed to rest until his store is exhausted. He is doomed by nature to be the menial wherever he comes in competition with the "white," as understood here.

The slow progress of the train and the upward tilt of the car showed the steepness of the ascent from La Veta, the grade being about 211 feet to the mile for 22 miles. The smoking car was dropped off as a superfluous weight to haul through the pass. Eight miles of this brought us to Ojo, a side-track station at the entrance to the pass, which is also the mouth of the Abata Cañon, the route of the old Abata and Sangre-de-Christo toll-road across the range. This route has been superseded by the railroad, but cattle from the San Luis Park are still driven through by the toll-road. At Ojo a freight train on the siding sent a stream of light from its head-lamp down the valley we had just ascended, lighting up the rocks and trees on the slopes on both sides for some distance. The ascent of the Mule-shoe Bend, which is an aggravation of the ordinary Horse-shoe Bend, in being longer and narrower, began at Ojo, and the train moved along the right side at the foot of La Veta Mountain, which rises from the railroad track in a broad, straight slope about 3,000 feet high. The mountain side was flooded with moonlight, the crescent of the first quarter skimming the tops of the lower mountains on the south side of the road so closely as to be half hidden at times. In fact, before reaching the summit the moon had set and risen several times on the mountain-tops, with flashing effects through the fringe of straight evergreens. Turning the sharp curve of the bend—so sharp as to grind the rails of the platforms and the hoods of the cars together with a pressure that bent them—the ascent of the other side was begun over a rocky cut in the side of Dump Mountain just wide enough for the train to pass. Having reached the point on Dump Mountain opposite the side track, the lights of the freight train were seen 800 feet below, and although the distance across from track to track was only about two or three Broadway blocks, we had actually advanced five miles on the road. The progress now was along a shelf cut in the mountain sides, from which the view down the moonlit slopes to the dry bed of La Veta Creek, a thousand feet or more below us, was impressively grand, leading the imagination along the ages in which with persistent toil the now silent stream—the pioneer engineer of the Creator—had scooped out the passage in these everlasting hills, and made man's work so much easier. At length the summit of La Veta Pass was reached, and a short stop permitted the travelers, to step out and breathe the fresh, cold air, 9,339 feet above the sea. The wind drove through the pines with the rush of a water-fall, and the chill of midwinter prevailed everywhere, with half a foot of snow on the ground. A solitary stone building, two or three wooden huts, half covered with earth, and a shed large enough to protect one or two locomotives comprise La Veta Pass Station. The stone building is the railroad depot and Western Union Telegraph station, and consists of one room, with walls bare of ornament, unless flaming railroad advertisements pass for such. Across the track from the station a peak of the Sangre-de-Christo range rises 2,000 feet, with an expansive slope of evergreens up to the tree line, and terminating in masses of bare rock seamed with snowy defiles. The descent of the western slope of the range, along the bed of the Sangre-de-Christo Creek, presented little of interest, being comparatively straight and in the valley of the stream. It was made tedious, however, by the constant check on the headway of the train required by the grade, which is almost as steep as on the eastern side. The promptness with which the train obeyed the law of gravitation when the wheezing escape of air announced the removal of the brakes was alarming to the nervous, in view of the consequences of any derangement of machinery that would prevent the instant action of these checks. The train was allowed to move freely about half a minute, when it was "slowed down" to almost a stand-still, and this continued through the whole descent. Five minutes' freedom of the brakes would place the train beyond control, and disaster would be inevitable in the sharp curves of the eastern slope.

SAN LUIS PARK AND ITS TOWNS.

After descending through 22 miles of mountain slopes in this halting way the level of San Luis Park, 8,000 feet above the sea, was reached. Fort Garland, once a military post of some consequence, and soon to be abandoned by the fragments of two infantry companies stationed there, and one or two small clusters of very new houses were passed in the dark. The Rio Grande, which rises in the mountainous region to the west and northward, and flows through the San Luis Park, was crossed at Alamosa, a four-months-old town of 1,500 or 2,000 inhabitants on the right bank of the river. This is the present western terminus of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. The town may be said to have begun its history at Garland, six miles east of Fort Garland, and about 30 miles from its present site, where, about eight or nine months ago, it had a population of 1,500, but where its career will end is difficult to predict, the ultimate destination of this branch of the railroad being at present involved in some uncertainty, owing to the recent transfer of the control to the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Company. The town will probably slide along until stopped by the snowy range of mountains between it and the San Juan mining country. Most of the buildings once stood in Garland, and on lots which were held at high prices while that was the end of the road and the active centre of mule-freighting and trade with points north, west, and south. But suddenly the edict went forth—the section of the railroad to the western bank of the Rio Grande was about to be opened, and Garland would no longer be the terminus! Lots for which hundreds of dollars were paid could not be given away. There was nothing to be done but to carry the buildings—stores, dwellings, and hotels—still further westward, and set them down in the new town. Garland could not have been so completely obliterated had an earthquake visited it; but Alamosa strange from the ruins, and bears the traces of the process in the seams made in roofs and walls in cutting them into sections for transportation. A walk along the principal streets, lighted by the stars that in the still rare atmosphere flashed so as to give to the entire firmament something like a quivering motion, revealed gaps between the buildings that doubtless represent fortunes in the imagination of investors in building sites. The only sounds were the hoarse rush of steam from the locomotive whose toil for the day was over, and the notes of the harp, piano, and violin in two or three concert saloons, into which the braying of a bronchitic cornet, mingled with the sharp calls of the leader of the music in a neighboring ball-room, broke at short intervals. The world, even in this remote spot, must have its amusements, but the absence of the dancing-master might be inferred from the distinctness and minuteness with which the leader called the changes in the dance.

SUNRISE IN THE PARK.

Thanks to the early start to recross the Spanish Range, the San Luis Park, or Valley, as it is sometimes called, was seen at its best. But little of interest is to be seen ordinarily on a level plain of about 200 miles long north and south, and 100 wide east and west, covered with coarse, rocky sand, sage-brush, and a few other scrubby shrubs; but in the light of the rising sun, after a cold night that had covered the shrubs with a feathery hoarfrost, the plain was transfigured, every twig bearing a thousand sparkling diamond points. It was absolutely too brilliant to be looked at, and the eye sought the relief of the pink and opal of the fringe of mountains that encircle the plain. On the east the great bulk of the Sierra Blanca and other peaks of the Spanish Range cast deep shadows far out into the plain, and on the west the Sierra San Juan and Sierra Mimbres caught the light, and sent back soft colors through the thin mists of the morning. The northern part of this valley, however, has one remarkable feature to boast of in the Saguache (pronounced Sawatch) or San Luis Lakes, a number of marsh-bordered lakes, without a known outlet, which receive the waters of 19 streams from the mountains bordering the northern half of the park. The margins of the lakes produce luxuriant crops of hay and are excellent grazing lands. The streams of the southern half of the valley empty into the Rio Grande, which enters the park through a gorge in the western mountains, flows south-eastward to the middle of the valley, and then turns due south on its tortuous course to the Gulf of Mexico. The coarse sand of this part of the park is driven by the winds in drifts high up the base of the mountains and into the passes to a depth to make some of them impassable. There is a legend that in one of these sand-storms a thousand sheep and a boy who was herding them perished in a pass near the Sierra Blanca. The principal towns of the valley are Saguache, the county seat of Saguache County, in the northern part, and Conejos, the county town of Conejos County, and San Luis, of Costilla County, in the south; besides which there are several smaller places, such as La Garita, Rito Alto, Carnero, La Loma, Del Norte, and others. La Loma, which is on the left bank of the Rio Grande, as it debouches into the plain opposite Del Norte, has a history peculiar to mining towns. It was a thriving place before the Leadville excitement attracted its population into the mines of that region, and it is now deserted, with dwellings and stores enough for a population of 1,500 standing empty and its streets silent. From Alamosa westward, northward, and southward transportation is by stages and mule and ox teams, until the narrow passes of the San Juan Mountain mining region are reached, when burro, or Mexican donkey trains, alone can be used. The ore from the mines is "packed" down the passes in sacks on these patient little animals, and merchandise of all kinds carried back to the mining camps by the same process. The expense of freighting from the railway terminus is estimated by traders at the mines to equal the original cost of the goods and all other charges to that point. Silverton, the chief mining town in the San Juan district, is 125 miles from Alamosa by the most direct route, and 25 miles of this distance is over a trail through passes accessible only to burro trains and horsemen. During the Winter this region is cut off from the outer world by the deep snow in the passes.

AN ILLUSION DISPELLED.

One of the most ardently cherished beliefs in the mind of the devoted Coloradan has received a rude shock within the past few weeks. Pæans to the climate have been sung since the earliest days of the history of the State—not a very remote period, it is true—and even the sand-blasts of Denver are explained away as sanitary zephyrs to the dyspeptic, introducing the alkali of the soil into his depraved stomach to aid digestion. Disbelief in the possibility of a severe Winter has prevailed to such an extent that no provision for feeding or sheltering the herds on the ranges has been thought necessary. The juicy buffalo grass of Uncle Sam's great unoccupied farm could never be covered with snow long enough to starve the cattle—according to the views of these great national deadheads, the grazers. This comfortable belief is not tenable with a large part of a snowfall of two feet that fell on the 11th inst. still cumbering mountains and plain, and sheep and cattle suffering and dying from want and exposure. One sheep rancho, within three miles of Colorado Springs, has lost 150 or 200 sheep since the snow-fall, and the survivors are rapidly "eating their heads off" at the present prices of hay and grain. The thermometer ranges from 15° above to about zero, in the night, but during cloudless days the sun shines hot on the snow, and a week of such days would dissipate it and restore the russet hue of the Plains and the drooping hopes of cattle-owners and all dependent on them.

WHAT THE FIREMEN ARE OFTEN DOING.

From the Chicago Journal, Dec. 30.

The probabilities are that Lieut. Ener C. Anderson, of Engine Company No. 17, will, at an early day, be promoted to a Captaincy in the Fire Department. Marshal Benner received an official report Saturday afternoon from Capt. Cook, who commands the company to which Anderson is attached, giving details of the heroic conduct of the young man at the Barnes House fire, and highly recommending him for promotion. The report says that at the fire at the Barnes House Friday afternoon the flames communicated to the stairways leading to the upper story and cut off all retreat from it. There were three women in that part of the house at the time, and their frantic cries, for help were heartrending. The entire floor was filled with smoke, and all efforts of the firemen to reach the women by the stairways were baffled, the men being driven back exhausted. One of the women came to a window with the intention of jumping to the ground, but her courage failed her. At this juncture Lieut. Anderson procured an old "scantling ladder," as Capt. Cook calls it, and placing one end of it on a balcony, climbed the rickety thing and attached it firmly to the window above the risk of his life. He was followed by Capt. Crowley, of Hook and Ladder Company No. 2, and together they rescued the women. Every fireman who was present says that if it were not for Anderson's heroism the women would have been suffocated.

A CALIFORNIA CENTENARIAN.

From the Santa Cruz (Cal.) Courier, Dec. 19.

On the Laguna Calabero ranch, in this county, there is living at the present time an old Californian named José María Amador, who was born at San José in the year A. D. 1778, and is consequently 100 years old this year. He has been married five times, has had 40 children, 80 grandchildren, and 20 great-grandchildren. In his youth he entered the Mexican Army, and on account of the brilliancy of his uniform and his skill with the riata rose to be a Brigadier-General. Returning to California, he founded the Pueblo of Sonoma and became possessor of the beautiful Amador ranch. The old gentleman is now living with his fifth wife, is erect and sprightly in his gait, and laughs at his grey-haired sons of 70 and upward. Judging from present appearances Mr. Amador must have been a high-toned caballero in his day.

THE ROMAN FEVER NEST.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE CAMPAGNA.

A BILL FOR THE PURPOSE PASSED BY THE ITALIAN CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES—REPORT OF A COMMISSION ON THE SUBJECT—SUSPICION OF A SUBTERRANEAN LAKE—PROPOSED METHODS OF IMPROVEMENT.

Rome Correspondence of the London Standard.

The bill for the amelioration of the Roman Campagna, respecting Dr. Baccelli's report of which I gave you some account in a former letter, has been passed in the Chamber of Deputies by a majority of 120 in a house consisting of 239 members. We must not, however, flatter ourselves that this means that anything will forthwith be done in the matter. The probabilities are that, for a considerable time, we shall hear no more of the subject. Apart, however, from any prospect there may be or may not be of the immediate adoption of any measures for the long-talked-of improvement of the Campagna, the subject is one of such wide-spread and popular interest that I return to the subject for the sake of laying before your readers some of the considerations set forth in Dr. Baccelli's report, which want of space prevented me from speaking of in my former letter.

"It would be an hypothesis rather than a hyperbole," says Dr. Baccelli, "to affirm that Rome and its surrounding district has a lake beneath its surface, or, as may be said, rests upon a hidden lake." Such a singular and, as far as I am aware, unique geological phenomenon would suffice to explain some otherwise very puzzling circumstances of the malaria. The soil of the Campagna, as Dr. Baccelli remarks, is for the most part excessively arid on the surface, save where absolutely marshy, while at the same time the subsoil is charged with water, so that it would be necessary, in order to render such lands healthy, and at the same time fertile, to subdrain so deeply as to reach the bottom of the tufa formation for the purpose of getting rid of the subterraneous water, and at the same time to provide a system of irrigation for the surface. And the extreme undulation of the surface would make it necessary that the canals supplying such irrigation should be exceedingly long and tortuous. The special conformation of the surface of the Campagna combines with the nature of the soil to increase the difficulty of getting rid of the waters. The tufa is very little permeable, and the steep slopes of the wave-like undulations, rather than hills, of the Campagna, and the frequently lusseless valleys, all tend to cause the accumulation of water in the hollows. Dr. Baccelli thinks, too, that the enormous masses of water which were poured into ancient Rome by the old aqueducts became, when the population was immensely diminished and the aqueducts went to ruin, a means of saturating the subsoil with water which there was no normal means of getting rid of. Added to these causes, there are to be taken into consideration the frequently-recurring inundations of the Tiber and the surplus waters of the Pontine Marshes, and of those of Ostia and the Maccarese, nearer still to Rome; the special and peculiar nature of the coast from Porto d'Anzio to Terracina, an extent, that is, of about 120 miles, which renders it especially liable to infiltration; the low level of the neighboring plains, in some places absolutely below that of the sea level; and, lastly, the mixture of stagnant fresh with salt water which sometimes occurs. "In fact," Baccelli says, "a hydrographic condition of our Campagna more disconcerting than that of any other district with which it could be compared." "Yet, from the considerations of these facts," he goes on to say, "these great truths emerge indisputably, and must be our guide in the work of amelioration viz., that the malaria is the product of the locality where it exists; that we tread upon it with our feet; that it does not diffuse itself to great distances from its sources; and that it does not rise to any great height from the soil;" all which circumstances indicate, continues Dr. Baccelli, "that we ought to confine our works to limited zones in proximity to the city, and to defend ourselves from specially noxious invasions of the miasma by plantations where the predominance of the winds requires such a protection; but not to dissipate vast sums in work at a distance for the sake of combating a hypothetical enemy, when we have a real one before us. I am afraid that the condition of all parts of the Campagna is such as to forbid talking about the evils of any portion of it as hypothetical. But it may be admitted that all the phenomena and circumstances of the case seem to point to the possibility and the expediency of combining the projected works in the first instance to the immediate neighborhood of the city, with the ultimate intention of extending them, and making each zone of land reclaimed a basis of operations for the recovery of more.

The means which the commission, by the medium of its reporter, Dr. Baccelli, recommends for the attainment of this object in view is, firstly, the passing of a law obbiging [the italics are mine] all the proprietors of lands within the zone to be operated upon to undertake cultivation to a high degree—la coltura being, after the attainment of this provision ought, before all else, to be made for improved means of communication, for the rigorous application of the sanitary forest law, and the replantation of the "sacred groves" where they have perished; for the institution of a penal agricultural colony for the execution of the works in the immediate vicinity of the sea, and for the establishment of a Bank of Agricultural Credit, into which the Government should pay the first two millions, for the granting of loans to landowners, and for premiums to such of them as should with the least delay undertake the prescribed operations of cultivation. This Bank of Agricultural Credit should proceed to the establishment of a model farm, where nurseries of plants and abundance of seed, and agricultural machines and cattle for sale or to make good his claim, and it is probable that such proprietors as might prefer assistance of this sort to advances of money. Besides these provisions it would be also desirable to remit the taxes on the land under treatment during the period of its transformation.

It is then suggested in the report presented to the Chamber that, if it should be found—as, in my opinion, it unquestionably will be found—that the proprietors, or any of them, should neglect to act in accordance with the provisions of the law, despite all the encouragements to comply with them, then a special tax should be imposed on the lands so neglected, the proceeds of such tax to be paid into the before-mentioned Agricultural Bank for the aforesaid purposes. Should that measure not succeed in compelling compliance with the law, then absolute prohibition of using the lands in question for the purposes of pasturage would follow. Lastly, if any owner of land should be still obdurate, recourse must be had to forcible expropriation "of the superficies." The first thing to be found is a thoroughly good system of means of communication, the want of this the National Government, the Province from its own provincial fund, the communes benefited, and the land-owners whose property will be immediately improved, must contribute. But the works are to be executed by the Government. The 20 ancient roads, which, as is well known, traversed the Campagna in former times, should be retraced and supplemented by as many cross-roads as may be needed to render every particle of the soil easily and rapidly accessible. And "If the Roman legions constructed the ancient roads in great part, no one would see any objection to the employment of the Army in so urgent and necessary a work."

The bill has been passed, as has been said. It remains to be seen whether it will be allowed to become a dead letter. There can be no doubt, I think, that the matter is practicable, and that it would be found efficacious. It is evident, from the anxiety manifested by the reporter in returning again and again to justify the measures of compulsion indicated in the above schema, that there were opposition to this part of his measure. But surely there is no need of so much insistance. No expropriation pro bono publico was ever more completely or more evidently justified by the paramount desirability of its object than would be the expropriation of the owners of the soil of the Campagna, whose neglect of their property causes it to become an ever-active source of pestilence and death to their neighbors. But the extreme anxiety of the reporter on this point is possibly caused by the untoward circumstance that the soil of the Campagna is in very great part possessed by persons "whose adhesion to the Throne, the Church, and the old order of things makes them hostile to the King of Italy's Government and to all its measures. And the Commissioners, whose report I have been examining, have evidently been influenced by the anticipation that the very first word to be raised against the Government by the "Black party" and their adherents. The case, however, is not one, as it seems to me, in which any such outcry could justly forbid the execution of the law, and the all-important necessity of the end in view is too manifest, and comes home to the understanding and personal interest of too great a number for the Government undertaking such a work to have ought to fear from such an opposition. And there is one rather eminent member of the "Black party" whose good wishes, if I mistake not, the improvers of the Campagna would assuredly carry with them—his Holiness Leo XIII. I am persuaded that the Pope, properly appealed to on the subject, would deem the opportunity of showing that he was prepared to find cordial friendship with the Italian Government as should tend to the real and indisputable advantages of the Roman people a very acceptable one.

BUFFALO HORN'S HEAD-DRESS.

From the Ashland (Oregon) Tidings.

A gentleman who is now in Lake County has the head-dress of Buffalo Horn, who was killed last Summer in the Bannock war, having taken it himself from the head of the chief, whom he found with two other Indians dead in a cave. It must have given the wearer an aspect of much ferocity, judging from the description we have been given of it. Its most prominent features are two large buffalo horns fixed at the top. Surrounding the head are rows of weasels' feet and other attractive objects, woven together in such a way as to make a kind of capote or hood, which reaches to the shoulders.

THE PAPER-MAKERS TO RESUME.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, Jan. 1.

The paper-mills, which have been shut down since the 21st ult., in accordance with the agreement made last November, will generally begin running again to-morrow. It is thought that the manufacturers have lived up to the agreement pretty faithfully, and that the mill-wheels have stood still altogether about a month, thus practically taking 2,000 tons of paper out of the market. The result has been to make prices firm, rather than to advance them, and the dealers profess to be highly satisfied. The manufacturers of fine writing-paper will have another conversation in this city on the 16th to talk up the interests of the trade. The men who have been thrown out of work by the present stoppage have been thankful for this much at least, that their vacation came during the holidays.

A WONDERFUL CURE.

HOW A YOUNG GIRL, LYING AT DEATH'S DOOR, WAS PERSUADED TO GET UP AND EAT—HER APPARENT COMPLETE RECOVERY.

Correspondence of the Utica Herald.

WATERVILLE, Dec. 30, 1878.

News reached Waterville this morning of considerable excitement in Deansville about what was said to be a remarkable cure that had just been effected in that village. The case, as reported, was so unaccountable that many regarded it as little short of a miracle, and the circumstances entire were so peculiar that your correspondent has taken the pains to learn from David W. Barton, the father of the sick girl, the story of the cure. All the parties concerned are reputable and well known, and are not Spiritualists. Mr. Barton says that his daughter Gertie, aged about 14 years, has been sick for several months with a chronic disease of the stomach, which has baffled the physicians. Latterly she has been under the care of Drs. Munger and Allen, of Waterville. For the past fortnight she has been running down, and has not taken any nourishment in nine days. Mrs. C. T. Pooler, wife of the ex-School Commissioner, a lady who claims to be a "Perfectionist" in religious matters, had incidentally remarked to her husband lately that she believed she could cure Miss Barton. "Why don't you try it?" was the reply. "The time has not yet come," said Mrs. Pooler. Yesterday, after the regular visit of the physician, Mrs. Pooler started up and went to the house of Mr. Barton, entering rather unceremoniously, and made her way into the room where the sick daughter was in company with her nurse, Mrs. Hatheway.

"Jesus Christ has sent me here to cure you," said Mrs. Pooler, "do you want to be cured?"

The somewhat wild appearance of the comer startled all parties in the house, and the event, it was feared, would prove fatal to the sick girl. Mrs. Pooler grasped the hands of the invalid, shook them violently, and permeated her with what Mr. Barton terms "mesmerism" or "magnetism," and, after the mesmeric flutter, told her to get up and eat. Though she had not been able to take a bottle of milk for simple nourishment for days, she roused, dressed herself, and has eaten hearty meals since.

Miss Gertie is about the house to-day for the first time in months, has to-day eaten a hearty dinner, and is comparatively "a well girl." Her home has been visited by many to-day, but only a few have been allowed to see the convalescent girl.

A leading Spiritualist remarked this afternoon that Mrs. Pooler had effected the cure "by the essence of Spiritualism," but there is not one of the parties concerned but what is opposed to Spiritualism and deny any association with what are called spiritual manifestations. The case is at least a remarkable one, as the decease of Miss Gertie had been expected hourly—indeed, the rumor of her death had reached Waterville yesterday. Dr. Munger states that the disease was as above stated, but that the case is not more surprising than other cures on record. He says her pulse was good yesterday, and that he made the remark that all that was needed for recovery was an ability to take nourishment. The story of her recovery was not, in view of her recent condition, credited in Waterville till the testimony of Mr. Barton was secured. The case is on every one's lips, and Mr. Barton is a happy man, though at a loss to account for the sudden transition.

A THREE MILLION ESTATE IN COURT.

From the St. Louis Republican, Dec. 30.

On Saturday last, unless some unforeseen event occurred to delay it, a trial was begun in one of the Federal courts at Houston, Texas, which may be vastly beneficial in its result to one St. Louis citizen—Mr. Benjamin W. Clark, who lives at No. 3,549 Pine-street. This suit involves an estate of about $2,700,000, which is at present vested in the State of Texas by sequestration, but which a number of claimants are endeavoring to prove a good title to. A Republican reporter called yesterday at the residence of Mr. Clark to make some inquiries. That gentleman said that he was not at all posted as to the details of the litigation, only a general idea of it. About 40 years ago Mr. John C. Clark, his father's uncle, who was then but a youth, left his home to seek his fortune. He went from Virginia to North Carolina, where he lived for many years, and then made his way down into the Southwest, finally reaching Texas. There he entered upon the life of a ranchman, and by stock-raising began at once to acquire wealth. He lived a bachelor and gave to his relatives no intimation of his whereabouts. He proved an excellent man of business, prospered well, and about 13 years ago he died, leaving lands, money, and notes amounting to nearly $3,000,000. As nothing was known of his relatives by the Texas authorities, and as the relatives had no suspicion of the great success accomplished by the wanderer, there was no claim presented for the estate, and, after the lapse of the time fixed by law for forfeiture, the wealth of the heirless millionaire was taken possession of by the State. For several years nothing more was heard of the matter, when, about four years ago, and nearly ten years after the death, the father of our St. Louisan accidentally heard of the circumstances of the case. A little investigation convinced him that the Texan was his uncle, and he secured legal proofs of the relationship. The suit to secure litigation resulted in the discovery of several other heirs, and suit was entered to recover the estate from the Commonwealth. After an immense amount of the lawyer's delay, the case was set for Dec. 28, and it was agreed by all parties that it should go to trial without fail on that date. Mr. Clark, Sr., started for Texas last week confident of his ability to make good his claim, and it is probable that by the end of the present week the matter will be determined, so far as the trial court is concerned. Whatever the result, it is safe to presume that the case will go to an appellate court. The lands in litigation comprise a large portion of the counties of Richmond and Wharton.

NEIL BRYANT AT LIBERTY ONCE MORE.

From the Buffalo Express, Dec. 31.

A motion was made yesterday afternoon, in the Supreme Court, Special Term, Judge Daniels, presiding, for the discharge of Neil Bryant, the minstrel. It will be remembered that on the 10th day of November last Mr. Bryant was placed in durance in the Erie County Jail, in pursuance of an order of arrest issued against him. Lew Benedict was a member of the minstrel company which Mr. Bryant was in charge of in 1873. Benedict claimed that there was due him under this engagement $650. The claim was assigned to Albert B. Benedict, his brother, who instituted suit. Mr. Bryant has remained in jail since the issuing of the body execution. Upon an examination of the papers in the case a technical error was found, in that the judgment had been entered two days after the report of the Referee was obtained. The Code provides that judgment shall not be entered until four days after the Referee's report, and that this provision the prosecuting parties in their apparent hurry to get Mr. Bryant in jail seem to have overlooked. A motion was accordingly noticed for yesterday. Mr. John T. Gardner, of counsel for Mr. Bryant, argued in favor of the motion. Judge Daniels granted it, and an order was accordingly entered setting aside the entire proceedings on the ground of irregularity in the entry of the judgment, also setting aside the execution and discharging the defendant from custody. A stipulation was required to be given by Mr. Bryant that he would not bring an action against Benedict for false imprisonment. Mr. Bryant was accordingly released from custody.

PROTECTION NEEDED FOR THE LOBSTERS.

From the Portland (Me.) Press, Dec. 31.

In conversation with several dealers in lobsters yesterday, the statement was made that if our Legislature did not desire to see that delicious shellfish entirely banished from our waters, and become a far greater rarity, although one, than any other fish, they should pass an act, with severe penalties attached, prohibiting lobster catching during the months of August, September, October, and November in every year. During these months the lobster is very thin, its meat dry and poor, and it takes several to weigh as much as an ordinary good-sized lobster. The factories, however, catch them by the quantity, and that the fishermen have to seize the fish wherever they can get them to get a living. It would be better for the factories, as well as for the fisherman, if they would allow the lobster to remain undisturbed for a few months, and make as much in one year, but what they now gain this year they lose in the multiplication of years, and if this wholesale extermination goes on much longer, lobster salad, or fresh, sweet lobster will be an almost unknown dish in Maine.

ANOTHER DOG'S SAGACITY REVEALED

From the Portland Oregonian, Dec. 20.

During the past several months M. S. Hart, who, it will be remembered, was severely injured by a fall in Capt. Love's building last July, has visited Dr. Plummer's office almost daily, his faithful dog Beau being always at his heels. Last evening Hart missed his dog, whistled, and was answered by a howl from Beau, who did not go to him as usual, but insisted upon his admission into Plummer's drug store, at the same time showing by his howls and moans that he was in pain, and was in search of the Doctor. An examination disclosed the fact that a sharp-pointed wire nail had been stepped upon and forced almost through his hind foot. When removed the sensible animal made quite a demonstration of gratitude for his relief.

A WISCONSIN FARMER'S FIND.

From the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel, Dec. 30.

On Saturday, Julius Bleyer, a farmer, resident about two miles south of the Village of Fredonia, Ozaukee County, brought to this city and left with Botha, at No. 232 Grand-avenue, a piece of virgin copper weighing 28½ pounds. He stated that he plowed up the specimen in one of his fields last Fall, and that he was until recently unaware of its value. The piece is flat, oblong, and presents several features of interest to the naturalist. Though finds of this kind of copper are not unusual, it is claimed that this particular one, not being of nugget shape, is a curiosity rarely met with.

IN THE HANDS OF VANDALS.

A HISTORIC RESORT THREATENED.

THE FAVORITE HAUNT OF POETS AND ARTISTS —WELL-WALK OF HAMPSTEAD—VILLAGE VANDALS AND HALLOWED MEMORIES.

From the London Telegraph, Dec. 18.

A case, which may be qualified as that of the Lovers of the Picturesque and the Memories of the Past versus Vandalism is just now causing intense excitement among the inhabitants of the pleasant and historic village—or rather town—of Hampstead; nor does it concern alone the dwellers on the ascent to the breezy heath or the denizens of the Vale of Health. It comes home to the general heart of London much closer than even Thirlmere does; for every Londoner is proud of Hampstead, and is jealously solicitous for the integrity of the "sylvan groves," for which it has so long been famous. But the fine old avenue of lime-trees in Well-walk is threatened with demolition, and Hampstead is up in arms against the proposed act of barbarism. In order to stay the fall of the axe now ruthlessly uplifted, it will be necessary briefly to state the facts of the case. Toward the end of the seventeenth century, the honorable Susanna Noel, mother of Baptist, Earl of Gainsborough, gave six acres of waste heath-land, "encompassing the well of medicinal waters," in trust for the sole use and benefit of the poor of Hampstead. The object of the beneficent donor was obviously that the well should not be encroached upon, and the spring lost; and that sick people coming to drink its salutary waters should have some space for walking exercise after imbibing the health-giving draughts. For several years the intentions of the honorable Susanna Noel appear to have been scrupulously respected, and Dr. John Soame, writing in 1734, speaks rapturously of the well as "an inexhaustible fountain of health." The spring then yielded about five gallons of water in about four minutes; but in 1678 the outflows have become reduced to a miserable dribble insufficient to fill a half-pint measure in the course of five minutes. The spring, indeed, is said to have been virtually lost through the blundering of a builder employed some years ago to change the position of the basin, and the existing conduit is more like a sink than a fountain. Still worse remains behind. Not only has the well been unjustifiably neglected, but much havoc has been wreaked in Well-walk, and more outrages are threatened. It is true that one of the parochial magnates, at a vestry meeting held sometime since, denounced Well-walk in language more forcible than elegant as "the nastiest, beastliest place in Hampstead;" but different views on the subject appear to be entertained by other residents of the district. Certainly, the energetic vestryman's verdict would not be indorsed by the many invalids who frequent the avenue in Winter time, and who are grateful for it as a sanatorium, seeing that it is raised some feet above the level of the road, and is therefore always dry; that it is open to the South, and consequently enjoys the full warmth of the mid-day sun in Winter; that it is sheltered from the north and north-east winds; and, lastly, that its 200 yards, or nearly one-eighth of a mile, it has a perfectly level stretch, which, to many valetudinarians, is considered as a great boon in a hilly place like Hampstead.

It would be impossible to learn that the Trustees of the Wells Charity, utterly ignoring not only the claims of the picturesque and the manifest tenderness for the wants of the poor and afflicted implied in the bequest of Hon. Susanna Noel, are bent on cutting down the ancient and wine-smelling limes in Well-walk, leveling the embankment, and lining the devastated roadway with brand new houses. At the last meeting of the Trustees it was carried by a majority of 7 to 6 to fell the avenue of trees, and thus irrevocably ruin Well-walk; but a petition against this monstrous project has been signed by the influential inhabitants of Hampstead, and it is most earnestly to be hoped that the Trustees at the meeting, which takes place to-day, wiser councils will prevail, and this disastrous scheme will be abandoned. That the Walk should, if necessary, be repaired, and that the well should be cleared out, and, if new, to a few to the regeneration of its chalybeate resources, seems feasible enough; but not a single bough of the venerable limes should be touched. The trees are interested belong to the social history of England, and it is ill meddling with them. When the illustrious Lord Erskine lived at Hampstead, hard by the "Spaniards," he loved to relax from his arduous forensic labors by planting and transplanting operations on his demesne. "Then he would return," writes William Howitt, "with tenfold renewed vigor to his pleadings and his parliamentary conflicts." At one period, Lord Erskine essentially benefited from an attack of Wells Charity Trustee purblindness, contemplated cutting down a clump of old and noble elms, nine in number, which flourished in rustic beauty close to his residence, but saved the entreaties of his faithful old gardener, John Barnett, the great lawyer happily desisted from his fell purpose. The escape of the fine old trees was poetically commemorated by Cowper, although the poet, who had already celebrated "Hampstead Hill" in the "Task" as the chosen resort of Pope and Mansfield, ascribed the rescue of the threatened elms, not to the pleadings of old John Barnett, but to the interposition of the nine Muses indignantly disarmed "Erskine's sacrilegious hand." Be it as it may, the poet's soul should not needlessly be vexed, any more than the historic trees should be ruthlessly laid low. Will posterity forgive that most Ostrogothic parson, Rev. Francis Gastrell, of Stratford-on-Avon, who, not content with demolishing Shakspeare's house at New-Place, in order that he might not have to pay poor-rates while he resided there, did not inhabit, positively cut down the poet's famous mulberry-tree on the ground that "he was weary of showing it to boobies!" There would be, in degree, analogous desecration in destroying the trees in Well-walk. The charming avenue is closely associated with the most distinguished among modern poets and painters. In Well-walk, between the "Long Room" and the "Wells Tavern," lived and died John Constable, the Jupiter Pluvius of English landscape painters. He was the monarch of the rain-clouds and the "brimming" rivers. "Gif me mine ombrella," old Fuseli used to say; "I am going to see Mister Constable's bigtures." Like Constable and Old Crome, Constable was enamored with Hampstead. "I love," he said, "every stile and stump and lane in the village; and as long as my hand can hold a brush I shall never cease to paint them." Clarkson Stanfield and "Well-walk." Alfred Tennyson must needs love it; for close by the mother of the most illustrious of living English poets died. Mrs. Barbauld lived in Well-walk. Joanna Baillie liked to enroll it its Summer shade. Samuel Taylor Coleridge often came thither to visit a "poor invalid" who took lodgings in Well-walk, just before his last pilgrimage to Rome, where his ashes molder, hard by the Pyramid of Caius Cestius, his name not "written in water," as he himself despondingly for-told, but graven for ages on the hearts of his countrymen. Hone, of the "Catechism" and the "Table Book," saw the "poor consumptive invalid" as he sat pleasantly fondly toward the quiet landscape he had delighted in so much, and musing as in his "Ode to the Nightingale." Yes, the "poor consumptive invalid" was he who wrote the story of "Isabella and the Pot of Basil," he who in his quiet lodgings in Well-walk penned "Endymion" and the "Eve of St. Agnes." Rise up, John Everett Millais! —rise up, William Holman Hunt, noblest of graphic illustrators of those rare gems of English poetry!—rise up, and protest against the action of these "Charity" Trustees who would outrage the memory of John Keats!

No language could be too strong in which to inveigh against this monstrous proposal. It is not only Gothic architects who build cathedrals. Nature builds them; and it was perchance in a vista of towering elms or limes, with their interlacing boughs, that the earliest man found the first inspiration for the Gothic arch. To cut down the trees in Well-walk would be, comparatively speaking, as senseless an act of iconoclasm as to "restore and beautify" Canterbury Cathedral by the object of turning it into a Ritualistic chapel. Not all Salviati's mosaics, not all Triquetti's marbles, not all the stained glass that Munich could furnish would compensate for the disappearance of the memorial of Baptist Noel Turner, or of the plain blue-gray flagstone with its terse but touching legend, "O Rare Ben Jonson!" Not all the "eligible villa residences" that speculative builders could run up on a leveled and treeless Well-walk could atone for the spoliation of an al fresco Poet's Corner. There is not a rood or perch of Hampstead, from Caen-wood to Lower Flask-walk, that is not worth while fighting for, tooth and nail. It is classic ground throughout. It is our Campo Santo of social memories. For the preservation of the heath itself we have had to fight in years gone by a very stout battle indeed, over and over again did the Lords of the Manor of Hampstead, conceiving that they were the owners of the soil, and that the public were mere trespassers and interlopers, attempt the inclosure of the heath. Have the public forgotten the late Sir Thomas Wilson, and the interminable suits of litigants, and his oft-contested "Pinchley Road bill?" That worthy Baronet was doubtless conscientiously convinced in his own mind that Hampstead Heath was exclusively his private domain, whereas the contention of the public was that he could neither alienate nor inclose it nor build upon it, and that the fee simple was in them. In the end the public got the best of the struggle, and the immortal rights of the Wilsons were recognized by the Court of Chancery to the extent of compensation being granted to the amount of £45,000; but it was decreed that thenceforward

THE NEBRASKA MURDERER.

A COOL CONFESSION OF HIS MANY CRIMES.

THE PERPETRATOR OF SIX BRUTAL MURDERS —HIS INDIFFERENCE TO THE THREATS OF LYNCHING.

From the Omaha (Neb.) Republican, Dec. 26.

Stephen D. Richards, the murderer, who has gained notoriety since the discovery of his diabolical crimes, three weeks ago, passed through Omaha yesterday morning, en route to Kearney Junction, in charge of Sheriff Anderson, of Buffalo County, and Sheriff Martin, of Adams County. A two hours' conversation with the man, as the Union Pacific train carried him and the writer to Valley Station, developed a tale of wickedness that sounds more like the stories of bloodthirsty pirates of days long ago than of anything that could be dreamed of in this nineteenth century. Imagine a man 24 years old, well brought up, tolerably educated, with a pair of eyes that generally gaze from under his eyebrows peacefully and gently, but which at times flash spitefully, and you have Richards as he was yesterday. Throw in any amount of profanity and sangfroid, and you also have him, only more so. And yet he rode out over the road yesterday afternoon in a car which contained a number of gentle ladies and rough and gentle men, and was more an object of pity and wonder than he was of contempt and disgust.

Getting into the passenger coach while it remained in the depot here, the writer found the aisle blocked with a crowd that jammed and jostled each other and craned their necks to get a better view of Richards and to better hear the words he voluminously spoke to a reporter in the seat beside him. It was impossible to get close enough to speak to the brute, and we waited till the train was about ready to start. Sheriffs Anderson and Martin were just finishing a hasty lunch as we left them and entered the car and took a seat just made vacant by the side of Richards.

Constable Frank Hanlon occupied the seat opposite, and spoke the formal words that broke the ice for the shake of hands and what followed. And about then Conductor Kelly shouted his "all aboard," and Hanlon's seat was taken by Sheriff Anderson.

Yes, Richards was the one who committed the murders. How did he feel about it? "Bully." What had he got to say for himself, anyhow? "A — big pile." And with a wave of introduction of this sort the torture began. Richards didn't care much about being interviewed. He had met no one but reporters, it seemed, since his arrest, and whenever he told them anything he deliberately garbled it. He wrote two articles himself for the Steubenville papers, but they mixed in a lot of slush and lied about him. He didn't want any great notoriety, but he wanted the papers to tell the truth, and it was only on a solemn promise to stick to the truth that Richards consented to answer questions, which resulted substantially in the following story:

He was born in Waseling, West Va., and is 24 years old. He was brought up in Quaker, and stuck at home in Jefferson County, Ohio, where his father lives, till about three years ago. Then the desire to come West took possession of him, and he went to Iowa, where he got a situation in the insane asylum at Mt. Pleasant. His occupation there was "handling stiffs," he called it—that is, attending to the burial of patients and other work of an easy character. Here it was that he became accustomed to dead bodies, and had his finer senses blunted. He remained at the asylum about a year, and then went to Kansas, where he got work of various kinds, having no regular occupation. In this State he committed his first murder.

He got into a dispute with a man whose name he did not recollect—in fact, never troubled himself to learn—and "got the drop on him," killing him instantly, and going off and leaving the corpse lying in the sand-hills where it fell. He remembers that he was never troubled by any pursuit for this crime. The thought of having committed murder didn't bother him. He had no conscience, or if he had, he didn't know where it was.

He left Kansas and roamed through Colorado, finally bringing up at Kearney Junction in February last, where he first made himself famous as a desperate character by his general desperate bearing. About the 1st of March he committed the first offence that landed him in the Kearney Jail. That was when Sheriff Anderson made his acquaintance. In the jail a short time before were the train-robber, Underwood or Sixkiss, brought to Nebraska from Texas a year ago last night, and Haroldson, the horse-thief, husband of the woman Richards killed. One night these two worthies broke jail and escaped to Texas. Mrs. Haroldson was suspected of complicity in the delivery, and was arrested and jailed. While she was in custody Richards was arrested, and there he made her acquaintance. When, in a short time, the woman was released, she invited Richards to go home with her at her home in Kearney County. The first thing Richards did when he got out was to go there. His next visit was two weeks later, and after that he got to going frequently.

Well, one day he made up his mind to kill the whole family. He was undecided as to the time, but when Mrs. Haroldson expressed a desire to sell out and remove to Texas, where her husband was, he was sure the time had come. About the 15th of November last the woman was to go. Richards was assiduous in his attentions, and did all in his power ostensibly to hasten her departure. He was to take them over to Hastings and help negotiate the sale of the property. The neighbors were informed of the intended departure, but thought it not strange. The night of Oct. 31 Mrs. Haroldson and Richards worked all night in their preparations, coming to them early the next day. On the night of Nov. 1 Mrs. Haroldson, intending to leave next day, put the children to bed early, and along toward midnight threw herself on the bed without undressing, for a few hours' rest. Then it was that Richards looked upon the sleeping woman and went outside and deliberately dug the trench for the bodies of his intended victims, carefully lining it down and sides of the cavity with hay. This job done, he entered the house, seized a flat-iron, and, with a couple of blows, smashed in the poor woman's skull. She died with only a low moan. Still holding his bloody weapon in his hand, he advanced to the bed in which the two little girls were sleeping, and, with a single blow for each, he crushed their little skulls. The baby awoke and began to cry, and, with the devil's own deliberation, did this fiend incarnate fan with it to the bed in which the dead mother and living babe were lying, and, grasping the poor little innocent child by a leg, he swung him high overhead and brought the little boy's skull down against the floor with a crash that completely destroyed all vestige of human resemblance, and covered himself and all the surroundings with a spray of brain and blood.

"And when you think that poor little creature's life is that manner, didn't you have a spark of pity for it?"

"Pity be ——," was the reply. "The brat was making too much noise to suit me. Then, with no living witness to his foul crime, did this monster drag the four bodies to the sepulchre he had provided, and placed them in their resting-place. A grim sense of something for which we can find no name impelled him to go after the house and the stock, all of which he spread over the bodies. Then to pile a stack of straw into a mound was but short and easy for the monster, and his night's work was over. Before daylight he hitched up the Haroldson team of mules, loaded the wagon with whatever he thought of value, and was off to Hastings.

In a few days he returned with a team of horses and a new wagon. To the neighbors he brought kind messages from Mrs. Haroldson, and to a few he paid some of the murdered woman's minor debts. On the day of the murder he persuaded the woman to sign a voluntary relinquishment of her homestead in blank to leave it with him to negotiate. On his return from Hastings he filled this blank out in his own name, and, or there sent to Bloomington, presented the paper, and filed his claim for the homestead. Everything was now looking exceedingly well for the fiend. Possession of the homestead gave him the dignity of a citizen, and he was on the road to prosperity.

A few miles away lived a bachelor Swede named Peter Anderson, with whom Richards had become intimate. The latter proposed to the Swede that they live together during the Winter, and the unfortunate man consented. One of the arrangements was that Richards should be cook for the establishment. On the 8th of this month he told the Swede that he would get up an extra good dinner. He did so, using poison for seasoning. Anderson in the afternoon felt sick, and went to a neighbor's, and said he believed Richards was trying to kill him with poison. The neighbor doctored him, and when he returned he told Richards his suspicions. A quarrel ensued, and during it Richards killed Anderson by crushing his skull with a hatchet. That evening a party of neighbors came up to inquire for Anderson, and found Richards hitching up the Swede's team. He told them to go into the house and see, and then threw off the harness from one of the animals, mounted him, and made for Bloomington.

In the sand-hills on the southern edge of the divide the horse gave out and Richard left him there to die, going to Bloomington on foot. There he procured a conveyance to take him to Riverton, where he arrived near daylight Monday morning. He could not gain admission to the Riverton House, so he again hired a team to take him to Red Cloud. At that place he remained all day Monday, the 9th. Next morning he took the train to Hastings, where he arrived safely and remained, until the morning of Friday, the 13th, when he boarded the Burlington and Missouri River train for Omaha.

He says he reached this city that afternoon, lounged around the depot platform walle waiting for the Union Pacific to take him over the river, and freely conversed with our officers and others concerning the very crime for which he was fleeing. The next morning he reached Chicago, and passed through ticket to Baltimore, but got off at Wheeling Sunday night and walked over to Bridgeport, Ohio, remaining there till the next day, when he went to Lake Pleasant, and remained in that neighborhood till he was arrested.

This is the story he tells in a disconnected way. At one time in the interview Richards said he did not care to say any more statements. When he reached his destination, he said, he would make a general statement.

"But suppose you don't have a chance to do so—you know what I mean!"

"Well, I don't give a ——."

In answer to a request for the names of the women with whom he has been connected, he refused to divulge. He didn't want them to become known. "They married women, though," said he, with an air of pride.

"If Anderson hadn't been so quick in coming," said Richards, "he wouldn't have got me. The day I was caught I was going to start back for Nebraska. Why? Because they never would think of me coming West again, and would have gone on East, while I would have passed by here and gone to the mountains. Just a week to a hell the night before I was caught, and if it hadn't been for that—but, anyhow, if I hadn't had the two girls with me, I guess the constable, McGrew, who arrested me, would have been a dead man—either of us would, for I'd have shot."

Richards denies the report that he has confessed to three more murders, as well as that which says he threatened vengeance on the man who arrested him.

Sheriffs Anderson and Martin have had a lively time in the pursuit, and were almost worn out. To Anderson, by reason of his long experience, belongs a great deal of the credit for the capture. The two officers paid over the reward to the Ohio constable, and their own expenses have been over $500.

THE VINEYARDS OF CALIFORNIA.

STATISTICS OF THE HARVEST OF THE PAST YEAR—AN UNREMUNERATIVE SEASON.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

The sharp, nipping frosts of the past week remind us that the harvest truly is past in a most literal sense, and that the Summer is actually ended. It may not, therefore, be amiss or untimely to reckon up the results of that finished Summer, and the fruits of the completed harvest. As yet, the data for a thorough review of the field are not at hand, but it is possible to present an approximate statement of the season's yield in at least one conspicuous and important branch of industry, and one, too, that probably promises as much in the early future for the prosperity and renute of the State as any other, however greater in bulk and value the others may now appear. The allusion is to the grape harvest and the wine product. California now produces more grapes than any other State in the Union, and nearly as many as all the others combined. In good seasons her product of wine alone has aggregated about 7,000,000 gallons, which is as much as is claimed for all the States east of the mountains. Besides this product, she has put large quantities of the product of her prolific vines into raisins, has distilled a considerable quantity of the juice into brandy, and at the same time has furnished the tables not only of this coast, but those of the East, to a large extent, with their choicest fruit. And yet our grape culture is but in its infancy. Our vineyardists are only beginning to learn the peculiar adaptedness of their soils, the best variety of vine plant, the proper treatment to give them, and the best means of improving the quality of the fruit produced. Our wine-makers are still experimenting with the various grapes at their command; are only learning the relations of our peculiar climate to the product of the vine; are just beginning to understand the science of properly blending the different varieties of grape to produce the most excellent qualities of wine; are gathering experience in the manner of treating wines in order to adapt them to the average palates of our customers. In raisin-making we are also as yet but beginners, notwithstanding that our State is the source of the increase of thousands of boxes that are put upon the market by our manufacturers. Thus it is evident that when the experimental era shall have passed, this industry, already so considerable in extent, will become one of the most prominent and important on the coast.

Grape culture for the season now closing has not been remunerative in this State; first, because of a short crop, and, secondly, because of the low price the fruit has commanded in the market. Taking the wine product as the basis of calculation, it is shown that the yield is less than one-half what it should have been. In the Sonoma Valley the yield is but one-third of a crop, and in the Napa region about the same. It is estimated by the most competent judges that there are 40,000,000 vines in bearing in the State. These vines ought to yield not less than 12,000,000 gallons of unpressed juice, or more exactly, every three vines should yield one gallon of wine. But this yield has never yet been secured. Three years ago, when our wines were much more immature, and our cellar imperfect, the production was 7,000,000 gallons, which was found to be in excess of the demand. That was, in many respects, an unfortunate yield. It forced upon consumers a large quantity of wine that would hardly bear comparison with the average of the imported article, and which was offered for sale at their command, and was sold at prices much below what good wine should be worth. Nevertheless, the effect was to establish a price for California wines, whereas, heretofore, on account of the improvement since made in their quality, it has been found impracticable to advance. So that now, when we are making wines which challenge the highest commendations of the most critical Eastern experts, and are even preferred before the choicest connoisseurs beside their own most approved products, our producers are compelled to accept prices for their wines which barely pay the cost of production.

But with this capacity for producing 12,000,000 gallons, the product will be only about the same as last, about 5,000,000 gallons, or less than half a crop. This is partly owing, undoubtedly, to the heavy volume of rain that fell last Winter, but more, doubtless, to the unexplained causes which forbid a full yield of any fruit, and grapes especially, except at intervals of three years. Should the climatic conditions prove favorable during the coming year, California may expect to astonish the world with her product of the delicious fruit.

There is, however, not withstanding the short crop of this year, a very great satisfaction derived from the quality of the fruit. Never before have the grapes of California been so rich and excellent, especially for wine-making. The light red wines are pronounced not only superior to any heretofore produced in the State, but the most competent tasters pronounce them equal to the best French productions. The fermentation is excellent and the quality really splendid. The white wines are also much improved over the product of former years, though probably not to so great an extent as the red. This improvement is attributable to the increase in age of the vines, and also to the greater knowledge of the vineyardists in treating them and in handling the grapes. It is also traceable in a considerable degree to the improvements that are constantly going on in the vineyards, as suggested by experience and observation. Thus it is noticeable that the most intelligent growers are rooting up their old Mission and other comparatively useless vines, and substituting better varieties, more carefully adapted to the soil and climate, and at the same time those bearing fruit of tried excellence and approved flavor. They are also paying greater attention to location, and availing themselves of acquired experience in selecting the proper exposure and other items which perform so important a part in securing the most delicious juice from their vines. Thus it is that the standard of California wines is so steadily improving, and has already attained such an enviable repute. And while the crude wine as received from the first hands is thus of greater excellence this year than ever before, the blended wines will be proportionately advanced in character.

The increase in the demand for California wines is very marked this year, especially for export. It is estimated that, with the close of the current year, the State will have exported 2,000,000 gallons, against 1,500,000 gallons last year. The prospects are now favorable for a still larger foreign trade for the year to come, provided our dealers are able to supply the demand. The short crop of last year, and, owing to the short crop of last year and the brisk demand for the product that has prevailed, the country is practically drained, and there is no old wine remaining on hand in the State, from which even the foreign demand may be increased, it will hardly be possible to export much more of this year's produce than of last year's.

The prevailing price for crude wines during the season now closing has been from 14 to 25 per cent. higher than in former years. The benefit of this advance has been mainly enjoyed by the producer, the dealer, for reasons stated above, not having been able to realize more than in former years. He looks for his profits in the future, when the demand shall become stable and the supply assured. And certainly the prices realized this year must go far to encourage production, notwithstanding the unsatisfactory yield of the vines, which has operated to withhold any actual profit from the producer.

Allusion has been already made to the superior excellence of the clarets of this year's vintage. The knowledge of this superiority is already abroad, and the demand for them is very brisk, both for home and foreign consumption. At the East our red wines are preferred to those of France, while in our own State the consumption is almost exclusively of the home product. The demand for these wines promises to be beyond the supply.

Sweet wines are very scarce this year and command a high price in the market. Wines of this class, which last year sold for 40 cents a gallon, now readily command 55 cents, and are hard to find at that. The makers are holding them firmly, and are not at all anxious to sell.

Taking it all in all, the wine interests of California are considered to be in a very satisfactory and promising condition, and the industry has reached a stage where it is capable of taking care of itself, if it can only be let alone. But there is no disguising the fact that there exists an anxious watching toward Washington and a fear of some unwise tinkering of the tariff, which might seriously disturb, if not destroy, the interest altogether. Or, if this fear should prove groundless, as it doubtless will, there remains a keen apprehension of the threatened or long-talked-of secret combination of railroads, by which the immense products of that country shall be admitted into the United States, duty free, to compete with our younger industry before it shall have acquired strength to encounter such a formidable rival. This apprehension is doing more than at present appears to retard the development of our resources as a wine-producing State; and not until the question is set at rest in some official manner will our vine-growers feel easy and free to extend their operations.

MORE REVENUE FOR ALABAMA.

From the Mobile (Ala.) Register, Dec. 29.

The State needs more revenue. If the taxes were honestly collected we would have no trouble, but it seems impossible to devise any system of tax enforcement which will compel men to pay. The result of the Revenue bill of 1876 has been to throw millions of acres of land upon the hands of the State, and shut them off from the assessment list. The field of taxation has diminished, and the laws for enforcement have grown more and more odious. The General Assembly upon reassembling after recess must look the situation square in the face. They must remember that before another Assembly meets, two years hence, the rate of interest upon the public debt will have advanced from 2 per cent. to 3. We have already suggested one source from which a larger revenue should be collected—the railroads. There is another source which promises a large income—the Moffett register. Dr. Nicholson, one of the Montgomery members, at an early day in the session, introduced a bill to collect revenue by means of the Moffett register. That bill has slept, because defects were found in the Virginia law which originated the scheme, and which it was hoped would be corrected by closer observation. A more perfect enforcement of the tax against railroads would add not less than $75,000 to our revenue. The Moffett register, imperfect as it is, would add not less than $50,000 to our revenue.

BOTH ALIVE AND HONEST.

WILLIAM WACKERLE REAPPEARS.

THE MAN, WHOSE WIFE INSISTS THAT HE IS DEAD CLAIMS THAT HE IS VERY MUCH ALIVE AND THAT IT IS NOT TIME FOR THE INSURANCE COMPANY TO PAY.

From the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer-Press, Dec. 28.

A most exciting and remarkable experience is that which William Wackerle, formerly of Carver, Minn., has had during the past few years. He has been pursued and hunted for by his wife, who would not be satisfied until she had killed him herself or hired some one to strike the fatal blow. The origin of this passion to get rid of her husband's life is from a most extraordinary cause. It doesn't appear that Wackerle wronged his wife by being false to her, or that there was any foundation for jealousy on her part. He is an ordinary, quiet, and well-disposed looking person, who has worked hard to secure a competency, but who finds his life nearly blasted by the unnatural conduct of her who should be a wife to him. The secret of her intense hatred and her murderous designs seems to be founded in a desire to obtain $7,000 insurance upon the life of her husband, which now amounts, with interest, to nearly $10,000. The Pioneer-Press reporter met Wackerle yesterday, accompanied by Mr. Joseph Wehman, of Faribault, an attorney, and for some years a resident of Carver, where he was County Attorney. He tells his story frankly, and it is one of the most startling recorded for many a day. For some years Wackerle lived on a farm just out of Carver, in the very limits of the Etna and removed to Milwaukee. He has been married to his wife for 10 years, and while living together they had seven children born to them. All but one or two of them died when very young. Besides this unhappy product, she has put large quantities of the product of her prolific vines into raisins, has distilled a considerable quantity of the juice into brandy, and at the same time has furnished the tables not only of this coast, but those of the East, to a large extent, with their choicest fruit. And yet our grape culture is but in its infancy. Our vineyardists are only beginning to learn the peculiar adaptedness of their soils, the best variety of vine plant, the proper treatment to give them, and the best means of improving the quality of the fruit produced. Our wine-makers are still experimenting with the various grapes at their command; are only learning the relations of our peculiar climate to the product of the vine; are just beginning to understand the science of properly blending the different varieties of grape to produce the most excellent qualities of wine; are gathering experience in the manner of treating wines in order to adapt them to the average palates of our customers. In raisin-making we are also as yet but beginners, notwithstanding that our State is the source of the increase of thousands of boxes that are put upon the market by our manufacturers. Thus it is evident that when the experimental era shall have passed, this industry, already so considerable in extent, will become one of the most prominent and important on the coast.

Grape culture for the season now closing has not been remunerative in this State; first, because of a short crop, and, secondly, because of the low price the fruit has commanded in the market. Taking the wine product as the basis of calculation, it is shown that the yield is less than one-half what it should have been. In the Sonoma Valley the yield is but one-third of a crop, and in the Napa region about the same. It is estimated by the most competent judges that there are 40,000,000 vines in bearing in the State. These vines ought to yield not less than 12,000,000 gallons of unpressed juice, or more exactly, every three vines should yield one gallon of wine. But this yield has never yet been secured. Three years ago, when our wines were much more immature, our cellar imperfect, the production was 7,000,000 gallons, which was found to be in excess of the demand. That was, in many respects, an unfortunate yield. It forced upon consumers a large quantity of wine that would hardly bear comparison with the average of the imported article, and which was offered for sale at their command, and was sold at prices much below what good wine should be worth. Nevertheless, the effect was to establish a price for California wines, whereas, heretofore, on account of the improvement since made in their quality, it has been found impracticable to advance. So that now, when we are making wines which challenge the highest commendations of the most critical Eastern experts, and are even preferred before the choicest connoisseurs beside their own most approved products, our producers are compelled to accept prices for their wines which barely pay the cost of production.

But with this capacity for producing 12,000,000 gallons, the product will be only about the same as last, about 5,000,000 gallons, or less than half a crop. This is partly owing, undoubtedly, to the heavy volume of rain that fell last Winter, but more, doubtless, to the unexplained causes which forbid a full yield of any fruit, and grapes especially, except at intervals of three years. Should the climatic conditions prove favorable during the coming year, California may expect to astonish the world with her product of the delicious fruit.

There is, however, not withstanding the short crop of this year, a very great satisfaction derived from the quality of the fruit. Never before have the grapes of California been so rich and excellent, especially for wine-making. The light red wines are pronounced not only superior to any heretofore produced in the State, but the most competent tasters pronounce them equal to the best French productions. The fermentation is excellent and the quality really splendid. The white wines are also much improved over the product of former years, though probably not to so great an extent as the red. This improvement is attributable to the increase in age of the vines, and also to the greater knowledge of the vineyardists in treating them and in handling the grapes. It is also traceable in a considerable degree to the improvements that are constantly going on in the vineyards, as suggested by experience and observation. Thus it is noticeable that the most intelligent growers are rooting up their old Mission and other comparatively useless vines, and substituting better varieties, more carefully adapted to the soil and climate, and at the same time those bearing fruit of tried excellence and approved flavor. They are also paying greater attention to location, and availing themselves of acquired experience in selecting the proper exposure and other items which perform so important a part in securing the most delicious juice from their vines. Thus it is that the standard of California wines is so steadily improving, and has already attained such an enviable repute. And while the crude wine as received from the first hands is thus of greater excellence this year than ever before, the blended wines will be proportionately advanced in character.

The increase in the demand for California wines is very marked this year, especially for export. It is estimated that, with the close of the current year, the State will have exported 2,000,000 gallons, against 1,500,000 gallons last year. The prospects are now favorable for a still larger foreign trade for the year to come, provided our dealers are able to supply the demand. The short crop of last year, and, owing to the short crop of last year and the brisk demand for the product that has prevailed, the country is practically drained, and there is no old wine remaining on hand in the State, from which even the foreign demand may be increased, it will hardly be possible to export much more of this year's produce than of last year's.

The prevailing price for crude wines during the season now closing has been from 14 to 25 per cent. higher than in former years. The benefit of this advance has been mainly enjoyed by the producer, the dealer, for reasons stated above, not having been able to realize more than in former years. He looks for his profits in the future, when the demand shall become stable and the supply assured. And certainly the prices realized this year must go far to encourage production, notwithstanding the unsatisfactory yield of the vines, which has operated to withhold any actual profit from the producer.

Allusion has been already made to the superior excellence of the clarets of this year's vintage. The knowledge of this superiority is already abroad, and the demand for them is very brisk, both for home and foreign consumption. At the East our red wines are preferred to those of France, while in our own State the consumption is almost exclusively of the home product. The demand for these wines promises to be beyond the supply.

Sweet wines are very scarce this year and command a high price in the market. Wines of this class, which last year sold for 40 cents a gallon, now readily command 55 cents, and are hard to find at that. The makers are holding them firmly, and are not at all anxious to sell.

Taking it all in all, the wine interests of California are considered to be in a very satisfactory and promising condition, and the industry has reached a stage where it is capable of taking care of itself, if it can only be let alone. But there is no disguising the fact that there exists an anxious watching toward Washington and a fear of some unwise tinkering of the tariff, which might seriously disturb, if not destroy, the interest altogether. Or, if this fear should prove groundless, as it doubtless will, there remains a keen apprehension of the threatened or long-talked-of secret combination of railroads, by which the immense products of that country shall be admitted into the United States, duty free, to compete with our younger industry before it shall have acquired strength to encounter such a formidable rival. This apprehension is doing more than at present appears to retard the development of our resources as a wine-producing State; and not until the question is set at rest in some official manner will our vine-growers feel easy and free to extend their operations.

MORE REVENUE FOR ALABAMA.

From the Mobile (Ala.) Register, Dec. 29.

The State needs more revenue. If the taxes were honestly collected we would have no trouble, but it seems impossible to devise any system of tax enforcement which will compel men to pay. The result of the Revenue bill of 1876 has been to throw millions of acres of land upon the hands of the State, and shut them off from the assessment list. The field of taxation has diminished, and the laws for enforcement have grown more and more odious. The General Assembly upon reassembling after recess must look the situation square in the face. They must remember that before another Assembly meets, two years hence, the rate of interest upon the public debt will have advanced from 2 per cent. to 3. We have already suggested one source from which a larger revenue should be collected—the railroads. There is another source which promises a large income—the Moffett register. Dr. Nicholson, one of the Montgomery members, at an early day in the session, introduced a bill to collect revenue by means of the Moffett register. That bill has slept, because defects were found in the Virginia law which originated the scheme, and which it was hoped would be corrected by closer observation. A more perfect enforcement of the tax against railroads would add not less than $75,000 to our revenue. The Moffett register, imperfect as it is, would add not less than $50,000 to our revenue.

owner, distant some half a mile from the depot, where he always safely delivers it. No matter what the state of the weather may be the animal is always found on the platform, and only for this particular train. He was formerly the property of Mr. Elmore, who gave him to some of his Lakeville friends, by whom he is highly prized.

JUDGE DANFORTH.

HIS REMARKS AT THE DINNER GIVEN HIM BY MEMBERS OF THE ROCHESTER BAR.

The Rochester Democrat gives the following condensed report of the response of Hon. George F. Danforth to the toast in his honor at the dinner given him in that city, on Monday evening, in consideration of his election as Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals:

"I thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the kindness with which my name has been proposed by yourself, and you, gentlemen, for the kindness with which it has been received. I infer, after all, from the remarks of the Chairman, that I am one who has eaten and am to be dismissed from further service. I need not say how deeply grateful I am for this expression of your regard; but I feel, after all, humiliated by the compliment, when I call to mind the names of the many eminent lawyers who have practiced at the Rochester Bar. In 1840 there were fewer members of the Bar in Monroe County than are here present to-night. Then Frederick Whittlesey was City Attorney, Isaac Hills, Recorder. Samuel L. Selden, Clerk in Chancery. Perhaps six of the lawyers then in active practice are still with us. Judge E. Darwin Smith then adorned, as he now adorns, the profession. Judge Jasper W. Gilbert, now a Justice of the Supreme Court in the Second District, was practicing at the Bar. These, with Eastman and Chamberlain, are all that remain. The rest are either dead or or have removed to other localities. From that time to this the courts of the State have been conducted, in some measure, by the representatives of this profession from Rochester. Judge Gardiner, who was early transferred to the Bench, is still vigorous in body and mind. Samuel L. Selden went upon the bench of the Supreme Court and from thence to the Court of Appeals. Henry R. Selden went upon the latter bench. The present Chief-Justice, Sanford E. Church, resided in Rochester when he was nominated for the position he now occupies. In each instance the Bar was bereft, although the Bench was adorned. I am grateful for the evidence of good feeling exhibited this evening, but I begin to fear that there is a little too much good feeling. It seems a little as if the good-bye was not to be long enough. If, in entering upon the duties of the Bench, I left the Bar, I should feel very sad. We feel the profession of the law to be the highest recognized in the State, to which all other professions defer. There is also none lower, for it extends its hand to aid the lowest. We have seen in the career of those who now adorn and honor the Bench that the change of the advocate from the Bar to the Bench is like turning the ring upon the finger—the glitter of the stone is lost, but more of the gold is seen. Gentlemen, I do not intend to detain you. As I have always had an agreeable intercourse with you, and as I am indebted to you more than to any one else for the honor that has been conferred upon me, I render you hearty thanks. If it shall happen that you do not regret your action, I shall be doubly fortunate."

A PATHETIC LETTER FROM FLORES.

AN EARNEST CRY FOR HELP FOR A STARVING PEOPLE.

From the Bridgeport (Conn.) Standard, Dec 31.

The following letter to Mr. P. T. Barnum will be found of interest. It was written by a Spanish gentleman who has acquired a considerable knowledge of English, but evidently does not fully understand the idiomatic structure of our language. The letter is printed verbatim:

FLORES, (Azores,) Oct. 5th, 1878.

Phineas T. Barnum, Esq., Waldemers, Bridgeport:

SIR: After I have read the advertisements of your wonderfull life and enterprises, and seen the innumerous times you have devoted, in the midst of your busy life, your cultivated faculties for the benefit of your fey

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—8th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—7th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Sixth Page—7th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BOARD WANTED—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st and 2d cols.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Sixth Page—6th & 7th.
COUNTRY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—5th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—6th col.
HOTELS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED—Seventh Page—1st col.
INSTRUCTION—Sixth Page—5th col.
LOST AND FOUND—Sixth Page—5th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Seventh Page—5th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—7th col.
POLITICAL—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—6th col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
SAVINGS BANKS—Seventh Page—5th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—1st and 2d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—6th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STATIONERY—Sixth Page—5th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Seventh Page—7th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Seventh Page—7th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JAN. 2, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

UNION-SQUARE.—The Banker's Daughter.
FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Rip Van Winkle.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—Uncle Dan'l.
STANDARD THEATRE.—Almost a Life.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—At Last.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—Evangeline.
PARK THEATRE.—Baree, in the Wood.
COMIQUE.—Christmas Jobs and Sorrows.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO HALL.—Love's Endurance.
NIBLO'S GARDEN THEATRE.—Peep o' Day.
MASONIC HALL.—Tom Thumb Troupe. Matinée.
ASSOCIATION HALL.—Lecture.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum.....2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum.....1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,258 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day, in this region, increasing north-east winds, cloudy weather, with light rain or snow, followed by cooler westerly winds, and possibly by rising barometer.

It is announced to be the intention of Mr. Sherman to devote his energies, which are in a measure released by the successful attainment of redemption, to the funding of the remaining 6 per cent. bonds. The work is a very important one, and the time is exceedingly favorable, probably more so than it will be in a year from now. The credit of the Government is vastly strengthened by the way in which the Redemption law has been carried out, and in the present condition of the money market its 4 per cent. bonds furnish as desirable an investment as it is possible for the holders of called bonds to obtain. The influences which may at some future period reduce the currency of the country to the silver standard are for the present firmly held in check, and so long as they are so the opportunity for refunding the 6 per cents is an extremely good one.

Gen. Sheridan, it must be admitted, does not shine in controversy. His "supplementary report," made in answer to Secretary Schurz's demand that he should substantiate his charges against the Indian Bureau management, is a rambling and inconclusive document. In his original report, Gen. Sheridan said that the Indian border troubles were due to a want of sufficient appropriations, or to "the wretched mismanagement" of the Indian Department. As he subsequently added that "the amounts appropriated by Congress ought to be sufficient," it necessarily followed that the General meant to charge that "wretched mismanagement" was the real cause of the difficulties. And the General cannot escape the imputation of having been indiscreet and reckless in his charges by now claiming that these sweeping remarks were intended only for the eye of his superior officer, Gen. Sherman. It is very doubtful if an officer in any department of the Government has any right to go out of his own sphere of duty to criticise the doings of another department of the Government. Even civilians have some rights which an eminent military man is bound to respect. And Gen. Sheridan, in his "supplementary report," does not seem to realize that he has made charges which he cannot, in the nature of things, make good.

The controversy between Gen. Sheridan and Secretary Schurz has developed considerable ill feeling on the part of the former officer, to say the least. The General is betrayed into using some phrases which remind one more of the manners of the camp than of the usages of polite debate. In one place he refers to the Secretary's saying, "disingenuously," that the General had made random charges; and in another place he refers to the Secretary's letters demanding proof as being inconsiderate. And finally, in a fit of petulance, he complains that he will not be "lectured by the honorable Secretary of the Interior." All of this is amusing reading, but the dispute is not only unseemly, but unnecessary. It is evident that Gen. Sheridan blundered in going out of his way to "pitch into" the Indian Bureau, and he now feels obliged to maintain his ground at any cost.

The report of commercial failures in New-York City for the year just closed shows 917 in number, with liabilities amounting to nearly $64,000,000, and assets estimated at about $19,000,000, or a trifle under an average of 30 per cent. This is, on its face, a bad showing. The number of failures is greater than in any previous year, the amount of liabilities is enormous, and the ratio of assets is disgracefully small—so small, in fact, that it involves a very considerable element of downright rascality. But it must be remembered that the past year witnessed the expiration of the Bankrupt law, and that the number of failures, as well as the amount of reported losses, was very greatly increased by the clearing away of rubbish in connection with that event. The field is now comparatively free, and it ought to be possible to show a very much better record for 1879. It remains true, however, that credit is still too loosely granted, and that it is frequently made, instead of a wholesome aid, a temptation to dealers in extending their business. With our currency on a solid basis, we should learn to give an equally solid one to credit, to the mutual advantage of lender and borrower, seller and buyer.

Disastrous floods in England and Scotland are increasing the distress which prevails among the poorer classes. Large districts are inundated, and, as usual, those who can least afford to sustain loss are the sufferers. The working people in various parts of England take the proposed reduction in wages with great reluctance. The singular spectacle is presented of men quitting work, in a time of scarcity and depression, rather than accept reduced wages. In many cases these workmen belong to trades-unions, and their reliance is upon the treasury of their association. There is certainly something wrong in a condition of industrial affairs in which a portion of the working men, voluntarily idle, are maintained in their idleness, while thousands of unemployed laborers vainly beg for work and bread.

MOVEMENTS OF INDUSTRY AND CAPITAL.

Englishmen are not in the habit of speaking despondingly of the future of their country. As a people, they have an abiding faith in its vitality, and in their own capacity for surmounting whatever difficulties may arise. Lord Carnarvon accompanies his protest against the tendency toward imperialism with the declaration that "there is no duty which our country need ever decline; there is no burden, however great, which it ever need be afraid to bear." Of late, however, exceptions to this hopeful rule have multiplied. And they embrace thoughtful men, whose misgivings are rooted deeper than financial disaster, or the accidental causes of a competition which is to some extent misunderstood. Mr. Bright is probably the last man who would admit that any connection exists between passing disasters and the policy of free trade; he is prompted as strongly by his instincts as by his prepossessions to look confidently behind the dark cloud which envelops the fortunes of vast industries. Yet even he gave utterance, more than a year ago, to the belief that England is losing some forms of its commercial supremacy. More recently Mr. Gladstone has vaguely expressed the same apprehension. He admits that in the long industrial race England will be outstripped by the United States.

More suggestive than either of these expressions of opinion is the line of thought pursued by writers of repute who, starting from the liberal point of view, have undertaken to discuss the industrial problem in the light derived from the prevailing depression and the attendant conflict between labor and capital. The depression is not, in their judgment, the transient evil which superficial observers suppose it to be. In a large degree it is the result of a series of causes involving a permanent change in the relation of English producers to the foreign world. Following this process of reasoning, the wages-struggle is an indication of difficulties so deep-seated that mere reductions will not remove them. Employers proceed on the asumption that England's competing power is impaired by comparative dearness of production, the remedy for which is lower wages. Mr. John Morley, addressing the representatives of the Trades-Unions, urges that the remedy is inadequate. Manufacturing industry, he argues, has been unduly developed. Markets are glutted. To go on producing, even at lower cost, will simply be to prolong the glut. Diminished production, therefore, is the remedy he prescribes. To the working men the prescription cannot be encouraging. Shorter hours of labor imply less pay, and the class concerned must either submit to deeper poverty or devise methods of transferring themselves to more fortunately situated fields of labor.

In the current number of the Fortnightly Review Mr. L. H. Courtney pushes the argument further. Discussing "the migration of centres of industrial energy," he finds in the past the best means of elucidating the possibilities of the future. Industries, he sees, decline permanently when the conditions favorable to their prosecution disappear. Within the memory of the present generation Cornwall was renowned for the production of copper and tin. Now, copper-mining has almost disappeared and tin-mining declines so steadily that the same result approaches. Why? Not because the Cornish supplies of copper and tin are exhausted, but because the cost of production has so increased, that supplies can be obtained more cheaply elsewhere. The gradual abandonment of these industries in Cornwall has led to the emigration of its mining population. More slowly, perhaps, but quite as surely, the same causes are operating in the iron and steel manufacture, and the mining of coal. Mr. Hussey Vivian, during his brief visit to the United States, saw enough to convince him that his own country can never again send iron or steel hither; and in our gigantic coal-fields he recognizes the basis of future manufacturing greatness. England's coal-fields are far from exhausted, but the conditions of working them yearly grow more costly. When the coal becomes dear England's manufacturing supremacy will be at an end. The evil as Mr. Courtney presents it is, that while the consumption of coal increases geometrically, the stores of force which coal supplies are expended in an excessive production of other commodities to keep pace with a limitless competition. The competition cannot be kept up, and when the need of force is greatest coal production will be dearest. Prof. Jevons contends "that many among the present generation may live to feel the pressure of the gradually increasing difficulty of obtaining coal force." Mr. Courtney insists "that the dangerous expansion of national industry should be kept under." He would even repress by arbitrary measures the consumption of coal as a means of keeping the development of England's industrial organization within narrower limits.

All this points to important changes in the geographical relations of manufacturing industry. If the argument of Messrs. Morley and Courtney is sound, the strait of English manufacturing capital is as serious as the strait of labor. Reduction of wages cannot bring lasting relief to employers who are confronted with comparatively unfavorable conditions of production; nor can strikes, even though successful, avert the deterioration in the value of labor which is inseparable from a diminished demand for its products. The experience of Cornwall will be shared by other of England's industries. Capital will seek other fields, —and nowhere are they so accessible as in the United States. The ordeal in store for labor is a terrible one,—all the more terrible because labor cannot at will follow the example of the emigrating Cornishmen, if it were disposed to do so. The proposal of the workers in the iron trades to expend an accumulated quarter of a million of dollars in a bootless struggle against diminished wages shows how imperfectly the English working men realize their precarious position or the more profitable use to which their fund might be applied. It is a question only of time. The coming immigration will differ from its predecessors. Capital will migrate more freely than labor.

These contingencies involve probable changes in some of the industrial centres of the United States. We are familiar with the effect of the migration of industrial energy as applied to the production of wheat. A generation ago, the Genesee Valley was the great wheat centre. To-day the centre is the Red River Valley of Minnesota and Dakota. The expansion of manufacturing enterprise has been quite as marked, though less precise in relation to the older centres of industry. The West, which was altogether agricultural, is strong in the diversity of its manufactures. It will be the fault of the Southern people if their region fail to attract the migrating forces which the restoration of confidence will set in motion here, and which seem likely, at no distant day, to prove still stronger on the other side of the Atlantic.

SOUTHERN NEGROES ORGANIZING.

Too many triumphs, victories to which they were not entitled, have not tended to strengthen the position of the Democrats in Louisiana. On the contrary, the outrageous frauds which were perpetrated by the leaders of the regular organizations—frauds which in New-Orleans at least seem to have been directed quite as much against the so-called independent Democrats as against the Republicans—appear at last to have aroused the fair-minded people of the State to some sense of the tyranny and injustice of the little clique of demagogues who seek to control the destinies of the commonwealth. This feeling, and there is reason to believe that it is a growing one, has certainly led to the recent exposure of Democratic frauds practiced in the city election and to the establishment of a number of independent and influential white organizations, with the publicly avowed object of guarding the ballot-box against the corrupt practices of those who control the dominant party.

While these better elements are gradually breaking away from the Democracy, however, there are many indications that the colored people, who, of course, form the great bulk of the Republican Party in Louisiana, are daily becoming more firmly united, more alive to the responsibilities of citizenship and the rights which belong to freemen. An evidence of this is to be found in the recent organization of the Young Men's Progressive Association of Louisiana, a union of influential young colored men who have come together for the purpose of exposing outrages which may be committed upon men of their race for political effect, and to secure as far as may be, fair elections and honest counts. In a moderate, but none the less effective, address to the country, which has just been issued by the association, it is shown that the conciliatory policy which was adopted by President Hayes toward the South has not diminished the number of crimes committed by the White League for political purposes, but, on the contrary, by supporting the belief among lawless men that the National Government has neither the power nor the will to punish their transgressions, has made it more dangerous than ever for a Republican to openly express his opinions, or to exercise the rights which are popularly supposed to be guaranteed to him by the national Constitution. To remedy these evils, and others of a like character, it is well suggested by the address that the Federal office-holders in the South, but particularly in Louisiana—officers who are charged with the enforcement of the laws—be held to a strict accountability for all their official acts, and be made responsible for a plain and fearless enforcement of all the laws and constitutional enactments which have been passed for the protection of colored voters. There can be no doubt that the carrying out of this suggestion by the National Government would be productive of many good results. As they are at present administered in many parts of the South, notably in South Carolina, the United States laws afford absolutely no protection to the black men and have no terrors for the White League. With such men as District Attorney Northrup acting the part of prosecutors, the Democratic wild riders, who break up Republican meetings, beat and kill Republican voters, and stuff ballot-boxes, can with impunity snap their fingers in the face of justice and defy the power of the Government.

In this connection it is well pointed out by the address to which we refer that crimes against citizens of the United States can be checked in the South as well as in the North, if the laws are enforced with the same energy and diligence. For these reasons the association, representing, as it does, some of the best elements in the Republican Party of Louisiana, strongly protests against any scheme looking toward a disfranchisement of the colored voter. It is argued, with no little force, that the right of suffrage was conferred upon the freedmen as the result of a great achievement; and that it should be as sacredly preserved to them as it is sacredly pledged in the Constitution, there can be no doubt. It may be questionable whether it was wise in the beginning to call nearly a million of ignorant men, who had lived a life of chattel slavery, to take part in the councils of the Republic, but there can be no doubt that every effort to deprive them of rights thus guaranteed should be firmly resisted. The negroes of the South have learned with a rapidity which, considering their opportunity, is little short of marvelous. To-day they are no longer the half-civilized beings they were when the war broke out. The knowledge that they are citizens and have a right to share in the administration of the Government has elevated and enlarged their minds as nothing else could have done, until now, in many parts of the South, notably in the large cities and towns, they are quite as well-informed in all matters which concern the State as are their white neighbors. What they have long needed is intelligent organization, an organization controlled, not by designing leaders for their own selfish ends, but by men who have the real interests of their race at heart and the power and courage to thoroughly expose the wrongs committed by the shot-gun Democracy. There is reason to believe that the Young Men's Progressive Association will in some degree supply this want. The beginning is certainly a good one, and should lead to the most satisfactory results.

THE FRENCH SENATE.

The Senatorial elections which occur in France next Sunday constitute an event of extraordinary moment to that Republic. Ever since the constitutional provisions of 1875 went into effect the final consolidation of the Government has been hindered by an upper chamber in which the majority, though composed of discordant monarchical elements, has been held together by a common hostility to the Republic. In sympathy with that majority was the chief executive officer of the nation, and together they could seriously embarrass the efforts of those who desired to settle the institutions of the country on a permanent basis of liberal principles. Perhaps this hindrance, so long as it could not amount to an absolute prevention of progress, was not altogether a disadvantage. In spite of it there has been a steady advance in the sentiment of the country and in the growing strength of the Republic, and it may have prevented action that would have proved hasty or ill-advised. When it came to a struggle between the opposing forces last year, beginning with the dismissal of the Simon Ministry on the 16th of May, and running through the dissolution of the Chambers and new elections, the result was a triumph for the Republicans, and since that time the monarchical elements have been in a state of almost hopeless quiescence. They are doubtless prepared to accept as inevitable the definitive establishment of the Republic, controlled by those who believe in it.

Although the bulk of the electors who are to name the new Senators were chosen on the 27th of October, nothing more definite is known of the result than that it is certain to give the Republicans the control of the upper chamber, and probably by a majority of 20 or 25. That this should be attained at the first triennial election after the Senatorial law went into effect is a cause of congratulation for the friends of the Republic, the more so as the complicated indirectness of the mode of choosing Senators was intended to prevent it, and to make that body a permanent barrier to a complete control of affairs by genuine Republicans. Of the 300 members composing this chamber, 75 were to be chosen for life, in the first instance by the Chamber of Deputies, and afterward, as vacancies occurred, by the Senate itself. Here was a Conservative nucleus, which has been somewhat strengthened by the changes of three years. The other 225 members were to be elected by Departments for nine years, but so classified that one-third should go out every three years. The electors in each department were to be the Deputies who represented it in the lower chamber, the Council-General, or administrative body of the department, the Councilors of Arrondissements, and delegates chosen by the Municipal Councils of communes. Thus, the total number of Senatorial electors for the entire country was over 40,000, of whom more than 35,000 were delegates of municipalities. Those who take part in the election of next Sunday consist of 173 Deputies, 877 General Councilors, 1,175 Arrondissement Councilors, and 12,186 Municipal Delegates. They meet in the chief town of their several departments to make their choice. The last elections of Councils-General and Councils of Arrondissements was largely influenced by a consideration of their functions as Senatorial electors, and these elections, as well as the choice of Municipal Delegates on the 27th of October, have indicated a steady advance toward a full Republican supremacy. The device of 1875 has given way before the power of public opinion. The unmistakable will of the people has made itself felt through all the complicated machinery of the Senatorial election, and next Sunday's work will place the French Republic in the hands of French Republicans.

But it must be admitted that they have been favored by fortune in this matter. The classification of Senators at the beginning of 1876 was determined by lot. The departments, taken alphabetically, were divided into three categories, entitled to an equal number of Senators, and the lot decided that those from G to P should have the short term. It is, therefore, in those alone that the elections are now to take place. It so happens that their present representation in the Senate is strongly Conservative, and that the chance of gain was considerably greater than it would have been in either of the other sections. These 29 departments, running alphabetically from Haute-Garonne to Oise inclusive, have now only 19 Republican Senators to 38 Conservatives, 14 of the latter being Bonapartists. There are also seven vacancies among the departmental Senators to be filled at the general election next Sunday. As it is expected that the present Conservative majority of about 20 will be changed to one equally large on the other side, it is plain that a decided change has taken place in the sentiment of the people of these departments in the last three years, but what is made still more certain is that they have gained control of their local administrations, so that the choice of Senators becomes at last a choice by the people.

Of the consequences of the change which will come into effect at the new session of the Chambers on the 14th of the present month little need be said, as their general character must be obvious. Since the failure of MacMahon and his reactionary friends to carry things their own way last year, there has been a grumbling acquiescence in an Administration undoubtedly faithful to the Constitution and its principles. There is no ground for anticipating any radical change in the character of the Cabinet, though its personnel is very likely to be modified. But it will have a firmer support, and, with the power more fully in Republican hands, responsibility will rest more completely on the Republican Party. As the President has no power to dissolve the Deputies without the consent of the Senate, there is likely to be a harmonious working of the different departments of the Government, Marshal MacMahon consenting to act as a mere official figurehead. The changes of political significance which are likely to precede the year 1880, when the Constitution will become subject to revision and the Septennate will expire, will mainly affect the magistracy and the military service, which are filled with monarchical sympathizers who have taken little pains to conceal their contempt of the Republic. There can be little doubt that something will be done to bring the administrations of these departments of the service into fuller harmony with the Government and strict subserviency to the established institutions. That accomplished, there is good reason to believe that the year 1880 will witness the definitive establishment of the French Republic on a basis that will bid fair to be permanent, in spite of the ominous vaticinations of its enemies.

THE AGE OF BRIC-A-BRAC.

Books and pictures as holiday gifts have this year given place to bric-à-brac. Usually, when a purchaser in search of a suitable present for young or old, was at loss in the matter of selection of the fittest, a book was finally bought, almost in despair. There is such an infinite variety of books, as of tastes and degrees of education, that that person is indeed an anomaly who does not find pleasure in a book. The range is without limit, from Josh Billings to Goethe, and from Eli Perkins to George Eliot. And they who do not care to read will find pleasure in illustrations and gay bindings. The bookstores this year have held their own, but the bric-à-brac shops have done a great business. The invasion of bric-à-brac is shown most strikingly in the designs of fancy goods. Elegance is not now so much sought for as oddity; and it must be confessed that much of the holiday display is inexpressibly ugly. It is the fashion. Even the detestable pug-dogs are "bred down," as the fanciers phrase it, so as to be as ugly as possible. The pugger the dog, the more "swell" he is. And one of these hapless beasts, compelled against his will to stand up and gaze from a carriage-window, when he wants to take his ease on the cushions, is a spectacle to move the pity of mankind.

It will be observed that we use the word "bric-à-brac" in a very liberal sense. The popular idea of bric-à-brac is "anything that is quaint and ugly." In this sense, pug dogs are certainly to be included in the general classification. And when an average person is at a loss to characterize an object which is artistically hideous, it is said to be quaint. Since the decorative art craze has turned our homes topsy-turvy, we are consoled for the banishment of our comforts by the quaintness of the bric-à-brac furniture which has replaced them. Drawing-rooms are curiosity shops, and there are none so poor and mean but he (or she) may furnish forth a room adorned with Japanese jugs on sawed wall-brackets, at the very least. This all-devouring passion for things unique and grotesque has filled the shops with models of hideousness. Caricatures in porcelain, biscuit, and terra-cotta crowd the shelves and windows. Vases are no longer made in graceful forms, but goblins, dragons, toads, and other monstrous shapes do duty as flower-holders and ornaments. Fancy runs riot among the products of the potter's wheel, and toy-makers seem to be laboring under the influence of some such nightmare as that which Fuseli was wont to invite when he began work on one of his horrible pictures.

The Japanese fever shows signs of abatement. Perhaps the Eastlake, Queen Anne, and renaissance disorders have driven it out. These three great troubles have revolutionized household art. Indeed, household art has revolutionized the household. What with painting and patching, glueing and morticing, our homes are wholly given over to the demon of unrest. Her ladyship receives her friends to-day in a bower of beauty made up of cabinet-maker's rubbish and Oriental pots and pans from the bazaars of Faraway Moses and his tribe. But, on the whole, Queen Anne and the rest of her period whelm the show from Japan and China. The pleased exporters of Canton and Yokohama must shortly feel a refluent tide. Already, it is said, the commoner articles of Chinese and Japanese manufacture can be bought more cheaply here than in the place of their origination. This is a pity, if it indicates that the demand for such goods is falling off. Nothing could be more thoroughly bric-à-brac in general effect, if ugliness is bric-à-brac, than the Japanese wares made for the American market. The cunning Asiatics gave us native designs corrupted by French trifling and English clumsiness. The result was a hybrid ugliness quite wonderful to behold.

While the fashion for decorative art, in its various phases, endures, we must expect that real art and literature will suffer. Books on household art sell readily when other books do not. And these works, costly as skill and ingenuity can make them, are for rich people only; and, we may add, the preachers of household art address themselves chiefly to those who find in this art, as they do in polo, a recreation and a pastime. Meantime, picture-buyers are few, and some men begin to think that they must give up their easels and hire themselves to the prosperous cabinet-makers. Young lovers improve on Claude Melnotte, and say, "We will read no books but those which tell of household art." Literature has no place in a society which dotes on old armor, rugs, curios, and the cast-off clothing of Egyptians, Turkomans, and Bengalese. A few years since, there was a similar craze for pictures. Many rich people bought in haste and repented at leisure. But home industry was encouraged, and, though many very bad pictures were produced, the effect was, on the whole, good for American art. If the bric-à-brac age, through which we are now passing, develops anything—even a taste for ethnology and history—it will be surprising. Thus far the outcome is chiefly costly rubbish.

At Christ Church, the oldest religious edifice in Boston, built in 1723, and next to the oldest public building in the city, New Year's night was observed with much of the old-time spirit. It has been the rule since 1744, when its chimes of bells, the first in America, cast in Gloucester, England, were put in the tower, from which Paul Revere hung the lanterns to warn the country of the march of the British troops to Concord and Lexington, to ring the bells every night for one week before and one week after Christmas, and on the last night of the year until midnight. These bells have done duty in this way for nearly a century and a half, and the old church, whose quaintness is rightly protected from the improving desires of profane hands, has such strong attractions for Bostonians, that it is always filled with devout people, who watch the old year out and exchange "happy New Year" in its venerable courts. There is something thrilling to one in crossing the threshold of a point in time in a structure upon which time itself has made an impression. The Bible and Prayer-book are the same which were used by the first Rector in 1733, and were presented by King George II. The first Sunday-school in America was gathered within these walls in 1815, and the chandeliers were taken from a French vessel by the Captain of an American privateer, and given to the church. These associations, which take one back to the colonial period, have given a special character to the New Year's midnight services held in this historical building.

The commercial hurricane which, suddenly though not altogether unexpectedly has swept down over Stockholm is playing fearful havoc in the business of the city. Many of the largest banking-houses have suspended, such as Asp, Berger & Co., Hoglund, Guillemot & Weylandt, &c. In one case, that of Asp, Berger & Co., great mismanagement and scandalous irregularities have taken place, but else the common cause of all these failures is the general depression of business all over the world, and the scarcity of foreign credit. The worst feature, however, of this crisis is the baneful influence it will exercise on the Swedish industry, between which and the foreign markets these houses acted as middle-men. Sweden has great natural resources in its forests, mines, powerful streams, &c., but it lacks capital, and its industry cannot be carried on without steady advances from other countries. Petre Brothers, probably the greatest iron manufacturers in the country, have already been compelled to stop working. But an industrial crisis means quite another thing in Sweden than in England or America, on account of the peculiar relation which exists there between the employer and the employes. A Swedish brugspatron, the owner of vast tracts of forest, of extensive mines, of numerous blast furnaces, rolling-mills, &c., lives among the men who work his forests, mines, mills, &c., pretty nearly as, in the Middle Ages, the lord of the castle lived among the villagers settled before the gate. He does not simply pay them the wages on which they subsist, but he builds their cottages, plants trees in their gardens, erects schools for their children, appoints and pays the minister, the physician, the apothecary, the preacher, &c., and, nearly in every kind of distress the working man looks to the brugspatron for relief. This relation, continued through centuries without any appreciable modification, has, of course, completely molded the character of the Swedish working man. He is industrious and cunning at his work, kind and joyous in his home, loyal and respectful to his employer, but beyond these three fields or spheres he is not only inexperienced, but ignorant. In an emergency he is entirely unable to shift for himself, and when his master fails, it seems to him that the whole and sole foundation for his own life has given way, and he can do nothing but abandon himself to vagabondage and rascality, or sit down with the Prayer-book in his hand and starve to death.

Just now the parks are alive with many thousands of skaters, both experts and novices, males and females, who are making the best of the stout frost which has fallen over all the land. This popular Winter exercise has a long history of its own, which, however, has not yet been written. According to the best recognized authority on the literature of the subject, blunt skates have been in use from time immemorial in Scandinavia, Denmark, England, and the whole north-west of Europe. Binding firmly to his feet pieces of polished wood, bone, or iron, two or three times the length of his foot, and shaped like a keelless eight-oared boat, the skater, keeping both feet on the ice, would propel himself along by the aid of a sort of alpenstock. When, and by whom, the keel, or cutting blade, was first introduced is matter now lost in the mists of antiquity. There has been a steady progress in skating, although the sturdy mynheers and equally sturdy vrouws of Holland still use the old-fashioned skate with a long, straight blade, a square heel, and in front a point rising high over the toes, and even sometimes curling back like the prow of a Burmese war canoe. It is astonishing how rapidly an experienced skater can make his way over good ice. For short distances, at the top of his speed, a good skater can, under favorable conditions, accomplish a mile in 2:20, and two miles in 4:47. For 20 miles the average ought to be about 16 miles an hour. Everything depends, however, as practiced skaters know, on the condition of the ice, the state of the wind, and the weight and height of the skater. In the meantime, if the ice lasts, we know of no reason why parents should not encourage their boys and girls to turn the frost to good purpose. Skating upon sound ice is, for the young, who fall lightly and with little risk of broken bones, a pastime as safe and free from all perils as dancing itself, and certainly more wholesome and invigorating. For those who are not afraid to face Winter weather there is no exercise more pleasant or graceful, nor is there a prettier sight than that of a young girl gliding easily, and almost without perceptible effort, over a clear stretch of ice. The rapid passage through the air quickens the pulse and sends the blood coursing rapidly through the veins, while the exertion is far less than that of waltzing, or even of walking at an ordinary pace. Of boys—well, it would be impossible to keep them off the ice, even if we wished to do so.

Is man a poisonous animal? It would seem so when he is very angry, and that he poisons those he bites, as other beasts often do. Every once in a while the press records a case of somebody dying from the bite of a man, and the cases appear to be well authenticated. The latest instance was in Washington, where Peter McNamara died from the bite of one Danaher, with whom he had had a fight two months before. The physicians discovered poison in his blood, and amputated the finger on which the brute had fastened his teeth. The poison had spread, however, to the arm, which would also have been removed had the sufferer been able, in the opinion of the surgeon, to endure it. Deaths of this sort demand investigation of the ablest physicians. If we can impart mortal poison by our bite, as dogs and other animals can, we ought to know it. Fortunately, it is not our habit to bite; but, if it were, we might be as dangerous as mad dogs. There has been a vast deal of discussion latterly on the subject of hydrophobia, some medical authorities maintaining that no such disease can be engendered by the canine species. Can hydrophobia or aught approaching it be communicated by the human species? We certainly need light on this point. If man is capable of rabies and of conveying it by a bite, it would appear to be a new argument in favor of evolution.

We have heard many, but few satisfactory, reasons given for the great increase in number, during the past half century, of those who lose their hair at an early age. Baldness in former times used to be looked upon, in common with wrinkles, failing eye-sight, and loss of teeth, as a mark of old age; but nowadays no one would think of judging of a man's years by the absence of hair from the top of his head. In a fanciful essay on the probable development of the human race, published a year or two ago, it was asserted that men of the future were to be hairless creatures, the writer doubtless arguing that human beings had already become partially denuded, when compared with their possibly less than human progenitors. However this may be, it furnishes no explanation for the sudden change that has taken place within the memory of many now living. If such a transformation in structure should occur, it would come as the result of centuries of slow development, and not in a single generation. Youthful baldness, as we see it among our acquaintances, must unquestionably be traced to a disregard to certain necessary conditions whereby the healthfulness of the hair and the scalp are maintained. It has been suggested that bodily cleanliness, which has become a paramount virtue with Americans of refined training, has much to do with the falling of the hair, and the idea is certainly worthy of consideration. There are tens of thousands of persons living in this City who would feel uncomfortably dirty all day if they were obliged to forego their morning bath, and hence the body is now with many subjected to a thorough washing at exceedingly short intervals. Without denying the many advantages to be derived from this treatment, it must be added that it puts the lubricating functions of the skin to a severe test, and one which in most instances they cannot maintain. The dislike to smear one's self over with oil after a bath is reasonable enough, but the failure to do so is none the less detrimental to the complete healthfulness of the skin. Deprived of a nourishment that is absolutely essential, the hair, it is claimed, is the first to suffer. This theory is certainly a plausible one, and closely tallies with what must have been the experience of a great many. It is not to be denied that in those countries where the Biblical custom is still retained of "anointing the head with oil," the men do not often lose their hair until they are nearly three score years old.

If any of our fish dealers are enterprising enough to go to the exhibition of fish which is to be held a year hence in Germany, they may be paid for their trouble by acquiring an insight into the method of preserving fish by means of salicylic acid. The great objection to the use of salt in curing fish is that it not only deprives them of certain highly-desirable virtues, but imparts to them qualities which to many palates are by no means attractive. There is not, for instance, the least resemblance between a fresh No. 1 mackerel and a fish of the same species that has been pickled, and hence, as far as taste is concerned, they might be classed as two utterly distinct articles of food. But by means of the process of curing referred to above, which has been used in Germany for more than a year, fish of all kinds can be preserved so as to retain nearly all of their original excellences. It is understood that the expense of preparing fish by the use of this acid is not much greater than the cost attendant on the older method, while the result is infinitely more satisfactory. But another improvement in the fish business which this discovery seems likely to produce is the saving which can by its means be effected in the cost of sending fresh fish to market. At present our fishing vessels go out laden with ice, in which what they catch is stored, but at no distant day this may be replaced by a far more economical outfit.

GENERAL NOTES.

Philadelphia lost $1,534,518 worth of property by fire last year, the number of fires being 739.

The Maine Democratic State Committee has organized by the choice of Edmund Dana, of Portland, as Chairman, and Charles Hersey, of Bangor, Secretary.

Ex-Gov. Hendricks says he has no intention of spending the Winter in Washington, and that he will probably remain only about a week in attendance upon cases in which he is engaged in the Supreme Court.

The Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald of Saturday remarks: "Ex-President Jefferson Davis arrived Thursday night by the steamer R. E. Lee, and will spend a few days with his relatives here. We are informed he is in excellent health."

An oil portrait of the late Hon. William H. Y. Hackett, presented by his family, is to be placed in the Senate Chamber in the Capitol of New-Hampshire. Mr. Hackett was several times a member of the Senate, and its presiding officer.

Some Western Republican papers of good standing, notably the Cincinnati Gazette and the Indianapolis Journal, are urging that the representation in the next National Convention be based upon the number of Republican votes cast in the several States rather than upon the Electoral vote of the State.

According to the Washington correspondent of a Michigan newspaper, a Democratic member of the Pennsylvania delegation said to a Michigan Congressman the other day: "If your folks act with discretion you will see lively times at the organization of the next House, for there are six Democrats to my certain knowledge who will, under no condition of circumstances, vote for Sam Randall for Speaker."

Bishop Bedell, of the Diocese of Ohio, explaining the ceremony of the parent or guardian "giving away the bride" in the marriage ceremony, said: "The father reverently presents his daughter, whom he has affectionately and carefully reared, to the Church, and the minister of the Church, by a certain interchange of hands, gives the woman to the man, who pledges his troth to the woman by the presentation of a ring."

The Texas Senators and Representatives in Congress have united in an appeal to the people of that State to contribute to the fund for the proposed statue of Robert E. Lee in Richmond, Va. It is recommended that they organize, in the several towns and counties, auxiliary Lee Monument Associations, and through them canvass every house in Texas, and especially that they have concerts, or some similar entertainment, on the 19th inst., the anniversary of Lee's birth.

The American Protestant has kindly completed its tickets for the election in 1880, and presents them gratuitously as follows: Republican—For President, U. S. Grant, of Illinois; Vice-President, Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana. Democratic—For President, Theodore Randolph, of New-Jersey; Vice-President, William Gaston, of Massachusetts. Greenback—For President, B. F. Butler, of Massachusetts; Vice-President, William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania. But there must be some mistake here. Ohio isn't provided for in any one of them.

In denial of certain malicious reports, Col. R. W. Johnson, who is one of the ten or a dozen Democratic candidates for the United States Senate in Arkansas, has printed a card in the Little Rock Gazette, in which he says: "In reply to the charge, I now state that in no case have I subsidized to my support, by money or promises of it, or by any other corrupt means, any one or more of the public press of Arkansas, nor have I attempted to bribe any individual in any manner, to get his support or assistance in this contest, and I brand the charge that I have done so as a falsehood. I make the denial broad and positive. If any one has any proofs let him produce them."

AMUSEMENTS.

GENERAL MENTION.

The programme of the Symphony Society of New-York, as modified in consequence of the inability of Herr Wilhelmj to appear, will be publicly rehearsed to-day at Steinway Hall. Miss Anna Drasdil and Mr. Franz Rummel are the soloists. The third concert of the society will take place on Saturday evening.

Preparations are being made for the first of the series of operas to be given by the excellent company which Mr. Strakosch has brought together. The opening work will be Verdi's fine spectacular opera "Aida," which is pretty certain to have a most effective representation. The cast will at all events include both Miss Kellogg and Miss Cary, our two most popular singers. The season will commence on Monday, Jan. 6, and on Tuesday evening "Lucia di Lammermoor" will be given with a strong cast. "Faust" is the opera for Wednesday, "Martha" will be presented on Thursday, and "Ballo in Maschera" on Friday. There will be also a grand matinée on Saturday. The sale of seats begins to-day at Booth's Theatre.

DEATH OF A VETERAN.

From the Schoharie Republican, Jan. 2.

Dr. Peter Crispell, father of Rev. Cornelius Crispell, formerly Pastor of the Reformed Church of this village, died at his home, at Hurley, Ulster County, Dec. 19, in the eighty-fifth year

DEATH'S NEW YEAR VICTIMS

HON. ROBERT W. MACKEY.

PENNSYLVANIA'S NOTED POLITICAL CHIEFTAIN GONE—HIS SHORT BUT SUCCESSFUL CAREER AS A CLERK, BANKER, STATE TREASURER, AND POLITICIAN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.—Hon. Robert W. Mackey, one of the most prominent leaders of the Republican Party, died here this morning after a protracted illness. His disease was pulmonary consumption. Mr. Mackey had been ill for a couple of years, and had been confined to the house at various times, but about six weeks ago his sickness became alarming. He took an active part in the campaign of November last, and through his intervention many differences which existed between the Republican local leaders were healed, and a number of legislative districts which were uncertain were made sure for the party whose acknowledged leader he was. A week after the sweeping victory for the Republican Party had been announced, Mr. Mackey retired to his house, and has been confined to his bed ever since. On Tuesday morning, about 5 o'clock, he began to fail, and it was thought he was dying. He called his sister to his bedside, and told her what disposition he wanted made of his estate, and then said: "I hope God will take me away now. No one knows how I'm suffering." From that time death claimed him. Mr. Mackey retained consciousness until 7 o'clock this morning, when he relapsed into a seemingly deep slumber, and at a few minutes before 10 o'clock the spirit left the body. Financial services will be held at his late residence, Sixteenth and Master streets, to-morrow at 1 o'clock. The body will then be removed to Pittsburg, where the final interment will take place on Friday or Saturday. It has not been definitely determined which.

Robert W. Mackey was born in Pittsburg, Dec. 22, 1837, and therefore was a few weeks past 41 years of age. His father was of Irish and his mother of English descent. He attended the public and private schools of Pittsburg, and completed his education in the Western University. He entered into active business as a clerk in a banking house in Pittsburg, where he remained for a considerable time, till he accepted a similar position in the Allegheny Bank of Pittsburg, in which he was promoted to Teller, subsequently was made Assistant Cashier, and then Cashier, which position he held till 1871, when he was chosen Vice-President. He was a good financier, and an adept in money matters, and being a trustworthy man, his rapid promotion followed as a matter of course. When almost a boy he took an active part in politics, and was a stanch Republican when before he was entitled to vote. He was elected to the City Councils of the "Iron City" as a representative from the Third Ward, and after serving in that position with credit he became ambitious of taking part in the politics of the State, and being on friendly terms with the Camerons, they brought him forward for political honors, and in 1869 secured his nomination as State Treasurer, and his election against John Irwin by the State Legislature before that office was filled by popular vote. The friends of Irwin felt sore over his defeat, and nourished their revenge against Mackey till the next year, 1870, when, after Mackey had received the Republican caucus nomination by a vote of 52 to 10, and was almost confident of re-election, he was defeated by a coalition of dissatisfied Republicans with the Democrats, and Irwin was elected for the succeeding year. Mackey was re-elected again in 1872 for another year, and a clause in the Constitution making the office an elective one, by the people, instead of the Legislature, as formerly, rendered an election in January, 1873, unnecessary, and an act was passed by the Legislature extending his term until May, 1874, or until a successor was elected and qualified. He received the Republican nomination in 1873 for the same office, and was elected, in October of that year, for two years, from May, 1874, and was succeeded by Hon. Henry Rawle. The State Treasurership in 1873 was made an elective office, and the vote that year stood Mackey, (Rep.,) 244,668, Hutchinson, (Dem.,) 219,435.

Mr. Mackey had resided in Pittsburg up to this time, when he changed his place of residence to Philadelphia. He was a single man, of delicate frame, and a predisposition to consumption. His vitality was great, and as a party leader, in which position he made his great reputation, he was shrewd, calculating, and uniformly successful. His personal power was great, and to secure the favor of Mackey was a boon which all aspiring politicians longed for. He was a Director of the People's Bank and President of the Citizens' Passenger Street Railway. The death of Mr. Mackey will prove a heavy blow to the Republican Party of the State.

EX-JUDGE CHARLES T. SHERMAN.

THE ELDEST BROTHER OF GENERAL AND SECRETARY SHERMAN DIES AT CLEVELAND.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 1.—Ex-Judge Charles T. Sherman died at 1 o'clock this morning at his residence, in Prospect-street, Cleveland, of rheumatism of the heart. He has been in very poor health for several months, but was better during the last few weeks, and his death was thus very sudden. He complained of feeling very sick at midnight and at 1 o'clock was dead.

He was born in Norwalk, Conn., on Feb. 3, 1811. He was a son of Charles R. Sherman, and the oldest of 11 children. He went with his father to Lancaster, Ohio, when only 3 years old. His father was a prominent lawyer, and became one of the Supreme Judges of the State. Charles was graduated at the Ohio University in 1832. He studied law with Henry Stoddard, of Dayton, Ohio, and, in 1832, went to Mansfield, Ohio, and began practice. He practiced law in Mansfield up to the time his brother John went to Congress. In 1862 he was appointed by Gov. Tod as Colonel of Militia. Near the close of the war he was appointed by Lincoln one of the Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad. In the Spring of 1867 he was appointed Judge of the United States District Court at Cleveland, which office he held for two years, or until 1873, when he resigned on account of certain irregularities which came to light in regard to matters outside of the office tainting his reputation. He has lived constantly in Cleveland since that time. He leaves five children, William T., Senator Sherman, Senator Cameron, Mrs. Colgate Hoyt, Henry S. Sherman, of Cleveland, and John Sherman, Jr., United States Marshal of New-Mexico. The funeral will be held on Saturday, at which time Gen. W. T. Sherman and wife, Secretary John Sherman and wife, Senator Cameron and wife, Gen. Miles and wife, and many other prominent persons are expected to be present. Judge Wiley, who became well, said of him last night: "He was a Judge of considerable ability, a man of genial manners, kind and considerate, and generally liked by the Bar throughout his district."

PRINCESS MARY OF LICHTENSTEIN.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Princess Mary of Lichtenstein, formerly Miss Fox, the adopted daughter of the last Lord Holland, and the author of Holland House, died recently in Styria.

REV. SAMUEL C. AIKEN.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 1.—Rev. Samuel C. Aiken, D. D., for 30 years Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, died at his residence this morning, aged 88 years.

CHARLES COURTER.

COBLESKILL, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Charles Courter died this afternoon. The funeral will take place at 1 o'clock on Saturday in Cobleskill.

CONVICT LABORERS ESCAPING.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 1.—Information was received here this evening of the escape of 10 convicts who were at work on the James River and Kanawha Canal, near Lexington, Va. The prisoners, who were all white men, broke out of the stockade in which they were confined last night. They were fired upon by the guard, but none were so seriously hurt as to result in their capture.

DETAILED AS ACTING ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Gov. Robinson, owing to the absence of Adjt.-Gen. Townsend, has detailed Brig.-Gen. John B. Woodward, Inspector-General, as Acting Adjutant-General. Gen. Townsend, owing to ill-health, has been granted a two months' leave of absence.

GLOUCESTER FISHERMEN'S LUCK.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Jan. 1.—About 13,000,000 pounds of codfish and 11,000,000 pounds of halibut from the Banks, and 23,000,000 pounds of codfish from George's were landed at this port during the year just closed.

ONE OF GEN. GRANT'S COMPANIONS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 1.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy A. E. Borie will sail from here to-morrow in the steam-ship Illinois for Liverpool to accompany ex-President Grant on his trip around the world. He expects to join Gen. Grant in Paris.

ON THE SOUDER'S RAFT.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Crosby, now at Newport, has information from Kingston, Ga., that her son, Rutgers Crosby, was with the Captain on the raft that put off from the steamer Emily B. Souder.

FATAL EXPLOSION OF THREE BOILERS.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 1.—An explosion of three boilers occurred at 3:30 P. M. to-day at the distillery of Hulman & Fairbanks. William Day, colored, fireman, and Frank Hughes, a boy aged 14 years, were instantly killed. The damage is about $5,000. The three boilers were torn to fragments. A piece of one was thrown across the Wabash River. The ruins of the distillery caught fire, which, however, was soon subdued. The exploded boilers were new ones. Three other batteries of three boilers each remained uninjured. The cause of the explosion is not known. A Coroner's inquest on the bodies of Day and Hughes will be held to-morrow.

FIGHTING FOR EASTERN TRAFFIC.

THE BOSTON, HOOSAC TUNNEL AND WESTERN RAILROAD NOT DAUNTED BY AN ADVERSE DECISION—ITS PLANS FOR THE FUTURE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Gen. Burt, President of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Railroad, is in this city. He says that an appeal will be taken from the decision rendered yesterday against his road and in favor of the Troy and Boston Road. Security will be given, pending the final decision, and trains will be run in the meantime.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The announcement of the decision of Judge Osborne, of Troy, against the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Railroad and in favor of the Troy and Boston Road, on the question of the rights to a portion of the old road-bed of the Albany and Northern, created some commotion in railroad and business circles here to-day. The managers of the Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western, which connects the tunnel with Schenectady and the Erie Road, claim that the decision does not compel a withdrawal on their part from the disputed road-bed. The case was to question the title of the Troy and Boston. The Troy and Boston entered into an agreement some years ago with the Albany and Northern Road to lease its neglected road-bed, which runs from Schenectady to Eagle Bridge, a distance of 17 miles. Seven miles of this is the portion in dispute, between Hart's Falls and Eagle Bridge. The Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Road, wanting this, has paid damages to land-owners by private negotiations, and as awarded by Commissioners, anticipating the decision just rendered. The Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western managers have rushed ahead with their work, and the trains, since Monday, have been running between Mechanicsville and Eagle Bridge, a distance of 20 miles. The seven miles of disputed road-bed are being used to-day by them, and they declare that they cannot be compelled to vacate their possession when they have paid land damages and are prepared to pay further damages or furnish bonds.

Further work is being pushed with rapidity. The Boston, Hoosac Tunnel and Western Road is building 1,000 freight-cars for the service alone of Boston freights, and two powerful consolidated engines, besides several smaller cylinder locomotives, to be ready for delivery next month. The larger engines will haul 1,000 tons of freight 15 miles an hour over the road, at an estimated cost of 1½ mills per ton per mile.

MR. POTTER LEAVES NEW-ORLEANS.

SECRETARY SHERMAN DECLINES TO OFFER FURTHER TESTIMONY, AND THE SUB-COMMITTEE ADJOURNS TO MEET IN WASHINGTON.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—At to-day's session of the Potter Committee John Ray, counsel for Secretary Sherman, filed a communication setting forth that he had no intention of offering further evidence on the subject of intimidation in the elections of 1876.

Ex-Gov. Michael Hahn corroborated the statement of ex-Secretary of State Desloude, to the effect that blank commissions of appointment for Supervisors of Registration and clerks had been furnished to George L. Smith for use in the Fourth Congressional District. Hahn, at the time, was State Registrar of Voters. This witness testified that while Superintendent of the Mint here he appointed Thomas D. Jenks to a position. The only recommendation Jenks had was a verbal one, and he was reluctantly declined to make down the name of the gentleman who made the recommendation.

Chairman Potter announced that, inasmuch as several witnesses wanted by the committee were in Washington, the committee would adjourn to meet in that city next Tuesday. In the meantime John Ray, representing Mr. Sherman, would remain in New-Orleans and take whatever testimony might be offered in the matter of the evidence already taken by the committee. The committee then adjourned. Mr. Potter says that Col. F. C. Zacharie will probably be appointed to act with Mr. Ray in taking testimony after the departure of the committee.

After the committee had adjourned Mr. Potter remarked in conversation that the object of this visit of the committee to New-Orleans was to give Secretary Sherman an opportunity of producing any further evidence in support of his charges of intimidation in the elections of 1876, and inasmuch as Mr. Ray, counsel for Mr. Sherman, had communicated to the committee that he had no further evidence to offer on that subject, the object of the committee was accomplished. The members of the committee left for Washington this afternoon.

HALF A MILLION IN COTTON BURNED

DESTRUCTION OF A WAREHOUSE AND PRESSES IN CHARLESTON, S. C. — THE LOSSES NEARLY COVERED BY INSURANCE.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 1.—The large cotton-press and warehouses of the Union Cotton-Press Company were destroyed by fire at 3 o'clock this morning, with 10,121 bales of cotton. The property comprised four cotton-presses, with a capacity of pressing about 2,500 bales of cotton a day, and storage room for over 10,000 bales. Only two of the presses were running. The buildings and presses were valued at about $100,000; insured for $60,000, as follows: New-York companies, $12,000; San Francisco, $2,000; Hartford, $3,000; Franklin and Philadelphia, $4,000; foreign companies, $27,000; Charleston, $12,000.

The loss on cotton is estimated at $475,000. On this there is an insurance to the amount of $472,250. The losses are: Knoop, Hanemann & Co., 3,305 bales, insured for $155,000; J. H. Hale & Co., 5,888 bales, insured for $267,000; Street Brothers, 839 bales, insured for $46,500; A. M. Pollitzer, 33 bales, insured for $3,500; Peizer, Rodgers & Co., six bales, insured for $250. Several frame dwelling-houses near the warehouse were damaged to an extent aggregating about $5,000, most of which is covered by the insurance. The fire was the work of an incendiary. A man was hailed by the watchman a few moments before the fire was discovered running from the place where the fire started. The watchman, Gibbon's him, but he escaped.

OTHER LOSSES BY FIRE.

A large flowering mill at Rockdale, two miles west of Dubuque, Iowa, was burned to the ground early yesterday morning. As no other cause can be ascribed for its origin, it is believed that the fire originated from flour-gas in the patent flour apartment. There was a large quantity of grain and flour in the mill, all of which was destroyed. The mill was valued at $25,000, and was insured for $17,000.

A fire at Tuscarora, Nev., Tuesday night, destroyed nearly a block of buildings in Main-street, including the Young American Hotel-ing-World. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

The Minnesota Hotel and eight smaller buildings were burned at Portland, Oregon, Tuesday night. The loss is $20,000.

THE YIELD OF GOLD AND SILVER.

THE TOTAL PRODUCT FOR LAST YEAR OVER $17,000,000 LESS THAN THAT OF 1877.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1.—Wells, Fargo & Co.'s annual statement of the precious metals produced in the States and Territories west of the Missouri River, including British Columbia, and the receipts in San Francisco from the west coast of Mexico during 1878, shows the aggregate products to be as follows: Gold, $36,956,231; silver, $38,746,391; lead, $3,452,000; the total being less by $17,267,132 than for 1877. California shows an increase in gold of $2,068,000, but a decrease in silver, &c., of $1,323,000. Nevada shows a total falling off of $16,398,341, the yield from the Comstock being only $21,295,043, as against $37,911,710 for 1877. Montana shows a marked increase, all in silver. Utah shows a falling off of over $2,000,000, but nearly $1,000,000 of it is caused by reduced valuation of silver and lead bullion. Although Colorado shows $1,680,802 less than for 1877, the yield has been really greater, as the reports for 1877 duplicated the product of certain places, but the duplication was not discovered soon enough to be corrected in the statement for that year. The production by States and Territories is as follows:

California	$18,920,451	New-Mexico	$455,813
Nevada	35,181,949	Arizona	2,287,983
Oregon	1,213,726	Dakota	2,216,804
Washington	73,311	Mexico, (west coast)	1,594,995
Idaho	1,864,123
Montana	2,763,640	British Columbia	1,283,460
Utah	6,064,613
Colorado	6,293,747

The bullion from Comstock Lode contained 45 per cent. of gold and 55 per cent. of silver. Of the so-called base bullion from Nevada 30 per cent. was gold. Of the whole product of the State 35 per cent. was gold.

SHOT, ROBBED, AND NEARLY DROWNED.

EASTON, Penn., Jan. 1.—Christopher Dittler, a citizen of this place, was shot through the left lung at 2 A. M. to-day by an unknown man, and robbed of $100. He was then thrown down an embankment into the Bushkill Creek. He is now in a critical condition.

SHERIDAN AND SCHURZ.

FACTS IN REGARD TO INDIAN MANAGEMENT.

SECRETARY SCHURZ'S RIGHT TO DEMAND EXPLANATIONS DENIED — THE DATA ON WHICH SHERIDAN'S CHARGES WERE MADE IN THE INDIAN BUREAU.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The following is the supplemental report to the annual report of Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan for 1878, with reference to Indian affairs, and in response to the request of Secretary Schurs that specifications be furnished in support of the statements made by Gen. Sheridan in his annual report:

HEAD-QUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI, CHICAGO, Dec. 22, 1878.

To Gen. W. T. Sherman, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: In consequence of a law-suit in the United States Circuit Court in the City of New-York, I was compelled to go to that City shortly after the receipt of a communication from the honorable Secretary of the Interior, of Nov. 16, 1878, indorsed by you Nov. 20, and forwarded to me. In this communication the Secretary took exception to certain conclusions arrived at and stated in my annual report of this year, as follows:

"The Indian situation at the present time is, I am sorry to say, unsatisfactory. The Indian Department, owing to want of sufficient appropriations or from wretched mismanagement, has given to the settlements in the Western country constant anxiety during the last year, and in some places loss of life and loss of property, attended with dreadful crimes and cruelties. There has been an insufficiency of food at the agencies, and in the case of Little Powder-River hunger has made the Indians, in some cases, desperate, and almost any race of men will fight rather than starve. It seems to me, with wise management, that the amounts appropriated by the Northern Department would be sufficient, if practically applied to the exact purposes specified, and if the supplies are regularly delivered; but the reports of the department commanders, forwarded herewith, would indicate a different result, except in the case of the Red Cloud and Spotted Tail bands of Sioux, who, although threatening in their conduct, have been the best supplied, and have been humored until their increasing insolence constantly threatens to bring about a breach of the peace."

As this report was made for the information of the General of the Army and the honorable Secretary of War, I do not feel it incumbent on me to answer any questions in reference to it, unless there should be some doubt on the part of the General of the Army or the honorable Secretary of War as to the correctness of any statements or conclusions therein. If such doubt exists, it has not been made known to me. But as the General of the Army has forwarded to me the communication of the honorable Secretary of the Interior, with his own indorsement and that of the honorable Secretary of War, and as I presume further action on my part may be desired, I have to say that I am ready to it by a supplemental report, in which I hope to fully sustain the conclusions arrived at in the report first named.

As this supplemental report is from data in my possession at the time the annual report was rendered, and on which the report was based, and as those facts have been forwarded to the honorable Secretary of War from time to time, I ask only to be furnished with the Interior Department copies of all papers relating to Indian affairs, in which he sees what action the Secretary of the Interior has taken for the disagreeable allusion made in his second letter of Nov. 29, 1878, namely:

"You will, therefore, oblige me by calling once more upon Gen. Sheridan for detailed specifications to the sweeping charges made in his official report that at all the agencies in the Military Division of the Missouri, except the Red Cloud and Spotted Tail Sioux Agencies, the appropriations made by Congress for the support of the Indians, which, in Gen. Sheridan's opinion were sufficient, had been, during the last year, either not applied at all or partly diverted from their purpose. If Gen. Sheridan has such knowledge it is very much to be regretted that he did not produce it before, so that the information given could have been acted upon. I make this demand in good faith, and in the interest of the service. In order that abuses which have not yet been corrected may be corrected promptly, I hope Gen. Sheridan will make his revelations without delay—which he must be able to do, for it cannot be assumed that he would subscribe to the necessity, after having pronounced the verdict first, to look for the evidence afterward."

The object I had in view in my annual report was to show that Indian wars came from two causes, (see report,) but that while the first war could not be avoided by the Government, the second was clearly within its control and resulted from the bad management of Indian affairs. I made no charges against the honorable Secretary of the Interior, nor any charges against any one. I desired simply to call the attention of my superior officers to the causes that produced discontent and outbreaks, and that from the inadequacy of our military force, resulted in the massacre of officers, soldiers, and citizens, and the horrible and unmentionable barbarities perpetrated on women and children, and to state my belief that these disasters might have been avoided by better organization, a more complete system, and more integrity in the agents and employes. The Secretary of the Interior saw fit to take this up, and by disingenuously saying that I had made charges as to corruption at every agency in the limits of this military division, challenges me for facts, to prove a charge he has himself put into my mouth. His inferences are warranted by the language of the report, but I respectfully did not, and say, I respectfully submit the data accompanying this supplemental report. The question of justice and right to the Indian is past, and cannot be recalled. We have occupied his country, taken away from him his hunting domain, destroyed his means of game, penned him up on reservations, and reduced him to poverty. For humanity's sake, then, let us give him enough to eat and integrity in the agents over him.

To show how inconsiderate the honorable Secretary of the Interior was in his first and second letters, of Nov. 16 and Nov. 29, respectively, it is only necessary for me to call attention to the reports of the Secretary of the Interior to the fact that since 1874 I have carefully retained copies of Indian reports coming to my office, the briefs of which are herewith inclosed, and it was on this information that my report was made. Surely, the honorable Secretary of the Interior cannot impute untruthfulness to the officers making these reports. They were on the ground, generally as official inspectors for the Indian Bureau, or in some official capacity, and are among the best in the service, most of them personally known to the General of the Army, and many of them to the country. My object is to call attention to, and if possible prevent, the calamities occurring to frontier settlers, officers, and men of the Army, and to reduce the unnecessary expenses brought upon us. The report of Lieut. Lee, on the contract expedition of Indian management at the Spotted Tail Agency, was obtained since the date of my annual report, but the facts as related were well known to me; the officer ceased to be related to some extent in the detection of the McCann fraud. This report was submitted first, for the reason that it gives a fair and comprehensive idea of Indian management, and I had the same information in explanation of what has occurred at many of the other agencies, and which produced the hunger and discontent described in the accompanying briefs. In this connection, I also call attention to the briefs of correspondence from Lieut. Dougherty, relative to the attempt to force upon him, since he has been acting as Agent at Crow Creek, employes of bad character, and of the loose and criminal manner in which Indian goods were shipped, without bills of lading or invoices. This is true also for the Cheyenne and Brulé Agencies, on the Missouri River, as well as Crow Creek, whose Agent, Dr. Livingston, has recently been indicted on about 124 charges, and as many more that were thrown out under the Statute of Limitation.

The attention of the General of the Army is expressly called to the reports of the Standing Rock Agency, the Indians of which have been under Sitting Bull and Gen. Crook also changed his mind. Now, why did this change of front occur? It was thus. If the Indians went to the Missouri River all the supplies for say 15,000 Indians, would have to be taken a new direction up the Missouri. The line of the Union Pacific Railroad would not then be the base, and all the contractors for hauling from the towns of Sidney, Cheyenne, and other places would lose their business. The matter of trade at these places would be diminished. Then the Indian traders at the agencies would lose much of their business, and, if they followed the Indians, would lose heavy in expenses in the erection of quarters, and the profitable trade resulting from the nomadic life of the Indian would cease, and there were many items of minor detail which made the removal a disagreeable one to them. Then, if these Indians were permanently located on the Missouri River, there would be no use for Camps Robinson and Sheridan and Forts Laramie and Fetterman, and those posts would be ultimately abandoned, and the property of the sutlers disturbed. But, as the law required the Indians to go, there was no recourse left but to work up a dissatisfaction among the Indians. This was successfully accomplished, and a delegation to Washington resulted from it. The President yielded to the importunity of the delegation, and the object was accomplished. I did not say that the Indian Bureau had anything to do with it, and I utterly disclaim any intention of attributing the action of Gen. Crook to any the President. He could not well help himself. In my report I only expressed my regret at what had happened. It is not strange, when we consider the inadequacy of our military force, that I should, in common with other officers, call attention to circumstances like this, that are liable to involve trouble and disaster.

Before closing this communication, I desire to call the attention of the General of the Army to that portion of Lieut. Lee's report which plainly shows that the figures made in Washington, of supplies sent to agencies, may show a different result from the supplies received, and which may account for the discrepancy in the reports of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and the report of Major J. K. Mizner at the Southern Cheyenne Agency, and that of Capt. A. H. Bainbridge, Fort Hall Agency. In conclusion, I desire to say that in my annual report, and in this report, my only object has been to speak in the interest of the Indian, and to the best interest of life, property, and development on the frontier, of the lives of officers and soldiers, and the best economy in the administration of my command. The Indian, surrounded as he is in his own country, is superior to us at any point where we are liable to meet him, and as he takes no prisoners it requires a bold man to attack him with an inferior force, in view of the disasters which happened to poor Custer, Fetterman, and others.

The following are the facts referred to in this communication: We have not here the clerical force to furnish the reports in full, but as copies are in the War Department they can be furnished, having already forwarded to the Indian Bureau. The War Department has also all the similar correspondence extending back from 1874 to 1869, and which, if examined, I think, will show a gradation of more aggravated irregularities than those from 1874 to the present time. I have here also a mass of records, such as telegrams and letters, on the same subject and of the same import, extending back to October, 1871, (at which date the fire consumed our records,) which can be sent, if the General of the Army desires them. They cover where and when we had supplied Indians with rations to prevent outbreaks, sometimes at the request of the Indian Bureau and sometimes for humanity's sake. The briefs appended are arranged, as will be seen, by agencies, extending from 1874 to 1878. I inclose also Gen. Gibbon's and Gen. John E. Smith's reports on the same subject. Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

P. H. SHERIDAN, Lieutenant-General.

LIEUT. LEE'S REPORT.

In addition to the report of Gen. Sheridan, the General of the Army is furnished with a copy of the report of First Lieut. Lee, Ninth Infantry, and recently agent for the Spotted Tail Agency, and a large number of briefs and extracts from reports of Army officers and others relative to fraud and mismanagement in the Indian service. The report of Lieut. Lee, which is dated Nov. 28 last, gives an explanation of how affairs were conducted at the Spotted Tail Agency previous to the time a military officer was detailed as agent. He says that E. A. Howard was there in charge as agent; that he had instilled into the minds of the Indians almost every possible prejudice against the military, but that very little chance was made it was done so adroitly that the good effect was speedily apparent. Lieut. Foot, who preceded Lee as acting agent, found, when he relieved Civil Agent Howard, the supplies reduced, and a starvation allowance for getting supplies from the military to feed the starving Indians, his first official act was to take a census, and he then found that Howard had been issuing on paper to 9,170 Indians, when the actual number was only 4,775. Lee took charge of the Spotted Tail Agency March 3, 1877. In accordance with the treaty, annuities for the Indians should have reached them on the 1st of August of each year, but they did not arrive until November, after much unnecessary suffering. Lieut. Lee then gives a history of the McCann frauds, which had been reported as early as 1875, and says that, notwithstanding these frauds, McCann received the contracts for a very large portion of the transportation for 1877. Lee then relates minutely the McCann and Davis frauds, shows the methods of inspection, states the deficiencies that occurred on account of these, says he reported the facts to the Indian Bureau, and that finally he received a telegram from the acting Commissioner, saying, "We trust McCann no longer." Lee then shows how the method of doing business in the Indian Bureau left the agent in the dark as to the quantity of supplies turned over to contractors for delivery at the agency, and that he could only get at this information by communicating with the military at Omaha. He says the contract for supplying beef cattle had been received at the agency by Howard, and that, when the military took charge, the average weight suddenly dropped from 1,050 pounds to 800 pounds per head, gross. He then says that the greatest difficulty an agent has to contend with is the system of doing business. The agent is at the mercy of the contractors, and owing to the irregularity of supplying the agency is often compelled to receive supplies that are not up to the requirements of the contract. He then proceeds to show that, in opposition to his recommendation, the beef contractor, against the advice of his herds, had succeeded in obtaining a supplemental contract at Washington to deliver all the beef by the middle of December, 1877, on the Missouri River, and the agent was to slaughter and freeze it. Lee protested that he had no facilities for preserving the beef; that if the Winter happened to be an open one it would be a total loss; and he was finally authorized to hold the herd during the Winter. He then proceeds to review the system of management, and shows that while the head of the bureau may do his best, the corruptions that have occurred will unquestionably occur again, and can only be remedied by a more business-like system.

THE KNIFE AND THE PISTOL

A NINETEENTH WARD TRAGEDY.

RENEWING AN OLD QUARREL—A STABBING AFFRAY, FOLLOWED BY THE SHOOTING OF ONE OF THE PRINCIPALS BY A POLICEMAN.

John McKnight, a young man living in a shanty on the rocks, near Seventy-fourth-street and Third-avenue, was dangerously stabbed yesterday by John Clifford, living in a shanty in Sixty-seventh-street, between Second and Third avenues, and the latter while attempting to escape was fatally shot by a policeman. Both young men are termed by the Police "loafers," and they belong to a club called the "Nightingale." This club is an organization made up from among the denizens of the numerous shanties in the neighborhood and the hangers around the horse-markets at the foot of East Seventy-fourth-street. The "Nightingales" had a riotous ball on New-Year's Eve in a hall over the room formerly occupied by the German Up-town Savings Bank, on the southwest corner of Third-avenue and Fifty-fifth-street. McKnight and Clifford both attended it. They were bitter enemies and entertained against each other an old and deep grudge. They met several times during the night's festivities, and each gave tac other many insults. They both drank deeply during tae night, and when they left, at 4:30 o'clock in the morning, each was very drunk and in bad humor. McKnight left the building first, followed by a crowd of his friends. Clifford got together a party of his own adherents and pursued McKnight, who was overtaken a short distance from the hall. Clifford challenged him to an instant settlement of their differences. McKnight agreed and prepared to fight. A crowd of about 50 men and women formed a ring about the combatants and cheered them on in their fight. McKnight squared himself as well as he could for a fisticuff, but he had hardly got into pugilistic position before Clifford drew a large knife and, rushing furiously upon him, buried it twice in his body. One stab was in the right breast, and the other under the right shoulder blade. McKnight fell insensible. Clifford then fled, his escape being covered by his friends. He went to Mrs. King's shanty, on the rocks, near Sixty-seventh-street and Third-avenue. This place is a resort for all the disreputable people of that neighborhood. In the kitchen floor is a trap-door through which descent is obtained to an underground stable. This stable opens at one side into a steep embankment, affording a means of escape for a pursued person. McKnight's friends carried him to the Twenty-eighth Precinct Station-house in East Fifty-seventh-street, where his wounds were attended to. Officer Hickey, who had pursued Clifford, and found him at Mrs. King's shanty. When he saw the officers he ran into the kitchen, threw up the window, and was about to spring out when Roundsman Martin pointed a revolver at him, and compelled him to return. Thereupon, one of his friends sprang the trap-door, and Clifford leaped down into the stable. Officer Hickey, who had remained outside, had noticed the underground means of escape and covered it. When he saw Clifford leaping into the cellar he pursued him and ordered him to stop. Clifford answered with an oath and made for the embankment. Hickey again ordered him to stop, but Clifford told him to go to —, and sprang toward the embankment. As he rushed down the decline Hickey drew his revolver and fired. The bullet entered Clifford's body under the left shoulder-blade, and went through the body to the skin over the left breast, piercing the left lung in its course and stopping just underneath the skin. He threw up his hands, uttered a cry, and rolled down the bank. Officer Hickey made his way to him, and was horrified to find him mortally wounded. The officer's comrades went to his assistance. Clifford received them with an oath, and said to Hickey: "You — — you've done me, and may the curse go you for it." He was taken to the station-house, where McKnight also was. While the two young men lay there, both bleeding terribly, and one of them dying, they cursed each other in the most terms. Dr. Clay probed Clifford's wound and found the bullet. He pronounced the wound fatal, but said that McKnight would probably recover. Both men were then removed to Bellevue Hospital, and on the way Clifford cried out. "You bloody —, and you've killed me, but I'll die like a son of a —."

A LIGHT SNOW-STORM.

WHERE IT CAME FROM AND WHEN IT REACHED THE CITY—THE TEMPERATURE YESTERDAY.

The Signal Service officers at the station in this City call yesterday's storm "a light snow," and no doubt it did seem so to them, located as they are on top of the tall Equitable Building, as they watched the beautiful snow-flakes falling past them. But the man who waded through the slush in the street below, with head bent forward and overcoat buttoned up to the chin to keep out the driving snow, thinks otherwise, and even the Weather Office "figures"—which never lie—will not change his opinion. The snow began to fall at 11:50 o'clock yesterday forenoon, and had not ceased at midnight last night. The storm originated in the Tennessee Valley region early yesterday morning, whence it traveled rapidly to the northeast, reaching this City at the time named. The snowfall was accompanied with very light wind, although the latter veered all around the points of the compass during the day. At 7 o'clock in the morning the wind was blowing two miles an hour from the west, and half an hour later it had veered to the north-west. At noon it had gone back to the west again, and had gone up to seven miles an hour. By 2 o'clock the wind had reached the south-west, with a velocity of only two miles an hour, and two hours afterward it was blowing from the north-east, where it remained the rest of the day, never having risen itself to an increase in its velocity. Its success was moderate, it having got up to only 10 miles per hour at 11 o'clock last night, and it did not go very much above that point anywhere in the country. The temperature was somewhat lower than it has been yesterday, standing at 29° above zero nearly all day, and getting up to 30° for a short time in the afternoon. The barometer stood at 30.06 inches at 7 o'clock in the morning, and fell steadily during the day, reaching 29.77 at 11 o'clock last night, with a fair prospect of going still lower before morning. The afternoon reports from the various stations in the country received that light snow prevailed yesterday at Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, Keokuk, Louisville, and Philadelphia, while heavy snow was reported at only one place—Grand Haven, Mich. Elsewhere the weather never seems to be in accord with that of the rest of the country. Elsewhere the weather was generally cloudy. "fair" being reported from only a few places. The thermometer ranged moderately high all over the country, except in the State of Minnesota, where the new year was ushered in with very cold weather. At St. Paul 2° below zero was reported in the afternoon, and 5° below at Duluth, while at Breckenridge the unusual temperature of 20° below zero was recorded. The authorities at Washington attach to their daily reports a statement that for the month of January in the Middle Atlantic States the chances are decidedly in favor of more rain are those from the south-east and north-east, and points between these two directions. With the wind in the north-east at midnight last night, and the barometer falling, therefore, there seems to be a fair prospect that New-York is not yet through with some kind of a "light" storm.

TEMPERANCE CONVERTS' REUNION.

The converts of Mr. C. W. Sawyer, the temperance orator, had a reunion yesterday afternoon and evening in one of the parlors of the Young Men's Christian Association Building. The attendance was large at the evening meeting. Mr. Sawyer presided, and Mr. McBurney opened the services with an invocation. Then Mr. Sawyer called for what he styled "half-minute guns," and the several members told the stories of their conversion. One elderly man said that it was the first New Year's Day in 33 years on which he had been entirely sober. A German said that yesterday was his "birthday," because he had been converted on that day. Mr. Sawyer inquired if anybody present had been saved, and a man with a strong Scottish dialect said that he had passed the first pleasant New Years in his life yesterday. Calls were made for representatives of the several countries of the globe, and many responses were heard. The speeches were interspersed with hymns from the Sankey collection, and the exercises were closed with the impromptu recitation of verses of Scripture by the audience.

DON'T STOP TO SEE A STREET-FIGHT.

Edward McCauley, of Cincinnati, passed through Canal-street last night and was attracted by a crowd at the corner of Sullivan-street. He mingled with them to see a fight which was going on, and a bullet fired from a revolver by some one engaged in the fracas struck him in the left forearm, producing a deep and dangerous wound. He could not find out who fired the shot, and made his way to the Eighth Precinct Station-house, where he had his wound dressed by the Police Surgeon. He became so weak from loss of blood that he had to be removed to the Chambers-Street Hospital.

MISS HAUK AND MME. ROZE.

Miss Minne Hauk has so far recovered from her recent ill-health that she was able to leave this City for Boston last evening, and it is now confidently expected that her improved health will permit her to appear there in "Carmen" on Friday evening.

Mme. Maria Röse, however, is unfortunately still unable to leave her room, to which she has been confined by a severe attack of congestion of the lungs. But her physician states that the crisis of her trouble has been safely passed, and unless prevented by unforeseen causes, the gifted prima donna will be able to undertake the journey to Boston next week. Mme. Röse has made hosts of friends since her arrival in America, who will be more than pleased at the intelligence of her speedy restoration to health. If successful in being able to go to Boston next week, Mme. Röse will probably make her appearance there either in "Les Huguenots," or "The Magic Flute."

Some time ago Mme. Röse was engaged to sing at a musical festival in Potsdam this week. Mr. Henry Mapleson, her husband, received a telegram from the manager to the effect that Potsdam was crowded with people who had come from a distance to hear Mme. Röse sing, and asking that her place be filled by Miss Hauk or Mme. Gerster "without fail." Mr. Mapleson immediately tendered the services of Mlle. Parodi, Mme. Sinico, and Mlle. Aldo, but up to last evening no answer had been received from Potsdam.

CONSUL-GENERAL COLBURN'S DEATH

GOING TO MEXICO ONLY TO DIE—MARKS OF RESPECT FOR THE DEAD JOURNALIST AND OFFICER.

The death of Justin E. Colburn, Consul-General of the United States in Mexico, which has been announced, took place in that city, at his residence, in Cadena-street, at 4 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 2. The Two Republics, published in Mexico, in its issue of

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

RECENT VERSE.

GUATEMOZIN. A Drama. By MALCOLM MACDONALD. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co. 1878.
POEMS. By W. T. WARBURTON. Vol. II. New-York: JESSE HANEY & Co. 1878.
SELECT POEMS. By HARVEY RICE. Boston: LEE & SHEPARD. 1878.

The mills of verse grind on with their accustomed regularity, their accustomed results. Perhaps the year 1878 has been more prolific than ever of watery verse and amateur poetry, introsted, through the good offices of cheap printing and undiscriminating publishers, to the inevitable neglect of a long-suffering public. That no portion of the country is free from this infliction will be guessed from the fact that New-York, Philadelphia, and Boston are equally guilty in giving printed birth to these three volumes. It is fair to Philadelphia, the town of Quakers, manufactures, and protection, to say at the outset that her volume is much the best of the three. Guatemozin is one of those ambitious performances that wiser writers produce later in life, after a course in labors less bold has given them some standing in literature. Such reputation as they may then have won serves to buoy up the venture, and often prevents an absolute loss of the cost of printing. The writer of Guatemozin cannot write blank verse, and yet can avoid extraordinary errors. His work is not laughable, however much it falls short of good. As the name indicates, the scene is Mexican; Cortez and his officers form one-half the acting staff, Aztecs the other. These latter have nothing distinctively Indian about them, either in speech or action; their cruelty is no worse than that of the Spaniards; their love-making is European. Naturally enough, the strange Aztec names are hard to keep apart in the mind, and the confusion they engender is not improved by the swift change of scenes, by the incoherence of the plot. Philadelphia has always had a tendency toward the chaotically big in literature; this is the latest example, though by no means the worst.

Mr. Washburn seems to be amusing himself by printing a series of volumes of verses as fast as they grow under his hand. There is a deal of hand in them, and that far from a skillful one, but, unfortunately, of brain and heart there is abundant lack. His humorous vein is best seen in delicate stanzas headed "A Literary Editor;" they also afford a good specimen of his idea of what constitutes metre:

"I'm drunk; and this book to review.
What verses! the wretched spalpeen!
I suppose I must read a line through!
These new rules are refreshingly green.

"This writer's a forger, a dun,
A reporter, a boarding-house beat.
Quick, boy, with the manuscript run
To the press ere it loses its heat."

But even the vulgarity of this rhymester is to be preferred to the utter insipidity of the Select Poems of William Harvey Rice. Boston is to be condoled with for having produced these correct, but utterly meaningless, platitudes. Better the hopeless striving of the Philadelphian, better the low jocularity of the New-York ringer of jingles, than the fatuous "literary deportment" of the Bostonian. Mr. Rice is sometimes arch, and often expresses that particular shade in his monotone by the use of italics; we can only warn any one who has his prettily printed volume before him, to avoid the page on which italics are seen. The archness of a person who can not be arch is exasperating. Read if you will "Unwritten Music:"

"There's music, music everywhere,
Whose artless notes are sweet;
Anthems that linger in the air,
And in the calm retreat"—

but do not invade those poems which approach the region of vers de société; the loves of Frank and Laura might be too much even for one who could stand the comic poems of Mr. Washburn, and wade through the terrific pages of Mr. Macdonald.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN; OR, OBJECT LESSONS IN HOUSEHOLD WORK. Including songs, plays, exercises, and games, illustrations, and conversations. By EMILY HUNTINGTON. Illustrations etched by FREDERIC VOSS. 4to, 138 pages.

Precisely what place music had in ancient education it is not easy to say, for the great classic authors had very confused ideas of what music is, and they do not seem to have distinguished the poets' own words from the voices and instruments that accompanied them. Plato, indeed, says that "musical training is a more potent instrument than any other, because rhythm and harmony make their way into the secret places of the soul, in which they mightily fasten, imparting grace and making the soul of him graceful who is well educated." Yet his common-sense contemporary, Aristotle, makes it out that "music is a pleasant way of being idle, and therefore it is a proper entertainment of free men in their leisure hours." With all the traces of the power of music in public games and social pleasures, in the march of armies and the rites of religion, there is no proof that music was ever used until our time in lightening the task-work of every day upon system. Men and women, indeed, are singing creatures, and they have generally made music wherever they go and in whatever they do. They sing at their work when they can, and we have all heard sailors heaving anchor and farmers busy in the field as full of song as the birds. But only the hint is thus given of what the new education is now seriously doing, to set to music the labor that has too often been consigned to plodding drudgery. Forty years ago Froebel, in Germany, began the movement by the Kindergarten, in which the daily school became a pleasant garden, and, instead of moping over books before their time, children used their eager eyes upon attractive object lessons, and moved their hands and feet in time with cheering songs. The principal trades came into this sort of illustration, and it became good fun as well as sober discipline to play the farmer, the sailor, the carpenter, the weaver, and every other workman in this lively fashion. Miss Huntington has carried the movement one important step further, and taken music into the kitchen, and done what Orpheus of old never attempted, by making the brooms and knives and forks, the cooking and the washing, move to merry tunes. Her book, in its way, is quite unique as a piece of print, paper and illustrations excellent, but, as a work of mind and heart, original as it is admirable. It consists of a cordial dedication to friends, a sensible introduction and six full lessons, a number of supplementary songs, and a programme for public exhibition. This book represents, we understand, the work which is done in six months by Kitchen Garden instruction, each lesson continuing as intervals for a month, and being associated with other forms of instruction in the industrial school. Each lesson has great variety, and has a march or dance, song, and exercise, and play, with suitable toys to represent the implements of the kitchen. A large amount of exact instruction upon household matters is given, and a charming discipline of the temper of the little girls goes with the drill in the routine of house-work. While to poor children and their families the advantages are unspeakable, we cannot but wish that the pets of luxury and fortune, who often know too little of house-work to give proper directions to servants, might enter into these drills and be as merry and wise as these little sisters of industry. The system works admirably, as we can testify from personal observation in the industrial schools.

Mr. Vore has done his work with ingenuity and skill, and Miss Huntington has won good name for fine sense, true courage, and untiring devotion. She is the queen of the Kitchen Garden and Lady Superior of the great mission of reform in house-work.

THE HISTORY OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF RIGHT HON. FREDERICK TEMPLE, EARL OF DUFFERIN. By WILLIAM LEGGO. Montreal: Lovell Printing Company. 1878.

A barrister-at-law of Ottawa, Ontario, and author of several law books, has compiled an exhaustive account of all the services of the late Governor-General to the Canadas. Mr. Leggo regards the administration of the Earl of Dufferin in the light of a carrying out of principles of responsible government developed under Lords Durham, Sydenham, Metcalfe, Elgin, Monck, and Lisgar. With the full-blown reverence of a Canadian for the British form of constitutional government, he looks with some emotion on the unfolding of a plan which George III. hardly knew, George IV. never attempted to check, and William IV. vainly opposed. He, therefore, proposes a higher object than the recital of the mere acts and journeys of Lord Dufferin during the term of his office; the gradual development of the constitutional system is to be followed, with the executive actions of Lord Dufferin as a text.

"To any one but a Canadian, or a person interested in the politics of our northern neighbors, the volume will not recommend itself. It testifies abundantly to the tact and political skill of the Irish lord, as well as to his more than American readiness to get on his legs and make a speech. Perhaps mindful of the Latin speeches Lord Dufferin made in Iceland, so long ago during the trip related in A Voyage to High Latitudes, the Chancellor of McGill College dared to address the visiting Governor-General in a Greek speech, which appears both in English and the original in the pages of this history. To the Greek address the versatile Earl replied by a longer speech in the same language. The evolution of historical principles in constitutional government, as applied to Canada, does not prevent Mr. Leggo from attending with a zest smacking, for so serious a historian, of frivolity, to such things as the governor-General's fancy ball in Rideau Hall, Ottawa. In regard to this affair, some journal quoted with aptness the famous Irish verses of Thackeray, which contain the lines:

"There was Lord Fingall and his ladies all,
And Lords Killeen and Gifford,
And Paddy Fife with his fat wife,—
I wondher how he could stuff her in."

Dufferin talked to the habitans in French and the Irish in brogue, complimented the Scotch on their thistles and the Germans on their beer, looked after the Russian immigrants, and would, doubtless, had his stay been long enough, have learned several Indian dialects for the purpose of making council-fire speeches to the red men. He appears to have been continuously "swinging around the circle," and the reader, on finishing the 800 or 900 pages of this book, may be pardoned if he affirms that he has learned more about Dufferin and the Canadians than about the gradual development in Canada of responsible government on the constitutional plan. Paper, printing, type, and steel engravings, in fact, the entire make-up of the volume, are products of the Dominion. It need not be said that the sentiments expressed are redolent of that loyalty to the British Crown of which the Canadians enjoy almost a monopoly.

PAUL FABER, SURGEON. By GEORGE MACDONALD, LL. D. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co. 1879.

No new trait other than such as are to be found in former books by George Macdonald is discoverable in this. Religious convictions are held up to admiration with even greater effect, and humanity and manliness were never more insisted upon. Indeed, there is an excess of them in Paul Faber, so that the novel takes rank with the serious books having a definite instructive object, rather than with those intended chiefly to amuse.

Paul Faber, the hero, is settled in a small town of England. He is a great horseman, and skillful practitioner besides. Romance begins with the saving of the life of Juliet by the surgeon. He performs the difficult and dangerous operation of transfusion of blood in an off-hand manner which any surgeon might envy, using his own veins as the reservoir from which life is introduced into the inanimate form of his patient. He also objects forcibly, and with a display of much profanity, to the experiments of his young assistant on a live dog; while he is vituperating the cruel young medical man, Juliet passes by and hears his ungodly language. Paul Faber is an atheist, but Juliet is a firm believer. Juliet is introduced as an invalid, saved for the time by Faber. The last scene is where she is again at death's door, and Faber now saves her life to more purpose—the usual result to which a satisfactory novel leads up. Their quarrel is healed and they begin really to live. Clergymen and doctors are the chief actors in Paul Faber. Although inferior to some of George Macdonald's novels, it still retains a good many of his happy touches. There is a large audience for books of this sort, books which move forward slowly, with a great quantity of words, and are richer in "moral values" than good dramatic situations. Macdonald is always master of a clear and straightforward style.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Illustrated Christian Weekly will begin a new story, entitled "A Thorny Path," early in the new year.

—George Eliot's writings fill 19 volumes in the new cabinet edition now completed by Blackwood & Sons.

—Mr. Wilkie Collins is not engaged, as was reported, in completing Mr. Dickens' unfinished novel, Edwin Drood.

—M. Dupont White, a writer on political economy and the translator of some of J. S. Mill's works, is dead.

—The forthcoming Golden Rule Magazine has bought in the monthly journal known as the Cottage Hearth and Home.

—A complete edition of the works of the late John Critchley Prince, the Lancashire poet, are in preparation for the press.

—The Goodale children's Apple Blossoms, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, is already in its fourth edition. It is a remarkable success.

—John Hodges, London, has published a small volume on Lord Bacon's Philosophy, by Rev. W. H. Laing, D. D., the author of What is Christianity?

—Rev. Mandell Creighton's Shilling History of England is intended to be the introductory volume to the series known as "Epochs of English History."

—The Game-keeper at Home, which has called forth a comparison with Gilbert White's Natural History of Selborne, is already in its third English edition.

—Early in the new year Roberts Brothers will publish the Life and Times of Stein, and a new novel in the "No Name Series," entitled, Signor Monaldi's Niece.

—Mr. Gladstone's article on "England's Mission," originally printed in the Nineteenth Century, has reached its twenty-seventh thousand in pamphlet form.

—The late Major Whyte-Melville had, a few days before his death, placed in the hands of his publishers, Chapman & Hall, the manuscript of a new three-volume novel.

—Carlyle, to whom the late G. H. Lewes dedicated his Life of Goethe, reached his eighty-third birthday on the very day that the friend of his earlier years was laid in the tomb.

—George Augustus Sala received a valuable service of plate from the proprietors of the London Telegraph, on his fiftieth birthday, in recognition of his brilliant service as a journalist.

—The Swedish poetess, Maria Dorothea Alén, died at Stockholm on the 30th of November. She was born in 1799, and was the author of several dramas that enjoyed success at the beginning of the century.

—Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich leaves Boston for several months or a year of foreign travel on the 8th of January. He will visit Quebec, St. Petersburg, and other points in Eastern Europe, and will stay as long as the humor suits him. Mrs. Aldrich will accompany him.

—Mr. George William Curtis' oration on "The Life, Character, and Writings of William Cullen Bryant" will be published in a few days by Charles Scribner's Sons, in both pamphlet and book form.

—The Zürich poet, Heinrich Leuthold, has two volumes in preparation. The first, a collection of original poems, is just ready; the other, a number of translations from the English and Italian, will appear later.

—Even early English dramatists afford study for sympathetic savants of Moscow. Robert Greene: His Life and Works, is the title of a work just brought out in the ancient seat of the Czars by Prof. Storojcuka.

—Mr. Patrick Donahoe, the former publisher of the Boston Pilot, has began the publication of an Irishman's eclectic miscellany, which is named Donahoe's Magazine. Its selections are fresh and admirably edited.

—A considerable edition of Prof. Fraser's Selections from Berkeley has been sold in about three years, which indicates that metaphysical studies are not yet dead among us. A new edition of the same book is in preparation.

—One of several new features to be introduced in the Literary World for 1879 is a series of "Short Studies of American Authors," by Mr. Thomas W. Higginson. The papers will be both critical and descriptive.

—P. G. Hamerton gives an unusually large installment of his work on Turner to the December number of The Portfolio, sold in this City by J. W. Bouton. The fac-simile etching from the great masters is the "Christ Preaching," by Rembrandt.

—The autobiography of the Duke of Grafton, the Prime Minister of George III., from which Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice drew so largely in his Life of Lord Selburne, has been placed by the present Duke in the hands of Lord Carlingford for publication.

—The admirers of the late George Henry Lewes will be glad to learn that he left behind him as much manuscript as will fill two additional volumes to his last work, Problems of Life and Mind. These volumes will be published under the supervision of George Eliot.

—While the memory of Bryant is still being refreshed by lectures and addresses, G. P. Putnam's Sons call attention to the Bryant Memorial Meeting of the Goethe Club of this City, whose proceedings have been daintily printed in pamphlet form, and issued with a fine steel portrait of the distinguished poet.

—The publishers of The Magazine of American History publish complimentary letters on the efficiency and success of their venture from Francis Parkman and Sidney Howard Gay, the historians, and from John Jay, James Parton, Gen. De Peyster, William L. Stone, and others, whose interest in American history makes their word important.

—The late Sydney Dobell was an earnest member of the Church of "Free-thinking Christians," and much of the volume entitled Thoughts on Art, Philosophy, and Religion, recently published, was devoted to his theological speculations on the off-side of religion. His opinions on these matters are also freely strewed along the pages of the Life and Letters, just issued.

—The Connection of Ireland with the Holy See is the title of a new book by Mr. Willis Nevins. It will endeavor to show the wisdom of the support by Rome—first, of the Danish, and, secondly, of the Norman conquest of Ireland, and will be illustrated by several translations of important Papal documents, first published in Theiner's Monumenta Vetera Hibernorum.

—Etchers follow closely on the bolder and broader style of portrait-painting, which is obtaining more and more of late years. For The Portfolio of December, one of W. G. Orchardson's portraits, entitled "Conditional Neutrality," has been etched by L. Richeton. It follows the broad slashes of paint with the utmost fidelity. Orchardson is among the few most promising English painters.

—Mr. Albert Laighton, of Portsmouth, N. H., has published a volume of Poems through A. Williams & Co., Boston, consisting chiefly of delicate tributes to friends and short swallow-flights of song. Mr. Laighton is a cousin of Mrs. Celia Thaxter, to whom he dedicates his book. He is a great poet for a small town, and has done much for the literary interests of Portsmouth, which is his native city.

—The Hebrew Book Union issue the prospectus of a new Lexicon to the Talmuds, Targums, and Midrash, compiled by F. De Sola Mendes, Ph. D. It is to be issued in four parts, octavo, and will be the first dictionary of the mingled Rabbinical dialect ever published in the English language. The Hebrew words are printed with all the points, derivations given, and the Greek, Syriac, Arabic, or Persian originals stated.

—The best guide to what is modern in Boston will be found to be King's Hand-Book. It is fully illustrated with pictures of ancient and modern buildings, and the letter-press is well written, and shows careful attention to details. Mr. Moses King is his own publisher, and a student in the Sophomore Class at Harvard. He is already favorably known by the publication of an entertaining book, of which he is the author also, entitled Harvard and its Surroundings.

—The latest addition to the Harpers' Franklin Square Library is a narrative by Grattan Geary of a journey from Bombay to the Bosphorus Through Asiatic Turkey. Mr. Geary gives careful reports of what he saw and lives special stress on what Pashas and officers of state, bankers, merchants, shopkeepers, and peasants had to say of the situation. He has attempted to sift their conflicting statements and arrive at some conclusion as to the real drift of things in the Ottoman Empire.

—A small compendium of facts about England, its history, Government, and antiquities, is published by A. S. Barnes & Co. English History in Short Stories forms a convenient text-book for schools or private instruction. About 70 pages are given to each King or Queen from Egbert (A. D. 827) to Victoria. Some account of the Britons and Romans forms the introduction, and an appendix contains brief descriptive sketches of those counties of Great Britain and Ireland the names of which recur continually in history.

—The usual price paid by the Nineteenth Century for contributions is $10 a page, though Mr. Gladstone has $50. It is understood that the Princeton Review pays $10 a page, the North American Review from $5 to $10, the International Review nearly the same rate, and the Nation from $10 to $15 a page. The highest price paid for contributions in the monthly magazines is $10 a page. Harpers' rate is up to this, and most of the other magazines fall below it.

—The portrait of James Russell Lowell, which goes with the new subscriptions to the Atlantic Monthly, is much more successful than those of Whittier, Bryant, and Longfellow. Mr. J. E. Baker, the artist who made the companion pictures, has in this instance, caught the glow of the countenance, the bright gleam of the eye, and the shading is such that the strong lines of the face stand out clear and distinct. It is the portrait of a poet all over, and will be highly prized by those who enjoy Mr. Lowell's poetry.

—The late Dr. Walter Farquhar Hook was accustomed to say that the ablest men in the old Trastarian party had gone over to Rome, and that the residuum, which he called the "Trastarian Ruins," contained the most part of fanatics and fools. His own party, the High-Churchmen of 1825 to 1840, have practically disappeared, and there is very little in the Life and Letters of Dr. Hook, recently published, which accounts for his prominence as the Vicar of Leeds. His most conspicuous piece of literary work was his Lives of the Archbishops of Canterbury.

—The Magazine of American History opens its third volume with the January number. The editor, John Austin Stevens, supplies a paper—"Birth of the Empire State"—on New-York, and J. Hammond Trumbull, one of the few men who even pretend to know anything of American Indian linguistics, has a communication on the origin and meaning of the name Oregon. Among the original documents is a facsimile of a rhyming letter signed by Jefferson, William Stephens Smith, and Richard Peters, while on a frolic, in 1786. It belongs to Mr. Charles Bruff, of Brooklyn.

—E. & F. N. Spon, No. 446 Broome-street, have the following works just ready for issue: Girder-Making and the Practice of Bridge-Building in Wrought Iron, by E. Hutchinson; The Manufacture of Cast-Iron Pipes, by J. Benedict; A Lecture on Coal, by Rev. T. Wiltshire; Town and Country Mansions, by William Young; author of Picturesque Architectural Studies; A Practical Treatise on Warming Buildings by Hot Water, Steam, and Hot Air, and on Ventilation, by Charles Hood, and A Treatise on Natural and Artificial Concrete, its Varieties and Constructive Adaptations, by Henry Reid.

—Mr. Robert C. Winthrop was recently saying of the late Edward Everett's four volumes of orations and addresses that they were the best and freshest introduction to the history of the American people; but what Mr. Winthrop said of Mr. Everett may also be said of himself. He has just brought out a final collection of his own orations and addresses, including the remarkable one on the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims and the one delivered in this City at the unveiling of the Webster statue in Central Park. Besides these greater efforts of the venerable Massachusetts orator, the volume is enriched with numerous short addresses on many men known to fame, who have passed away during the last 10 years. Mr. Winthrop is the master of graceful and truthful compliment, and his new volume shows him remarkably happy in saying the single word which emphasizes character. If these addresses are not exactly a passport to fame for their author, they are no mildrew of their kind that they hardly come short of it.

—Prof. Pasquale Villari's Niccolo Machiavelli and His Times, though the two volumes now translated into English by Prof. Villari's wife, and published by C. Kegan Paul & Co., London, only comprise the general introduction, covers the period of the Italian Renaissance and the section of Machiavelli's life dating from his birth to his dismissal from the office of the Secretary of Ten. Its chief value is that it is a restatement of the events in the life of the great Florentine Secretary, based upon more thorough studies of the life and times of Machiavelli than have heretofore been possible. The literature of this subject has been prolific during the last few years, and the question whether Machiavelli was a saint or a devil, though Prof. Villari does not claim to write either a apologist or accuser, approaches an intelligent solution in the new matter introduced into his book. It is not yet far enough advanced (1469–1512) to much more than indicate what the treatment of the subject is to be.

—Dr. Richard F. Littledale says that the late Major Whyte-Melville, who met with sudden death in the hunting-field, "was the one writer of the day who was able so to describe a hard run with hounds as to enable non-sporting men to understand what it means, and to understand something of the delight and excitement it proves to those whose favorite pursuit it is, and yet so as also to satisfy the critical requirements of those to whom all its technicalities are familiar. * * * He was a remarkable figure in this way, that he was the most complete representation in the nineteenth century of that old type of Scottish gentleman, half soldier and half scholar, of which the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries supplied so many examples." Dr. Littledale regards the Gladiators as, perhaps, his best story, and adds: "He does not belong to the highest grade of writers of fiction, even would he be entitled to such rank for himself; but within the sphere to which he belonged there are very few who have done so well a like quantity of such diversified work, and it will not be easy to replace him."

—A Latin Commentary on the Psalms of David, attributed to the age of Charlemagne, and believed by many to have been written by the Irish Saint, Columbanus, although erroneously ascribed to St. Jerome by the text itself, is announced for publication by Signor Ermann Loeschor, of Rome, Turin, and Florence. A curious feature is a running, interlinear gloss or interpretation of the text in the old Irish language. The task of editing this interesting document is intrusted to Signor Graziadio Ascoli, one of the leading Italian philologers of our time, who, in a learned preface accompanying the prospectus, points out the use already made of the manuscript by eminent Irish philologers. It is proposed to issue the work in parts of not less than 16 pages of type, the whole to be comprised in two octavo volumes, and completed during the course of 1880. The first volume will contain the text and the gloss; the second, an account of the gloss, together with contributions to an Irish grammar and lexicon furnished by it and other Celtic sources. Annexed to the first part, issued at Turin last June, is a photo-lithographic fac-simile of a page in the Ambrosian manuscript and of another in the St. Gal copy. The edition is dedicated to Signor Nigra and Prof. Max Müller.

COURT CALENDARS—THIS DAY.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.
Held by Davis, P. J.

Nos. 13, 78, 158, 176, 193, 198, 245, 257, 289, 291, 295, 298, 310, 311, 315, 318, 321, 324, 325, 326, 327, 329.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.
Held by Barrett, J.

No. 580—French vs. Mason. No day calendar.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—PART II.
Held by Van Vorst, J.

Demurrer—No. 16—Platt vs. Platt. No day calendar.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.
Held by Freedman, J.

No day calendar.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.
Held by Van Hoesen, J.

No day calendar.
All other State courts have adjourned for the term.

THE LIVE STOCK MARKETS.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1879.

This day being observed as a holiday, there were no sales of live stock reported. Fresh arrivals on this forenoon will be announced in our next daily report. Gross arrivals at the Hudson River yards for week ending Dec. 29, 1878: 1,009 head of horned Cattle, 1,893 Sheep and Lambs, 34 Veals and Calves, 6,578 Hogs.

BUFFALO, Jan. 1.—Cattle—Receipts to-day, 1,887 head, making the total for week thus far, 6,168 head, against 8,884 head for the same time last week, and signed through, 230 cars; increase in the receipts for the week, 135 cars; fair shipping demand for good Steers; common stock fully 25@50c. lower; sales of extra Beeves, $4 95@5 25; choice do., $4 65@4 85; good shippers, $4 20@4 50; medium shippers, $3 85@4 10; stockers very dull at $2 25@2 75; extra Canada, $2 75@3 80; Yearlings, $1 75@2; Bulls, $2 50@3 25. Sheep and Lambs—Receipts to-day, 4,400 head, making the total for the week thus far, 8,500 head, against 7,500 head for the same time last week; consigned through, 14 cars; market moderately active; prices inclined to be useful lower; sales of good quality; fair to good Western Sheep, $3 35@3 80; extra selected Wethers, $4 25@4 75; Western Lambs, $4 25@4 35; Canada do., $4 75@5 37½. Hogs—Receipts to-day, 5,865 head, making the total for the week thus far 15,345 head, against 20,060 head for the same time last week; consigned through, 68 cars; demand fair; prices stronger, but only owing to light supply; quotable: Yorkers, $2 75@3 90; heavy grades, fair to choice, $3 60@3 90; extra, $3 95; Store Pigs, $3 55@3 75; best grades disposed of. There was no Grain market to-day.

EAST LIBERTY, Penn., Jan. 1.—Cattle—Receipts to-day, 1,088 head through and 986 head local; total for two days, 1,988 head through and 986 head local; prices are unchanged from yesterday's quotations. Hogs—Receipts to-day, 4,620 head; total for two days, 6,095 head; Yorkers, $2 75@3 80; Philadelphias, $2 90@3. Sheep—Receipts to-day, 800 head; total for two days, 4,800 head; selling $3 25@4 50.

THE FOREIGN MARKETS.

LONDON, Jan. 1—6:30 P. M.—The rate of discount for three months' bills in the open market is 5⅛ per cent. The amount of bullion gone into the Bank of England on balance to-day is £167,000. India Council bills allotted to-day at a decline of ½d.; rupees. Produce—Refined Petroleum, 10¾d. per gallon. Linseed-oil, £23 10s. per ton. Tallow, 38s. 6d. per cwt. Spirits of Turpentine, 21s. 3d.@21s. 6d. per cwt.

THE BOSTON WOOL MARKET.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 1.—Wool—There has been very little change since last week; the demand was steady but moderate, and desirable Fleeces were held with firmness at the current low prices. There has been no pressure to buy or sell, and not much improvement is expected for a week or two, as buyers will move cautiously until it is seen what turn things are likely to take with the new year. The sales comprise Ohio and Pennsylvania Fleeces at 34c@35c. for X and XX, and 36c.@38½c. for choice and No. 1; Michigan and Wisconsin Fleeces at 32c.@33c., and Combing and Delaine Fleeces at 34c.@40c. for coarse and medium. In California Wool sales were made at 12½c.@22½c. for Fall and Spring; Super and X Pulled Wools were in moderate demand at 28c@40c.; choice supers are selling at 38c.@40c.

THE TIMES SPANISH-AMERICAN EDITION.

SECOND EDITION.

In accordance with the requests of several advertisers, another eight-page edition of THE TIMES printed in Spanish and specially prepared for circulation in Central and South America, Spain, Mexico, and the West Indies, will be issued shortly. Intending advertisers should have their notices prepared at once. The distribution of the edition will, as before, be intrusted to the United States Agency for Promoting Foreign Trade, No. 54 Broad-street.

The following firms have already secured space in the Spanish-American Edition, and those who have not yet sent in their names should lose no time in doing so, as the available advertising space in this edition has been nearly filled up.

IN NEW-YORK.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, starch.
FROTHINGHAM & BAYLIS, cotton duck.
WRIGHT, BLISS & FABYAN, cotton goods, commission.
HAGERTY BROS., druggists' glassware.
JAMES TALCOTT, hosiery and underwear, commission.
JOHN P. JUBB & CO., wheels, springs, and axles.
WHITALL, TATUM & CO., druggists' glassware and sundries.
C. POTTER, Jr., & CO., power printing-presses.
MILES BROS. & CO., brushes.
NEW-YORK AND NEW-JERSEY GLOBE GAS-LIGHT COMPANY, automatic gas apparatus.
HUMPHREYS' HOMEOPATHIC MEDICINE COMPANY.
THE J. M. BRUNSWICK & BALKE COMPANY, billiard-tables.
KARL F. WITTE, felt.
JOHNSON & WILSON, Portland cement.
EDWARD GODDARD, emery-wheels.
HARRIS FINISHING COMPANY, show-card mounting and picture framing.
R. FOULD, toys and fancy goods.
GEORGE PLACE MACHINERY AGENCY, new and second-hand machinery.
J. W. JARBOE & SON, sheet-iron works, Sugar-cooling iron cars a specialty.
BILLMEYER & SMALL COMPANY, manufacturers of narrow-gauge-railway rolling-stock.
GARNER & CO., madder prints.
FRANK MILLER & SONS, blacking and harness oil.
J. TRAGESER, copper works.

IN BUFFALO, N. Y.

JOHN T. NOYE & SON, burr mill-stones and portable mills.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

CONTINENTAL WORKS, T. F. Rowland, Proprietor, complete gas-works, Duc's spherical elevator buckets, sugar machinery, and roofs.

IN GREENPOINT.

UNION PORCELAIN WORKS, manufacturers of China table-ware and Porcelain trimmings.
IRON-CLAD MANUFACTURING COMPANY, metallic shingles and stamped ware.

IN JERSEY CITY.

P. LORILLARD & CO., tobacco manufacturers.

IN NEWARK, N. J.

L. LELONG & BROTHER, gold and silver refiners and assayers.
J. S. MUNDY, hoisting-engines.
PHINEAS JONES & CO., choice wheels for vehicles.
AUGUST BUERMANN, saddlery hardware, special for Mexico and South American trade.
M. STRAUS, patent and enameled leather.
MURPHY & CO., varnish makers.
EDGAR FARMER & CO., trunks and valises.
JOSEPH BALDWIN & CO., saddlery hardware.
CONDIT, HANSON & VAN WINKLE, electric machines and electro-platers' material.
E. KINGSLAND SARGEANT, steam-boiler detergent.
I. S. & J. W. HYATT, wire-bound school slates.
BLESS & DRAKE, smoothing and sad irons.
J. M. QUINBY & CO., carriage builders.
P. HAYDEN, saddlery hardware.
SAMUEL HALSEY & SON, superior patent and enameled oak-tanned leather.
CHARLES M. THEBERATH, saddlery hardware.
CYRUS CURRIER, machinist, iron and brass founder.
LOWERRE & TUCKER, fluting machines.
FISHER VARNISH COMPANY, fine coach and railway varnishes.
HUNTINGTON MACHINE WORKS, turbine wheels and wood-working machinery.
C. S. OSBORNE & CO., fine saddle and harness tools.
OSCAR BARNETT, malleable and gray iron castings.
C. G. ROBERTSON, superior copal varnishes.
S. STONE & CO., engravers to calico printers.
JAMES R. SAYRE, Jr., & CO., manufacturers and shippers of building and fire brick.
WATTS, CAMPBELL & CO., steam engines and machinery.

IN PATERSON, N. J.

ROGERS LOCOMOTIVE AND MACHINE WORKS.
DANFORTH LOCOMOTIVE AND MACHINE COMPANY.
THE PASSAIC ROLLING MILL COMPANY, bridge-builders and iron manufacturers.

INSTRUCTION.

BENJAMIN MASON'S BOARDING SCHOOL FOR BOYS, TONKERS, NEW-YORK.
Established 1853.
A KIND CARE.
FIRM DISCIPLINE.
STEADY PROGRESS.
MODERATE CHARGES.

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS SEMINARY.
The Fall session of the 26th year of this well-appointed Day and Boarding School for young ladies will commence on the 18th of September. For terms, courses of study, &c., circulars will be sent on application to CHARLES E WEST, LL. D., Principal, Nos. 138 and 140 Montague-st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

MISS COMSTOCK, NO. 34 WEST 46TH-st.—Collegiate Department; classes in Greek, Latin, and mathematics; boys received daily. Miss Comstock will receive applications from date for admission; Greek and general supervision, Mr. T. T. Timayenis.

CHARLIER INSTITUTE, ON CENTRAL PARK, NEW-YORK CITY.
Boarding and Day School for Boys and Young Men of 7 to 20.

MRS. KATHARINE SEDGWICK VALLERIO.—Lessons in elocution, French, and Italian; hall and parlor recitations; best references given. Address No. 101 West 49th-st.

PENNINGTON SEMINARY—THOS. HANLON, D. D., Pennington, New-Jersey, for both sexes: we excel in healthfulness, convenience, discipline, thorough teaching, home comforts, and moderate charges.

RYE SEMINARY, RYE, N. Y.—A SCHOOL for young ladies. The best advantages are afforded in all departments of education. For circulars and particulars, address Mrs. & J. LIPE, Principal.

ROOM FOR MORE PUPILS, AFTER THE Holidays, at Canning Institute for Young Ladies, Sing Sing, N. Y.; first-class advantages. Rev. C. D. Rice, Prin.

GARDNER INSTITUTE FOR YOUNG LADIES and Misses, 4 West 47th-st.—21st year commences Sept. 26. Rev. Dr. & Mrs. C. H. Gardner, Principals.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE, NYACK, N. Y., reopens its Winter session Jan. 6. Both sexes. Popular prices. Send for catalogue. T. H. BANNISTER, A. M.

GOLDEN HILL SEMINARY FOR YOUNG Ladies, Bridgeport, Conn. Address Miss Emily Nelson.

STATIONERY.

DIARIES FOR 1879.—ALL KINDS. EXPENSE Book. Bank Books. Stationery and Printing. Orders solicited. FRANCIS & LOUTREL, No. 45 Maiden-lane.

LOST AND FOUND.

LOST—PAIR GOLD SLEEVE BUTTONS REAR Lenox Library. A liberal reward will be cheerfully rewarded. Address G. A., No. 31 West 24th-st.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

FEMALES.

THE UP-TOWN OFFICE OF THE TIMES.

The up-town office of THE TIMES is located at No. 1,238 Broadway, south-east corner of 32d-st. Open daily, Sundays included, from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. Subscriptions received and copies of THE TIMES for sale.

ADVERTISEMENTS RECEIVED UNTIL 9 P. M.

CHAMBER-MAID.—BY A COMPETENT PERson; willing to assist in anything else required; four years' City reference. Call at No. 19 West 30th-st.

COOK, CHAMBER-MAID, AND WAITRESS.—By two sisters, together; both good laundresses; will do work of private family if required; competent and obliging; City or country; best City references. Address K. W., Box No. 310 Times Up-town Office, No. 1,258 Broadway.

COOK.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG WOMAN to cook, wash, and iron; country preferred; has good reference. Call, for two days, at No. 140 West 19th-st., candy store.

COOK.—FIRST CLASS; THOROUGHLY UNDERstands her business; best City references from last place. Address K. M., No. 292 3d-av.

HOUSE-WORK.—BY A RESPECTABLE WOMan, for house-work; good cook, washer, and ironer, and good baker; best City reference. Call at No. 132 3d-av., rear, between 14th and 15th sts.

HOUSE-WORK, &c.—BY A YOUNG AMERIcan girl to assist in house-work and make herself generally useful. Address Capable, Box 198 Times Office.

WASHING.—A RESPECTABLE COLORED woman wishes gentlemen's or family washing; 50 to 75 cents per dozen. Call at No. 122 West 33d-st., near 6th-av.

WET-NURSE.—BY A RESPECTABLE YOUNG married woman, first baby 3 weeks old, as wet-nurse. Apply, for two days, at No. 121 9th-av.; ring third bell.

MALES.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS MAN, A Scotchman; lifetime among first-class horses and carriages in Europe and this country; has a thorough knowledge in training ladies' and gentlemen's horses to saddle or harness; leaving on account of employer going abroad; references from former and present employer good. Address Private Stable, No. 104 West 56th-st.

COACHMAN.—BY A RESPECTABLE MAN; Protestant; competent in every respect; several years' experience in this City; excellent testimonials for strict sobriety, honesty, industry, and capability. Call or address Henry, care present employer, E. M., No. 66 Lispenard-st.

COACHMAN.—BY A PRACTICAL MAN; SKILLED in the treatment of horses, carriages, and harness; neat, careful, and attentive driver; will work solely for his employer's interest; remuneration moderate; excellent testimonials from eminent men in this City. Call or address J. D., No. 215 East 46th-st.

COACHMAN AND GROOM.—BY A RESPECTable young Englishman; understands thoroughly his duties; will make himself useful in a gentleman's service; highest testimonials. Call or address W. M., No. 13 East 27th-st., saddlery store.

COACHMAN.—BY A COLORED MAN AS COACHman and groom; is willing to make himself useful; first-class City references. Call or address H. B., No. 216 West 29th-st., Room No. 8.

COACHMAN.—BY A FIRST-CLASS COACHman and groom; Protestant; single; thorough horseman; experienced in the business; excellent City driver; best reference given. Call or address J. G., 50 West 10th-st.

COACHMAN.—BY A GOOD FRENCH COACHman in a private family; best City reference: 10

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

In reviewing the transactions in real estate during the year just closed, we are forced to the conclusion that those who were by necessity compelled to sell did so invariably to the advantage of the purchaser, and the sales at the "Exchange" show this, for they were principally confined to the sale of property where the mortgage was in default or where it became a matter of necessity, as in the closing up of an estate. In the first instance, the holder of the mortgage, as a rule, was compelled to secure his investment by buying in the property, and in the second, the highest bidder, in nine cases out of ten, was some one pecuniarily interested. The old theory for so many years entertained by capitalists that there was no security like landed security, if not exploded, has, at least for the time being, been suspended. During the days of inflation, a City lot was sent up, by the enthusiasm of speculators, "like a rocket," but to the chagrin, if not the ruin, of the shrewd, or supposed to be shrewd, operator "came down like a stick." The memory of most of our readers will recall many instances of this kind, but they can also remember that in the flush times exaggerated values were attached to real estate all over the country—unmistakably in this locality. Operators expended their money in margins and spread themselves extensively, and when the trouble came and would-be sellers were abundant and buyers scarce, interest and taxes swallowed up fortunes and bankruptcy was the natural and inevitable result. Now, in this business as in others matters are becoming settled and the prospects are brightening. Those who resisted the temptations presented by professed opportunities for margins can now safely indulge in investigating the whole field and in selecting such property as promises a legitimate return for investment, with the assurance of an increased return in the future. A healthy improved feeling has been reflected within the past few months and a degree of confidence shown which bids fair to blossom into a better and also a safer business in the coming Spring than we have had for years past. Building operations during the year have been quite extensive and numerous private sales of late have been effected at fair prices, a fact encouraging to those who can afford to hold on until confidence is fully restored. Those who must sell must suffer. Those who can wait will assuredly secure the advantage. The total value of City real estate sold at the Exchange for the year 1878 was $20,486,145, as against $20,382,740, the figures for the year 1877.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE.—TO CLOSE AN ESTATE.—THE DESIRABLE business corner property, Nos. 40 Franklin and 76 Elm st., New-York City, will be sold by RICHARD P. HANCOCK, Auctioneer, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, on THURSDAY, Jan. 16, 1879, at 12 o'clock. For particulars apply to A. W. LEGGETT, No. 39 Pearl-st. or WM. S. SYME, Attorney, No. 170 Broadway.

PROPOSITIONS WILL BE RECEIVED for lease and improvement of the premises No. 5 Chatham-square, also fronting on Catharine-st; lot, 25 by 91. Apply to JOSEPH D. FAY, No. 7 Nassau-st., New-York.

FOR SALE.—CHEAP HOUSES.—10 NEW HOUSES, accessible by street cars, taken for mortgages, $1,250 and $1,800; less than cost. Apply to R. A. YOUNG, No. 20 Exchange-place.

A CHARMING PARK-AV. FULL SIZE HOUSE, near 86th-st; bargain. V. K. STEVENSON, Jr., 4 Pine-st., 35 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, flats, to let and for sale. PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

SUPREME COURT SALE IN PARTITION. VALUABLE STORE PROPERTY, NORTH-WEST CORNER OF 6TH-AV. AND 14TH-ST.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON will sell at auction, on TUESDAY, JAN. 7, 1879, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, under the direction of S. S. Williamson, Referee, the five four-story brick buildings (with stores) and lots, on the north-west corner of 6TH-AV. AND 14TH-ST., and the four-story brown-stone front dwelling-house and lot, on 14 st., in rear of 6th-av. stores. It is seldom that so desirable a piece of real estate, situate on the corner of one of the most thriving avenues in this City, is offered at public sale. The property is very accessible from almost any portion of the City, the following railroad lines stopping at this corner, viz.: Metropolitan Elevated Railroad, Sixth-Avenue Railroad, and Fourteenth-Street and Christopher-Street Ferry Railroad. ALSO, at same time, house and lot, No. 237 East 10th-st., houses and lots, Nos. 23, 25, and 27 Tompkins-place, Brooklyn, and about 10 acres of land in the City of Oswego, N. Y.

THE SALE WILL BE ABSOLUTE.

60 PER CENT. ON BOND AND MORTGAGE.

Maps and particulars at office of auctioneers, No. 7 Pine-st., or at office of the Referee, No. 9 Pine-st.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET IN THE TIMES BUILDING. APPLY TO GEORGE JONES, TIMES OFFICE.

COUNTRY REAL ESTATE.

EXCHANGE.—AN ELEGANT COUNTRY SEAT and fruit farm on the Hudson, north of Poughkeepsie, cost over $40,000; unincumbered; for a full-sized, brown-stone house, (unincumbered,) near 5th or Madison av., below 53d-st. Photographs and plans at our office. Also others.

T. S. CLARKSON & CO., No. 149 Broadway.

HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED.

HOUSE WANTED—A FOUR-STORY HOUSE, between 26th and 60th sts., in good neighborhood, for occupation 1st March: rent not over $1,200. Address B, C. G., Box No. 120 Times Office.

SHIPPING.

GREAT SOUTHERN FREIGHT AND PASSENGER LINE, FOR CHARLESTON, S.C., FLORIDA PORTS, AND ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH AND SOUTH-WEST.

SAILING FROM PIER NO. 27 NORTH RIVER,
WEDNESDAYS and SATURDAYS at 3 P. M.
CITY OF ATLANTA.....SATURDAY, Jan. 4
CHARLESTON.....WEDNESDAY, Jan. 8
PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS.

Insurance to destination at lowest rates of premium. Goods forwarded free of commission. Passenger tickets and through bills of lading issued and signed at the office of JAMES W. QUINTARD & CO., Agents, Office on the Pier, Or W. P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. Or BENTLEY D. HASELL, General Agent. Great Southern Freight Line, 317 Broadway.

PALMETTO FREIGHT LINE.

VIA STEAM-SHIP TO CHARLESTON, S. C., and the SAVANNAH and CHARLESTON RAILROAD to all points in the South and South-west. Freight rates and Insurance at lowest figures. Bills of lading signed at Pier No. 27 North River. CHAS. B. OWENS, General Agent. Palmetto Freight Line, No. 315 Broadway.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF RIO DE JANEIRO, Capt. WEIR, will sail for the above ports on Saturday, Jan. 4, at 2 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 2d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight at low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance less than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, having elegant accommodations, apply to H. B. HALLORY & CO., Agents. Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.
Steamer ASHLAND, Saturday, Jan. 4.
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina direct, from Pier No. 12 N. R., at 3 P. M. Only line in connection through tickets and bills of lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, Ga. Insurance ½ per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading and passage rates, apply to J. K. ROBERTS, No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

CITY OF COLUMBUS, Capt. NICKERSON, Wednesday, Jan. 1, at 12 M.
CITY OF SAVANNAH, Capt. MALLORY, Saturday, Jan. 4, at 3 P. M., from Pier No. 43 North River, connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

GEO. YONGE, Agent
C. D. OWENS, Ocean S. S. Co. and
General Agent A. & G. R. R. Central R. R. of Ga.,
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, as follows:
Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 8
Steam-ship.....SATURDAY, Jan. 18
Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. McKELLAR, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW YORK, HAVANA & MEXICAN MAIL S. S. LINE. Steamers leave Pier No. 3 North River at 3 P. M.

FOR HAVANA DIRECT AND VERA CRUZ, Calling at Progreso, Campeche, and Frontera.

CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Saturday, Jan. 11
CITY OF WASHINGTON, (Havana only.) Thurs., Jan. 16
CITY OF VERA CRUZ.....Saturday, Jan. 25
Steamer leaves New-Orleans Jan. 8 for Vera Cruz, connecting with steamer for Havana, New-York, and above ports.

T. ALEXANDER & SONS, Nos. 51 and 53 Broadway.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO., BANKERS,

16 and 18 Nassau-st., New-York.

Dealers in United States Bonds, and Stocks of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn.

Buy and sell on Commission, for cash or on margin, all securities dealt in at the New-York Stock Exchange.

Interest allowed on deposits, subject to draft at sight.

JAMES A. TROWBRIDGE, DONALD MACKAY, LATHAM A. FISH.

New-York City

6 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, COUPON OR REGISTERED, payable in 1896.

BUFFALO CITY 5 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1882.

BUFFALO CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1890.

ROCHESTER CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1893.

JERSEY CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1891.

ALSO, A CHOICE LOT OF FIRST-CLASS RAILROAD BONDS.

FOR SALE BY

DANIEL A. MORAN,

49 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK.

FIRST MORTGAGE

SEVEN PER CENT. BONDS OF THE

Sioux City and Pembina R. R. Co.,

Issued at less than $6,000 per mile of road, and GUARANTEED, principal and interest, by the DAKOTA SOUTHERN R. R. CO.

The road is completed, and the net earnings are in excess of the interest on its entire mortgage debt.

Only a few of these bonds remain for sale at 90 and accrued interest.

WALSTON H. BROWN & BRO.,

No. 34 Pine-st., New-York.

STATE LINE,

TO GLASGOW, LIVERPOOL, DUBLIN, BELFAST, AND LONDONDERRY.

From Pier No. 42 N. R., foot of Canal-st, as follows:
STATE OF GEORGIA.....Thursday, Jan. 2
STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.....Thursday, Jan. 9

First Cabin, $55 to $70, according to accommodations; excursion tickets, $100 to $120. Second Cabin, $40; excursion tickets, $75. Steerage at lowest rates.

AUSTIN, BALDWIN & CO., Agents, No. 72 Broadway, New-York.

STEERAGE tickets at No. 45 Broadway, and at the company's pier, foot of Canal-st., North River.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON AND BREMEN.
Company's pier foot of 2d-st., Hoboken.
ODER.....Sat. Jan. 4 | RHEIN.....Sat. Jan. 18
DONAU.....Sat. Jan. 11 | NECKAR.....Sat. Jan. 25

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100 gold
Second cabin.....60 gold
Steerage.....30 currency

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid steerage certificates, $30 currency. For freight or passage apply to OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY

between New-York and Havre.
Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.
LABRADOR, SANGLIER.....Saturday, Jan. 4, 5:30 A. M.
AMERIQUE, DELORD.....Wednesday, Jan. 22, 5:30 A. M.
FRANCE, TREDELLE.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.

Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passage apply to LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.
CITY OF BERLIN.....Saturday, Jan. 4, 2 P. M.
CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Saturday, Jan. 11, 2 P. M.
CITY OF BRUSSELS.....Saturday, Jan. 18, 2 P. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.
CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $28, currency. Drafts at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

JOHN G. DALE, Agent,
No. 31 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

ANCHOR LINE U. S. MAIL STEAMERS.

NEW-YORK AND GLASGOW
From Pier No. 20 North River, New-York.
Anchoria.....Jan. 4, 2 P. M. | Circassia.....Jan. 18, 2 P. M.
Bolivia.....Jan. 11, 7 A. M. | Devonia.....Jan. 25, 7 A. M.
Cabins, $60 to $80. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
Second Cabin, $40. Steerage, $28.

NEW-YORK TO LONDON DIRECT.
From Pier No. 46 North River, foot of Charles-st.
Victoria.....Jan. 4, 2 P. M. | Victoria.....Jan. 18, 2 P. M.
Cabins $50 and $65. Excursion tickets at reduced rates.
HENDERSON BROTHERS, Agents, 7 Bowling Green.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg American Packet Company's line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.
WIELAND.....Jan. 2 | SILESIA.....Thurs., Jan. 16
SUEVIA.....Thurs., Jan. 9 | HERDER.....Thurs., Jan. 23

Rates of Passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100, gold; second cabin, $60, gold; Steerage, $30, currency.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents. General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

ROTTERDAM LINE.

Steamers leave Jersey City, near Pavonia Ferry.
SCHIEDAM.....Saturday, Jan. 11
ROTTERDAM.....Wednesday, Jan. 22

Cabin, $65-$70. Intermediate, $45-$50. Steerage, $23.
R. CAZAUX, General Agent, No. 27 South William-st.
FUNCH, EDYE & CO., Agents, 27 So. Wm-st., Freight Agts. 50 B'way, Gen. Passage Agt.

NATIONAL LINE.—FROM NEW PIER 39 N. R. —FOR LONDON. (Victoria Docks:)—
Greece, Jan. 4, 1878, 2 P. M. | Italy, Jan. 18, 1879, 3 P. M.
—FOR LIVERPOOL AND QUEENSTOWN—
Spain, Jan. 4, 1879, 1 P. M. | England, Jan. 18, 1 P. M.

Cabin, $50 to $70, currency; steerage, $26. Drafts from £1 upwards issued at very low rates. Company's offices, 69 and 73 Broadway. F. W. J. HURST, Manager.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.

Pier foot Canal-st., North River.
For ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship CRESCENT CITY.....Friday, Jan. 10, noon
Connecting for Central and South America and Mexico.
For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steamship COLON.....Monday, Jan. 20, noon
Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.
From San Francisco, for
Steam-ship CITY OF PEKIN.....Sat., Jan. 4, 1879, noon
From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship AUSTRALIA.....Monday, Jan. 20, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 257 Broadway.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

FROM PIER 16 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.
Magnificent accommodation for passengers.
S. S. SARATOGA, (new).....Thursday, Jan. 2, 12 M.
S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Jan. 11

Tickets issued also for VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WARD & CO. No. 113 Wall-st.

FINANCIAL.

OFFICE OF THE SILVER ISLET CONSOLIDATED MINING AND LAND COMPANY, No. 52 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Dec. 9, 1878.

PROPOSALS IN WRITING ARE INVITED and will be received until 3 o'clock P. M. of Wednesday, the 15th day of January next, for the sale to the Trustee for cancellation of $75,000 of the bonds of this company, or portions thereof, naming numbers of the bonds offered.

No proposals as a price exceeding par can be accepted under the trust authority by purchase; interest accruing to Jan. 15 only will be allowed.

Proposals to be addressed to C. P. Dixon, Trustee, at the office of the company.

EDWARD LEARNED, President.

FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. SINKING FUND BONDS OF THE

SCIOTO VALLEY RAILWAY CO. OF OHIO.

Principal due Jan. 1, 1896.
Coupons due January and July.
Issued at $12,000 per mile.
A small amount for sale at 105 and interest, by
WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.,
No. 26 Nassau-st.

THE MARKET NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 14, 1878.

NOTICE.—STOCKHOLDERS OF THIS BANK ARE NOTIFIED that on the 31st day of December next the capital stock of this bank will be reduced ($500,000) five thousand shares. On and after which date new certificates will be issued for the remaining shares, and payment made for the reduction, with interest.

A dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. out the reduced capital has been declared, payable at the same time.

The transfer-books will be closed from this date to Jan. 1, 1879, except for transfer of fractional shares.

By order of the Board. A. GILBERT, Cashier.

KIMBALL, HOWELL & CO.,

MEMBERS N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE,
No. 17 New-st. and No. 68 Broadway,

Buy, sell, and carry on margin all active stocks dealt in at the Exchange. Special attention given to

LOTS OF 5, 10, 20 SHARES OR MORE.

CITY AND COUNTY BONDS.

We offer some choice bonds bearing 7 and 8 per cent., issued for municipal purposes. First-class securities for investment always to hand.

A. W. BRADLEY & CO.,
No. 12 Wall-st., N. Y.

ALL SPECULATIVE ACCOUNTS DECLINED.

J. HARMANUS FISHER,
(Member of Baltimore Stock Exchange for past 24 years.)
BANKER AND STOCK BROKER,
Post Office Box No. 60, Baltimore, Md.

Solicits correspondence and orders. Refers by permission to Messrs. Hollgarten & Co., Messrs. G. T. Bonner & Co., John B. Manning, Esq.

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO
Capital, $10,000,000, gold. Reserve, $3,500,000, gold.
NEW-YORK AGENCY NO. 62 WALL-ST.
Buys and sells exchange and telegraphic transfers. Issues commercial and traveilers' credits. Executes orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

DIVIDENDS.

FIFTY-THIRD DIVIDEND.

HANOVER

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

A semi-annual dividend of FIVE (5) PER CENT. is payable on demand at the office of the company, No. 120 Broadway.

I. REMSEN LANE,
Vice-President and Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1879.

NEW-YORK CITY INSURANCE CO.,

NO. 100 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

The Board of Directors have declared a semi-annual dividend of FIVE PER CENT., payable on and after Jan. 6 inst.

WM. M. RANDELL,
Secretary.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF REXTOR-ST., NEW-YORK, Dec. 28, 1878.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, Trustee, will pay, on and after Jan. 1, 1879, TWENTY DOLLARS on each bond of the Union Pacific Railway, Southern Branch, which have been examined, subject to the agreement of March 1, 1876. Coupons must be left over night for examination.

EDWARD KING, President.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 28, 1878.

NOTICE.—COUPONS OF THE FOLLOWING bonds, maturing Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid on and after Jan. 2, at the office of Messrs. JESUP, PATON & CO., No. 52 William-st., New-York:
Chicago and Alton Railroad first mortgage.
St. Louis, Jacksonville, and Chicago Railroad second mortgage.
Joliet and Chicago Railroad first mortgage.
Dubuque and Sioux City Railroad first mortgage.

NOTICE.

THE NEW-YORK ELEVATED RAILROAD COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, No. 7 Broadway, NEW-YORK, Dec. 22, 1878.

The interest due in January next on the bonds of this company will be paid on and after THURSDAY, Jan. 2, 1879, on presentation of the coupons at the Corn Exchange Bank, corner of William and Beaver sts.

J. A. COWING, Treasurer.

BANK OF AMERICA, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTORS OF THE Bank of America, have this day declared a dividend of Four per Cent. for the current six months, free from tax, payable to the stockholders on and after Thursday, Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will remain closed from this date until the morning of Jan. 2, 1879.

ROBERT JAFFRAY, Cashier.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

THIRTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of Three per Cent., free of tax, out of the profits of last six months, payable Jan. 2, 1879. Transfer-books will close 21st instant. F. M. JOHNSON, Cashier.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a semi-annual dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879, upon the shares as registered this day. The transfer-books will be closed from this date until Jan. 3, 1879, except for the transfer of fractional shares.

C. V. SANTA, Cashier.

THE HANOVER NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Three and a Half per Cent., free of tax, payable on the 2d of January next. The transfer-books will be closed on the 21st inst., and will be reopened on Jan. 3.

GEORGE W. PERKINS, Cashier.

OFFICE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 28, 1878.

THE COUPONS DUE JAN. 1, 1879, ON THE Florida Railroad Company's FIRST MORTGAGE bonds, issued in 1877, will be paid on presentation at the banking house of Messrs. Baltzer & Lichtenstein, No. 52 Exchange-place, New-York.

AARON MARKS,
Treasurer.

FIRST DIVISION OF THE ST. PAUL AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.—The coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, upon the $700,000 issue of mortgage bonds of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company will be paid on presentation on and after 22d January, 1879, at the office of Messrs. J. S. Kennedy & Co., No. 41 Cedar-st., New-York.

JOHN S. KENNEDY,
Trustee.

NATIONAL BUTCHERS' AND DROVERS' BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 14, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THIS BANK HAVE this day declared a dividend of Three per Cent., free of tax, from the earnings of the current six months, payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will remain closed until that date.

G. G. BRINCKERHOFF, Cashier.

KANSAS PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

The unpaid half of the coupon which matured JAN. 1, 1878, from the SEVEN PER CENT. LAND GRANT BONDS of this company, also the coupon due same date from coupon certificate, series F, G, and H, will be paid on presentation at the National Bank of Commerce in New-York.

A. MEIER, Trustee.

THE COUPONS OF THE NEW FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS OF THE ST. PAUL, STILLWATER AND TAYLOR'S FALLS RAILROAD COMPANY, due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid at our office.

WALSTON H. BROWN & BRO., No. 34 Pine-st.

MECHANICS' NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Four per cent., free of tax, payable on and after 2d of January next. The transfer-book will be closed until that date.

WM. H. COX, Cashier.

BOWERY NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 17, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of FIVE PER CENT. from the net earnings of the past six months, payable Jan. 2, 1879.

R. HAMILTON, Cashier.

OFFICE PEOPLE'S FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY, No. 259 CANAL-ST., NEW-YORK, Dec. 26, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a semi-annual dividend of Six (6) per cent., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

A. C. MILLER, Secretary.

DIVIDENDS.

THE INTEREST AND DIVIDENDS ON THE following bonds and stocks are payable at the banking house of WINSLOW, LANIER & CO., No. 26 Nassau-st., on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

Allegheny Valley R. R. 7 3-10 per cent. bonds.
Allegheny City, Penn., Compromise bonds.
Augusta, Ind., bonds.
Aurelius County, Ohio, bonds.
Cincinnati, Richmond and Chicago R. R. 1st Mtge. bonds
Columbus, Ind., City bonds.
Danville, Ind., School bonds.
Dayton and Michigan R. R. 1st Mtge. bonds.
Frankfort, Ind., School bonds.
Grant County, Ind., bonds.
Hamilton County, Ind., bonds.
Howard County, Ind., bonds, called in.
Indianapolis, Ind., bonds, various issues.
Indianapolis, Ind., Car Company bonds.
Kokomo, Ind., City bonds.
Marion, Ind., Water-works bonds.
Madison County, Ind., bonds.
Massillon and Cleveland R. R. 1st Mtge. City of, bonds.
Monroe County, Ohio, bonds.
Peru, Ind., City of, Water-works bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway 1st Mtge. bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway 2d Mtge. bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway Construction bonds.
Scioto Valley R. R. 1st Mtge. bonds.
St. Johns Railway Co., Florida, 1st Mtge. 10 p. ct. bonds.
Scioto County, Ohio, coupons from Treasurer's office.
Scioto County, Ohio, R'w'y bonds, principal and interest.
Scioto County Children's Home bonds.
Tipton County, Ind., bonds.
Terre Haute, Ind., bonds issued to E. T. H. and Chicago Railway Company.
Wheeling, West Va., Compromise bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway Company, Special Guaranteed Stock. Quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent.
Second Dividend of 4 per cent. on Stock of the Louisiana National Bank of New-Orleans, La.
Jan. 7, 1879.—Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway Co. Guaranteed Stock. Quarterly Dividend of 1¾ per cent.
Jan. 15, 1879.—Richmond, Ind., 5 per cent. bonds.
Jan. 20, 1879.—Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton R. R. Co., 2d Mtge. bonds.
Jan. 25, 1879.—City of Fort Wayne, Ind., 8 per cent. bonds.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF REXTOR-ST., NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

THE FOLLOWING COUPONS, DUE JAN. 1, 1879, are payable at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York:
Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Company. Jan. 1, 1879. Series A.
Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark Railroad Company.
Union Pacific Railroad Company, First Mortgage.
City of Rochester.
North-western Telegraph Co.
Peekskill Water Bonds.
St. Louis National Stock Yards.
Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Registered Interest.
Town of Covington.
Town of Wheatland.
Town of Gainesville.
Town of Stephentown.
Town of Warsaw.
Town of Pavillion.
Town of Middlebury.
Town of German Flats.

JAS. H. OGILVIE, Secretary.

THE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE COMPANY have this day declared a dividend of TWO PER CENT. upon its Capital Stock, payable on the 1st day of February next, at this office.

The Transfer-books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on TUESDAY, the 31st inst., and will be reopened on the morning of WEDNESDAY, the 5th day of February next.

R. D. WORCESTER, Treasurer.

THE MICHIGAN CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, TREASURER'S OFFICE, GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE COMPANY have this day declared a dividend of TWO PER CENT. upon its Capital Stock, payable on the 1st day of February next, at this office.

The Transfer-books will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on TUESDAY, the 31st inst., and will be reopened on the morning of WEDNESDAY, the 5th day of February next.

C. VANDERBILT, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 24, 1878.

NASHVILLE AND DECATUR RAILROAD Company First Mortgage 7 per cent. coupons.
SOUTH AND NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD Company First Mortgage 8 per cent. gold coupons.
All due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid on presentation at the office of Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co., corner of Wall and Broad sts., New-York, on and after that date.

W. BANNEY, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, No. 9 NASSAU-ST., NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

THE COUPONS OF THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, the Western Pacific Railroad Company, and the California and Oregon Railroad Company, due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid in gold at the office of FISK & HATCH, No. 5 Nassau-st.

Holders presenting 10 or more coupons will leave them for examination, in which case a receipt will be given and payment made on the following day.

C. P. HUNTINGTON, Vice-President.

THE CHATHAM NATIONAL BANK, No. 196 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

FORTY-SIXTH DIVIDEND.

The Directors of this bank have declared a semi-annual dividend of THREE (3) PER CENT., payable, free of tax, on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed until Jan. 2, 1879.

H. P. DOREMUS, Cashier.

SHELDON & WADSWORTH,

No. 10 Wall-st., will pay interest due Jan. 1, to New-York holders of coupon certificates Little Rock and Fort Smith Railway, on presentation.

W. B. WILBUR, Treasurer.

OFFICE OF THE CANADA SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, GRAND CENTRAL DEPOT, NEW-YORK, Dec. 30, 1878.

THE COUPONS DUE JAN. 1, 1879. ON THE new First Mortgage Bonds of this company will be paid at the office of the Union Trust Company, No. 73 Broadway, New-York, on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

C. VANDERBILT, Treasurer.

BROOKLYN TRUST COMPANY, No. 177 MONTAGUE-ST., CORNER OF CLINTON, BROOKLYN, E. D., Dec. 30, 1878.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable Jan. 6, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed from Jan. 2 to the date of payment.

WM. H. BUNKER, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE FARMERS LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, No. 26 EXCHANGE-PLACE, CORNER WILLIAM-ST. NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

THE COUPONS OF THE EVANSVILLE AND Crawfordsville Railroad Company, due on Jan. 1, will be paid on and after Jan. 2 at this office.

GEO. P. FITCH, Secretary.

CEDAR FALLS AND MINNESOTA RAILROAD COMPANY.—The coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, upon the mortgage bonds of the Cedar Falls and Minnesota Railroad Company will be paid on presentation on and after the 2d January, 1879, at the office of Messrs. J. S. Kennedy & Co., No. 41 Cedar-st., New-York.

JOHN S. KENNEDY, President.

THE NATIONAL SHOE AND LEATHER BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

FIFTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS of this bank have declared a dividend of Four (4) per Cent., payable, free of tax, on and after Jan. 2, proximo.

The transfer-book will be closed from Dec. 26, 1878, until Feb. 1, 1879.

J. M. CRANE, Cashier.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of TWO PER CENT., free of tax, payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879, until which time the transfer-books will remain closed.

A. W. APGAR, Cashier.

IRVING NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of FOUR (4) PER CENT., free of all tax, payable on the second (2d) day of January, 1879, until which date the transfer-books will remain closed.

GEO. E. SOUPES, Cashier.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THIRTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of Three per Cent., free of tax, out of the profits of last six months, payable Jan. 2, 1879. Transfer-books will close 21st inst. F. M. JOHNSON, Cashier.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a semi-annual dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879, upon the shares as registered this day. The transfer-books will be closed from this date until Jan. 3, 1879, except for the transfer of fractional shares.

C. V. SANTA, Cashier.

THE HANOVER NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Three and a Half per Cent., free of tax, payable on the 2d of January next. The transfer-books will be closed on the 21st inst., and will be reopened on Jan. 3.

GEORGE W. PERKINS, Cashier.

OFFICE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 28, 1878.

THE COUPONS DUE JAN. 1, 1879, ON THE Florida Railroad Company's FIRST MORTGAGE bonds, issued in 1877, will be paid on presentation at the banking house of Messrs. Baltzer & Lichtenstein, No. 52 Exchange-place, New-York.

AARON MARKS,
Treasurer.

FIRST DIVISION OF THE ST. PAUL AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.—The coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, upon the $700,000 issue of mortgage bonds of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company will be paid on presentation on and after 22d January, 1879, at the office of Messrs. J. S. Kennedy & Co., No. 41 Cedar-st., New-York.

JOHN S. KENNEDY,
Trustee.

NATIONAL BUTCHERS' AND DROVERS' BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 14, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THIS BANK HA

KEEPING NEW YEAR'S DAY.

THE CELEBRATION IN NEW-YORK AND BROOKLYN.

A THRONG OF CALLERS IN THE STREETS—AN UNUSUAL NUMBER OF PERSONS "AT HOME"—THE DAY AT BLACKWELL'S ISLAND INSTITUTIONS—OBSERVANCE IN BROOKLYN.

The last echo of the chimes that welcomed 1879 has died away; the braying of the discordant tin horns has ceased; the customary rounds of New Year calls have been made, and now the new year is already old, familiar, a year to all appearances very much like that which ended on Tuesday night, and 40-day men go back to their different tasks, scarcely stopping to think that anything worth mentioning has happened. The day began with pleasant skies overhead, but with a rawness in the atmosphere that seemed a sure forerunner of storm. The streets were full of callers as early as 10 o'clock. They traveled in all sorts of ways. Some walked, others were driven about in hacks, and here and there were found bodies of callers who had engaged stages to carry them about to the houses of the friends of one or more of the party. The pedestrians found no fault with the walking until after noon, when, from the clouds that had crept over the face of the sun, know began to fall, dampening top-coats and sidewalks, and driving many persons into the street-cars and into high-priced carriages. When the full tide of callers was in motion, at 2 o'clock, the streets were dotted with men, young and old, who went from place to place armed with their lists of places at which to call. Ladies were rarely met with. Along Fifth-avenue and in the streets crossing it, it was found that nearly everybody was "at home," and not in many years have so few baskets been hung at the outer doors to give notice that the inmates did not desire to receive callers. In spite of the urgent efforts of temperance advocates to effect a reform in the use of wines on New Year refreshment tables, the decanters and glasses were universally retained, and "best wishes" for happiness and success were exchanged over the sherry or port. The effects of this custom were observable late in the day, and it has probably come home to many a caller this morning with disagreeable sensations in head and stomach.

The observance of the day was more general than for several years. Families that have adhered to the custom of holding a long levee had many more callers than usual, and the greetings exchanged seemed to be more cheerful than they were a year ago, inspired, perhaps, by a feeling of growing confidence in the belief that the day marked the beginning of a year of greater business prosperity, of financial stability, and of a better public sense of the necessity for strict economy and moderation in political management. To those ladies who were compelled to entertain parties of political rounders, the friends near or remote of their husbands or fathers, the day was not without its unpleasant features; for, reasonably, these jovial rioters, who, after a full partaken of the hospitality of ten or a dozen tables, were inclined to be rude and boisterous, creatures to be tolerated, but denounced as unmitigated nuisances.

The business of liquor saloons, as usual, suffered in consequence of the agreeability afforded to the pantries of those who received callers. The elevated railroads were overrun with travelers, and the quickness with which trips could be made to Harlem led an unusually large number of visitors to the upper part of the City. Many of these travelers went to the lake in the Central Park. There was business enough for the surface roads, and the street-cars were constantly loaded with callers who had short distances to travel.

Toward night the snow-storm increased in strength, and the temperature becoming lower the snow accumulated until there were several inches of it in the streets. With the coming of nightfall the glare of lights from long rows of brilliantly illuminated parlors gave to the streets an unusually cheerful aspect which the storm could not destroy. Through this storm late callers hurried along from house to house until nearly midnight, when the lights began to disappear, and belated and too convivial stragglers labored along through it on their way to their homes.

Owing to the fact that the holiday festivities at the charitable institutions are, as a general rule, confined to Thanksgiving and Christmas, the first day of the new year was not specially observed at any of the various homes, asylums, and hospitals scattered throughout the City. At the Penitentiary on Blackwell's Island a musical mass was celebrated at 10 A. M. in the chapel, by Rev. Father Fetter, assisted by a choir selected from one of the City churches. Between 400 and 500 male prisoners, and 100 females, attended, the latter being hidden, as is the custom at the prison, behind drawn curtains at both sides of the simple altar. A large number of the prisoners of both sexes received communion, and a sermon appropriate to the occasion was preached by the celebrant of the mass. Although the Commissioners of Charities and Correction added nothing to the ordinary prison fare, the majority of the convicts were the recipients of many delicacies from their friends. It was estimated that between 800 and 1,000 pounds of meats, fruits, and confectionery were received and distributed during the forenoon. When the steamboat Minnahanonck left the dock at the foot of East Twenty-sixth-street, at 10 A. M., her saloon and decks were well filled with visitors to the Penitentiary, Work-house, Lunatic Asylums, and the other institutions on the East River islands. Nearly all the passengers were shabbily attired, and evidently belonged to the poorer classes, yet there was scarcely half a dozen who did not carry well-filled baskets and packages of substantial and dainty edibles for their friends. Between 11 and 2 P. M. the Warden's office of the Penitentiary was filled with fathers, mothers, wives, and sisters, who conversed in subdued tones with the prisoners, while the latter partook of the good things brought to them. More than one instance the greetings were very affecting, and now and then tears stole down the weather-beaten cheeks of the youthful convicts as the drift of the conversation served to recall scenes and incidents of other and doubtless happier New Year's Days. Among the prisoners called from their cells to receive friends was a man of middle age, with dark, regular features. Failing to recognize any of the throng as he entered the office, he stood for an instant with bowed head. A pale, young woman, of delicate physique, who had been seated in an obscure corner of the room, expectantly watching the door, approached him from behind, and, softly laying her hand on his arm, said in a low voice, "Happy New Year, Jim." The man's features lighted up with apparent joy as he turned, and replied, "Same to you, Kate; but I hope it will be happier next year." His wife, for such she proved to be, produced her little store of dainties, and did not leave her husband's side until the shrill whistle of the Minnahanonck announced the time for the return to the City. Several visitors with special passes crossed during the afternoon in the steam-launch William H. Wickham, from the foot of East Fifty-second-street. All outdoor labor was suspended for the day on the Island. The various wards at Bellevue Hospital were filled during the afternoon with friends of the patients, but, aside from a few slight changes in the customary diet, nothing unusual marked the observance of the day.

The year was ushered in at St. Vincent's Home for Friendless Boys, in Warren-street, with the celebration of mass by Rev. Father Drumgoole, who preached a practical sermon to the inmates, numbering nearly 400, in the Chapel of the Immaculate Virgin. The boys were treated to an ample breakfast of beefsteak, bread, butter, and coffee, and permitted to enjoy themselves for the remainder of the day. In the afternoon they had various amusements, including recitations and the singing of songs. A number of excellent speeches were made by gentlemen belonging to the Home, and members of St. Joseph's Union, in each of which Father Drumgoole was deservedly complimented and wished many happy returns of the festive season.

To all appearances the custom of making New Year's calls was as fully observed in Brooklyn as in years past, notwithstanding the snow-storm which set in early in the day. Mayor Howell received calls from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M. in his office in the City Hall. Gen. Steinmetz, the newly-elected Controller, and City Auditor Ammerman, who also took office yesterday, received calls. At the theatres, afternoon and evening performances were held, and at the charitable and penal institutions good things were bountifully provided for the inmates.

NEW YEAR'S ACCIDENTS.

Patrick Boyle, of No. 204 West Twenty-seventh-street, fell on the sidewalk at Thirty-sixth-street and Ninth-avenue, yesterday afternoon, and dislocated his left shoulder. He was removed to Roosevelt Hospital.

Edward Atwood fell into the Hudson River, yesterday afternoon, from the pier at Bogart-street, and saved himself from drowning by clinging to the dock until rescued.

Michael Talley, of No. 252 West Nineteenth-street, while ascending a flight of stairs in his residence yesterday afternoon, fell down them and broke his right arm above the elbow. He was sent the New-York Hospital.

Theresa Rosenbaum, of No. 128 Seventh-street, hearing the noise of a New Year's procession in front of the house yesterday afternoon, threw up the window and looked out to see what was the matter, and while leaning out of the window she received a pistol bullet in the left cheek, fired by one of the riotous processionists. The wound is very painful, and will cause a permanent disfiguration.

A SUICIDE IDENTIFIED.

The man who on Tuesday committed suicide by jumping overboard from the ferry-boat New-Jersey, while she was on her trip from Jersey City to her slip at the foot of Cortlandt-street, is believed to have been Charles A. Lewis, a resident of Hudson, N. Y., who had been missing from his home since the 30th ult. Lewis was employed as a bookkeeper in the finishing mill of C. H. & F. H. Stott, at Stottsville, near Hudson. He was a married man, and had a son 14 years old. He was known to be financially embarrassed, but his employers, who have an office in Worth-street, in this City, said yesterday that his accounts with the firm were all right, and his books, which had been examined since his disappearance, were found correct. He left home on Monday without giving any intimation to his wife that he intended to absent himself, and when he did not return home on Monday night she became uneasy, and on making inquiries learned that he had taken the train for this City. He was traced to the Ashland House, where he slept on Monday night, but no further clue to his whereabouts was obtained until the detective heard of the suicide from the ferry-boat on Tuesday. Yesterday Mrs. Lewis called at Police Head-quarters, and, on obtaining a description of the man who had jumped overboard, became convinced that he was her husband. The hat which was picked up was similar to the one he wore when he left home, and the name "A. L. Croft," in the lining, was the name of the hatter in Hudson with whom her husband dealt. The identity of the drowned man is therefore almost positively established.

LAST YEAR'S FAILURES.

NINE HUNDRED AND SEVENTEEN REPORTED IN THIS CITY, WITH LIABILITIES AMOUNTING TO $64,000,000.

During the past year 917 failures were reported in this City, with liabilities to the amount of $63,958,403, and assets valued at $18,695,531. This exceeds the record of any former year, but the large number is mainly due to the repeal of the Bankrupt act, for during the last quarter the failures have been fewer than usual. Most of the weak firms have been wiped out, and the prospect in trade for the coming year is much brighter than a year ago.

Many well-known firms were compelled to suspend during the year who were regarded as perfectly solvent, and their failure was received with the greatest surprise, some of them having been in business for over half a century. Among them were Joseph Foulke's Sons, Olyphant & Co., Booth & Edgar, B. L. Solomon & Sons, Bryce & Smith, John F. Henry, Curran & Co., Henry Lawrence & Sons, J. C. Dayton & Co., James Reid & Co., J. L. Adams & Co., Jewell, Harrison & Co., Josl Hayden & Co., W. A. Ransom & Co.

The largest number of failures was in the liquor trade and among the bankers and brokers, 40 being ascribed to each. The liabilities of the bankers and brokers amounted to the large sum of $4,929,801, while their assets were only $559,073. Among the victims were S. M. Mills & Co., Haar & Co., J. R. Cecil & Co., and Davidson & Jones.

The liquor-dealers had liabilities to the amount of $1,958,251, and assets $475,569, the largest failures being Bryce & Smith, J. C. Dayton & Co., James Reid & Co., and Bayard & Perrenond.

The largest amount of liabilities in any single trade was among the carpenters and builders, the total being $9,246,352, while the assets were only $223,224. Among the prominent failures were ex-Register John McCool, ex-Alderman Terence Farley, Cockerill & Spaulding, James E. Cobyrn, and James Fettretch. Thirty-nine failures occurred in the boot and shoe trade, the liabilities being $2,159,599, and assets $792,180; among the firms were W. A. Ransom & Co., Whitney & Co., Powers & Gaston, and Cammeyer & Nason. Thirty-nine manufacturers also failed, owing debts to the amount of $2,829,104, and having assets valued at $2,655,917. The grocers come next, 38 having failed, with liabilities amounting to $1,071,375, and assets $438,865.

Among the hatters there were 29 failures, the liabilities aggregating $1,483,000 and assets $541,694, the largest firms being Jehial Read & Co., Joseph Mercy & Co., Baldwin & Flagg, and Blunt & Dusenbury. In the clothing trade there were 26 failures, with liabilities to the amount of $895,589, and assets $374,525. Nine merchant tailors failed, owing $70,122 and having assets $18,632. There were only six failures in the cloth and woolen goods trade, the total liabilities being $495,304 and assets $313,827. In the produce trade there were 23 failures, to the amount of $529,640, and assets $58,042, and in the provision line there were 24 failures, the liabilities amounting to $505,555, and assets $142,484. Among the firms were Jewell, Harrison & Co., L. D. Snell & Co., Gould H. Thorp & Co., and S. W. Lewis & Co. Twenty-six dealers in fancy goods failed, owing $810,316, and having assets to the amount of $348,280. In the dry-goods trade there were 14 failures, the total debts being $775,643 and assets $342,020.

Twenty failures were reported in the jewelry trade, in which the liabilities amounted to $734,811, and assets, $174,688; among the firms were Fellows, Forester & Co., Joseph Bochman & Son, Hamann & Koch, and Post & Spelz. Among the bankers there were 18 failures, to the extent of $606,838, and assets $117,439. Nineteen furniture dealers failed, owing $979,670, and having assets valued at $544,871. Twenty-one cigar dealers had like liabilities amounting to $202,519, and assets $56,891. The tobacco trade had eight failures, in which the aggregate liabilities were $405,226, and assets $185,351. Among the publishers and booksellers there were seven failures, the indebtedness being $272,578, and assets, $67,679. In the coal trade the general depreciation caused 10 failures, the total liabilities being $581,752, and assets $303,723. Among the firms were Wallace, Delaney & Co., and Robinson & Sons. The drug trade had its failures early in the year, and were precipitated by the failure of E. J. Dunning, Jr., the note broker; nine were reported, with liabilities amounting to $1,605,719, and assets $527,393. Among the firms were John F. Henry, Curran & Co., Downer & St. John, Hegeman & Co., and Day, Hoagland & Stiger. Ten fur dealers suspended; liabilities, $313,373, and assets, $91,667. The metal trade had eight failures, the liabilities reaching the large sum of $4,363,342, while the assets were valued at $2,667,218. In the hardware trade 13 failures were reported, on which the liabilities amounted to $4,220,770 and assets $184,560. Sixteen lumber dealers went under, owing $2,541,877, having assets $268,887; among them were Russell W. Adams & Co., J. C. Cameron & Co., and Biglin & Co. Fourteen stationers and printers failed, with debts to the amount of $324,885 and assets $86,469. Real estate agents and operators to the number of 14 failed, with liabilities amounting to $2,527,319 and assets of $866,607; among them were V. K. Stevenson, Jr., and John Fettretch. Twelve failures occurred in the millinery goods line, the total liabilities being $294,450, and assets $150,053; the principal firms were B. Travis & Co., A. W. Ketchum & Co., and Andrews & Sanford. In the paper trade there were 11 failures, the liabilities aggregating $169,302, and assets $63,164. Six shipping merchants suspended, owing $1,491,582, and having assets $699,520. Joseph Foulke's Sons were the most prominent. Six railroad contractors failed, to the amount of $1,510,682, while their assets were worth only $25,000. In the straw goods trade there were six failures for $589,914, and assets $381,632. Among them were Vandenhoff & Beatty, C. Dord & Co., and Henry F. Hills & Co. In the tea trade eight failures were reported, amounting to $536,057, and assets $126,275. Eight manufacturers of suits and skirts gave up business, owing $242,263, and having assets $82,809. Among the professional men who availed themselves of the Bankrupt act were 17 lawyers, who owed $536,376, and had assets $42,216; eight physicians, whose liabilities amounted to $304,269, assets $104,700; two clergymen, with debts to the amount of $99,000, and no assets; two editors, who owed $289,114, and had no assets; two actors, with debts of $75,000, assets $850. Two ex-Judges, a Police Commissioner, and a State Senator were among the bankrupts.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A LADY.

Mrs. Sarah C. Adams, of No. 131 Meeker street, Brooklyn, died in a carriage in front of the New-York Hospital on Tuesday night. Mrs. Adams belonged to a good family, and had very respectable connections in Boston, Mass. Her son was married to a Boston lady. Mrs. Adams had been ailing for some time. She went to Boston three weeks ago for her health. She there became worse. It was concluded to have her removed to New-York Hospital, and she arrived in this City last evening, reaching the Grand Central Depot at 6:15 o'clock. A carriage was procured, and she was placed in it and driven to the hospital, accompanied by her son, J. E. Adams, and his wife. When the hospital was reached, Mr. Adams went up the steps, rang the bell, and asked for the house-surgeon, who went to the carriage to see the lady. He was horrified to find her dead, sitting rigid in her seat beside her daughter-in-law, she having died on the way from the depot. The body was taken into the hospital. It was believed that Mrs. Adams had been suffering from epilepsy. Yesterday Deputy Coroner Goldschmiedt performed an autopsy on the remains, and found the lady's death was caused by a tumor of the brain. A permit was issued for the removal and interment of the body.

HEAVY WEATHER AT SEA.

The steam-ship Anchoria, of the Ancher Line, which arrived from Glasgow yesterday, had a very stormy voyage, head gales, with extremely heavy, irregular seas prevailing during the entire passage. Huge seas were frequently shipped, and the vessel rolled and pitched violently. On Sunday last the storm was at its height, and the steamer was obliged to force her way through the irregular seas which flooded her decks fore and aft. The men were stretched across the decks, for the safety of officers and seamen. No accidents occurred.

The Norwegian bark Ankathor, which arrived from Sables des Loia yesterday, experienced a gale on the 9th of December, and shipped a sea which carried away her port bulwarks and floated everything movable on her decks. She was off the Highlands on the 22d, and was driven off the coast by the head winds. The schooner Hattie E. Smith, from Aux Cayes, was off the Highlands on the 24th, and was also driven off the coast. The schooner Joseph G. Stover, which arrived yesterday, was 14 days north of Hatteras, and was twice driven back across the Gulf Stream.

THE POST OFFICE REVENUE.

Postmaster James has prepared his report of the financial operations of the General Post Office during the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1878. The amounts received during that period were: For postage stamps, stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers, newspaper and periodical stamps, and postal cards, $756,535 98; postage collected on letters, $14,218 90; box rent, $16,269; sale of waste paper, dead newspapers, printed matter, and twine, $797 95; total, $787,760 93. Deducted from this sum were the cost of transmitting letters, &c., insufficiently stamped, and the aggregate of minor expenses of the office, which leave a balance of $593,070 98 for the United States.

HARD ICE AND KEEN STEEL.

THE SKATERS' NEW YEAR'S.

THE PARK LAKE CROWDED—THE ICE IN SUPERB CONDITION—NEED OF MORE ACCOMMODATIONS—THE SKATING IN BROOKLYN.

The snow-storm was too light to seriously interfere with the skating yesterday, and the opportunity to indulge in this invigorating exercise was taken advantage of by thousands. As early as 7 o'clock in the morning very many little boys were frolicking on the upper park lake, and by 11 A. M. the ice was crowded with as many as it could hold and afford comfort of movement to the skaters. So it continued throughout the afternoon and evening up to 10 P. M., when the tired policeman drove the reluctant lingerers homeward. The throng was not nearly so great as on last Sunday, but it was much more pleasant for the skaters. Then it was literally impossible to see the ice on account of the multitude that covered it. Yesterday one could twist and turn about to his heart's content without necessarily barking the shins of those around him. The ice itself was incomparably better than on Sunday. Then there were spots about the edges which were not sufficiently thick to bear the weight of the crowd, and several of the more venturesome went home with wet feet in consequence. Yesterday the upper portion of the lake presented a hard, smooth surface from shore to shore, without a spot anywhere on which the overlying water, forced up by the pressure, indicated danger. After dark the scene was an animated and unusual one. Owing to the conformation of the surroundings, the lake is shut out from view until the top of the hill, whose slope encircles the water, is reached. Bunches of lights, placed at intervals about the edges of the hollow, cast a ghostly glare through the haze of the falling snow-flakes, rendering dimly visible the darting hither and thither of thousands of dark spectral forms on the whitened surface of the broad sheet of ice. The unceasing roar of merry voices rising upon the air told a tale of enjoyment, however, well calculated to dispel uncanny feelings in the breast of the wayfarer. Comparatively few women or girls had the courage to brave the weather; or, perhaps the attractions of the New Year's receptions proved superior to those of the winged steels. Boys and young men formed the vast majority of the skaters, but there were many of more adult age, who, having proved the hollowness of annual "calls," wisely chose the better part of vigorous exercise, exhilaration of spirits, and improved health instead. The walks were thronged with persons coming and going all day, and it is estimated that between morning and night at least 50,000 persons visited the lake. The Police report that not an accident or a disturbance occurred during the entire day. Inclosed Park carriages did a rushing business in carrying people from the Eighth-avenue entrance to the lake and back again at 5 cents a head. This was a great convenience, and there seems to be no reason why similar privileges should not be extended to the Fifth and Sixth avenue entrances, which admit a majority of those going to the Park. The restaurant, saloon, and chair keepers began their year's business with an excellent balance on the credit side of their books. The lower end of the lake is still kept closed, the connection underneath the bridge being insufficiently large to permit it to be crossed in safety, but a day or two even of the present temperature must remedy this. There are 21 acres of ice in the upper lake, of which about 15 are now in use. The additional six acres will be a great relief to the present overcrowding. Proper accommodations, however, will still be lacking to enable the public to enjoy to the utmost this healthful and delightful exercise. The miserable shanty that does duty at the upper lake is entirely inadequate to the needs of those for whose use it is intended. The lower lake and the Harlem lake, both of which now present beautiful sheets of ice, are closed because the Park authorities have no buildings to place upon them, and no means to erect any and to keep the ice in order. It is a shame that this should be the case just at this time, when the season promises to be one of the best for skating New-York has ever known.

In the inclosed grounds of the Manhattan Athletic Club, at Eighth-avenue and Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets, there was a perfect surface of ice a block in dimensions, without flaw or blemish, and entirely free from snow, being constantly swept. The attendance was not large, an admission fee being charged, but from a skatorial point of view it was very select. Some of the members present gave exhibitions of their skill during the day, which were astonishing to those who have not indulged in the graceful art for some years past. The variety of new and intricate figures displayed was as wonderful as the perfect command the skaters exhibited over their skates. In the morning there was a race of one mile for boys of 15 years and under for a gold medal. The contestants were H. L. Calman, J. Becker, H. Winslow, R. R. Perkins, and Coleman, and A. G. Sullivan. Master Perkins was the winner in 4:35. In the afternoon a 10-mile race between adults was contested, the prize being also a gold medal. The contestants were D. Phillips, E. D. Phillips, E. G. Gurnee, F. Sherwood, G. Vetterlein, and C. E. J. Queckberner. Mr. Phillips came in first in 43:53¼. Mr. Sherwood was second in 46:53, and Mr. Griffin third in 47:12. A number of impromptu races were also indulged in, and skating was kept up until 10 P. M.

The skating was excellent on the Prospect Park lakes, Brooklyn, and the crowds began early, and was not greatly impaired until nightfall, the great number of skaters—moving with difficulty because of their number—receiving most of the flakes upon their heads and shoulders, and thus keeping the surface of the ice comparatively clear. The lakes were crowded from morning until after dark. The Park Police estimate the number of visitors in the neighborhood of 35,000—20,000 on the morning and 15,000 in the afternoon. For the use of this immense number of pleasure-seekers there were about 60 acres of strong, clean, and firm ice, tempered to the steel of the sharpest-bladed skate. The field for the skaters was stretched from the eastern end of the lake to Duck Island and the well-house, which is on the northern shore, near the west end. Beyond this space was that alloted to the use of base-ball players, curlers, and ice boat sailors, while several special games of ball were played. Some enthusiastic curlers endeavored, in the afternoon, to play their favorite game, but were driven away in disgust by the snow-ball which made the work of keeping the ice clean with their brooms altogether too great. The space allotted to the use of the skaters was broken under the bridges, where there was no ice. The strong drafts beneath those structures "play" the water in constant motion and thus prevent it from freezing. A board fence has been built under Lullwood Bridge, at the west side, and it is expected that two or three frosty days and nights will make strong ice there, and thus connect the lake by ice at the eastern end of the lake, which are most favored by the skaters. Yesterday the skaters who wished to go from the surface of one bay to that of the other were compelled to take a fatiguing walk by an improvised causeway over one of the two little hills that separate the two ice-fields. The crowd on the ice and on the shores, although of the holiday character, was jolly, and no disturbance occurred during the day.

On the Capitoline Lake, in Brooklyn, the ice was in first-class condition. About 2,000 persons visited the lake during the morning and afternoon, many of whom continued there after dark. When the snow began to fall, sweepers were set at work to keep the surface clean, and the skaters were therefore not impeded in their efforts to cut "pigeon wings" and carve mystical Roman characters. A band furnished music to animate the skaters during the afternoon. There was a scene of jollity from early morning until nightfall on the ice at the Union grounds, Williamsburg. Fifteen hundred skaters enjoyed themselves, and were harmonized by music.

LOSS OF THE BRIGANTINE EMPRESS.

The steam-ship Pomona, which arrived from Montego Bay yesterday, had on board Capt. Mahimann and the crew of the brigantine Empress, which was driven ashore at Montego Bay in a terrific gale on the morning of Dec. 11. On the afternoon of the 10th the Empress had arrived with a general cargo from this port, and under the direction of the pilot had let go her port anchor. During the night the wind increased into a gale, and the vessel surged violently on her cable. Early in the morning the Captain had all hands called so as to be in readiness for any emergency. At about 4:15 o'clock the cable parted, and the Empress drifted rapidly toward the beach, which fortunately was a sandy one. The starboard anchor was let go when she had almost reached the breakers, but it proved of no avail, for a few minutes later the vessel was driven ashore and the crew, eight men in all, made their way through the surf and escaped. After the gale had subsided, the cargo, which was not materially damaged, was unloaded, and the brig was stripped of her spars and sails, which were sold, but the hull still lies on the beach. Capt. Mahlmann having been unable to find any one to purchase it. The crew took passage on the Pomona, which was the first vessel to leave for this port. The Empress was from Boston, and registered over 200 tons.

MURDERERS IN THE TOMBS.

Twelve persons charged with homicide are confined on the second tier of the Tombs Prison. Cell No. 38 is occupied by Frank Story, a bartender, charged with causing the death of a street-musician by throwing him out of his saloon. Philip Whitney, the vagrant, who stabbed his benefactor, Malloy, occupies cell No. 41, and has for a companion John Brown, the perpetrator of the Christmas night murder in No. 16 Baxter-street. Angelo Spagnolo, who carved John Drake, the Maltese cigar-maker, to pieces in Chatham-square, occupies cell No. 42, and John S. Dowling, who kicked his wife to death is placed in cell No. 43. Peter O'Rorke, the longshoreman who threw a stone at a little boy who was teasing him, and knocked the lad from the string-piece of the dock into the river, where he was drowned, is the occupant of cell No. 44, and feels his position keenly. William Kennedy, who shot his friend and companion Mahoney in Cherry-street, occupies cell No. 54. William Fools and Joseph Lafonte are charged with beating a man named Ryan to death in Leroy-street. They occupy cells Nos. 56 and 70. Michael Marara, who is charged with the murder of another Italian in Roosevelt-street, and Francisco De Jean, who stabbed the husband of his mistress in York-street, occupy cell No. 68.

MAYOR COOPER TAKES OFFICE.

MR. ELY SURRENDERS HIS PLACE TO HIS SUCCESSOR—A BRIEF RECEPTION IN THE MAYOR'S ROOM.

The ceremonies incidental to the inauguration of Mayor Cooper, yesterday, were exceedingly simple. Neither the ordinary routine, embodied in the formal surrender of books and papers by one official to another, nor the customary introduction of a retiring chief magistrate to his successor, was observed. At 11 o'clock, Mayor Cooper, accompanied by his predecessor, and his private secretary, Mr. James E. Morrison, entered the City Hall and proceeded to his office. Then ex-Mayor Ely said: "There is my desk, Mr. Cooper, and here is the one that was used by my secretary, Mr. Vanderpool." At this time quite a number of persons had entered the chamber and were awaiting an opportunity to pay their respects to the new chief magistrate. While Mr. Ely was talking to Mr. Cooper, one gentleman asked Mr. Ely if he had surrendered to the new Mayor the marriage ritual which he had used in uniting many couples. Mr. Ely replied that the book was in the adjoining room, and that he had occasion to read the marriage ceremony out of it about six times a week during his term. He added that it was within the new Mayor's reach when he required it. Mayor Cooper then commenced to receive visitors. Among the first who called upon him were Collector Merritt, Corporation Counsel Whitney, Commissioner Campbell, Deputy Commissioner Hubert O. Thompson, John Tyler Kelly, Tax Commissioner Wheeler, and Alderman Jordan L. Mott. Senator Ecclesine was next received, and had a brief interview with Mr. Cooper. It is said that he told the Mayor that he would do whatever lay in his power, either here or at Albany, to strengthen his administration. The significance of this remark can be realized when it is known that Mr. Ecclesine is regarded as a representative of Tammany. After this brief interview, a great throng of people came in and shook hands with the Mayor, expressing at the same time their satisfaction at his accession to office. Among those received by him were Judge Kilbreth, John Fox, ex-Judge Ackert, Thomas J. Barr, Aldermen Haughton, Hyatt, Kiernan, Stewart, and Perley, Maurice J. Powers, Police Commissioner Erhardt, ex-Aldermen Billings and Cooper, Edward L. Parris, Capt. Brackett, Rufus F. Andrews, Commissioner Townsend Cox, Orlando B. Potter, Sheridan Shook, Col. Drake DeKay, John Y. Savage, Timothy Shea, John Staeom, and others.

The reception lasted until 1 o'clock, after which Mayor Cooper retired with his secretary, Mr. Morrison, and Col. Tracy.

THE CHAMPION RUNNER.

FAST TIME MADE AT GILMORE'S GARDEN—NORMAN TAYLOR, OF MASSACHUSETTS, DEFEATS A. B. SPRAGUE, OF ILLINOIS.

Norman Taylor, of Carlisle, Mass., who claims to be the champion runner of the Bay State, and A. B. Sprague, of Chicago, who makes a similar claim in reference to Illinois, engaged in a contest at Gilmore's Garden yesterday afternoon, in which the Western man made a most ignominious failure. Sprague is a young man, scarcely 30 years old. He is tall and well formed, with large and well-developed limbs. Taylor is 45 years old, and almost the opposite of Sprague in physique; in fact, a spectator of yesterday's match very aptly described him when he referred to him as a "dried-up Down Easter." He is of about medium height, straight as a gun-barrel, and without a pound of spare flesh.

The contest yesterday was a run of 20 miles for $200 a side and the gate-money, but the receipts from the latter source were not large. The contestants made their appearance at 2 o'clock. Sprague dressed in the little cabin occupied by "old Sport" during the recent walking match, and Taylor in the cottage occupied by O'Leary. The former appeared with pink tights, scarlet trunks, and white shirt. Accompanied by a man who was supposed to be his trainer, he took a few turns around the track "to get warmed up." Taylor wore loose linen trousers, held up with suspenders, and an unbleached cotton shirt. A scarlet ribbon was tied across his bosom, apparently for the purpose of keeping his suspenders in place. Sprague wore heavy walking-shoes, while Taylor was in his stocking feet.

When the word was given, Sprague started off with a heavy lope and Taylor with a light, tripping gait. Sprague took the outside track and Taylor the inside, the first requiring eight laps and the latter nine laps to the mile. Taylor took the lead and kept it. He carried his right hand at his hip, holding a small whip, and his left at his breast. Sprague carried his hands squarely at his side. Taylor ran with scarcely any apparent effort, and held his wind with remarkable tenacity. Sprague had a bad "stitch" for five miles when he began to show signs of weakness. He was accompanied for some distance by his trainer, and resorted to various expedients to keep up his strength. Taylor was unattended from first to last, and took no refreshment whatever. He made his first five miles in 30:45, the fifth mile being made in 6:25. Sprague made his first five miles in 34:31. Before he had accomplished his sixth mile, however, he threw up the sponge and reeled on the judges' stand. "Gentlemen," said he, "I took a bad cold yesterday. If you don't believe me, you may call a doctor to examine me," and he staggered to his cabin, followed by the backers of both contestators. Taylor's first 10 miles were accomplished in 1:03:04. In the meantime Sprague had been induced to go upon the track again, and for some time braved the laughter and jeers of the crowd, in alternating between walking and running. Taylor kept up his gait, and made 15 miles in 1:39:42. At the end of two hours he had made 17¾ miles. Sprague left the track a second time, and was again urged on, but finally retired, and was not seen afterward, having made a little more than 11 miles. Taylor forged bravely ahead, even without the incentive of competition, and made his 20 miles in 2:28:26. He was once or twice seen to wipe his forehead as he ran; otherwise he showed no signs of fatigue. When he left the track he was breathing as easily, apparently, as he had been when he started, and was heartily cheered. Taylor is an old runner, but hitherto has been but little known outside of Massachusetts. His best time is said to have been 20 miles in 2:03:06. Sprague is well known in Chicago as a pedestrian, having once challenged O'Leary. His best running time is said to have been 20 miles in 2:07:05.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

FIRST NOTE OF PREPARATION OF THE ANNUAL EXHIBITION.

The Council of the National Academy of Design yesterday issued the usual circular of instructions and conditions of admission preliminary to the fifty-fourth annual exhibition, which will be opened to the public on Tuesday, April 1, and closed on Saturday, May 31. The reception of works will commence on Monday, March 10, and continue until the Saturday following, (including that day,) after which no works will be admitted. In all instances the expense of transportation must be paid, or the cases, no matter from whom coming, will be refused. Works intended for exhibition should not be addressed to any particular person or official, but simply to the National Academy of Design, Twenty-third-street, corner of Fourth-avenue, New-York. Only the Union grounds, William-sburg, Fifteen hundred skaters enjoyed themselves, and were harmonized by music.

WHAT THE POST OFFICE CLERKS DECIPHER.

From the Concord (N. H.) Monitor, Dec. 31.

A Post Office official hands us the following list of directions on letters, which illustrates what the railroad clerks have to wrestle with in the performance of their duties:

Enlcuir, N. H.—Henniker, N. H.
Celem, Mass.—Salem, Mass.
Woisse Raindoffe, Kermointe.—West Randolph, Vt.
Onsett, New Amchir.—Hooksett, N. H.
Postforme, N. Y.—Potsdam, N. Y.
Les, Tins Rivires, Mass. U. S.—Three Rivers, Mass.
Lidielonne Tille, Tement.—Lyndonville, Vt.
Nard Broy (ill, Massuchuset.—Supposed to be North Brookfield, Mass.

A MATE FOR THE FLY IN AMBER.

From the Adrian (Mich.) Times, Dec. 28.

Conductor D. C. Smith is the pleased recipient of a fly imbedded in a small piece of Zanzibar gum. This gum, as Mr. Smith explains, is found in the sand on the Zanzibar coast. It is the product of a tree, but no such tree is now known, and history makes no mention of it. How far back in the prehistoric past this unfortunate fly became enshrined in this gum nobody knows. But he is there, as large as life and perfectly natural. We have heard of the "fly in amber," but here is one in this rare and singular gum.

A PEACEFUL ARMY OF MENNONITES COMING.

From the Winona (Minn.) Republican, Dec. 28.

It is authoritively stated that 15,000 Russian Mennonites will leave Russia this Winter, and that the majority of these will settle in colonies in Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, and Dakota. These people, as a class, are industrious, honest, and peacefully inclined. They leave Russia not because of persecution, but because, like the Quakers, they are opposed to war, and because in Russia such scruples are not respected, but all men are alike subjected to conscription.

AN EXTENSIVE PIGEON ROOST.

From the Joplin (Mo.) News.

Such a scene as is presented at the great wild pigeon roost in the Indian Territory, some 50 miles south-west of this city, is very uncommon and has no equal anywhere in America. The "roost" includes a space of about 50 acres in the timber, and when they return to the roost in the evening the trees are quite black with them. The Indians who own the land will not permit other parties to take advantage of the game, but hire men who sit at the roots of the trees and shoot and throw clubs all night, and the next morning the ground is literally covered with pigeons. They are gathered up, loaded into wagons, and hauled to this city, where the Indians realize from 10 to 25 cents per dozen for them. During the day only now and then can a pigeon be seen in the vicinity of the roost, but they return at night. Those who own the land say they have killed dozens of wagon loads this Fall, and still the number does not seem to diminish nor does the nightly slaughter seem to intimidate them.

THE FIRST SEWING-MACHINE

Invented was not more inferior to the perfect machine of the present day than is the common porous plaster when compared with the new BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which is now sold by all druggists. Price, 25 cents.—ADVERTISEMENT.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

A vessel dismasted and abandoned was passed in latitude 42° 20′ and longitude 59° on the 6th of December by the bark Olaf Kyrre, which arrived from Bergen yesterday.

John Bryan, the young Englishman who attempted to commit suicide on Tuesday evening by taking laudanum in the house of Dr. Hobbie, No. 211 East Thirteenth-street, has fully recovered from the effects of the poison.

Mrs. Sarah Hayden, aged 16, of No. 56 Centre-street, the young bride who was shot by her lover Felix Lavelle, of No. 43 Park-street, at Centre and White streets, on Christmas Day, died from her wound at Bellevue Hospital yesterday.

The schooner Sarah Quin, which went ashore at Point Pleasant in a westerly gale a few days since, was hauled off at 11 o'clock Tuesday night, and the tug-boats J. B. Webster and Henry A. Crawford towed her to the Wrecking Company's dock at Staten Island.

At noon yesterday, a boy about 16 years of age, with dark hair and eyes, plaid coat and vest, striped pantaloons and blue flannel shirt, fell into the Hudson River at Pier No. 34, and was drowned. His body was recovered, and sent to the Morgue for identification.

Two Italians, Guiseppi Palacci and John Romaine quarreled last night in Mott-street, and the former stabbed the latter with a stiletto in the left shoulder. Palacci was arrested, but Romaine refused to make a complaint against him, and he was discharged.

Mary Reardon, of No. 361 Cherry-street, while lighting up the Christmas tree for the children in her house, last evening, had her clothing set on fire by one of the wax candles on the tree and was dangerously burned on the body. She was removed to Chambers-Street Hospital.

John Christian, of No. 160 Orchard-street, was stabbed in the hand and received a serious scalp wound by Joseph Sali, of the same number, during a quarrel yesterday afternoon. The Police Surgeon of the Tenth Precinct dressed Christian's wound, and Sali was locked up.

While Edward Anspach, aged 17, of No. 88 Ridge-street, was passing through Essex-street, at 12:30 yesterday morning, he was shot in the hand by a stranger who was celebrating the advent

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8522. NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JANUARY 3, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

HOW RESUMPTION WORKS.

THE GOVERNMENT UNABLE TO GET RID OF ITS GOLD.

LARGER SUPPLY ON HAND AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS THAN AT THE OPENING—A SUDDEN AND COMPLETE FALLING OFF IN THE DEMAND—INCIDENTS OF THE DAY—GENERAL REJOICING—THE GOLD ROOM AND GOLD EXCHANGE BANK ABOLISHED—WHAT THE BANKERS SAY—ACTION OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Sixteen years ago a financier well known in connection with Western railroad enterprises had framed for his office a United States legal tender note. Under it was inscribed "Irredeemable. The child is not born who will live to see the promise to redeem performed." The framed promise to pay having ornamented the wall over its owner's desk long enough, was one of the first to be exchanged, dollar for, in coin, early last week. Only six months ago, when the debate in Congress on the Silver bill elicited many prophecies of the failure of the Government to resume specie payments on Jan. 1, 1879, the President of a prominent Wall-street bank declared at a meeting of bank Presidents that, should the United States Treasury persist in its endeavors to resume, he would give $50,000 for the first place in the line of those who would present themselves on resumption day to exchange their legal tenders for gold. Fortunately perhaps for him, he was absent from business on account of sickness yesterday. He thereby escaped the mortification of acceptance of his ill-advised offer. As a matter of fact, although a financial revolution of far-reaching influence and import was in progress, the only difference apparent in the events of the day from those of the past fortnight was in the general disinclination manifested by the public to receive gold in payment of acceptances. Financial men were confronted with a new and unforeseen difficulty—that of getting rid of their cumbersome piles of gold without submitting to a discount. A bank officer said: "It is the old story over again of the Dutchman and the savings bank upon which there was a run. Having excitedly demanded his savings, the sum was promptly handed out to him. He gazed at it in astonishment for a few moments, and then pushing it back, said: 'Vell, of you can pay me I don't want id; bud of you can't pay me, den I do want id.'"

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning—the hour for opening the Sub-Treasury—a salute was fired from the Brooklyn Navy-yard in honor of the event that was formally to take place. Simultaneously flags were run up on the staffs surmounting nearly every bank in the City, all the commercial buildings, and all the Government offices. The vicinity of Wall and Broad streets was gay with bunting. Almost every building in every direction as far as the eye could reach displayed its separate banner on roof or from window. The top of the Custom-house was covered with flags. The Stock Exchange alone remained bare. Men looked up to its flag-staff and first wondered and then grew indignant. Shortly before 2 o'clock the murmurs of adverse comment had become so loud and general that they reached the ears of the officers of the Exchange, and a hurried scramble was made to remedy what proved to be an unintentional oversight. As the flag arose and spread its folds to the breeze, it was greeted by a hearty cheer from the throats of the passers-by. Owing to the death of George J. Whitney the flag of the Produce Exchange was at half-mast, but the officers hastened to express their doubly-deep regret at the event which prevented them from doing proper honor to the occasion. The Cotton Exchange was suitably decorated—but to give a list of the other buildings in the same category would be to reproduce a large portion of the appendix to the Directory. Among the members of the various commercial and financial bodies and among business men generally the sentiments expressed in these outward tokens of rejoicing met with the most hearty sympathy. There was no excitement, but rather a deep-seated feeling of satisfaction and of confidence in the Government and in the future. Resumption as a practical fact was looked upon as having been accomplished weeks ago, and not the faintest shadow of a doubt remained in the mind of any one regarding its permanency. In this view, the beginning of a prosperous business future founded on a stable basis was an easy thing to hope for.

At the Sub-Treasury every preparation suggested by prudence was made to carry out the law. In the vaults of the building yesterday morning were $110,000,000 in gold coin, for, notwithstanding the predictions of shrewd financiers that the metal would be found to be held valuable in proportion to the difficulty of obtaining it—prediction whose soundness has been foreshadowed dur ng the past three months—the Secretary deemed it best to guard against unpleasant surprises. A special clerk was assigned o the coin-room, well equipped with bags of gold eagles and fractions thereof, with instructions to pay them over for legal tenders on demand. His position was almost a sinecure. In place of the expected crowd of exchangers but one man was in an appearance at the counter at the opening of business, and was promptly given $210 in gold for a similar sum in greenbacks. A full half hour passed and nobody else appeared. Then came several, evidently attracted by curiosity to experience the workings of the law, for they wanted less than $50 worth of coin apiece, the limit that the law makes redeemable at the Sub-Treasury. In two hours but $2,500 had been paid out, $1,000 of which was taken by one man. The experience of the clerks in the other departments was almost exactly similar. Of every one who presented drafts or checks of any kind for redemption the clerks asked whether gold or greenbacks was wanted. The almost invariable answer was, "Greenbacks, of course;" or, "Greenbacks are good enough for me;" or, "Give my bills; what do I want of gold?" One excited German created much amusement by exclaiming in a tone of consternation, as the question were a puerile one: "Pills, pills, pills?" Another man thought he would take gold, and a $5,000 bag was handed to him. He hefted it a moment, and, catching the spirit of the amused look on the countenances of the bystanders, smiled broadly and flung the bag up in the air. Coming down it slipped through his fingers. The concussion with the marble pavement burst the string confining its neck, and its contents rolled all over the floor. Amid a general laugh the mortified owner got down upon his hands and knees and gathered the glittering pieces. After spending 15 minutes in counting the coin he found that it was all there, he took the bag in both hands, and once more approaching the counter said to the clerk: "Here, I've changed my mind. Give me something that won't roll, instead of these." So it went on during the entire day. Superintendent White said, with a look of perplexity at the pile of gold behind him, "It looks as though the Government would be unable to get rid of its coin. Nobody wants it." During the day only $130,000 in gold were paid out in exchange for United States notes, and $400,000 in gold were received in exchange for United States notes, leaving the Sub-Treasury with $270.000 more gold on hand last night than it had in the morning. The banks started the day in business by turning into the Sub-Treasury $300,000 in gold certificates, in exchange for which they took Clearing-house legal-tender certificates. This mark of their confidence in the success of resumption speaks volumes. Another fact that affords food for reflection to the silver men was that not a dollar in silver was paid out at the Sub-Treasury yesterday. On the Street subsidiary silver was offered freely at 2 per cent. discount. Gen. Hillhouse telegraphed the good news to Treasurer Gilfillan, at Washington, as soon as business closed. Early in the morning, acting on instructions from Washington, he issued the following:

OFFICE UNITED STATES TREASURY, } NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879. }

By direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, called bonds will not be redeemed at this office.

THOMAS HILLHOUSE, Assistant Treasurer.

This is explained by the fact that the custom has always been to pay called bonds in Washington until it was modified by the Secretary during the prevalence of a gold corner in this City, when the Sub-Treasurer was authorized to redeem them in order to relieve the gold market. There being no further danger of a corner in gold the permission is now revoked.

At the Custom-house the record of the day's receipts stands: Gold notes, $30,000; silver certificates, $26,000; gold coin, $35,000; silver coin, $1,000; United States legal tenders, $102,000; total, $194,000. The first money received for duties in the morning was three $1,000 legal-tender notes. This shows that a majority of those who had been accustomed to keeping gold deposits in banks for payment of duties had drawn them out in currency. Until the gold and silver certificates are all in, the Customs authorities will continue to make detailed returns as above. On Tuesday the cart in which coin is carried made five journeys from the Custom-house to the Sub-Treasury. Yesterday one was enough.

The Gold Room was deserted yesterday morning. The only transactions that took place were the settlement of old transactions. On the blackboard was written in great letters in chalk the word "Par." At noon there had not been a sale or a quotation, and then word came that the Governing Committee had ordered the department abolished and forbidden an transactions in it in the future. During the afternoon the dial which has indicated the changes in the gold premium for so many years was taken down.

The department of the Bank of the State of New-York devoted to gold clearances was kept open yesterday for the settlement of the business of Dec 31. Henceforth it will be closed, and the bank as a gold clearing-house will cease to exist.

At the Bank Clearing-house an enormous business was done, as is usual after a holiday, but it was in strict conformity with the law, gold, legal tenders, and standard silver dollars being accepted indiscriminately in settlement of balances.

The banks generally reported that they were receiving more gold than they were paying out. Nearly all had discounted the probabilities, and for several days had been exchanging their gold certificates for legal-tender certificates used for settlements at the Clearing-house. All had provided their Paying Tellers yesterday with stacks of gold enough to satisfy any possible demand, and they all turned in those stacks practically untouched. Nobody seemed to want it when crisp and portable legal tenders could be had. This was notably the case in the First National Bank. Its resumption was an accomplished fact a week ago, when they met average daily demands for gold of $100,000. Yesterday, gold drafts upon them by country banks aggregated but $40,000, while the gold paid out over their counter amounted exactly to $42. The same state of facts, coupled with confidence in the permanence of the financial revolution, is reported by private bankers. Indeed, dealers in bullion say that for weeks past there has been steadily flowing in to them a stream of silver coin of old date, showing that the hoarders are becoming convinced that coin is no longer the only safe shape of money.

"There is nothing to distinguish this day from any other business day," said Mr. Vail, President of the Bank of Commerce. "There has been practical resumption for weeks past. If a customer wanted small sums of gold for the payment of duties we gave it to him on his currency checks. Of course, we would not pay it out for speculative purposes, but many persons wanted gold for holiday uses—presents or pocket-pieces. If their experience with it is the same as mine they will be glad to exchange it again for legal tenders. I put two or three coins into my pocket for pocket-pieces, and there is hardly an hour of the day that I don't take them out to make sure that I have not paid them out for dimes. We sent all our gold depositors notice that after Dec. 31 their gold balances would be transferred to their currency accounts. That results in diminishing our ledger accounts, and with that exception we hardly notice the change one way or another."

"Do you think that it will be permanent resumption?" the reporter asked.

"I don't know why it should not be," Mr. Vail replied. "It could not have been better timed. We have passed through every stage of financial straits, and every industry and avocation is reviving. The balance of foreign trade is altogether in our favor. Exchange is in our advantage, and will remain so as long as we sell less than we buy. As soon as they find they can have gold or paper just as they choose, everybody will want paper, and not gold. To-day we are paying off $600,000 of Western city bonds, which were payable, principal and interest, in gold. Every person who has presented the bonds so far has preferred our currency checks."

"We are paying off Government coupons, and the presenters prefer currency in almost every instance," said the Cashier of the First National Bank. "There is practically no movement in gold so far as we are concerned. That was settled last week, during which we practiced resumption to an extent much greater than we are called upon to do to-day. There is a considerable movement in silver with us. Our corresponding country banks have been delaying their drafts of silver coin as far as they could until after Jan. 1. They now escape the express charges. Before that date they had to pay the expressage; but now, if a bank draws on us for silver, we remit a draft to the Treasury at Washington, and the silver is forwarded to the bank free of charge."

President Thompson, of the Chase National Bank, said: "It has always been my theory that the Government ought to have no less balance of specie on hand than it has to-day in order to make resumption a permanence. My bank this morning had $126,324 in greenbacks and $167.070 in gold on hand. We deposited $100,000 of the latter in the Sub-Treasury, first, to contribute our mite to the success of resumption, and, second, because we had no use for it. There is practically no demand for it for shipment, and our recent disbursements in coin have not exceeded $5,000, even for the holiday demand."

Mr. Franklin Chandler, President of the Mechanics' Banking Association, said that his bank had not been called upon to pay out any gold. Nobody wanted it if they could get greenbacks. was coupon day for certain Western bonds, but the holders invariably preferred greenbacks to the promised gold. He saw no reason to doubt the permanence of the new departure. Natural causes had undoubtedly done much to bring it about, but the latest difference in the prices of gold and greenbacks had arisen from the demand created by the requirement of gold in payment for Customs. The Government having ceased to discriminate against its own promises to pay, there was no longer a chance for speculative fluctuation, and the triple currency ought to remain permanently equal in public esteem.

President William Dowd, of the Bank of North America, said: "I have no doubt that specie payments can be maintained. With prosperous crops, manufactures and commerce, we must continue to have the balance of trade in our favor for years to come. I have no apprehension of any variation between legal tender and gold. Some fluctuation may arise if the present silver coinage should be largely increased, but that would merely result in the opening of separate accounts for deposits of silver, just as we had in gold until to-day. That, however, would be an event of trifling moment, and would in no way affect the balances between the other mediums of exchange. We now have a gold balance of $100,000, but I don't see that we need it. Nobody wants it, even those who come here for funds to meet Customs dues take greenbacks in preference."

The representative of a leading firm of German bankers said: "A great revolution has never before been accomplished with such complete absence of jarring or discord. Bankers have turned their gold deposits into currency, and their clients are doing the same. No gold is needed for export, since the balance of trade lies with this country. Europe is worse off to-day than the United States was during the panic. Even with universal bankruptcy staring Americans in the face, the people always had enough to eat. In Europe it seems as though both famine and bankruptcy are threatened. In my judgment, very brisk times are in store for the United States, and the settlement of the currency question is the prime factor of the improvement."

Congressman L. P. Morton said: "It is resulting just as was anticipated. Everything is working smoothly—not a hitch nor a jar. Instead of diminishing the gold balance, the first day of resumption has increased it, and that, I believe, will be found to be the result six months and a year hence."

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, Hon. Elliot C. Cowdin from the Executive Committee, excused himself from reporting anything on the subject of the return to specie payments, which was such a matter of paramount importance just now. He said that his committee had given way in the matter to the Special Committee on International Coinage, which had given much attention to the question and he called upon Mr. A. A. Low to speak in behalf of that committee. Mr. Low addressed the Chamber as follows:

"GENTLEMEN OF THE CHAMBER: To-day the law of resumption takes legal effect, and it seemed to me that as we were to come together on this day, it was fit that we should take some action on an event of such importance to the community, and that our minutes should contain some record of such action. We have approached this day amid grave doubts and wide-spread distrust, but latterly with confidence that no disturbance whatever would result. Yet it may be well to remark that so far as my own impression is concerned, we have had a very greatly improved tone of public feeling in respect to the future in consequence of this fact. We have had a much better public feeling than it was to be expected we would. Resumption is a matter of the greatest interest to commercial men as a convenience for the transaction of business. Now we will be able to keep our accounts in one currency, instead of two or three, as heretofore. Great credit is due to Secretary Sherman for the faithful persistence with which he has carried out the law of which he was the author. He has met in a temperate spirit the doubts that have been expressed out of Congress, and he has answered fully every objection that has been expressed in Congress. You all know that the action in Congress has not been by any means favorable to the measure. I apprehend that the time has arrived when no danger need be feared for the success of resumption. I do not believe that specie payments will again be interrupted in our time. I have confidence that nothing will occur in our relations with other countries to disturb the payment of all our obligations in coin. Since the close of the war we have been gradually fixing the relations between gold and paper, and now the quantity of gold coming from our mines is such that it is more abundant than it has been in years. To-day between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 are added to the volume of our currency. I see on the wall before me a portrait of Alexander Hamilton. It is not the fashion to speak well of our public men, but I hope the time will come when our walls will also be adorned with a portrait of John Sherman. [Applause.] I don't think it would do a great deal of harm to the properties to place on one side of Hamilton John Sherman and on the other Carl Schurz, whose luminous explanations of a subject which has perplexed many people have done much to clear up doubts and make resumption possible." [Applause.]

In conclusion Mr. Low offered the following:

Resolved, That this Chamber deems it a fitting occasion to felicitate the community of which it is the representative, and the country at large, upon the consummation of an event which has been so long and ardently desired—the resumption of specie payment. [Applause.]

Resolved, That this Chamber tenders its congratulations to the Honorable the Secretary of the Treasury, at once the originator of the law of 1875, upon the success which has attended his administration of the national finances; as well in the funding of the public debt as in the measures he has pursued to restore a sound currency. [Applause.]

Resolved, That this Chamber deems it proper, at the same time, to recognize the prompt and judicious action of the banks of our City in uniting upon a plan to co-operate with the Treasury Department in sustaining specie payments.

Resolved, That this Chamber would further recognize its obligations to the Congress of the United States for the establishment of a National Banking law, which has given to the country a safe currency, of uniform value, in every State of the Union, vindicating from the first the wisdom of its founders.

Resolved, That, while contemplating, with pleasure and satisfaction, the success of Congressional law in the facilities it has given to the transaction of business, and to the restoration of a sound currency in the manner referred to, it nevertheless, devolves upon this Chamber to call the attention of Congress once more to the incongruity of two standards of value—one of gold, which conforms to the universal judgment of the civilized world; the other of silver, which is almost as widely condemned; the one stable, the other so accepted, the other unstable, because rejected as a standard by the principal commercial nations of the globe; the one true, the other false; and this Chamber respectfully urges the duty of guarding the danger attending the adoption of silver as a measure of values. Congress will amend existing law by further limiting the coinage of the silver dollar, and its use as a legal tender. [Applause.]

Mr. William E. Dodge, in seconding the resolution, said:

"I accept these resolutions with all my heart, but I think they are so entirely in harmony with the feelings of every member of the board that no further remarks are needed at this time."

A vote was taken and they were unanimously adopted. On motion of Mr. Low the Secretary was instructed to send official copies to the President, President of the Senate, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Secretary of the Treasury, and other prominent officers of the Government.

The following dispatch was received at the Produce Exchange yesterday:

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 2, 1879.

To Produce Exchange, New-York:

To-day our nation honors its promises by paying in gold. Our flags are out. H. K. SLAYTON, Secretary Manchester Board of Trade.

The following answer was returned:

NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

To Board of Trade, Manchester, N. H.:

Telegram received. Thanks. It is an occasion for rejoicing and congratulations by all the people.

FRANKLIN EDSON, President.

RESUMPTION AT WASHINGTON.

GRATIFYING RESULTS OF THE FIRST DAY OF COIN PAYMENTS—THE TREASURY'S RESOURCES INCREASED INSTEAD OF BEING DIMINISHED—LARGE SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE FOUR PER CENT. LOAN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Assistant Treasurer at New-York to-day telegraphed to Treasurer Gilfillan that the result of the day's transactions under the Resumption act was as follows: There were presented and redeemed in gold coin legal-tender notes amounting to $130,000, and there was paid out in exchange for gold certificates legal-tender notes amounting to $400,000. Thus the net result of the day's redemption at New-York adds $270,000 in gold to the coin balance. The Assistant Treasurer also reported that the large proportion of persons presenting matured coupons and checks for registered interest were paid at their own request in United States notes.

At the Treasury Department about $20,000 was disbursed to-day on account of interest, and of this amount only $2,800 were demanded in coin checks on New-York. These coin checks were obtained by banks, in order to settle balances at New-York, or to add to their coin account in that City. In every instance individual claimants willingly accepted United States notes, and most of them expressed a preference for that form of money. All the banks of Washington to-day paid in coin checks drawn by their depositors when coin was demanded, and in several cases coin was paid out in exchange for greenbacks and national bank notes.

The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. bonds today amounted to $8,590,150, of which sum $5,000,000 were subscribed by the First National Bank of New-York. It is believed that the recent circular of Secretary Sherman, graduating the commissions for the sale of these bonds according to the sum subscribed, has stimulated subscriptions. The circular went into effect to-day, and it is probable the banks have been holding back their subscriptions that they might obtain the increased commissions. Another cause that operates in favor of subscriptions at this time is the fact that the bonds can now be purchased at par in United States notes, and that interest on them began Jan. 1. Bonds purchased now can be obtained free from accrued interest.

Treasurer Gilfillan to-day said: "If the experience at other points is similar to that here nearly all of the interest remaining unpaid will go out in legal tenders. The amount that will go to New-York in coin checks will be very small, indeed, compared with the amount of interest due."

Orders for 32,000 standard silver dollars were received at the Treasury Department today. They will be delivered free of cost under the circular which went into effect yesterday.

The Secretary of the Treasury to-day opened the weekly bids for the purchase of silver bullion, and secured 400,000 ounces at satisfactory prices. The number of bidders to-day was not so large as usual, but the quantities offered were larger than in previous bids.

To meet the inconvenience caused to merchants by the discontinuance of the issuing of coin certificates, it has been determined to issue such certificates for the special purpose of paying Customs duties until Congress can act upon the subject. The following circular has accordingly been sent to the Treasurer and the several Assistant Treasurers:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, } WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 2, 1879. }

To facilitate the payment of duties on imports the Treasurer and the several Assistant Treasurers of the United States are hereby authorized to receive deposits of gold coin in sums of $100, or multiples thereof, on account of such payment, and to issue the usual certificates of deposit therefor in denominations of not less than $100, in the name of the Collector or Surveyor of the port at which the duties are to be paid; and any Collector or Surveyor in whose name the certificate is issued is hereby authorized to accept it at par for duties on imports payable at his port, treating the transaction in his accounts as if the money had been collected and deposited by him in the usual manner.

JOHN SHERMAN, Secretary.

THE EFFECT ELSEWHERE.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 2.—A visit to the national banks here to-day showed that no change whatever has occurred in business on account of resumption. All were prepared to pay out specie if demanded, the First National having $45,000 and $350,000 in available legal tenders; Second National, $50,000 in gold; Commercial National, $41,000; Ohio National, $10,000; Merchants' National, $20,000, and National City, $25,000. Bankers all talk hopefully. They say the only demand for gold will be for foreign trade, and so long as the balance of trade is so decidedly in favor of the United States this demand will be very small. The amount of available securities which can be used as gold is much greater than the sums given above.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—This was the first day upon which the operation of the Resumption act could be tested in this city. No perceptible difference in the business of the banks was noticeable, because the act of resumption had been discounted several days ago, and practically, while not theoretically, had gone into effect. There is very little gold here in comparison with what might be expected, and the bank officials stated they had plenty to meet any demands which might be made upon them. The request for gold in payment of checks were few and far between, people preferring currency. The only cause for complaint made by the bankers and financial men here is that instead of gold being paid out at the Sub-Treasury, coin checks on the New-York Sub-Treasury are issued. Concerning this, Assistant Treasurer Eyster said: "No order has been received here yet from the Government to pay gold for notes. By the Resumption act New-York is made the redeeming point, merely, I suppose, because that is the great commercial centre of the country, and because there is more gold there. We have only $500,000 of gold here, while there are $100,000,000 of it in New-York. When persons want gold for interest, we issue checks on New-York. At present there are very few people, though, who care about them." Further than being compelled to pay the freight on gold from New-York to this city when wanted, there is nothing noticeable in the resumption of specie payments here. These reasons for not sending gold here and the course which has been pursued are fully understood as being a part of the plan to prevent a run being made on the banks and making a corner in the precious metal.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 2.—Specie payments were resumed to-day by the Cincinnati banks without the least excitement or trouble. Nearly all the banks had made preparations for the event, and were ready to pay gold to those desiring it. Nobody, however, seemed to want it. The entire amount paid out is ascertained to have been $3,000, and a portion of this was taken for special purposes, such as paying off employes in manufacturing establishments. One merchant was offered $5,000 in gold, in payment of a check, but he refused it, preferring currency. Some dissatisfaction was heard at the Sub-Treasury at the refusal of the Government to pay interest on bonds in gold as heretofore. This was in pursuance of the recent order of Secretary Sherman, which requires bondholders who want their interest in gold to apply to the Sub-Treasury in New-York. All coupons presented to-day were paid in greenbacks. One banker was heard to express an opinion to-day that the banks had overdone their preparations for paying in gold, and were likely in some cases to have more of it on hand than they could conveniently dispose of.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—The taking effect to-day of the Specie Resumption act did not create the least sensation, not even a ripple, either at the United States Sub-Treasury or the banks of this city. It is probable that scarcely $1,000 in gold was passed over the counters of Chicago banks to-day.

CONGRESSMAN GARFIELD'S PLEA.

WHY HE BELIEVES THAT RESUMPTION WILL BE SUCCESSFUL—THE FINANCIAL EVILS THROUGH WHICH THE COUNTRY HAS PASSED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—The Honest-Money League listened to an address this evening by Hon. James A. Garfield upon resumption. The principal points of the speech were as follows:

The resumption of specie payments closes the most memorable epoch of our history since the birth of the Union. Eighteen hundred and sixty-one and 1879 are the opposite terms of that period of time whose storms so seriously threatened with shipwreck the prosperity, the honor, and the life of the Republic.

If the resumption now declared by law be maintained against all assaults, then, indeed, so far as our finances are concerned, the war for the Union is ended; the victory is complete. Will our great sovereign, the people of all these States, make the decree irreversible? Will resumption be maintained? Believing that, in the long run, the matured and deliberate judgment of this nation is honest and intelligent, I answer, "yes," it will be maintained; and for two reasons. First, because national honesty, good government, and the prosperity of all our people demand it; and second, because we are able to maintain it.

Bad faith on the part of an individual, a city, or even a State, is a small evil in comparison with the calamities which follow bad faith on the part of a sovereign government. The United States is still a debtor nation, mainly, it is true, a debtor to our own people, but also, to a great extent, a debtor to the people of other nations. We are still in the market, soliciting loans with which to refund our great debt at a lower rate of interest. Every dollar thus refunded reduces the annual burden of interest; and, to that extent, the Government ceases to be a competitor of private citizens in securing loans. Any act of bad faith, therefore, tends to prevent refunding, tends to prevent the reduction of the public burdens, and keeps up the rate of interest, both public and private. Our bonds have become the basis of private interests, involving hundreds of millions of dollars. The vast aggregate of investments by people of small means in savings banks, in fire, marine, and life insurance, and the estates of thousands of widows and orphans depend largely for their value upon the security and steady value of Government obligations; and any law or policy which tends to depreciate these obligations, is communicated through all the channels of private business, carrying loss and disaster to millions of citizens. No arithmetic can compute the injustice and loss which the fluctuations of the currency have inflicted upon the people and business of this country. The chief mischief resulted from two unequal and varying qualities of the greenback as a currency: its debt-paying and its purchasing power. The first was arbitrarily fixed by Congress at 100 cents on the dollar, but the second was controlled by laws which no human legislation can set aside—the laws of value; and the value of the greenback as a purchasing power suffered all the changes of the market. In July, 1864, a citizen who had loaned his neighbor $100 in coin three years before, was compelled by law to accept as a discharge of the debt a handful of paper notes, which he could purchase for $38 in coin. That is, the same note which paid a debt of 100 cents, would buy in the market only 38 cents' worth of merchandize, valued in real money. This difference between its debt-paying power and its purchasing power carried confusion and injustice into every department of business. During the whole period of decline, the creditor was wronged by underpayment; and during the whole period of appreciation, the debtor was wronged by being compelled to make overpayment. During the 17 years of suspension the payment of every debt inflicted a wrong, either upon the creditor or the debtor; and thus the whole machinery of credit was converted into an engine of injustice. This will always happen when the two functions of currency are of unequal value.

The first great opportunity for putting an end to these evils occurred soon after the close of the war. Under the combined influence of the expanded volume of depreciated currency, and the enormous expenditure of the Government, prices had risen to an average of 90 per cent. above those of 1859-61. They could not continue to rise without great danger to trade, and still greater danger to the interests of labor. We had a surplus revenue of $100,000,000 per annum, and were abundantly able to retire, gradually, the excess of legal-tender notes, and thus bring the business of the country safely down from the dangerous height to which war and inflation had carried it. Congress should not have compelled the new and aspiring industries of peace to put to sea in a crazy craft which was all sail and no anchor. The Government had itself produced the condition in which business was placed; and to withdraw from its interference, to undo the mischief it had caused, by allowing business to be governed by the natural laws of trade, was the immediate and imperative duty of Congress. The fluctuations between the debt-paying and the purchasing power of our currency created the new trade of gold gambling. The Gold Exchange and the Gold Clearing-house of New-York will be remembered in history as the Germans remember the robber castles of the Rhine, whose brigand chiefs levied black-mail upon every passer-by. But gambling was not confined to gold. The habit engendered by a fluctuating currency which led men to sell what they did not own, and borrow what they sold was carried into every department of trade. Bright, ambitious young men, lured from the farm and workshop, sought their fortunes in the seductive chances of the stock board, or in the mysteries of "options," sales, and "corners" in wheat. The population of many agricultural districts actually decreased. The cities and manufacturing centres were overcrowded. Some leading industries, notably railroad-building and iron-making, were greatly overdone. As speculation increased and credits expanded, the cry was raised that there was not currency enough, that the small measure of contraction, effected by Secretary McCulloch, had destroyed the people's money and crippled their business. It was the fiend's cry for more rum to the steady his nerves already shattered by drink. Nothing could resist the downward tendency; and the wild dance went on until, at last, when no more could be borrowed, the inevitable pay-day came, and with it the deluge of 1873.

Four years ago Congress saw another opportunity to place the business of the country again on a stable foundation. The law of 1874 fixed the date when the promise of the war should be redeemed. It was a great act of national faith, too long delayed, but made doubly necessary by the sufferings of our people. The effort to keep this promise has been fiercely resisted at every stage. Orators in Congress and out of Congress have demonstrated to their own satisfaction that resumption was impossible, and the demonstration has been repeated even as late as two months ago. That assumption can now be maintained, intelligent men no longer doubt.

But we must not assume that all danger is past. Resumption can be defeated in one of two ways; first, by great and unexpected calamity, like war, or the general failure of our crops, which should turn the balance of trade against us; or, second, by the hostile legislation of Congress. The probability of the former is too remote to be seriously considered; the danger of the latter must be prevented by the intelligence of our people. Though the opposition to resumption was great and powerful in Congress, even down to a very recent date, yet, now that par has been reached, I do not believe it will be longer assailed by direct legislation. The instinct of self-preservation will prompt leading politicians to abandon such efforts. The real danger lies in indirect assaults, which may be made in several ways. If the expenditures of the Government should be increased by large appropriations for the various schemes which are urged upon Congress, so as to produce a deficit in the revenues, rather than levy additional taxes, Congress will be tempted to issue more greenbacks, and carry expansion to a point at which resumption must break down. Rigorous economy, and a persistent maintenance of revenue sufficient for necessary current expenses, and for the sinking fund, will be our safeguard in this direction. The most dangerous assault upon specie resumption is the attempt to abolish the national banks, and substitute additional greenbacks in place of bank-notes. This effort will call into support the sentiments which, to some extent, prevails against moneyed corporations. Should the attempt succeed, it will inevitably result in suspension of specie payments. While the Treasury, aided by the banks, can now easily maintain at par the outstanding greenbacks, resumption would unquestionably break down if the volume were increased $320,000,000. We must debate the bank question with our eyes open to the certainty of its results. Even the decline of gold is against the measure. But besides destroying resumption, it would be a most radical and dangerous revolution in our system of government. During the period of war and reconstruction, many good people were alarmed at the tendency to centralize power at Washington; but the proposition we are now considering would result in a centralization of power without a parallel in our history. We are told that the people of each section of currency are sufficient for the wants of trade. So they do. But what man or set of men is wise enough to measure these wants, and declare the exact volume of currency that will meet them. The national banking system is that part of our financial machinery by which the volume of paper currency may increase or diminish in obedience to the laws of trade. If the volume becomes excessive, their notes are returned to the banks for redemption; in order to issue more they requires them. The abolition of the national banks means the destruction of this indispensable self-adjusting principle of our currency system.

Successful resumption will gradually aid in bringing into the murky sky of our politics what the signal service people call "clearing weather." It puts an end to a score of controversies which have long vexed the public mind and wrought mischief to business. It is the cessation of contention over the difference between the money of the bondholder and the money of the plowholder. Prosperity, which has long been waiting, is now ready to come. If we do not unduly spoil her she will soon revisit our people, and will stay until another periodical craze shall drive her away.

The speech of Gen. Garfield was frequently and heartily applauded. Upon its conclusion the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That our thanks are hereby tendered to Hon. James A. Garfield for the able exposition of the sound financial views to which we have just listened, and we hope that such practical and enlightened statesmanship may be extended until the entire people of the Republic are educated in questions of political economy, and until false and delusive theories are banished from our midst.

Resolved, By the citizens of Chicago here assembled, on behalf of the great North-west, that we congratulate Hon. John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, on the successful return to specie payments, in the accomplishment of which great work he has borne so distinguished a part.

TWO BROKEN SAVINGS BANKS.

CLOSING THE SETTLEMENT OF THE NEW-AMSTERDAM INSTITUTION'S ACCOUNTS—A RECEIVER TO BE APPOINTED FOR THE HAVERSTRAW BANK.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—An order made by Justice Westbrook was to-day filed with the Clerk of Albany County, passing the accounts of Richard M. Bent, Receiver of the New-Amsterdam Savings Bank, and directing the cancellation of his bond. Bent was appointed in September, 1876, and since that time he has collected all the valid assets of the bank, terminated all the litigations in progress at the time of his appointment and arising out of the settlement of the estate, and has paid to depositors over $391.000, being a dividend of 77 per cent. of their original deposits. This is the first settled of the estates of the many moneyed institutions that failed by reason of the panic of 1873, and the consequent depreciation in value of mortgages on land and other securities held by them. Considering that this depreciation has often been as great as 50 per cent., the showing made by Mr. Bent is considered a very satisfactory one to the creditors of the bank. Mr. Bent has in his hands a balance of $1,268 53, which the depositors have not as yet called for.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Attorney-General Schoonmaker to-day made application in the Supreme Court for the appointment of a Receiver in the case of the Haverstraw Bank. Judge Barnard granted the motion, but the Receiver has not yet been named.

FAILURE OF A BANKING-HOUSE.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Jan. 2.—The banking-house of Bennett, Phelps & Co., of this city, made an assignment this morning. The following statement is made by the firm: "We regret to announce the necessity of suspending business, and have closed our doors. The necessity was not suspected until last night, and is caused by the present inability of the Forty Fort Coal Company, the Riverside Coal Company, J. H. Swoyer, and others, to meet their obligations. The firm has made an assignment of the firm's property, and each of the partners has made an assignment of his personal separate estate, for the benefit of the firm's creditors, to the Miners' Savings Bank. The estate of our late senior partner, Zebulon Bennett, is entirely unincumbered, and is liable for any deficiency; and we feel confident that our creditors will be paid in full without great delay."

ROBERT W. MACKEY'S FUNERAL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—Funeral services were held at the residence of the late Hon. Robert W. Mackey in this city this afternoon, to afford his many friends an opportunity of paying their last respects to his memory, previous to the removal of the remains to Pittsburg, where the interment will take place. The attendance of prominent men was large, among others being Postmaster Snowden, Hon. William H. Kemble, Congressman O'Neil, Col. R. Wilson Norris, Secretary of Internal Affairs-elect Dunkel, James McManus, Henry Burnm, William R. Leeds, John L. Hill, State Senators George Handy Smith and John Reyburn; A. J. Cassatt, Vice-President; J. P. Green, assistant to the President, and J. J. Bentley, private secretary to the President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; Hon. Elisha W. Davis, William M. Singerly, Hon. Cornelius Walborn, Hamilton Disston, and Col. A. E. McClure. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson, Pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church, who has been a constant attendant upon Mr. Mackey during his illness. The remains were sent to Pittsburg on the 6 o'clock train in a special car furnished by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The party who accompanied it were Mrs. Galway, the sister of the deceased man, who attended him during his sickness; Mr. and Mrs. James McGregor, Mrs. Jewell, and two nieces of Mr. Mackey. The funeral will take place at Mrs. Galway's residence, East End, Pittsburg, on Saturday afternoon.

A SCOTCHMAN'S LOST BONDS.

THE REMARKABLE STORY CONNECTED WITH $5,000 WORTH OF UNITED STATES SECURITIES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—A novel and interesting case has been presented to First Controller Porter for decision. A wealthy Scotch gentleman, while traveling by rail in his native country, in 1876, lost his portmanteau, containing $500,000 in bonds of various nations, among which were $5,000 in United States 6 per cent. coupon bonds. Some time ago the Police of Scotland arrested two men and one woman upon suspicion of having stolen the portmanteau. Upon being arraigned they confessed the theft and related a singular story about the disposition of the property. They explained that, not being able to read, they were not aware of the value of the papers, and, fearing to retain them, they were burned. A relative of the Scotchman residing in this country now comes forward with an application for the issue of duplicates for the bonds stolen, a full description of which is given. Similar applications to European Governments whose bonds were among those alleged to have been burned have been granted. A transcript from the records of the Scotch courts sets forth these facts and attests the respectability of the gentleman who lost the bonds. The First Controller intimated to-day that if, upon a thorough examination, the facts are found to be as stated, he will approve the application. Should the duplicates be issued they will have to be deposited in trust with the United States Treasurer in order to secure the Government against loss. When those particular bonds are called for redemption the amount will be paid the owner, and in the meantime he can regularly draw the interest.

FOR AND AGAINST FURBER.

THE CONFLICTING CLAIME OF COUNSEL IN THE CHARTER OAK CASE—PROBABILITY THAT THE TRIAL WILL BE FINISHED EARLY NEXT WEEK.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 2.—At noon to-day Mr. Swett closed his argument for the defense in the Charter Oak case, having spoken altogether about five hours. He took up the argument where he left off yesterday, and held that in the reports to the Insurance Commissioner in 1875 and 1876 the value of the assets was not given, though in the schedule accompanying, a market value was placed in 1875 on the Valley

THE DEBT OF THE NATION.

AN APPARENT INCREASE DURING DECEMBER.

HEAVY EXECUTIVE DEMANDS SWELL THE DEBT TEMPORARILY BY $1,233,785—AN AGGREGATE DECEASE DURING SIX MONTHS OF OVER $7,000,000—A LARGE COIN BALANCE AVAILABLE FOR REDEMPTION PURPOSES—INDICATIONS OF PROSPERITY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The December debt statement, which was published to-day, shows an increase in the public debt for the month of $1,233,785, and an aggregate decrease for the past six months of over $7,000,000. The increase in the debt for December is caused by the heavy requisitions made upon the Treasury by the executive departments in that month. This is usual in December, and each year an increase is shown in the debt statement for that month. This is, however, an apparent and not a real increase, because there must be a corresponding decrease in the amount of disbursements made during the ensuing six months of the fiscal year. The aggregate decrease in the debt for the past six months is over $7,000,000 below the figures for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1877. It must be remembered, however, that $5,500,000 was paid this year to satisfy the Halifax Fishery award, and adding that sum to the surplus of this year, would place the aggregate reduction in the debt for the past six months within $1,500,000 of the aggregate reduction for the corresponding six months of the preceding fiscal year.

The total coin balance is $224,865,478, which includes coin certificates, the amount held to redeem called bonds, and the amount due for interest on Jan. 1. Deducting these amounts, leaves the actual coin balance, against which there are no outstanding current obligations, $154,250,691. This sum represents the amount of coin which is now available for the redemption of legal-tender notes under the provisions of the Resumption act. Of this amount, $16,648,624 are standard silver dollars, and $6,031,804 are subsidiary silver coins. The currency balance, exclusive of the $10,000,000 held to redeem fractional currency, is $4,515,550, a decrease of $154,000 as compared with the November statement. During the month the special fund held to redeem legal-tender certificates has decreased $2,500,000.

The total number of standard silver dollars coined to Jan. 1 is 22,111,500, and of this number $16,648,624 are still in the Treasury and Mints. It was recently stated in a New-York paper that Secretary Sherman rescinded his September circular providing for the issue of standard silver dollars because it was discovered that the syndicate, which in September owed $50,000,000 for called bonds, would have been able to pay that amount in silver dollars. The absurdity of this statement is made apparent by the figures given above, showing the total number of standard silver dollars coined to date. When the circular referred to was rescinded the aggregate coinage of silver dollars was about $18,000,000, or less than one-third the amount at which the debt of the syndicate at that time was placed in the publication alluded to.

The Customs receipts for December were $8,454,518, and the internal revenue receipts, $6,093,140. Compared with December, 1877, there was an increase of over $71,000 in Customs receipts, and a falling off of $233,000 in internal revenue receipts. Compared with the six months ending Dec. 31, 1877, there was for the past six months an increase in Customs receipts of $1,654,027, and in internal revenue, $1,142,520.

For the 12 months ending Nov. 30, 1878, the value of our exports was $740,000,000, an increase of $117,000,000 as compared with the 12 months ending Nov. 30, 1877. The value of imports for the 12 months ending Nov. 30 last was $482,000,000, against $430,000,000 for the 12 months ending Nov. 30, 1877. The following is a recapitulation of the public debt statement:

Debt Bearing Interest in Coin.
Bonds at 6 per cent	$657,846,200 00
Bonds at 5 per cent	703,266,650 00
Bonds at 4½ per cent	250,000,000 00
Bonds at 4 per cent	198,700,000 00
Total principal	$1,809,812,850 00
Total interest	34,281,862 94
Debt Bearing Interest in Lawful Money.
Navy pension fund at 3 per cent	$14,000,000 00
Interest	210,000 00
Debt on Which Interest has Ceased Since Maturity.
Principal	$22,446,460 26
Interest	395,531 99
Debt Bearing no Interest.
Old demand and legal-tender notes	$346,743,051 00
Certificates of deposit	34,515,000 00
Fractional currency	16,539,354 62
Coin and silver certificates	24,076,830 00
Total principal	$421,443,035 62
Total unclaimed interest	8,197 03
Total Debt.
Principal	$2,267,702,345 88
Interest	34,941,892 96
Total	$2,302,644,138 84
Cash in the Treasury.
Coin	$224,865,477 62
Currency	4,515,550 13
Currency held for redemption of fractional currency	10,000,000 00
Special deposit held for the redemption of certificates of deposit as provided by law	34,515,000 00
Total	$373,896,027 75
Debt Less Cash in the Treasury.
Dec. 2, 1878	$2,027,414,325 79
Jan. 2, 1879	2,028,648,111 09
Increase of debt during month	$1,233,785 30
Decrease of debt since June 30, 1878	7,138,720 73
Bonds Issued to Pacific Railroad Companies, Interest Payable in Lawful Money.
Principal outstanding	$64,623,512 00
Interest accrued and not yet paid	1,938,705 36
Interest paid by the United States	39,835,039 86
Interest paid by transportation of mails	10,571,102 71
Balance of interest paid by the United States	29,263,937 15

The payments from the Treasury by warrants during the month of December, 1878, were as follows:

On account of civil and miscellaneous	$3,537,206 86
On account of war and miscellaneous	2,872,510 73
On account of Navy and miscellaneous	1,015,730 91
On account of Interior (Indians and Pensions)	4,746,429 51
Total	$12,171,878 01

The above does not include payments made on account of the interest or principal of the public debt.

The following is a statement of the coinage at the United States Mints during December, 1878:

Double eagles, 153,632 pieces, $3,072,640 value.
Eagles, 14,994 pieces, $149,940 value.
Half eagles, 70,270 pieces, $351,350 value.
Quarter eagles, 4,200 pieces, $105,000 value.
Dollars, 300 pieces, $300 value.
Total gold, 283,896 pieces, $3,681,430 value.
Standard silver dollars, 2,057,000 pieces, $2,057,000 value.
Five cents, 450 pieces, $22 50 value.
Three cents, 450 pieces, $13 50 value.
Cents, 933,450 pieces, $9,334 50 value.
Total minor, 934,340 pieces, $9,370 50 value.
Total coinage, 3,275,246 pieces, $5,748,300 50 value.

A WOOD-CUTTER'S SINGULAR DEATH.

Jacob Folk, of Roseland, near Newark, N. J., was missing from his home New Year's night. In the morning he started out to cut some timber. As he did not return at night a search was instituted by his neighbors. At midnight his dead body was found about half a mile from his house, with a large pole lying across his head and the skull badly crushed.

THE MARITIME REGISTER'S PROSPERITY.

The Maritime Register has been increased in size, and the number dated Jan. 1, 1879, is a bulky journal. Moreover, it is printed from new type, and has a prosperous appearance. The Register is printed weekly, and is an invaluable journal to shipping merchants and other business men.

WAS THIS MAN CLUBBED TO DEATH?

Frederick Petrie, aged 42, of No. 150 East Thirtieth-street, died yesterday afternoon at Bellevue Hospital, from a fracture of the skull under circumstances which call for a searching investigation. He was arrested on Monday by a police officer of the Twenty-first Precinct, at Third-avenue and Thirtieth-street, and was taken to the police station, in East Thirty-fifth-street, in charge of intoxication was entered against him, and he was locked up. The next morning he was taken to the Fifty-seventh-Street Police Court. He there complained of a severe pain in the head, and as he appeared to be sick he was sent to Bellevue Hospital. On Wednesday Petrie became paralyzed, and died yesterday. An autopsy showed that death was the result of a fracture of the skull. It was stated at the hospital last night that Petrie, soon after being admitted, informed one of the attendants that he had been clubbed by a policeman. Superintendent Walling has been notified of the case, and with Coroner Ellinger, will make an investigation.

GREENBACKERS IN CONFERENCE.

WENDELL PHILLIPS TELLS THEM WHAT THEY SHOULD WORK FOR—A LETTER FROM CHARLES ATWATER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The conference of New-England Greenbackers here to-day was attended by about 100 men, representing each New-England State. Of these, 66 represented Massachusetts, seven Rhode Island, and less than half a dozen, Connecticut. The proceedings were public, instead of private, as first intended. The business done was to arrange for the union of Eastern Greenbackers and for systematic work, under the direction of an executive committee consisting of one member from each Congressional district of the New-England States, and the Chairman and Secretaries of the several State committees. This committee's duties were defined to be "to work for the advancement of the Greenback Party in all honorable ways that they can devise, especially to facilitate the distribution of documents, the supplying of speakers, and the dissemination of its principles among the people." This business, simple as it appears, was not concluded until after a great deal of idle talk and an occasional wrangle. Wendell Phillips was one of those present, and he, being called upon, made a speech of some length, the burden of which was that attention should be given to one thing at a time. He did not take any ground, he said, for the present, on bonds, or gold or the rate of interest. The one thing now, the essential dividing line between the minds of forty millions of people to-day, was whether the nation shall exclusively issue its currency or let the banks issue it. The real question the public was ripening on, and was now ready for, was whether the nation would resume its sovereignty or whether it would part with it in a measure.

"When we put this as the immediate question of the Greenback Party," Mr. Phillips continued, "we sweep in all the progressive mind of the North as well as the South, and we make the strongest movement in the world. I do not mean to ignore the other issues. I mean in due time to place them in front of the people, but one thing at a time. I always, as an Abolitionist, intended that the negro should have a vote, but up to 1860 we never claimed a vote for him. We simply claimed one proposition—that no man had the right to own another—and on that proposition we forced the South into a war and freed the slaves. So we said nothing at first about 40 acres and a mule for every free man, but he ought to have had it, [laughter] and if he had, Hayes wouldn't have been in existence. I think if the negro had had a mule and 40 acres, Butler would have been President to-day. [Applause.] All that was in our minds, but we made the movement impossible for only that one thing—that a negro should be free.

"So this movement," continued Mr. Phillips, "should be responsible only for the claim that the nation should issue all the currency, and the masses its flag. The labor question lies within this question. I began the labor question in 1863, as soon as we saw the negro out of the woods. I labored to make a labor party, but it could not be, and, thank God, it cannot be, because no sharp line can be drawn between capital and labor; because labor and capital, like the spots of color on a dove's neck, are intermingled and inseparable. We are not against the manufacturers or the merchants. We are against the men that live by making corners; that live by making a tail of the nature of the currency. There are money chokers on the one side and the ignorant capital behind it, which, in due time, will see that its own interests are identical with ours. The moment we get on the plane where we shall be, by this movement, upon the national currency, I do not fear any agitation, no matter how deep or wide, no matter how much political economy it tears to pieces. Let the types be as free as the wind. Let every man's theories be ventilated."

The following letter from Charles Atwater, the late Greenback candidate for Governor in Connecticut, was read:

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 31, 1878.

Alexander Troup, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I am prevented from meeting the friends of the National Party at Boston on the 2d of January next. I desire to express the great interest I feel in the success of the principles of that organization, and to counsel co-operation in such wise measures which may be devised for a thorough concentration of all influences which will promote financial reform. The mistake which we have heretofore made in discussing the various financial principles ought to be corrected, and the canvass should be conducted on the general issues which are confined to these propositions: First, the issue of all money by the General Government and the prohibition of bank paper, the money of the Government issue to be a full legal tender; second, the maintaining and illustration of the constitutional doctrine that private rights are paramount to corporate monopoly. The latter proposition is the fundamental principle of the old Jeffersonian party, from which the two old political parties have radically departed. The masses of the Democratic Party, as well as a large number of the Republican Party of the States, are with us on theses issues, and it is possible, I think, by wise and prudent action, to have but two parties in the next canvass, viz., the party of the people, based on private rights and financial reform, and the party of capital, based upon corporate monopoly and the supremacy of wealth.

Yours very truly, CHARLES ATWATER.

Gen. Butler was not present, and it was given out that he was ill at his home in Lowell. The Executive Committee to-day created is authorized to call a New-England convention of Greenbackers in Portland, Me., on the last Wednesday in August.

MICHIGAN'S HAPPY FINANCIAL CONDITION.

NEAR EXTINCTION OF THE BONDED DEBT—PROSPECT OF TOO MUCH MONEY FOR THE SCHOOLS—THE GOVERNOR'S RECOMMENDATIONS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 2.—Gov. Croswell read his biennial Message to-day to the Legislature in joint convention. It opens with some pleasant allusions to the meeting of the Legislature in the new Capitol, and is devoted exclusively to State affairs. The Treasury, he says, presents a satisfactory condition. The cash on hand, Sept. 30, 1876, was $1,064,005; the bonded debt the same date in 1878 was $954,149, a reduction of $433,000 in two years. Deduct United States bonds, the sinking fund balance, and $46,000 in the canal fund, held applicable to paying the bonded debt, and the total is reduced to $234,898, which sum is further reduced to $123,071, if there are taken into account the unpaid specific taxes due on call. It may be expected that the receipts of the sinking fund during the next two years will be sufficient to pay off the entire remainder of the bonded debt. Under the constitutional provision, as soon as the bonded debt is provided for, the school fund will absorb the large yearly surplus from specific taxes in the sinking fund, and as many school districts are now nearly sufficiently supplied by the school fund already provided, if such provision remains unchanged, they will soon have too much money, a result not likely to be beneficial. An amendment to the Constitution carrying this surplus, when ascertained, into the general fund is, therefore, recommended.

As to the State institutions, the Governor recommends a new prison for female convicts and a reformatory for girls, and approves the suggestion that the blind shall no longer be taught with the deaf, but have a separate institution. The number of children in the State in 1878 between the ages of 5 and 20 years was 474,990, of whom 357,815 were enrolled in the public schools, with an attendance of 61 per cent. There were 6,060 school districts, 310 graded schools, 6,129 school houses, and 13,378 teachers employed at an aggregate in wages of $1,774,013, while the total cost for all public schools in 1878 was $2,986,193. The recommendation of Gov. Bagley that provision be made for a more careful examination and scrutiny of the savings banks of the State is renewed, and owing to the fact that money can now be obtained on good security at 7 and 8 per cent., and that real property in the State has now no uncertain value, the provision authorizing contracts at 10 per cent. interest should be repealed, and the maximum of interest throughout the State be limited to 7 per cent. The Message recommends the strengthening of the penalties of the Prize Fight law, the requiring of heavier bonds from officers holding large pecuniary trusts, the expansion of the State Militia system, and the erection of an executive mansion at the State capital.

The Governor says: "A quarter of a century has elapsed since ground was broken for the St. Mary's Falls Ship Canal. Since 1855 the tonnage passing has increased sixteen-fold, and its gross yearly revenues ten-fold. The tonnage in 1878 was 1,667,136 tons; gross revenue, $49,437. During the past two seasons the passage of vessels has averaged one every two hours and ten minutes. The enlargement of the capacity of the Canal by the Government promises to be fully completed within two years. The canal debt is fully provided for, and will be extinguished as it falls due, or before, if the bonds can be purchased. The change relieving the Canal Superintendent from the financial management and the appointment of a collector of tolls has proved a desirable one. It would be a fitting crown to the achievements of the early settlers of Michigan if the canal were made forever free."

THE DEFEATED FACTION.

TAMMANY'S GENERAL COMMITTEE.

ITS ORGANIZATION FOR THE ENSUING YEAR—SENATOR ECCLESINE AVOWS HIMSELF A SUPPORTER OF THE GOVERNOR.

The Tammany Hall General Committee for 1879 met last evening to organize, and was called to order by Grand Sachem Augustus Schell. Mr. Frederick Smyth, the defeated candidate for District Attorney at the last election, was made temporary chairman, and on taking the chair he made a speech, in which, after stating that he felt honored by "being stricken down" on Nov. 5, with the other candidates on the Tammany ticket, he highly eulogized Judge Blatchford for his decision sustaining the legality of the naturalization papers issued in 1868. After the speech of Mr. Smyth, a committee of one from each district on permanent officers was appointed, and a recess was taken to allow the committee to make selection. A glance around the hall revealed the fact that but few changes have been made in the committee. There are a number of new members, to be sure, but the majority consists of the same men who have blindly followed "Boss" Kelly since he succeeded "Boss" Tweed, and who have been his subservient tools in the various Assembly districts. There were few, among the 1,134 men present, who were not either office-holders, office-seekers, or persons in search of some means of drawing money out of the City Treasury. When the recess was over Grand Sachem Augustus Schell presented a report, in which the officers for the year, including Mr. H. D. Clinton for President, were named, all of them having received a unanimous vote from the committee, except Mr. Clinton, who had been opposed by Senator P. C. C. Ecclesine. This report, in the committee Senator Ecclesine had urged the nomination of Mr. John E. Develin, and, continuing, he argued that the Democratic Party had always been successful when it had been guided and administered simply for the spread of Democratic ideas and theories. But when it had sought to impose the personal wishes of a leader for the common voice of the people; "whenever it has been run on the theory of personal dislikes; whenever the gratification of private ambition or personal spite has been the moving motive that sought to control the policy of the party, sectionalism divided its councils and disaster set upon its banners." "Let us then unite," he said, "as Democracy, and let us begin the work now. The Governor of this State is a Democrat; let us put ourselves in hearty accord with the Governor of this State as a preliminary step in the right direction, and let the people of the State that we mean what we say in the nominations for officers that we make today. Let us invoke the aid of the mature judgment of men whose minds are unobscured by passion and unswayed by prejudice, whose names will recall the memories of Democratic triumphs rather than of Democratic defeats. Let us nominate for Chairman one who, while he is in hearty accord with this organization, is at the same time a warm personal friend of the Executive, a sound Democrat, wise counselor and able lawyer, albeit not the amicus curia of the Surrogate's Court, a man of intelligence, integrity, and popularity, Mr. John E. Develin."

Mr. Ecclesine's remarks were wasted. Mr. Clinton was Mr. Kelly's choice, and Mr. Develin's name was not heard outside of the committee.

The officers named other than Mr. Clinton consisted of 22 Vice-Presidents and 22 Secretaries, a Reading Secretary, William H. Quincy; a Recording Secretary, Joel B. Stevens, and a Treasurer, Richard J. O'Gorman. Mr. Clinton was conducted to the chair by Grand Sachem Schell and Mr. Ecclesine. He delivered one of his usual long addresses, which, carefully prepared beforehand, had been sent to one of the Tammany journals, and which had been printed before he had been elected. The speech was generally a eulogy of the Democratic Party and an apology for his own political inconsistency in changing on one time been a bitter foe of Tammany, and now one of its most zealous adherents. He said:

I am sometimes accused of inconsistency, because when I was a boy John Kelly and I were in the hope and prospect of reform at that time inside of Tammany Hall. I went outside and took the lead in denouncing the thieves who had broken in and assumed control. An address I delivered at Apollo Hall in February, 1870, and certain resolutions I then and there offered on that occasion, denouncing Tammany Hall as then constituted, are occasionally referred to by our political opponents and a hostile press, as though the Tammany Hall of 1870 and that of the present time were one and identical. That address and those resolutions have no application to the present condition of affairs; they described a state of things which existed during the reign of Tweed, Sweeny and their confederates. If there were inconsistency, when the Tweed Ring were at the height of their power, in publicly exposing and denouncing their nefarious plots and conspiracies, in doing my full share in bringing upon them political ruin, in aiding in their prosecution afterward, and in returning to Tammany Hall when it had become the foremost reform organization in our City—when it was the only organization that accomplished or had the power to accomplish much in the way of reform—if there were inconsistency in all this, I shall not shrink from whatever responsibility may be involved. The difference between me and some of my assailants is this. When the leadership of Tammany Hall was corrupt and infamous they gave the organization their cordial support, while I turned my back upon it and became its open opponent. Destroy this organization, and the Democratic Party throughout the Union would be consigned to the grave which has closed over so many political parties.

Continuing he said, "Let us make this organization in a better condition than at the present time. The few thrown overboard, who afterward became leaders in the assault upon Tammany Hall, have no interests and purposes identical with the Republican Party. The great Republican whale has swallowed these political Jonahs, and, like the whale that swallowed the scriptural Jonah, finding them hard of digestion, has cast them up on dry land. The thousands of honest Democrats, who at the last election followed their lead, and without intending it, aided in the success of the Republican Party, are flocking back to the support of the regular Democratic organization. You find them returning in such numbers you must—

"Hang your banners on the outward walls.
The cry is, still they come."

In the name of the Democracy; in the best interests of the great party to which we all belong, let them come. Receive them with open arms. The doors of Tammany Hall are open to all true Democrats. Family feuds are bitter and unseemly, and to the outside world appear unwise.

Speaking of the City expenditure, he said: During the year 1877, the expenses of the City Government, so far as the city officials had control over them, were 20 per cent. less than in 1873, under a Republican and Anti-Tammany administration. During the past year the expenditures of the same department were 22 per cent. less than in 1874, under Republican and Anti-Tammany rule. In the other departments, where expenditures are fixed by acts of Republican Legislatures, there has been no reduction.

The remainder of the speech was a eulogy of Kelly, a denunciation of the Republican Party and the Anti-Tammany Democrats for their combination with the Republicans in the last local election, and an exhortation for a union of all Democrats in this City to elect a Governor of the State, and a President in 1880 in place of Mr. Hayes. It was resolved that the new Executive Committee should be each assessed $10 and the members of the Committee on Organization $15 when elected, and that each member should be taxed $5 for a ticket to the ball of the Tammany Society on Jan. 8, in celebration of the Battle of New-Orleans.

REV. DR. BELLOWS' ANNIVERSARY.

From the Providence Press, Jan. 1.

One of the truly pleasant anniversaries close at hand is that of Dr. H. W. Bellows, who within a few days will have been the Pastor of 'All Souls', New-York, for 40 years. That is an event of interest not only to the Pastor and the denomination, but to New-York and the country. Dr. Bellows as a preacher, Pastor, author, and citizen combines in a singularly happy manner the honest fashion of a past age with the spirit of our own time. And were it not so, the country would yet be unwilling to forget his services as the President of the Sanitary Commission during the war. As the celebrant is very generally known and esteemed in this State, it is probable that Rhode Island will be represented at this interesting occasion. In a fast age it is well that there are still some leaders left who make haste slowly, and who know how to keep their heads clear, their hearts fresh, and their minds vigorous.

NOBODY THOUGHT IT TO BE AS BAD AS THIS.

From the Boston Transcript, Jan. 1.

On the whole, we do not envy the New-Yorkers the hurly-burly they are "into," as they would say, to-day, with their New Year's calling. It may be "fun for the boys," as was the sport with the frogs, but there are many hearts as well as many heads that will ache in consequence of the reckless revelry licensed for this one day in the best society. It is an old Knickerbocker custom in the immediate ancestry, but we should trace its kinship further back to that state of mankind which survived till a few years ago in the Sandwich Islands, and which an annual festival returning with the Hawaiians for the time being to the state of beasts still strives to commemorate.

THE END OF AN UNFORTUNATE.

Kate Norris, a young woman who was suffering from oedema of the lungs, was removed from a disreputable resort in Wooster-street to Bellevue Hospital on Tuesday evening last. She died soon afterward, and the body was removed to the Morgue, where it remained unclaimed until yesterday, when it was ascertained that the dead woman had given a quantity of diamond jewelry to Mrs. Sanden, an inmate of the same house, upon her promise to pawn it and pay the funeral expenses with the proceeds. The jewelry was sent to the office of the Public Administrator. The antecedents of the dead woman are unknown.

DISTINGUISHED PHYSICIANS EULOGIZED.

The monthly meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine was held at No. 12 West Thirty-first-street last evening. In spite of the bleak weather, the attendance of physicians was good. The principal object of the meeting was the delivery of eulogies on the late Drs. George Wilkes and John Rauner.

A STORM OF WIND AND SNOW

THE LOWEST TEMPERATURE OF THE SEASON.

ONLY FOUR DEGREES ABOVE ZERO—THE MARCH OF THE COLD WAVE—DETENTION OF MAILS—THE WEATHER ELSEWHERE.

The snow-storm in this City, which began on New Year's Day, and ended abruptly yesterday afternoon, was "browed" three days previously in Texas, and coming to this City in a north-easterly direction, passed onward in a straight line, and terminated in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. In the wake of the storm was a cold wave, accompanied by a high wind, which attained a velocity of 26 miles an hour, and sent the mercury from 32° rapidly down to 4°—the point at which it stood at midnight yesterday. Soon after daybreak yesterday morning the snow, which had ceased for a time, began to fall steadily, and so densely as to give promise of much detention of the mails and many blockades on surface railroads. The several horse railroads got out their snow-plows and all their extra teams and drivers, and ran them at brief intervals until the end of the storm. The elevated roads were well patronized all day. So frequently did their trains run that the tracks were kept clear, and there was no delay at any time. The ferry-boats were not impeded in their progress and made their regular trips on schedule time. The North River was full of floating ice during the early part of the day, but the ebb of the tide carried it out to sea in the afternoon before it had had time to unite with any degree of solidity. The barometer in Dr. Donhauser's tower began to rise at 2:30 P. M. yesterday, when it stood at 29.45, and at 11 o'clock last night it had attained an elevation of 29.71, an indication that the extremely cold weather will not last after the passage of the storm-centre. The thermometer at 10 P. M. was at the cautionary signals were ordered to fly on the Equitable Building all day. At 7 A. M. the mercury stood at 28°; at 2:30 P. M., 32°; 5 P. M., 27°; 9 o'clock, 10°; 11 o'clock, 5°, and midnight 4° above zero.

At 5 P. M. yesterday the mercury was 14° below zero at Milwaukee, 12° below at Madison, Wis., 9° below at Chicago, 5° below at Cleveland, 2° below at Detroit, 1° above at St. Louis, 3° above at Louisville, and 3° below at Leavenworth.

The mails were not so badly overdue as might have been expected. The northern mail by the Hudson River Railroad, which was due at 11 A. M., was reported until 1:40 o'clock this morning; the Washington mail arrived 40 minutes late; the Boston and Shore Line was one hour behind time, and at midnight the New-York and Dunkirk, due at 11, and the Pittsburg mails had not been heard from, the trains being blockaded by drifting snow.

THE STORM OUTSIDE THE CITY.

A COLD WAVE AT THE WEST—SNOW AND WIND—TRAINS AND STEAM-BOATS DELAYED.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 2.—A cold wave came down from the north-west last night and lowered the temperature 40° or more during the night. At 6 o'clock this morning the mercury marked 6° below zero, and although it is clear, with bright sunshine, the temperature continues to fall. There is no change in the river. Ferries continue to run and the harbor is kept clear of ice.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 2.—There has been a remarkable change in the weather here in the last 24 hours, the mercury falling 31°. Navigation is entirely suspended.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 2.—The weather was very cold at 6 o'clock, the thermometer being 7° below zero. There was a driving snow-storm in the afternoon. The night is clear and cold. All the railroads are clear of snow. Passenger trains are from one to five hours late. The passenger train due here at 7 P. M. left Buffalo five hours late. The Lake Shore Road has abandoned all freights east of here. Three trains of stock were sent to Painesville to unload and wait until the yards are clear in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 2.—The wind is blowing a gale, and the light fall of snow to-day has drifted badly. Trains on the Buffalo, New-York and Philadelphia Railroad are all annulled all day long along nearly the entire length of the Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad. There are 18 inches of snow on the ground, and the railroad cuts are full. All trains on the road have been abandoned. The trains on the Erie and Black River Roads are still running.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 2.—The gale is so severe at Newport that the boat for New-York will not go out until the weather moderates.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—A severe snow-storm, with high wind from the west, is now raging throughout the western portion of Ontario. The thermometer is 4° above zero.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Jan. 2.—The storm which commenced to-day has increased in violence, and all railroads leading to this city are again blockaded. No steamers left here or arrived here to-night.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 2.—Various thermometers registered from 26° to 30° below zero last night.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 2.—At 7 o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 20° below zero.

YANKTON, Dakota, Jan. 2.—The mercury dropped to 25° below zero last night. This is the coldest weather experienced here since 1862.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 2.—The weather has been growing cold since last midnight, and at 11 o'clock to-night the mercury on the hill-tops marked from 9° to 12° below zero, and was still falling.

GOVERNMENT WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3—1 A. M.—An area of high pressure, with very low temperatures, has extended rapidly eastward to Pennsylvania and Virginia, and southward over the Gulf States. An area of very low pressure has moved south-eastward to the St. Lawrence Valley and developed into a storm centre, now off the coast of Maine. High north-west winds prevail from Maine to Virginia and westward over the lakes. The rivers rose on Thursday at Augusta and Nashville, but fell at Shreveport, Cincinnati, Cairo, Memphis, and Vicksburg.

INDICATIONS.

For the Middle and South Atlantic States, the lower lake region, Tennessee and the Ohio Valley and East Gulf States, rising barometer, colder, westerly winds, and clear weather.

For the West Gulf States, northerly winds, rising barometer, colder, cloudy weather.

For the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys and the upper lake region, stationary or rising barometer, stationary or lower temperature, generally clear weather, with diminishing north and west winds.

For New-England, rising barometer, colder north and west winds, and clear weather.

For the Pacific States, cooler, clear, or partly cloudy weather.

The rivers will generally fall.

Cautionary signals continue at Lewes, Grand Haven, Milwaukee, Ludington, and cautionary off-shore signals at Cape May, Atlantic City, Barnegat, Sandy Hook, New-York, New-Haven, New-London, Newport, Wood's Hole, Boston, Section Eight, Portland, Section Seven, Eastport, Indianola, Galveston, Port Eads, Mobile, Macon Cape Lookout, Cape Hatteras, Kitty Hawk, Cape Henry, Norfolk, and Baltimore.

HOW A TROUT TAKES A FLY.

INSTANCES WHERE TROUT DID TURN THE TAIL SOMERSAULT FOR A FLY.

From the Rochester Express.

Considerable discussion has lately taken place in regard to the manner of a trout taking a fly, authorities appearing to differ in their views of the matter. From the following communication on this subject, by our townsman, Mr. French, an angler as noted for his modesty as for his skill in the "gentyl art," it appears indisputable that the salmo fontinalis occasionally does perform the gyration, in rising to a fly, of first slapping it with his tail, ere taking it in the mouth. The Doctor is specific, and mentions three instances, in his own angling and in different waters, where he was an interested witness of the performance, at the end of eight ounces of lancewood:

To the Editor of the Evening Express:

In Saturday's edition of the Express, under the above heading, you say, "It was W. C. Prime who first put the nonsense into print that a trout, on rising to a fly, before taking it into the mouth, first hits it with his tail." What Mr. Prime says is this, on page 112 of his book: "It is not often on still water that a trout takes a fly with his mouth before striking it with his tail; but they sometimes do it on a white fly in the evening." Again, on page 149, he says: "I speak, of course, of trout as I have known them. In all that I say of trout-fishing, I beg my reader to bear in mind, what I have above tried to make plain, that the habits of trout vary with their local habitations, and there are many waters full of them of which I know nothing, and when their customs may be quite different from those which I have learned."

Almost any trout fisherman knows that the habits of trout vary almost as much as do the habits of those who fish for them, and this, too, in waters not remotely distant from each other, so that what Mr. Prime says may be true in regard to the localities in which he has fished. I know that they sometimes strike a fly with their tail before taking it in their mouth, as I have seen them do it in three several localities, but I do not believe it is their general custom.

In 1876, while fishing for trout in Lake Ely, in the Adirondacks, I saw this done several times, and it was the first time I had ever seen it, I watched it with a good deal of interest. The water was very clear, and my cast from 30 to 40 feet, so that I could see all their movements distinctly. I had taken several trout of one-half pound weight which first struck with their tail, and made another cast, when a large fellow rose and struck the tail fly, a red Ibis, with his tail; I struck hard at the same time, and hooked him firmly. Finding the point of the tail, when he immediately had business at the bottom of the lake and with his first rush took nearly 50 feet of line before I could snub him. How that reel did whiz! Then followed a series of rushes and jumps that make my fingers tingle to think of. He leaped into the air again and again, trying to shake himself loose, but he was firmly hooked, and that hook evidently spurred him to put forth his best efforts continually, for he kept me busy for nearly half an hour, and still seemed as fresh as ever, when I determined to see which was the stronger, his tail or my tackle, and began reeling in. The rod—an eight ounce one—bent and quivered from tip to butt, and the line would occasionally twang like a bowstring as he jerked it taut in some of his fierce plunges; but rod, line, and tail all held, and as I landed him on my raft—a plump beauty weighing a little over two pounds—my shout of triumph awoke the echoes in the old woods for miles around.

I do not wish to be understood that all the trout in this lake struck with their tails first, but that I have done so several times. I also saw it done several times about 10 miles above Albany Bridge, where Perrine's Creek empties into the Oswegatchie River, and also saw chub do the same thing, while fishing elsewhere than below the dam. I could, probably, have never witnessed it in any of the other lakes or streams in that vicinity. What I have seen convinces me that trout do sometimes take a fly in this way, but not generally.

F. FRENCH.

A PRIEST FALLS IN LOVE WITH A WIDOW.

A letter from Kilburn City, Wis., to the Chicago Times says: "The people of this usually quiet village are in a state of extraordinary excitement. The following will explain: For some time Rev. Father J. E. Becket has been Pastor of the Catholic church. He is young, smart, and a handsome man.

Mrs. Lintner is a widow, and a daughter of one of our oldest, wealthiest, and most respected residents. She is a strict Presbyterian, and the intimacy of the priest and widow met. On the part of the woman it seemed to be a case of love at first sight. Of course, the priest did not think of such a thing as love at first. But there came a time when he did. He found himself deeply in love with the handsome widow. He looked at his profession, Church, and congregation, and then at the pretty woman. He finally decided to give up the priest's office, leave his pleasant church and kindly congregation, and become a happy husband. About four weeks ago, soon after dark, the couple sought the home of a Justice, were married, and left that night, going to Chicago, where they remained a day or two, and then took a night train for Chicago. The father of the widow, thinking they had departed as single people, prepared to follow them, but just before starting he thought to call on the men who do marrying. He soon found that his daughter was lawfully married, and as he did not particularly object to the priest for a son-in-law, he let the matter drop. The friends of both bride and groom succeeded in keeping the matter from the general public until yesterday, and now that the public has heard the news it is full of talk and excitement. This, it is believed, is the first instance of a Catholic priest in Wisconsin taking to himself a wife. The happy couple are now in Ohio. Both are comfortably off in this world's goods."

IN DEATH NOT DIVIDED.

From the Baltimore Sun, Jan. 1.

At the Thistle Factory, two miles from Ellicott City, Dec. 28, Mrs. Annie Thompson, aged 73 years, died suddenly of paralysis. Her funeral was set for Dec. 31, when she was joined "over the river" by her husband, Mr. John Thompson, aged 75, who that day died of paralysis also. Mr. Thompson had been for 20 years Supe intendent of the Thistle Factory. In November, 1876, he and his wife celebrated their golden wedding, or fiftieth anniversary of marriage. At dinner, Dec. 27, the aged wife was first seized with her fatal illness. At supper the same day the husband was stricken, and their deaths occurred subsequently as stated. Together they will be buried, Jan. 2, at Loudon Park Cemetery. Mr. Thompson had spent 46 years of his life in three mills, Union, Gray's, and Thistle, on the Patapsco. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and came with his family to this country at an early age. He at first engaged in the manufacture of cotton mill machinery at Paterson, N. J. In 1842 he came to Maryland and took charge of Gray's factory. In 1844 he went to the Union Factory. In 1851 he went to Nashville and superintended large locomotive works; in the same State he subsequently had charge of a cotton mill at Franklin, and in 1859 he returned to Maryland as the Superintendent of the Thistle Factory, where he remained until his death.

REV. DR. BELLOWS' ANNIVERSARY.

From the Providence Press, Jan. 1.

One of the truly pleasant anniversaries close at hand is that of Dr. H. W. Bellows, who within a few days will have been the Pastor of 'All Souls', New-York, for 40 years. That is an event of interest not only to the Pastor and the denomination, but to New-York and the country. Dr. Bellows as a preacher, Pastor, author, and citizen combines in a singularly happy manner the honest fashion of a past age with the spirit of our own time. And were it not so, the country would yet be unwilling to forget his services as the President of the Sanitary Commission during the war. As the celebrant is very generally known and esteemed in this State, it is probable that Rhode Island will be represented at this interesting occasion. In a fast age it is well that there are still some leaders left who make haste slowly, and who know how to keep their heads clear, their hearts fresh, and their minds vigorous.

NOBODY THOUGHT IT TO BE AS BAD AS THIS.

From the Boston Transcript, Jan. 1.

On the whole, we do not envy the New-Yorkers the hurly-burly they are "into," as they would say, to-day, with their New Year's calling. It may be "fun for the boys," as was the sport with the frogs, but there are many hearts as well as many heads that will ache in consequence of the reckless revelry licensed for this one day in the best society. It is an old Knickerbocker custom in the immediate ancestry, but we should trace its kinship further back to that state of mankind which survived till a few years ago in the Sandwich Islands, and which an annual festival returning with the Hawaiians for the time being to the state of beasts still strives to commemorate.

THE END OF AN UNFORTUNATE.

Kate Norris, a young woman who was suffering from oedema of the lungs, was removed from a disreputable resort in Wooster-street to Bellevue Hospital on Tues

INTERESTS OF COMMERCE.

DISCUSSING NEW PROJECTS.

PROPOSED RADICAL CHANGE IN THE METHODS OF COLLECTING THE REVENUE—THE ADULTERATION OF SUGARS—NAMES CALLED FOR—THE YORK-ANTWERP RULES TO RECEIVE FURTHER CONSIDERATION.

At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, an invitation from Commodore Nicholson to visit the training-ship for boys, Minnesota, was accepted. Copies of the annual report of the Chamber were ordered to be sent to 72 commercial bodies in Germany in response to a request to that effect from the United States Consul-General to that country. A communication from the Chamber of Shipping of Great Britain complaining bitterly of New-York's port charges was referred to the Committee on Foreign Commerce. Mr. Barbour sketched the progress of the movement to permit of the payment of duties in certified checks, already published in THE TIMES, and said that such a consummation is only a few weeks removed. On motion of Mr. Snow, from the Committee on Foreign Commerce and the Revenue Laws, resolutions were adopted asking Congress for the establishment of a signal station on the south-eastern shore of Block Island.

Mr. Barbour, from the Special Committee on Reforms in the Customs Service, presented a long report, in which the committee say they have deemed its advisible to postpone urging upon Congress the proposed modifications of the present tariff until after the assembling of the new Congress in March d. Meantime they desire to present to the Chamber for its action a proposition involving a radical change in the methods of collecting the revenue. In lieu of the present cumbersome, vexatious, and uncertain methods of ascertaining "dutiable value," it is proposed to substitute "home valuation." The administrative machinery that will be necessary to carry this system into effect will, in the judgment of the committee, be far less complicated and much more satisfactory in its results than the present method. The new plan contemplates that the importer present to the Collector an accurate descriptive invoice of his goods, containing, first, the commercial name or classifica ion of the merchandise; second, the port or country from which the goods are received; third, the marks and numbers of the cases, with a comprehensive descriptive list of the contents of each; fourth, the estimated cash valuation at either of the five principal ports of entry, viz.: Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and New-Orleans. On receiving goods, invoices, with such detailed information in addition to the above as the Secretary of the Treasury may require, the Collector of the port shall direct an examination and estimate of value; and if his estimate shall materially vary from that of the importer or consignee of the goods or merchandise, then it shall be optional with him, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to take said invoice for the account of the Government at the invoice price, adding such commission as the act may provide, which may vary from 5 to 10 per cent., according upon the character of the merchandise. This is the general plan. In regard to the forms necessary to carry it into effect, the committee say they are not prepared to indicate details, but they suggest that these should be established by the Treasury Department an account with "forfeitures." All goods or merchandise taken by the Government should be paid for and charged to this account, and all proceeds of sales of goods abandoned to the Government at the end of each fiscal year, the net results of the "forfeiture account" would be known, and according as this account resulted favorably or otherwise for the Government would the intelligence and efficiency of the administration be regarded. The goods and merchandise taken by the Government should be sold at public auction, for cash, within 30 days from time of seizure. Within five days after sale, the importer should be credited and paid the amount of his invoice, with interest and commission as provided. Some of the advantages of this system are stated as follows: First, the importer will be obliged to disclose, at once, the source or conditions on which he obtained his goods. Under the present system, this seems inquisitorial, and often leads to loss of trade; second, it places the responsibility of ascertaining dutiable value upon parties who should know; third, the Appraisers' Department, under this system, will require the services of experts the most practical and efficient obtainable; fourth, all delay and dissatisfaction would cease between the merchant and the Government, since the Government would be furnished with a direct and responsible method of enforcing its penalties; fifth, no amendment to invoices, when once offered, should be permitted, thus shutting out all possibility of collusion between merchant and Appraiser.

Mr. Robbins, another member of the committee, made a strong speech in favor of the proposition. He said that repudiation had never been attempted by any State largely commercial, and in this connection he contrasted favorably the action of the United States Government with that of various other Governments in its reliance upon the integrity of the merchants. [Applause.] The new plan would do away with the necessity of a return to the old moiety system. It was a disgrace to a Government to have to employ a secret service. The Presidents of the committee being absent, Mr. Robbins moved that the consideration of the report be postponed until a special meeting to be held on Friday, 24th inst., which was adopted.

A letter was received from Secretary Clark, of the Board of Health, giving the result of the recent chemical analysis made of sugars in response to a resolution adopted by the Chamber at the previous meeting. Extensive adulterations were found, as has been already published in THE TIMES. Mr. Hugh N. Camp offered a series of resolutions recognizing the labors of Messrs. Chandler and Leeds, commending the action of the Board of Health. Mr. Thurber did not think the report of the board sufficiently specific. It leaves the entire sugar-refining interest under a cloud. The guilty parties should have been named. He offered the following as a substitute:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Chamber of Commerce are hereby tendered to the Board of Health for its prompt response to the resolutions of the Chamber relative to sugar adulterations, and that the Secretary be requested to again communicate with the board asking for more specific information as to the names of the parties engaged in the adulteration, and that the Secretary be requested to again communicate with the board asking for more specific information as to the names of the parties regarding the particulars of the examination upon which the recent report of the board was founded, such as the size of the sample drawn, &c. Resolutions were then extracted from one sample; also the names of refineries whose products were examined, and the result in each case, so that the responsibility of any adulteration may be placed where it belongs, and those refineries who have not practiced injurious adulteration may be relieved from the odium attached thereto. Also, the opinion of the board as to whether the adulteration of sugars and New-York refined sugars generally, and whether, in the opinion of the board, there is sufficient cause to justify prohibition on the part of the public of ill effects arising from the use of refined sugars.

There was considerable discussion. Mr. Camp insisted that there was no trouble in finding sugar on sale in which tin could be readily traced. He was opposed to whitewashing guilty refiners. Mr. Thurber said that no whitewashing was intended. On the contrary, the resolution was designed to make the guilty parties known. Mr. William E. Dodge said that the Chamber of Commerce certainly is a matter where the honor of a large manufacturing interest was involved. Mr. Thurber's substitute was finally put and carried.

On motion of Mr. Ward, the action taken at the recent special meeting in regard to the York-Antwerp rules of general average was reconsidered, on the ground that the subject had been too hastily acted upon in view of its importance, and further consideration was postponed to a future meeting, when the directors of the Produce Exchange will be invited to be present and give his views. The Chamber then adjourned.

THE NEW PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

On Sept. 17, the President of the Produce Exchange appointed an advisory committee, consisting of 15 gentlemen not members of the Board of Managers, to confer with the board as to the proper steps to be taken to provide for the future wants of the Exchange. On Dec. 16 this committee reported in favor of the purchase of real estate whereon to erect a new building and the appointment of a permanent advisory committee with power to act in connection with the Board of Managers. The report was referred to a special committee, with instructions to report a plan for the adoption by the Exchange of the views therein expressed. The latter committee has prepared their report, and it has been approved by counsel. It recommends that a majority of the Board of Managers, with the approval of a majority of the permanent advisory committee have power to invest in such of the sinking fund of the Exchange in real estate as they may deem necessary to provide for its wants, and that an election shall be held at once for an advisory committee of 15 members from the membership of the Exchange, who shall not be members of the Board of Managers, or who, on becoming members of the board, shall cease to be members of the committee, and whose term of service shall be as follows: The five receiving the highest vote to continue in office three years, the five next highest, two years, and the remaining five one year, (provided, however, that in case of a tie vote between any five or more members, such members shall decide, by lots, to which class they shall belong,) and each year thereafter, until otherwise ordered by a meeting of the Exchange, an election shall be held for five members to take the place of those retiring. Any vacancies occuring to be filled by the committee, from the membership of the Exchange, for the unexpired term of the resiring member. This plan will then be submitted to a vote of the Exchange, to be taken on the 21st inst.

MR. SEWELL AND THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Arthur L. Sewell, Lester Wallack's son-in-law, and the former partner of John Bonner, applied to the Superior Court recently for an injunction to restrain the President and other officers of the Stock Exchange from excluding him from the Exchange-room. The facts are set forth succinctly by Judge Freedman, who heard the argument, in the following decision, handed down yesterday:

"The plaintiff, as a member of the New-York Stock Exchange, was tried and found guilty of 'obvious fraud' by the Governing Committee of that association, and thereupon expelled. The trial, conviction, and expulsion took place under the constitution and by-laws of the association, which had been subscribed to by the plaintiff on his admission. By article 20 the Governing Committee is made sole judge of what constitutes obvious fraud, and the clear intent and object of the article is to secure and enforce honest dealing among a class of men exposed by the very nature of their business to unusual temptation. This being so, the article, though providing a summary remedy, should receive the sanction of the courts as long as existing rules of law will permit. The objections urged against the plaintiff's conviction and expulsion are not based upon his innocence, but upon an alleged misconstruction and even invalidity of article 20. They are therefore of a somewhat technical character, and as their determination not only involves considerable labor, but the whole issue, they should be determined upon a regular trial, and not upon a mere motion. The granting of an injunction before trial always rests in the sound discretion of the court, and upon the whole case as it appears at present I can find nothing which calls for summary interference. Motion denied, with $10 costs."

AN INSANE WIFE'S DEED.

SHE MURDERS HER HUSBAND BY A TERRIBLE BLOW WITH AN AXE WHILE HE IS KNEELING IN PRAYER.

From the Boston Journal, Jan. 1.

A shocking tragedy occurred yesterday morning in the Parish of Byfield, Newbury, about five miles from Newburyport, which created a painful sensation in the farming community in the neighborhood of the locality. The victim was Mr. John H. Caldwell, who was assaulted with an axe by his wife, Mrs. Lucy Caldwell, and instantly killed. Mr. Caldwell was a well-to-do farmer, living about three miles from Byfield Station on the Danvers and Newburyport Railroad, and opposite the country residence of Moses Colburn, Esq., of Boston. About 15 years ago he married Miss Lucy Brown, of Ipswich, who taught school in the Byfield Parish, and with whom he has since lived happily. It is, however, whispered that in disposition the husband and wife differed materially, Mr. Caldwell being a very devout man, attached to his home and disliking company, while his wife, though an estimable woman, was exceedingly high spirited and fond of society. Some three years ago Mrs. Caldwell began to manifest signs of insanity, suddenly leaving home, without announcing her intentions to any one, and visiting her friends in Inswich. About a year ago, on one of the coldest nights of the season, she started on foot for Ipswich and was overtaken in Rowley by parties who went in search of her. She has suffered at different times from slight attacks of insanity, but has not been considered at all dangerous. She has recently been visited by her sister, Miss Mary Brown, of Danvers, who was present when the murder was committed.

On Monday Mr. Caldwell was engaged in cutting wood, and at night he placed his axe near the stove in the kitchen to keep the frost out, a common practice among farming people, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell and Miss Brown, had breakfasted in a room which was occupied as a dining and sitting room, and were engaged in religious devotion. Mr. Caldwell was kneeling in front of an old-fashioned rocking-chair, Miss Brown was in a similar position on the opposite side of the room, while Mrs. Caldwell was seated on a lounge near the window. The faces of both Mr. Caldwell and Miss Brown were turned from Mrs. Caldwell. Mr. Caldwell was engaged in prayer, when Mrs. Caldwell stepped cautiously to the kitchen and seized the axe, with which she approached her husband and struck him on the back of the head as he was bowed in the chair. The blow was repeated, and the victim fell to the floor, the thick carpet upon which was drenched with his blood. At the first blow the axe cleaved the skull and penetrated both lobes of the brain to the depth of 5¼ inches.

The fall of the victim startled Miss Brown, who, seeing what her sister had done, exclaimed, "Why, Lucy, I shouldn't have thought you would have done that," and ran into the road, followed by Mrs. Caldwell, both women screaming violently. They proceeded to the house of Mr. Alfred S. Ambrose, the nearest neighbor, who met them, and to whom Mrs. Caldwell said: "He threatened to kill me, and I struck him with the axe. You had better go up and see how he is." She appeared quite self-possessed, and did not betray the slightest emotion.

The murder was committed at about 8:30. Mr. Ambrose hastened to the house, and found Mr. Caldwell lying as he had fallen, quite dead. Intelligence of the sad affair was immediately forwarded to the authorities of Newburyport, and State Detective Ayers and another officer repaired to the scene, accompanied by a medical examiner. Upon examining the room in which the murder was committed, the axe was found where Mrs. Caldwell had placed it at the end of the lounge. The wounds in the dead man's head were dressed and the body prepared for burial. Mrs. Caldwell was taken into custody and conveyed to the jail in Newburyport, of which Capt. Ayres is keeper, where she was comfortably provided for, to await a judicial investigation of the case. Mr. Caldwell was about 45 years of age, a son of Mr. David S. Caldwell, and had no children. His wife is about seven years his junior.

DEATH OF DANIEL VIRGIL GATES.

From the Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise, Dec. 25.

Daniel Virgil Gates, a resident of Virginia City for years, and previous to that, of Sacramento, died at Leadville, Colorado, on the 8th inst., aged 50 years. Deceased was born in Rochester, N. Y., and, having good elocutionary talent, gave public readings and imitations when but 13 years of age. He was educated at the New-Brighton Collegiate Institute, Staten Island, and studied medicine, but, having a fondness for the stage, took to it as a profession. He made his first appearance at Albany (N. Y.) Museum as Cateby to the elder Booth's Richard, Mr. Venua doing King Hen-ry. He traveled through 26 States before coming to California, and made his bow to the patrons of the drama on the coast at the American Theatre, Sau Francisco, appearing as Ds Mauprat to Stark's Richelieu. Subsequently, he was a leading stock actor for a long time with Edwin Booth, D. C. Anderson, Wm. Wallam Barry, and others on their first tour through the mountain towns. After tiring of the stage, he joined his brothers in business, and traveled throughout the coast in that line. His trip was to the Black Hills in June, 1877, and on his return to Colorado in last Spring proceeded to the rich regions near the summit of the Rocky Mountains. The Fall weather coming on, he took a severe cold, which caused pneumonia, and died shortly after his arrival. He was attended by Masonic friends, and received a Masonic funeral, being a member of Washington Lodge, No. 20, of Sacramento.

FOREFATHERS' DAY IN SAN FRANCISCO.

From the San Francisco Alta, Dec. 25.

The preliminary dinner of the New-England Society in this city, in commemoration of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth Rock, on the 22d of December, 1620, took place on Monday at the Cosmonolitan Hotel, ex-Gov. Frederick F. Low presiding. Rev. Horatio Stebbins responded to the toast, "The Day we Celebrate." Toasts were proposed and responded to as follows: "The United States of America," Major Gen. McDowell; "The State of California," ex-Senator Cole; "Massachusetts," Stephen Phillips; "Connecticut," Prof. Kellogg; "New-Hampshire," George Bancroft; a poem by Mr. Severance, "The Pilgrim Fathers;" "Rhode Island," Col. Potter; "Maine," George C. Perkins; "The City of San Francisco," Mayor Bryant; "The Press," H. H. Wentworth. The following telegram was received during the evening in response to one sent by President Low:

NEW-YORK, Dec. 23, 1878.

To the New-England Society, San Francisco:

The New-England Society of New-York returns your fraternal greeting. The New-England spirit knows no barrier of space or time between her and her children, but "one touch of nature makes the whole world kin."

THE ENGLISH SPARROWS IN QUEBEC.

From the Quebec Mercury, Dec. 28.

These little birds who have now been among us for some time have recently had a good deal to contend with in our inhospitable climate, their supplies having to some extent been suddenly cut off by the heavy snow-falls. They seem, however, to get along nicely, and to increase in numbers. Large crowds of them are always visible about the Archbishop's palace, the basilica, and in the square and gardens of the seminary, attracted no doubt by the kind care bestowed on them by the clergy. The little birds had a monster meeting yesterday afternoon on the top of the basilica and adjoining telegraph wires being literally crowded with them, congregated together in rows. What the object of the convention was has not transpired, but in their chirpings and unanimous votes of thanks to the kind friends who so liberally supply them with food and otherwise assist them through our rigorous Canadian Winter.

CATHOLICS LABORING WITH THE NEGROES.

Correspondence of the Petersburg Index-Appeal.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 31.

Right Rev. Bishop Keane will inaugurate a series of meetings at the Cathedral, commencing Sunday night next, for the especial benefit of the colored people of this city and the vicinity. This is the first organized movement that has ever been put on foot to convert the colored people in this State to the Catholic faith. There are now but a few compartive small number of colored persons who have united themselves with the Catholic Church. The meetings, the first of which will be held at the Cathedral Sunday night, will be continued every Sunday night so long as the colored people manifest an interest in them. It is the purpose of the Bishop to inaugurate similar meetings in the other cities and towns of the State, if the effort here meets with the success it is hoped that it will.

DOESN'T KNOW ANYTHING.

C. G. Memminger has addressed the following card to the editor of the Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier:

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 30, 1878.

To the Editor of the News and Courier:

Senator Blaine's confidence must have been sadly abused when he put my name among the witnesses to prove fraud in the recent election, as published in your paper of this morning. I had not returned from my Summer residence in the mountains when the election took place, and I had been there all the Summer, so that I know no more of the election than Mr. Blaine himself does. If you think it worth while to have my name removed from his list, please say what you think best. Respectfully yours,

C. G. MEMMINGER.

MR. GUMBLETON SNUBBED.

A PEREMPTORY MANDAMUS GRANTED

CHIEF-JUSTICE DAVIS ORDERS HIM TO LET THE BAR ASSOCIATION'S COMMITTEE INSPECT HIS BOOKS—HIS CONDUCT DECLARED EVASIVE AND DISINGENUOUS.

Chief-Justice Davis, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday rendered a decision granting a writ of peremptory mandamus against County Clerk Gumbleton, to compel him to exhibit his books for the inspection of the committee of the Bar Association. The manner in which, and the times at which, the inspection is to be made will be determined on the settling of the order at 10:30 o'clock A. M. today. The decision, which is an interesting one, is appended:

"This matter was brought before the court by motion founded upon petition and affidavits. It was met at the outset by counter-affidavits on the part of the respondent. It is well-settled practice that the court, on motions founded upon affidavits, has the widest discretion in respect to the extent to which it will receive supplementary affidavits from either or both parties, or adopt other appropriate modes of satisfying itself whether the motion ought to be granted or denied. In the exercise of that discretion, in this case, the court has allowed both of the parties to bring before it all such affidavits and papers as the counsel of either have thought it proper to present, and, animated solely by the hope that what seemed to it to be an unnecessary and intensive amount of controversy might be amicably terminated, it gave, on its own motion, an opportunity to the respondent to allow the books mentioned in the statute to be examined, with the intimation that if such permission was allowed, to at once terminate the proceedings. The respondent has refused to avail himself of such opportunity, and affidavits on the part of the relator, showing such refusal, and on the part of the respondent, stating the grounds he has also, in the discretion of the court, been received. Upon all the papers and proceedings now before the court I am unwillingly forced to the conviction that the conduct of the respondent has been from the outset disingenuous and evasive, with intent not to permit the books to be examined, but to prevent such examination so far as in his power.

"When the relators made their first application the books should have been promptly exhibited, as required by the statute. They were not only not produced, but their examination was refused for various unfounded and insufficient reasons. The statute was then clearly violated, and the right of the relators plainly denied to them. The subsequent written attempt at negotiations between the relators and the respondent does not, in any way, affect the rights of the relators, founded upon the prior legal acts of the respondent; because it is manifest that the delay of the respondent in not sending his letter until after the business hours of the following day, and until after the relators had been apprised that a writ was put through the board. There was some doubt about Moran's re-election, but Mayor Howell, who is an ex officio member of the board, but who rarely attends, was present to throw out the casting vote to date. The Republican nominee for Chairman protem. was John L. Ryder, who has represented the town of Flatlands in the board for 23 years.

A BROOKLYN RAPID TRANSIT COMPANY.

The stockholders of the Kings County Elevated Railroad Company met yesterday, and elected the following Board of Directors: Hiram G. Bond, of Brooklyn; J. Eustene Baum, of Brooklyn; Moses Kimball, of Boston; Nathaniel S. Simpkins, Jr., of New-York; John Sherwood, of New-York; Mason Jones, Joseph E. Gay, of New-York City; James H. Frothingham, of Brooklyn; Willard T. Sears, of Boston, and Appleton D. Palmer, of Orange, N. J. The Directors then met and elected the following officers: President, J. Bond; Treasurer, W. T. Sears, and Secretary, J. H. Frothingham.

A WIFE'S DOWER RIGHT.

Charles G. Clark brought an action in the Supreme Court against Charles W. McIntyre and others to foreclose a mortgage. Several years since Mrs. McIntyre obtained a decree of divorce from her husband, and she defended this suit on the ground that when she signed the mortgage she was an infant, and she has never since she became of age ratified it. Judge Barrett, at Special Term, rendered a decision, yesterday, holding that she did not by signing the mortgage surrender her dower rights in her husband's estate, and dismissing the complaint as against her.

A BANK THIEF IN WALL-STREET.

Chauncey Johnson, one of the oldest and most expert bank sneak thieves in the country, was seen by Detectives Thompson and Adams, of the Central Office, in Wall-street, in the neighborhood of the Mechanics' Bank, yesterday. Johnson was taken before Superintendent Walling, at Police Head-quarters, and was discharged, after having been cautioned to avoid Wall-street in the future.

ANOTHER BLOODLESS DUEL.

From the Charleston News.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 30.

Information has been received here to-night that a duel was fought this morning near Bishopville, the principals being Mr. Cantey, of Camden, and Mr. Cash, of Cash's Depot. Two shots were exchanged without effect. The nature of the quarrel is not known.

POLITICAL PARTIES IN CALIFORNIA.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Dec. 24.

There is no Greenback Party of any consequence in California. The great political phenomenon with which we have to deal is the disintegration of the Democratic Party. This has been brought about by a mutiny of the rank and file. The masses seem to have lost all confidence in the old leaders. In the last election there was none to uphold the standard but the old Captains and drill Sergeants. But this breaking up was mainly confined to this city and the Bay counties. It did not extend in force to the circumference. It may be said to have cast from 30,000 to 35,000 votes. But there were polled 155,000 votes in the Presidential election of 1876. There will probably be that number of honest votes in the State at the next election, though it is a question as to whether there were more than 140,000 in 1876. Evidently on the basis of the political facts of the Constitutional election the State is Republican beyond any doubt or cavil. The Republicans lost only a few votes by the Working Men's movement, which they will be very likely to recover when the lines are again drawn. But it must not be supposed that the Democracy is making no effort to close up the ranks again. The place in which the preliminary work is being done is the convention at Sacramento. It is evident from the course of Terry, Howard, and others of the old Democratic leaders that a common standing-ground is now being eagerly sought out. But the gathering up of the disjecta membra may be productive of more disastrous consequences than the present disintegration. There can only be a homogeneous reorganization in the State on a basis more or less agrarian and communistic. If the Democratic Party should begin to formally assume that position, the Republicans will come to the front as the upholders of property and civilization; as well as the party of a sound currency, national honesty, and humanity. There are no materials by which an accurate calculation can be made, but the chances are in favor of the Republicans in the State at large, no matter whether the present disorganization in the Democratic ranks continues, or the jarring factions are brought together under a truce which is sure not to last long, appear to be equally good. The only obscurity that prevails in the political future hangs over this county. San Francisco was carried in the Constitutional election by the Working Men's Party. But the vote was light. The Working Men did not have a clear majority of what may be regarded as the real political strength of the county. In fact, even supposing that all the old Democratic elements of opposition can be effected, mixed results may be anticipated. But the question of fusion is one that is beset with considerable difficulty. It may be set down as a political fact that if at the next local election there are two Working men's ticket and three opposition tickets in the field, the first-named will win as easy victory. There does not seem to be much chance here for the Democratic reorganization which is likely to occur in the State at large. If there was, the problem would not be as difficult as it is at present, for a fusion against the Democracy in that form would be easy enough. But the question of fusion is the knotty point. Shall the opposition be to all non-partisan or to all Republican? The near approach of the Presidential election, which always throws a national shadow, more or less well defined, on local affairs, will weigh heavily as an argument on the latter side. Besides, such a policy would secure the benefits of the Republican reaction which so strongly manifested itself in the November elections.

DECISIONS IN THE COURTS.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

By Judge Brady.

Koehler vs. Wheelin.—Order settled.

Merchants' Bank of Canada vs. The New-York Life Insurance Company.—Order settled.

In the Matter of the Society Life Assurance Company.—I am inclined to the opinion that the policy secured by the petitioner did not lapse and that she is entitled to the same benefit as if the policy had been issued with others, to Mr. Walker to be treated as kindred claims. Ordered accordingly.

The People ex. rel. Godley vs. Reilly.—Opinion. Order granted.

Arnold vs. Seaman.—Decree settled.

By Judge Lawrence.

Cuppia vs. Zarate.—Order granted.

By Judge Donohue.

Harkins vs. Fiske.—Both parties consenting that Receiver is necessary, Gunning S. Bedford, Jr., is appointed; security in the sum of $5,000.

By Judge New York.

Morrell vs. Morrell.—Order granted.

Motions Granted.—Dillon vs. Dilion et al.; Flagg vs. Fuitna.

The Knickerbocker Life Insurance Company vs. Patterson.—Reference granted.

McDonnell vs. The Mechanics' and Binders' Hoisting-machine Company.—Motion decided. Memorandum.

Moore vs. Council.—Motion decided.

Gesas vs. New-Jersey Mutual Life Insurance Company.—Judgment.

In the Matter of Marciel.—Opinion.

Ayers vs. Ayers et al.—Memorandum.

Cashin vs. Sayles.—Memorandum. Referring cause to Judge Van Brunt.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Barrett.

Opinions.—Forstman et al. vs. Schulting; Lydd vs. Kensey; Gould vs. The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company; Berrian vs. Duffy; Horton vs. Brodhead; Stockwell vs. Mizell; Best vs. Best; McCormack et al. vs. Voris et al.; Peters vs. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company; Clark vs. McIntyre; Conner, &c., vs. Garrison; Smith vs. Riley; First vs. First; Lupton vs. Fletcher.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company vs. Smith et al.—Upon the requests to find submitted by the plaintiff and the defendant Bowers-ad. I decline to find affirmatively or otherwise, or differently from what I have already found. I allow exceptions to refusals.

Notice.—Special Term is assigned to Chambers in January, he will be unable to take up until February cases where briefs have not as yet been handed in.

By Judge Van Vorst.

McKeon vs. Kearney.—Findings and decree settled and signed.

Foster vs. Wilson et al.—Findings and decree settled.

The People of the State of New-York vs. The Bleecker-Street and Fulton-Ferry Railroad Company.—Motion for new trial denied. Opinion.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Sedgwick.

Madan vs. Covert et al.—Case and exceptions settled.

By Judge Freedman.

Scovill vs. Iron, President, &c., of New-York Stock Exchange.—The plaintiff as member of the New-York Stock Exchange, was tried and found guilty of obvious fraud by the Governing Committee of that association, and thereupon expelled. The trial, conviction, and expulsion took place under the constitution and by-laws of the association, which had been subscribed to by the plaintiff on his admission. By article 20 the Governing Committee is constituted the sole judge of what constitutes obvious fraud, and the clear intent and object of the article is to secure and enforce honest dealings among a class of men exposed by the very nature of their business to unusual temptation. This being so, the article, though providing a summary remedy, should receive the sanction of the courts as long as existing rules of law will permit. The objections urged against plaintiff's conviction and expulsion are not based upon his innocence, but upon an alleged misconstruction and even invalidity of Article 20. They are, therefore, of a somewhat technical character, and as their determination not only involves considerable labor, but the whole issue, they should be determined upon a regular trial, and not upon a mere motion. The granting of an injunction before trial always rests in the sound discretion of the court, and upon the whole case as it appears at present I can find nothing which calls for summary interference. Motion denied, with $10 costs.

McCarthy vs. Bennet.—As the plaintiff did not proceed under sections 853 and 855 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and by order to show cause, but by summons, to comply with section 780. This he has not done; moreover, the order obtained having been made returnable before a Judge, and not before the court, it confers no jurisdiction upon the court to hear the adjudication of contempt under section 14. The motion must be denied, with leave to renew upon proper papers, and upon payment of $10 costs.

Van Aller et al. vs. Wright.—Motion for new trial denied, with costs.

Chandler vs. Stevens.—Motion granted upon payment of costs of judgment and Sheriff's fees on execution.

Thomasilli vs. Stevens.—Motion denied.

Van Dycke vs. Mitchell.—Neither interrogatories allowed.

Oesterreicher vs. The Photo Plate Company et al.—Motion denied, with $10 costs.

Van Dycke vs. Mitchell.—The proposed amendments should be transformed into cross-interrogatories and handed up as such.

Herbert et al. vs. Hopkins.—Motion granted so far as to allow the petitioner to be substituted so as to come in and defend upon payment of $10 costs, and judgment to stand as security.

Oesterreicher vs. The Photo Plate Company et al.—Plaintiff should be left to establish whatever rights to equitable relief he may have upon the trial. Motion denied and injunction dissolved, with $10 costs.

Thomasilli vs. Stevens.—Findings settled.

Conover et al. vs. Conover et al.—Order signed.

Phillips vs. Bynesmer.—Ordered on special calendar for Jan. 10.

Chandler vs. Stevens.—Order vacating judgment and allowing defendant to answer.

Kelsey vs. Wenderpohl.—Order of discontinuance.

Franke vs. Eppenteiner.—Order appointing Gustave A. Caius, Esq., Receiver, &c.

Kearney vs. Carroll.—Replevin bond approved.

In the Matter of the Application of Soring, &c.—Order granting motion for leave to be substituted, &c.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge J. F. Daly.

Fischer vs. Rosh.—The commitment should be amended by inserting therein the provisions of the order of Dec. 4, 1878, as to payment of Referee's fees to John A. Dinkel, Esq., Referee.

COURT CALENDARS—THIS DAY.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Held by Davis, C. J.

Nos. 45, 99, 245, 268, 282, 288, 291, 294, 304, 305, 307, 311, 312, 316, 322, 323, 327, 328, 329, 331.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—PART II.

Held by Van Vorst, J.

Demurrer—No. 16—Platt vs. Platt. No day calendar.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Held by Freedman, J.

No day calendar.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Held by Van Hoesen, J.

No day calendar.

All other State courts have adjourned for the term.

THE COTTON MARKETS.

CHARLESTON, Jan. 2.—Cotton firm; Middling, 9½c.; Low Middling, 9c.; Good Ordinary, 8½c.; net receipts, 2,120 bales; gross, 2,170 bales; exported coastwise, 1,810 bales; sales, 1,200 bales; stock, 58,614 bales.

MOBILE, Jan. 2.—Cotton quiet, firm; Middling, 9c.; Low Middling, 8½c.; Good Ordinary, 8c.; net receipts, 2,120 bales; gross, 2,170 bales; exported coastwise, 1,895 bales; sales, 2,000 bales; stock, 61,781 bales.

GALVESTON, Jan. 2.—Cotton nominal; Middling, 9c.; Low Middling, 8½c.; Good Ordinary, 8½c.; net receipts, 2,400 bales; exports, coastwise, 889 bales; sales, 150 bales; stock, 115,015 bales.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—Cotton steady; Middling, 9¼c.; Low Middling, 8¾c.; Good Ordinary, 8¼c.; net receipts, 6,772 bales; gross, 9,729 bales; sales, 7,000 bales; stock, 250,170 bales.

SAVANNAH, Jan. 2.—Cotton quiet; Middling, 9c.; Low Middling, 8½c.; Good Ordinary, 8c.; net receipts, 3,695 bales; sales, 1,200 bales; stock, 90,698 bales.

THE NAVAL STORES MARKET.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Jan. 2.—Spirits of Turpentine nominal at 25c. Rosin nominal. Crude Turpentine steady at $1 25 for Hard; $1 85 for Yellow Dip; $1 85 for Virgin. Tar steady at $1 75. Corn unchanged.

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Jan. 2, 1879.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

Ashes, pks	23	Crude Turp., bbls.	5
B. E. Peas, bushels	110	Spirits Turp., bbls.	319
B. W. Flour, pks	80	Rosin, bbls.	1,163
Beans, bbls.	235	Tar, bbls.	48
Cotton, bales	6,418	Oil-cake, bbls.	268
Cott'n-seed-oil, bbls.	799	Oil-cake, pks.	1,828
Copper, bbls.	16	Oil, Lard, bbls.	20
Dried Fruit, pks.	100	Oil, Lard, bags	177
Eggs, pks.	724	Pecans, pks.	42
Flour, bbls.	30,956	Pork, pks.	1,493
Grass-seed, bbls.	91	Beef, pks.	217
Wheat, bushels	124,200	Oat-meals, pks.	5,277
Corn, bushels	52,400	Lard, tcs.	7,057
Oats, bushels	15,750	Lard, kegs	443
Rye, bushels	450	Butter, pkgs	3,405
Malt, bushels	2,175	Cheese, pks.	3,932
Barley, bushels	14,300	Dressed Hogs, No.	2,052
Peas, bushels	4,000	Rice, bags	500
Oat-meal, bbls.	2,581	Sugar, hhds.	572
Oat-meal, bags	240	Spelter, cs.	1,105
Starch, pks.	4,000	Grease, pks.	114
Grass-seed, bags	1,035	Starch, pks.	1,537
Hemp, bales	3	Stearine, pks.	183
Hides, No.	2,732	Stearine, bbls.	110
Hides, dressed	200	Tallow, pks.	983
Iron, tons	1,140	Tobacco, hhds.	17
Lead, pigs	1,136	Tobacco, bbls.	119
Leather, sides	19,203	Tobacco, pks.	439
Moss, bales	31	Whisky, bbls.	2,425
Molasses, bbls.	6,102	Wool, bales	1,000

ASHES—A very quiet week, within the range of from 26c.@27½c. for very good to strictly choice ♀ lb.

CANDLES—Sell slowly, with Adamantine quoted at 12c.@13c.; Paraffine, 19c.@20c.; Sperm, plain, 27c.; do., Patent, 38c. ♀ lb.

COAL—Has been generally dull, and values have been quoted weak and more or less unsettled.

COFFEE—Has been in fair request, 1,000 bags Rio by the City of Rio, and 500 bags by the Graf Bismarck, sold on private terms; also, 1,225 bags Maracaibo on private terms. Rio is quoted at 13½c. for cargoes ordinary, 14c. for fair, 14¾c. good, 15¼c. prime, 15¾c.@16¼c. gold, ♀ lb., 60 to 90 days' credit; Rio, in jobbing lots, 14c.@17½c., gold; Mocha, 25c.@28c. ♀ lb.; Java, 20c.@21c. gold, ♀ lb.; do., ordinary to choice, job lots, 11c.@17c., gold....Java in store, 22c.@24c.; Singapore, 18c.@17c.; Ceylon, 15c. @19c.; Costa Rica, 15c.@17c.; Guatemayra, 14c.@15½c.; Mexican, 15c.@16c.; Jamaica 14c.@15c.; Savanilla, 13c.@17c.; Costa Rica, 15c.@17c.; San Domingo, 10c.@11c.; East Angostura, 14c.@15c. ♀ lb.

COOPERAGE STOCK—Has been in very moderate request at former quotations.

COTTON—Has been rather lightly dealt in, yet quoted firm.

COTTON—Has been inactive for early delivery at unaltered figures....Sales were reported for prompt delivery of 600 bales, of which 350 bales were on Tuesday evening, including 100 bales to shippers, 527 bales to planters, 47 bales to speculators, and no bales in transit....Low Middling quoted at 8¾c.@8 15-16c. Strict Low Middling at 9¼c.@9¾c.; Middling at 9 7-16c. @9 11-16c.; Fair at 10 1-16c.@10 7-16c....And for forward delivery. Cotton has been moderately active at higher prices....Sales have been reported since our last of 54,000 bales, (of which 19,400 bales were on Tuesday evening,) including 2,000 bales, of which 1,000 bales on the call, on the basis of Middling, January, 9.69c.@9.70c.; February, 9.83c.@9.84c.; March, 9.98c.@9.99c.; April, 10.12c.@10.13c.; May, 10.29c.@10.30c.; June, 10.43c.@10.44c.; August, 10.49c.@10.50c., showing an advance of 14@17 points, closing steady. Consolidated receipts at the ports of Great Britain from all the shipping ports, 44,945 bales; to the Continent, 24,281 bales; to France, 9,337 bales; to the Channel, ——— bales; total stock of cotton at the ports, 851,300 bales....Stock in New-York to-day, 103,273 bales.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

| | Uplands. | N. O. | Texas. |

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—7th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—6th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—1st col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—5th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—4th col.
DRY GOODS—Sixth Page—5th col.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—3d col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—5th col.
HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED—Seventh Page—2d col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—5th col.
LECTURES—Seventh Page—7th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Sixth Page—4th col.
LOST AND FOUND—Seventh Page—7th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—6th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Sixth Page—7th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—6th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
POLITICAL—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Sixth Page—7th col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—1st col.
SAVINGS BANKS—Seventh Page—3d col.
SHIPPING—Sixth Page—6th and 7th cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—5th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STATIONERY—Seventh Page—5th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Sixth Page—4th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—5th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Seventh Page—5th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JAN. 3, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

UNION-SQUARE.—The Banker's Daughter.
FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Rip Van Winkle.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—Uncle Dan'l.
STANDARD THEATRE.—Almost a Life.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—At Last.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—Evangeline.
PARK THEATRE.—Babes in the Wood.
COMIQUE.—Christmas Joys and Sorrows.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO HALL.—Love's Endurance.
NIBLO'S GARDEN THEATRE.—Peep o' Day.
MASONIC HALL.—Tom Thumb Troupe. Matinée.
CHICKERING HALL.—Dramatic Readings.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum.....2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum.....1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,238 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry P. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day, in this region, rising barometer, colder, westerly winds, and clear weather.

Resumption of specie payments became an accomplished fact yesterday, not only without a jar, but with a positive gain of gold at the Sub-Treasury in this City. There was only $130,000 in notes presented for redemption, while $400,000 in gold coin was received in exchange for legal tenders. The banks had a similar experience, and bond-holders, as a rule, preferred notes to coin on drawing their interest. This state of things will continue just as long as the ability of the Treasury to redeem its notes in gold coin continues unquestioned, and just as long as the amount of depreciated silver coin in hand bears a small enough proportion to the gold as not to interfere with its proper place as a subsidiary element in the circulation. The power of the Treasury to retain an adequate stock of gold must obviously depend very largely on the limit assigned to its obligation to continue the coinage of silver. The present limit must be very materially abridged if resumption is to be a permanent success.

It will be seen from the monthly debt statement, as elucidated in our Washington dispatch, that the total coin balance in the Treasury is $224,865,478, of which amount $154,250,691 is available for the redemption of legal-tender notes. Of standard silver dollars and subsidiary silver coin, $22,680,428 form part of the coin balance in the Treasury. Of the $22,111,500 of silver dollars coined up to the end of the year, only $5,462,876 have found their way into circulation. The foreign trade statistics are complete up to Nov. 30, and show a gain in exports for the twelve months closing on that date of $117,000,000, or about 16 per cent., and an increase of exports of $52,000,000, or 12 per cent. During the first six months of the fiscal year there has been an improvement over the corresponding period of last year in Customs and internal revenue receipts aggregating $2,798,847.

Gov. Talbot, of Massachusetts, in his inaugural address, yesterday, went into economic questions with great thoroughness; he favors a retrenchment which shall be something more than "a delusive show." If the salaries of State officers are to be reduced, as he thinks that they should, he offers to give up his own salary, or so much of it as the Legislature shall require, in order to be consistent. It is not every Governor who volunteers to have his own emoluments reduced, rather than shelter himself behind the constitutional provision prohibiting any such reduction during his own incumbency. Gov. Talbot also proposes a consolidation of State boards, the abolition of the State Detective force, and various radical changes, all of which are to save money and simplify the Government. One of the lately defeated candidates for Governor of Massachusetts—Butler by name—said that if he was elected he should like to clean the State-house so that men could go up its steps without being defiled. Perhaps Gov. Talbot has taken the hint, and has begun to clean off the State-house steps.

Judge Davis has administered a much-needed rebuke to the County Clerk and a much-needed lesson to our public officers generally, in his decision on the motion to compel the County Clerk to open his books for public inspection. The Judge expresses his conviction that the conduct of Mr. Gumbleton has been "from the outset disingenuous and evasive," and he reflects very pointedly on the motives which led the County Clerk to insist on violating the very plain statute governing his office. It seems a very obvious rule that "an officer is never the representative of the majority that elects him or the power that appoints him," but that "his services are altogether due to the people, and not to any other body or power." But officials who owe their appointment or election to Tammany Hall are, in the nature of things, totally incapable of either understanding or observing such a rule. When the Bar Association committee are done with the Register, Sheriff, and County Clerk, they will find a promising field of investigation and some new illustrations of Tammany methods in the office of the Corporation Attorney.

Mr. Henry L. Clinton made a heroic effort last night to give a rose-colored view of the future of Tammany Hall. The sanguine imagination of Mr. Clinton sees victory already perched on the banners of the State Democracy, and thousands of honest Democrats, who, "without intending it," aided the Republican Party last Fall, flocking back to the support of "the regular Democratic organization" in the City. Mr. Clinton put forward a somewhat ludicrous defense of his own consistency in denouncing the despotic methods of Tammany in 1872, and approving of them now. He repeated the stale falsehoods about Municipal expenditure having decreased under Tammany administration, the fact being that all expenditures pertaining to the City Government proper have been increased, as compared with those of five years ago. Altogether, Mr. Clinton's address gave evidence of exhaustion, both in spirit and inventiveness. He has lived to verify his own remarks about Tammany Hall presenting to its own adherents the cold entertainment of a political grave-yard.

CHANGES IN THE FEDERAL SENATE.

When the framers of the Constitution provided that the term of Senators of the United States should be six years, and that one-third of their number should go out every two years, their motive was obvious, and was a sagacious one. They desired and intended that the Senate, elected indirectly, having a term three times as long as that of the popular branch of Congress, and retaining at all times two-thirds of its members who should have had at least two years' experience in working in common, should be a body removed in a marked manner from the currents of transient passion which might pass over the political affairs of the country, and should apply to legislation, the sober, mature, and independent thought necessary to avoid rashness and to give it consistency and dignity. The design of the authors of the Constitution has only partially succeeded. Forces arising from a national development which they could not foresee have proved stronger than the checks which they invented. The indirectness of the mode of election no longer has any special value. Senators are chosen with nearly, if not quite, as much immediate reference to partisan strength in the various States as are the members of the House, the selection of a Senator usually proving the main issue in the election of the State Legislature which is to elect a Senator. Occasionally, men like the lamented Ferry, of Connecticut, or the independents, Booth, of California, and Judge Davis, of Illinois, or men other than the caucus nominees, such as Cameron, of Wisconsin, and Christiancy, of Michigan, are brought into the Senate in defiance of the party machinery; but these instances are hardly more numerous than similar ones in the Congressional districts. For the most part, the choice of Senator follows the same influences as that of a Representative.

The provision for a Senate measurably continuous in its character has encountered less serious obstacles, and has had its effect. The upper house has heretofore generally yielded more slowly than the lower to political changes, and its proceedings have been, on the whole, decidedly more consistent in consequence. But it would hardly be true to say that party feeling has been notably less bitter or unreasoning in the Senate than among the Representatives. It has been, perhaps, less violent in its forms of expression, but it has made up for this by being more rigid, and having even a more obstinate persistence than in the larger body. It is a matter of history that the most dangerous and most reckless and unrelenting leaders were furnished the rebellion by the Senate, in which they had long been plotters of treason.

At the present moment the Senate is about to pass from the uncertain control of a small Republican majority to that of one decidedly Democratic. The terms of twenty-five of its members expire with the present session. Looking over the elections so far held and regarding those which are yet to be made and the probable results of which are known in advance, it cannot be said that the Senate will be found to be any better exponent than it now is or than the next House will be, of the well-grounded political sentiment of the people. Seven Republicans will be replaced by Democrats; one Democrat will give way to a Republican; in seventeen States there will be no political change. Of the entire number, fifteen will be Democrats and ten will be Republicans. Comparing these results with the elections for members of the House since 1876, it is plain that the Senatorial elections do not tend this year to bring that body into harmony with the more stable and conservative tendency of political opinion, notwithstanding the roundabout methods invented to accomplish such a result. The contrivances which it was fondly hoped would preserve the independence of the Senate from purely partisan influences have, grotesquely enough, made it exceptionally subservient to a peculiarly transient phase of such influences.

In only three instances in the ten elections which have already taken place, have the sitting Senators been returned—Senator Gordon, Democrat, of Georgia, and Senators Allison, of Iowa, and Justin R. Morrill, of Vermont, Republicans. To these may be added Senators Conkling, of New-York, and Cameron, of Pennsylvania, Republicans, and Senator Voorhees, of Indiana, Democrat. In the cases of Messrs. Conkling and Morrill, the re-election continues a long and influential career in the Senate; but, outside of these special instances it is difficult to point to any in which the peculiar mode of election exercises any marked influence in retaining the leaders of the Senate.

There is another element in the Senatorial scheme which has by no means answered the expectations of the founders of the Government. It is the integral State representation. This was originally intended to protect the smaller States from aggressions by the larger. The danger proved to be an imaginary one from the start. With the exception of some questions of minor importance touching the disposition of the Western Territories, there have been no subjects of legislation on which there has been even a tendency to divide on the line of large and small States. On the other hand, especially in the case of the new States, the equal representation in the Senate has strongly influenced the character of that body for the worse. The Senatorial seats have been brilliant and lucrative prizes for unscrupulous politicians, and the struggles for them have produced a number of most discreditable scandals. Taken in connection with the evil growth of Senatorial power over patronage, it is safe to say that equal representation for the States in the Senate has done more than any one other cause to demoralize our political system. This, with the other facts to which we have referred, are brought out in considerable prominence by the pending biennial Senatorial elections. They indicate difficulties in the working of this branch of the Government which will some day, perhaps not far distant, demand serious attention.

LIFE INSURANCE STATEMENTS.

Managers of life insurance companies may prove their sagacity or their want of it. They are preparing the annual statements for publication, and upon the thoroughness of their work a great deal depends. Whether their respective exhibits remove or confirm the distrust from which the business suffers depends on the extent to which they take the policy-holders and the public into their confidence. A mere technical conformity to the requirements of the law is not enough. An ordinary balance-sheet, with items generalized according to custom, conveys little of the information that is essential to an accurate conception of a company's condition. The manager who has ugly facts to hide will do no more than the law compels him to do. If he is conscious of the soundness of the interests in his keeping, and has faith in others' capacity for discrimination, he will do more than comply with legal demands; he will voluntarily furnish the specific facts which he would himself look for if called upon to judge of another company's affairs.

Without going out of its way to court publicity, every solvent company now has the opportunity of showing the groundlessness of much of the prejudice from which all companies suffer more or less. During the last few months life insurance has so frequently challenged public attention that there is a proper desire to learn more concerning it. The popular opinions are not favorable. Rightly or wrongly, it is believed that the business has suffered. Some months will elapse before the regular report of the Superintendent throws light upon this point. Meanwhile, each company should avail itself of its advertised statement to tell what its own experience has been. What is the number of new policies issued last year, and what the amount of new premiums and new insurances? What were the totals—number, amount, premiums—on the 1st of January, 1878, and the 31st December? A little arithmetic will enable any one, with these data, to ascertain how many policies, and how much insurance, have disappeared from the books. An explicit statement, however, will not leave these particulars to be inferred. It will show the number and amount surrendered, and the consideration given the policy-holders in cash or commuted policies; and it will also show the number and amount wholly lost by the holders. This is one of the items which cannot be omitted without provoking comment. The controversy excited by the new method of the Mutual Life has developed the fact that under the law of this State no equitable rule governs the treatment of policy-holders who for any reason desire to drop their policies. One company deals harshly, even unjustly; another acts justly, perhaps liberally. The details we have suggested will set this question at rest as between the companies.

Expenses are another point that needs elucidation. The defectiveness of the law enables managers to keep out of sight the information required to determine whether their business is conducted economically or extravagantly. New business and old are thrown together, to reduce the average of expenses. The cost of acquiring business is merged in the cost of carrying on the rontine. A manager who has the courage of honesty will abandon this evasive method. One of the excuses offered for the "new departure" is that it is intended to reduce the cost of getting business. The falsity of the pretense has been exposed. But we have still to encounter the systematic concealment which makes impossible an estimate of the price paid for the business acquired during the year. The information is needed because in behalf of the company which, affecting reform, increases the commission paid to agents, it is alleged that other companies are spending more than itself under the influence of the competition to which its action has given rise. For obvious reasons, therefore, the published statements should this time be explicit. So much is expended for salaries, commissions, and fees. What are the salaries? What the fees? What proportion of the commission is on new business and what on renewals? The minuteness should extend to other items. Ordinarily, nothing is more striking in these statements than the succession of large amounts. Things are so "lumped," that one wonders at the credulity which accepts them without a question. If companies undertake to "run" lobbies and Legislatures, and to mix in the intrigues of office-getting, we can hardly expect that they will frankly state what the luxury costs them. But those of them which do not find this outside business necessary may dispose of slander by itemizing their disbursements. These huge amounts are suspicious. Well-managed companies ought not to be afraid of setting forth their disbursements.

The same fullness of statement is desirable on the other side of the balance-sheet. In the reports transmitted to Albany the assets and securities held on account of loans are presented with an approach to minuteness. Even in this form it is far from satisfactory. Take the real estate owned as an illustration. Clearly, a distinction should be made between real estate held in regular form, in connection with business, and real estate acquired by foreclosures. Classification is equally necessary under the head of mortgages. To be told that any number of millions are represented by mortgages, is not enough. Some clue should be given to the character of the property mortgaged, to the amount under process of foreclosure, and the amount in default not under foreclosure. In regard to this information the reports to the Superintendent are as defective as the statements published in newspapers. The latter, however, omit much other information which is buried in the Albany volume. Policy-holders would be more vigilant, and the public more critical, if they could see some of the schedules of assets and collaterals in which millions on millions are buried. Railroad stocks, bank stocks, the stocks of manufacturing and other companies, may serve very well the purposes of a private person, but they are out of place among the assets of a life insurance company. Instances might be pointed out in which assets of this nature are held to an extent which no prudent investor would sanction in his own practice. The partiality shown in some quarters for the bonds of petty and defaulting municipalities is equally objectionable.

This is the time, then, when the consciously sound companies will subject their affairs to the test of publicity from which weak and unsound companies naturally shrink. Judging by previous years, it may be safely said that many of the statements supplied through the newspapers are worthless as the bases of intelligent criticism. All of them will now be scanned more carefully than ever, with reference to the objectionable features of management which controversy has brought into prominence. The wise manager is he who discards secrecy, and prepares his statement on the supposition that the public are quite capable of separating the good from the bad.

OHIO POLITICAL METHODS.

The candid discussion of candidates which is going on in Ohio furnishes a capital example of our political methods. In Ohio, the Democrats are bothered by two opposing principles—expediency and personal claims. For various reasons, the next Gubernatorial election in that State is regarded as likely to exert great influence upon the Presidential canvass of 1880. It is not worth while now to discuss the soundness of this opinion. It is very generally entertained by eminent politicians—who are supposed to know everything. Even President Hayes, who once entreated Gen. Garfield to remain in the House, where he could better serve the Administration than in the Senate, is said to have expressed, lately, a desire that Gen. Garfield should be the next Republican candidate for Governor of Ohio. In the previous instance, Stanley Matthews was chosen Senator, by request; and, unless the next Gubernatorial contest yields something better for the Administration than that, people will begin to say that the weight of the Presidential office is not favorable to the development of the highest political wisdom.

But nothing could be more vicious than the methods of the Ohio Democrats. Bishop is Governor now, and he desires to be renominated. In Ohio Democratic politics it seems to be a settled axiom that a man shall have at least two terms of office, unless he has done something so very bad that his re-election is impossible. Bishop, it is said, has done nothing of this sort, and, therefore, his friends reluctantly concede that they really do not see how he can be refused a renomination. But Senator Thurman, it is thought, would be a much stronger candidate, if he would run. He has said that he will not run. It is well known that he is to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1880. He is like a jockey who is reserving himself for the grand handicap; a half-mile dash does not interest him. But Mr. Thurman is not to be allowed to say just what he will do in this crisis of his party. His political friends say that Bishop is not a strong man, and that Thurman is the only possible candidate who could insure success to the Democratic ticket. They argue thus: If Thurman does not care enough for his party to come out and help us now, what right has he to ask that Ohio shall support him for the Presidential nomination in 1880?

We have just said that Ohio Democrats reluctantly admit that Gov. Bishop has done nothing during his term which could be used to defeat his renomination. Precisely what constitutes a political offense in Ohio we do not know. The unfortunate O'Connor, who was convicted of having been a bounty-jumper and an offender of various grades, was expelled from the Legislature by his fellow-Democrats, it is true; but they took good care not to take a vote on his case until they did not need his vote any longer. When he had been used to further Democratic schemes sufficiently, the Democratic Party had a sudden qualm of conscience and he was spewed out of the Legislature. In like manner, the offenses of Gov. Bishop (if they are such) have been committed in the interest of the party as much as in his own interest. The members of his party who support him cheerfully concede that he has organized the State institutions in such a way as to make himself popular with his own party. Not long ago, the Assembly openly complained that the Governor and the Senate were carrying off all of the official patronage in the State, and a resolution of inquiry and implied censure was introduced and adopted by the Democratic members of the lower house. It was openly charged that Gov. Bishop had disregarded every consideration which ought to influence a high executive officer in making appointments, had made a clean sweep of the offices in the State institutions, and had replaced men of experience and integrity with political hacks and wire-pullers. No Democratic newspaper has ever denied these charges. It is not likely that they think it worth their while to notice them, except with approval. These things are common enough in Ohio. They cannot be used successfully to prevent Bishop's renomination by the Ohio Democracy.

It will be interesting to disinterested students of politics to observe how this dispute will end. On the one side is a trading politician who claims that he is entitled to another Gubernatorial term, because he has been convicted of no flagrant violation of his oath of office. And on the other side is a crafty politician, who has faced both ways on the most important question now before the country, and who declares that he does not want to be Governor of Ohio because he is saving his strength to secure the nomination for President. The Ohio Democrats do not want Bishop, but they are afraid that they will have to take him. They do want Thurman, but they are afraid that they cannot get him. If Bishop persists in running, they will support him with an ill grace, wishing that they could prove something against him which would put him on the shelf. If Thurman will not run, they will lay it up against him when the canvass opens for the Presidential nomination, knowing that he cannot win without the support of his own State. Nevertheless, there are people who say that American politics are lifted upon a higher plane than they were twenty or thirty years ago.

FEMALE FREEMASONS.

Some of the Atlantic coast members of what is perhaps the largest and most powerful secret society in existence are discussing the old question whether or not a woman was ever made a Mason. There does not seem to be a great difference of opinion on the subject, for only those who are best acquainted with Masonic lore dare to speak at all knowingly concerning a mystery which very few have ever been able to explain. It seems to be pretty generally assumed that by no possibility could such an event ever have taken place. While it is only fair to admit that members of the Masonic fraternity should know more about these matters than any one else, in this one instance at least most of them are certainly ignorant of the real facts in the case. Once, and once only, is it recorded that one from the outer world penetrated unbidden, unprepared, and unobserved into the temple while the craftsmen were at labor, and on that occasion the intruder was a woman. Toward the middle of the eighteenth century, Irish Lodge No. 44 held meetings at Doneraile House, Arthur, second Lord Doneraile, being the Worshipful Master. His sister, Hon. Elizabeth St. Leger, who afterward married Mr. Aldworth, of Newmarket, in the County Cork, determined on a certain occasion to discover what Freemasonry really was. According to one account, says the Masonic Cyclopedia, "she concealed herself in a clock;" and according to another, "she saw the proceedings of the lodge through a crevice in the wall." That she was made a Freemason is undoubted; though when so made does not quite clearly appear, nor are we informed as to which degree she was advanced to. However, there is no denying that Mrs. Aldworth alone of her sex, during modern times, gained certain of the mystic signs, symbols, grips, and passwords, and witnessed the imposing and instructive ceremonies which we have reason to suppose are performed within the lodge-room.

In the earlier days of Masonry, as shown by some ancient manuscripts, there were "Dame Masons" as well as "Master Masons." The "Apprentice" is charged in one manuscript that he "shall not steal or pick away his master's or dame's goods," and in another manuscript that "he shall not disclose his master's or dame's counsel or secrets," whence it may be inferred that at one time the widows of Masons were permitted to carry on work under the guild, and in that case the apprentice would serve out his time. "It may be," adds the editor of the work on Masonic history to which we are indebted for this information, "that this rule was even enlarged so as to admit the widows and daughters of Masons," a supposition which may well suggest misgivings about the secrets imparted to those who knew anything about the order. Formerly, both in France and Germany, there existed—and now exists in the United States—systems by which women could be made acquainted with certain signs and mysteries, thus enabling them to make themselves known to members of the craft. Concerning the German "Mopses" a good deal of doubt prevails, inasmuch as it is even a moot point whether the word "mops" signifies "the wife of a Freemason," or a "Dutch mastiff or pug dog"—or both. At any rate, nothing has been seen of the "mopses" for over a hundred and fifty years. In France "Maçonnerie d'adoption" flourished during a considerable part of the eighteenth, and was revived in the early years of the nineteenth, century. Between about 1740 and 1760 the French nation boasted of many, what some Englishmen are pleased to call, "Androgynous" orders of Freemasonry. Among these were "L'Ordre de la Félicité, ou les Félicitaires," "L'Ordre des Chevaliers et Chevalières de l'Ancre," "L'Ordre des Chevaliers et Nymphes de la Rose," "L'Ordre des Dames Ecossaises de l'Hospice du Monthaba," and "L'Ordre de la Persévérance." Later on, that is for fifteen or twenty years before the outbreak of the revolution, secret societies were the rage with all classes, even with the great ladies of the court. Under the patronage of Cardinal De Rohan, the notorious and infamous Cagliostro established his system of "Egytian Masonry," installed himself as Grand Cophte, and opened lodges for sisters, as well as brethren, at Strasburg, Lyons, and Paris, of which lodges the two principal ones were named "La Sagesse Triomphante" and "Les Philathètes." Another order received the particular protection of the Duchess de Bourbon and the Princess de Lamballe, and in the Lodge St. Antoine one of them, as Grand Maitresse, was in the habit of conferring the four degrees of "Apprentie," "Compagnonne," "Maitresse," and "Parfaite Maitresse." But the new sisterhood passed away with the old régime, and, although it was partially revived under Napoleon I., and again under the Bourbons, it gradually came to an end, and does not now exist.

In our own country, an adoptive rite—the term adoptive seems to be the Masonic equivalent for female—was instituted in 1855, consisting of five degrees: Jeptha's Daughter, or the daughter's degree; Ruth, or the widow's degree; Esther, or the wife's degree; Martha, or the sister's degree; and Electa, or the Christian martyr's degree, the whole assemblage being called the Eastern Star. Now, this body is not Freemasonry, never can be Freemasonry, and is not, of course, recognized by Masons in good standing. Nevertheless, it embraces only the wives, widows, mothers, daughters, and sisters of Master Masons, and all the male persons who are members in this adoptive rite must necessarily be Masons. The origin and progress of this rite is not even familiar to most Masons. It was first brought out in 1850, and the degree was first conferred in this City in April, 1853; but the order in its present form was not introduced until in October, 1868, when the system of ceremonies for opening, closing, and initiating candidates was exemplified for the first time before Alpha Chapter. Since then it has spread all over the country, and in almost every State and Territory chapters have already been established. The order now numbers nearly 20,000 members in this country alone. But there are signs of discord even in this excellent order, and the chief matter under dispute is, whether man or woman shall wear the apron of authority, and whether that apron shall or shall not have a bib to it. It seems not to have been intended by the originators of this order that woman should be its leading executive officer, but rather as an assistant. Nevertheless, the lovely creatures have succeeded in many jurisdictions in securing control of the lodges, and now hold the leading offices.

In the meantime, the outside world is called upon to stand and wonder while these "female Freemasons" settle the question, not only of authority, but of uniformity in the clothing to be worn in subordinate chapters. Shall they wear seal-skin or Astrakhan jackets, aprons with or without bibs, skirts with or without ruffles, and long or short pants—that is to say, shall there be uniformity, and thus create harmony and goodness? Perhaps Miss Nilsson, who has just been elected to the highest grand office of the order in England, can solve this question.

The death announced by cable yesterday of the Princess Marie of Lichtenstein recalls a very curious episode. The late and last Lord Holland died leaving no issue by his wife, who survives him, but at his death there had for some time been domesticated in his family a child known as Marie Fox. Lord Holland, although for some years not on particularly happy terms with his wife, left her at his death his whole fortune, including Holland House and Charles Fox's delightful retreat, St. Ann's Hill, in Surrey, absolutely. The little girl Marie continued with Lady Holland after her husband's death, and it came to be generally supposed that she would inherit most of the property. Lady Holland, some twenty years ago, joined the communion of the Church of Rome, and the child was brought up in the same faith, and so it came to pass that the young Marquis of Bute, who, almost immediately after quitting Oxford, joined the same communion, was very much at Holland House, and presently was credited with a desire of making Lady Holland's very attractive protégé a Marchioness. There is good reason to suppose that he did at one time seriously entertain this intention, but found an insurmountable obstacle in the refusal of Lady Holland to give him any precise and satisfactory information as to the parentage of his proposed bride. Meanwhile, Miss Fox was presented at court, and it was averred that before the presentation took place Lady Holland had in strict confidence informed the Queen all about her. Shortly after, Lady Holland gave publicity to a statement that Miss Fox was the daughter of the Marquis de Montague, a French nobleman of lofty lineage, whose wife had died in giving birth to this child, and that in consequence the Marquis could not endure ever to see her face. This account was more or less accepted, though it occasioned great astonishment, until there appeared a letter in the London Standard from the Marquis, dated from France, in which he utterly and entirely repudiated in vigorous terms the whole story. On learning this, Lady Holland burst into tears and said she had been deceived. From that time no one has ever heard more about the matter, and a few years ago a husband was found for the young lady in the person of a semi-royal German Prince, who, in view of the personal attractions and large dot of his wife, was content to ask no question, but to rest and be thankful. Lord Holland left one sister, Lady Lilford, who has several sons, but they are not usually regarded as being "in the running" for their late uncle's property. The elder branch of the Fox family is still represented in the male line by the Earl of Ilchester. His ancestor and Lord Holland's were descended from the second wife of the celebrated Sir Stephen Fox, (who rose from the ranks, and died, at the age of 89, in 1716,) and were born when their father was over 77.

It is a very serious matter for a well-meaning penitent who has left sufficient money to balance his accounts with the Church, and thus get his remains out of purgatory, to remain for years in durance simply because the priests cannot attend to their duties. Good Catholics will soon have to demand a guarantee that when they pay for a mass they shall really get it. The traffic in these prayers for the dead has finally resulted in a quarrel between the Belgian Chamber of Representatives on one side, and the Romish priesthood of France, Italy, and Belgium on the other. Out of this quarrel a curious scandal has arisen, the truth of which is vouched for by the Belgian Minister of Justice. It has been shown that at least a hundred times more masses are paid for in France than the entire clergy of the country could celebrate. A priest must only offer up one mass a day—except on certain high festivals, when he may perform two—so that even in the largest city churches, where more than a dozen vicaires, or curates, are employed, and where there are many side-chapels, twenty masses are the greatest number that can be said in one day. What becomes, then, of the money of pious testators and dutiful heirs? An abuse not known to all religious persons has been disclosed in the case of a "mass agent" who was recently proved to have cleared not less than $17,000 within three months by contracting with the clergy to have masses said for them at half price or quarter price, by rural priests. Thus, the city clergy eased their consciences, the ecclesiastical commercial traveler pocketed a good commission, and the rural father earned a few sous. Very properly, the Belgian Chamber now insists that the clergy shall not receive large sums of money under pretense of saying masses which are not said.

An attempt is now making to teach the Colorado Indians agriculture. An agency has been established on the White River, farms marked off, and seeds, books, implements, and all aids to agricultural instruction introduced. The experiment has not been very successful thus far; but it may be that too much has been expected. Ages of nomadic life have bred a dislike of any regular or permanent occupation which cannot be overcome in a year or two. Douglas, chief of the tribe, has become an ardent believer in the benefit of agriculture to his people, and is doing his utmost to encourage and further it among them. In Colorado, irrigation is necessary to farming, and much labor is required to bring water by canals to the growing crops. The latest reports from the White River Agency are that Douglas and 25 of his tribe had in five weeks dug a canal 6 to 10 feet wide and 4 deep, and were still diligently at work. They were averse to beginning, but they have grown fond of it. The general public will feel interested in the result of the experiment. If the Indians can be persuaded to adopt and pursue agriculture, the vexed Indian question will not be very far from solution. Douglas is represented as a man of unusual intelligence, perspicacity, and force of character, to have the good of his people so much at heart, and to exercise such influence over them, that there is reason to believe that the Colorado aboriginals will in time embrace many of the ways and pursuits of civilization.

Another verdict of "a farthing damages" has been rendered in favor of an American citizen by a British jury, in a case where the libel was of the grossest character. The plaintiff was Col. Frank Church, a civil engineer, who served in the Northern Army with distinction during the rebellion. Lately he has been engaged with others in a scheme to establish communication between the Republic of Bolivia and the Atlantic Ocean. In 1867 he visited that country and obtained a concession from the Government for the formation of the National Bolivian Navigation Company, which was to start a line of steamers on the proposed route. As there was the difficulty of several falls and rapids on the way, it was intended to overcome it by making a railroad of 150 miles in length in Brazilian territory, and the Colonel also obtained a concession from the Brazilian Government for the construction of that road. He further took steps in this City to form the navigation company, and procured a special charter from Congress for its incorporation. Soon afterward the Bolivian Government brought out a loan in London for the purpose of carrying on the undertaking, but Col. Church's efforts were counteracted by one H. C. Batchelor, a merchant in the City of London, who happened to own a few of the bonds. He finally went so far as to accuse the Colonel, not only of making false representations with regard to the loans, but of trying, with his friends, to lay hold of the $3,000,000 already subscribed. "However, there is not much danger," he wrote to the Anglo-Brazilian Times, "of the Americans being able to succeed in doing this, and 98 poor devils, sent to sea in an unseaworthy ship, have already fallen victims to Church's efforts to give an air of reality to this mad scheme. He may yet sink many more of his countrymen before he sinks our cash." The ship thus referred to was the Metropolis, lost in December, 1877. Col. Church brought suit at Guildhall, before Baron Cleasby and a special jury, against Batchelor for this gross libel. The case was on for two days, and then the jury gave a verdict for the Colonel, with a farthing damages, with costs.

The great loss of life occasioned by the recent steam-ship disasters in English waters has turned the minds of naval architects in that country to the necessity of devising some more comprehensive life-saving apparatus than has yet been put to use. Under ordinary circumstances a life-buoy or a cork-jacket is of limited utility, as the temperature of the water is too low to allow a person to safely remain in it for any length of time, and it is, therefore, desirable to have a floating structure sufficiently large to prevent those who may be on it from being wholly immersed in water. The plan suggested is that the upper deck of a passenger steamer should be so put on that when the hull sank this would float off, and would be buoyant enough to support those who were so fortunate as to get on it. Of course, a raft of this character would be of service only in tolerably calm weather, but then it should be remembered that the last two great accidents of this character have occurred under conditions highly favorable to the success of this device. The main obstacle in the way of putting such an invention into execution is the peculiar construction of English-built steamers. These have very little light top-hamper, and the upper deck is usually bonded with great firmness to the iron frame. With our river and Sound steamers, on the contrary, the plan suggested could not only be easily carried out, but in most cases it has been practically accomplished already. If one of the steamers plying on Long Island Sound should happen to sink in consequence of a collision, the hurricane deck would in all probability prove to be the safest place of refuge that a passenger could go to. The chances would be largely in favor of a great portion of this floating off when the vessel went down; while it is almost certain that the boats would be mismanaged in consequence of the want of previous training on the part of the crew, and to float for an hour or more in the water clinging to a life-buoy would, except in midsummer, prove in most instances a fatal experiment.

It is impossible to attribute the sudden and irregular changes in weather and temperature that have taken place of late to the commonly-selected cause for all atmospheric perturbations, that is, the spots on the sun, for it is hard to conceive of a moving agent so far distant, and acting with so much force, that could confine its operations to narrow belts of territory upon the earth's surface. Grant that a violent whirling about of solar patches may have produced the snow-storms which have almost buried out of sight the central and northern portions of this State, and you still have to explain why its influence stopped just west of the Hudson, so that the inhabitants of the New-England States are talking about the long continuance of their Indian Summer. But these anomalies in the East are not a circumstance when compared with recent experiences in the far West. When the Pacific Railroad was first opened, it was the opinion of settlers and railroad hands stationed along the line that that portion of our country had a calendar system of its own, for it was found that up to the middle of February the weather was delightful; cool, possibly, at times, but wholly free from storms. Yet the unfortunate travelers who undertook to cross the Plains in March or in the early days of April were almost sure to be completely blockaded by snow. But this season the old condition of affairs has been reversed, and Winter has set in there three months before its accustomed time. California, in everything relating to the barometer and thermometer, has always been an erratic State; for while one man might be strolling along Montgomery-street, San Francisco, on a bright January morning, feeling thoroughly comfortable in his Summer clothes, another, who happened to be at Benicia, 30 miles up the river, would likely enough be shivering under a great coat and blanket. But during the past few weeks a cold wave has submerged the entire State, not omitting such previously favored places as Santa Barbara and Los Angeles. Isothermal lines have by these experiences been sadly disturbed, and may have to be drawn out anew; especially so, if it should turn out, as many people think that it may, that these seeming eccentricities in climate are simply attempts on the part of local nature to conform itself to the general system of Spring, Summer, Fall, and Winter, as known to all the rest of this country. It is certain, whatever the reason may be, that the range of temperature in California is each year coming into more accord than it has been with States occupying the same latitudinal position.

GOV. TALBOT'S INAUGURAL.

METHODS OF ECONOMY STRONGLY URGED—THE GOVERNOR WILLING TO HAVE HIS OWN SALARY REDUCED—THE BUSINESS OF THE HOOSAC TUNNEL.

Boston, Jan. 2.—Hon. Thomas Talbot was inaugurated Governor to-day, with the usual ceremonies. In his inaugural address he says:

"So far as the actual power and the rightful influence of the chief executive can reach, within the bounds of official courtesy and constitutional prerogative, I shall conform my future policy to the methods of economy I have advocated in the past. I shall insist that faith be kept with the people; that they shall not be mocked with a delusive show of retrenchment; and that all needed reduction shall be effected in every branch of the public service, so far as it can be done without crippling its efficiency or adding to the sum of human suffering.

The following statement shows the present funded debt, with its appropriate classification:

Amount outstanding Jan. 1, 1878	$33,220,464
Matured and paid during the year, Union Fund loan of 1862	200,000
Total funded debt Jan. 1, 1879	$33,020,464
Classification.
Railroad loans	$17,738,996
War loans	10,468,188
Loans for public buildings, &c.	4,813,280—$33,020,464

The estimates for the current year are as follows:

Payments from revenue, ordinary and excentional, including taxes returnable	$4,240,250
Ordinary revenue, cash on hand	2,917,643
leaving an apparent deficit, to be provided for by taxation, of	$323,643

The gross expenditure for 1878 was, in round numbers, $4,000,000. Before examining separately each branch of expenditure, I invite careful scrutiny of the expenses of the Governor and Council, which were $25,700 for 1878, a reduction of $6,000 from the preceding year. It seems to be conceded that, under the provisions of the Constitution, the Legislature cannot reduce the salary of a chief magistrate while in office, but may establish in advance that of his successor. I desire to remove all embarrassment on this point, by suggesting that this salary should be made to conform to the standard existing before the war, and by stating that the present Executive will content himself with the sum you may deem "honorable" and "sufficient" for his successor.

Gov. Talbot discusses the subject of charities at considerable length, and recommends the abolition of the Board of State Charities, with all its bureaus

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

EXTENSIVE STRIKES THREATENED.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN THE ENGINEERING TRADE OWING TO A PROPOSED INCREASE IN THE NUMBER OF WORKING HOURS—DETERMINED RESISTANCE EXPECTED—COAL MINERS OBJECTING TO REDUCED WAGES—THE FAILURES OF 1878.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Great excitement has been produced in the engineering trade regarding the resolution of the London Iron Trades Employers' Association to increase the number of working hours. The Employers' Association will meet on Tuesday next to arrange the preliminaries for the resumption of 57½ hours as the weekly quota of labor. District meetings of the operative engineers have been arranged to pronounce the opinion of the workmen on the question of resistance. Outside the trades-unions stand a very large number of non-society men, and it appears from what transpired yesterday at informal meetings of the workmen, that following the precedent made in 1871, when the non-unionists for the most part acted with the unionists, the former will adopt the policy of resistance. It is stated that the decision of the employers will depend to some extent on the result of the arbitration on the proposed reduction of 5 per cent. in the wages of iron-workers, which has been commenced at Darlington. The award of the arbitrators is expected to be received by the end of the present week, so that the Iron Trades Employers' Association will have the decision before their conference next Tuesday. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers has, according to the last annual report, £250,000 in hand. It is recognized as the union which, numerically and financially, leads the other trades-unions of the Kingdom.

The number of business failures officially announced in the Kingdom (Great Britain and Ireland) during the year 1878, was 15,059, of which 3,843 were in the financial and wholesale and manufacturing branches of trade, and 12,416 among retail trades, professional pursuits, builders, publicans, working classes, &c., against 2,172 and 8,850 under the respective headings in 1877, showing an increase of 4,037 failures last year over the preceding year.

BARNSLEY, Jan. 2.—Answers were received this morning at the offices of the South Yorkshire and North Derbyshire Miners' Association from a majority of the miners' lodges, to the masters' demands for a reduction of wages. The lodges are unanimous for resisting the proposed reduction.

According to information received from West Yorkshire, no notices of the reduction of wages have yet been given by the coal-owners there, and they will not follow the course pursued by the South Yorkshire masters. Large meetings of miners, held in West Yorkshire, have decided to support the colliers of this district in resisting a reduction of wages.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The meeting of the engineering masters has been postponed until after Jan. 10. They are very determined.

The Times says: "There is said to be a general movement at Liverpool for a reduction of wages in all branches of the engineering and ship-building trades. The movement is likely to extend to the shore gangs of the great steamship companies."

ASIA AND EASTERN EUROPE.

SHERE ALI SENDS WORD THAT HE WILL RETURN TO AFGHANISTAN—THE KHYBAR PASS STILL CLOSED—TROUBLES IN THE BRITISH CAMP—THE GREEK FRONTIER QUESTION.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Calcutta says: "News from Kabul is to the effect that Yakoob Khan required his officers and soldiers to swear on the Koran to stand by him, but finally withheld their pay, as their General declined to become security for their fidelity."

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The News' Calcutta dispatch says: "Before leaving Kabul Shere Ali wrote to the Viceroy of India stating that he would return to Afghanistan after laying his case before a congress at St. Petersburg."

Major Cavagnari is instructed to receive any peaceful overtures in a very friendly manner. So far Yakoob Khan has made no sign.

Gen. Stewart will reach Kanhabar on the 5th inst.

A dispatch from Peshawar to the News states that the turbulence of the mountaineers has closed the Khybar Pass for the last three days, except to strongly-escorted convoys. This condition of affairs has compelled the abandonment of the project of constructing a telegraph line through the pass. There is great confusion between the commissariat and transportation departments. One Sikh regiment has been withdrawn from the field because of fever. Half of the men are sick, and 64 have died. One English regiment has been withdrawn from Ali-Musjid because of sickness among its members.

The Times of Vienna dispatch says: "Nothing has occurred to disturb the relations between Austria and Italy. The former has no apprehensions that Italy is intriguing in Albania.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 2.—The Sultan gave a reception to-day to the members of the diplomatic body headed by Count Zichy, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to Constantinople.

The Greco-Turkish Frontier Commissioners will carry on their negotiations at Athens. The Grand Vizier states that he accepts the principle of the rectification of the frontier upon condition of Turkey retaining a strategical line, and the powers engaging to observe neutrality in the event of Greece raising any further claims, or attempting invasion.

THE THRONE OF BULGARIA.

RUSSIA MASTER OF THE SITUATION—A MAJORITY OF THE ASSEMBLY SAID TO BE OFFICERS UNDER THE RUSSIAN GOVERNOR.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A Vienna dispatch to the Times says: "As the time for the election of a Prince of Bulgaria approaches, fresh candidates make their appearance. Prince Vogorides, who, although belonging to a Greek family, claims Bulgarian descent, has been put forward, and it would not be surprising if an attempt should be made by the Porte and the Greeks in Constantinople to set up Prince Vogorides against the Russian nominee. But Prince Dondoukoff Korsakoff, the present Russian Governor of Bulgaria, according to all accounts, has taken care to be master in the Bulgarian Assembly, and make it elect whom Russia pleases. The Assembly has not been elected by a direct vote of the population, but by an indirect election, and care has been taken that a large proportion of the members of the Assembly should be persons holding official positions under the Russian Governor. Prince Battenberg is said to be the candidate put forward by Russia, but there are those who believe that some one else is kept in reserve."

CURRENT EVENTS ABROAD.

FRANCE SENDS AN ULTIMATUM TO THE BEY OF TUNIS—DR. STROUSBERG ACQUITTED—MONCASI'S DEATH-WARRANT SIGNED—TERRIBLE EXPLOSION ON THE BRITISH IRON-CLAD THUNDERER.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—La France states that an altimatum was dispatched to the Bey of Tunis on Saturday. The German Consul at Tunis refused to countenance the Bey's hostile attitude to France. The Consul has been instructed to further the wishes of the French Government.

La Liberté says the conflict between France and Tunis will soon be settled by diplomatic means.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The Emperor William, in receiving the Ministers yesterday, said he was not fatigued by attention to public affairs, although he has not yet regained his former strength. The painful impressions of the year have been softened by many proofs of loyalty. The Emperor said that the efforts of the Ministry to combat the dangers to the State, indubitably were not without results, but that their full activity must still be directed to this object.

The Town Court has decided that Dr. Strousberg was bankrupted in consequence of the outbreak of the French war and of unforeseen losses, and that he is, therefore, not blamable. The court approved the agreement of the creditors to accept 3 per cent. in settlement of their claims.

ROME, Jan. 2.—Signor Depretis, President of the Council, is ill with bronchitis. Lieut.-Gen. Medici, first aide-camp to the King is also seriously ill.

MADRID, Jan. 2.—After a long Cabinet council to-day, the King reluctantly signed Moncasi's death-warrant. The execution has been fixed for Saturday morning. Moncasi will spend Friday in the chapel with his confessor.

The reported disappearance of an armed band in Catalonia is denied.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A Rome dispatch to the Standard says the Pope will shortly inform Germany of his readiness to consent to a compromise in regard to the appointment of the German clergy.

The Standard's Copenhagen dispatch states that Prussia has strongly expressed her displeasure at the Duke of Cumberland's prolonged residence in Denmark. The Duke leaves Copenhagen on Saturday.

The Post's Berlin dispatch says: "The Government has determined to give notice of the termination of all treaties of commerce by the end of the present year."

A dispatch to the Standard, from Ismid, says a 38-ton gun burst during practice on the British man-of-war Thunderer. The vessel's turret was destroyed, seven men were killed, and 40 wounded.

AMUSEMENTS.

GENERAL MENTION.

This evening Mrs. Scott-Siddons will give her new readings at Chickering Hall.

Three important engagements have been effected by the Park Theatre management, namely, with Mr. Lawrence Barrett, Mr. John E. Owens, and Miss Ada Cavendish.

The last three performances of the present programme at Booth's Theatre—including the best portions of "Evangeline" and "The Babes in the Wood"—will be given to-night and to-morrow. The second-named piece in its entirety may still be seen at the Park.

The popular English burlesque, "H. M. S. Pinafore," to which Mr. Arthur Sullivan wrote some charming music, and which has met with great success in London, will be produced at the Standard Theatre at the close of Miss Kate Mayhew's engagement, which begins next Monday evening.

Owing to the illness of Miss Sara Jewett, her part in "The Banker's Daughter" was recently intrusted to Miss Sara Cowell. Miss Jewett is now playing as usual, and her acting is full of delicacy and sympathy. This lady is uncommonly able in depicting the ideal side of a character—a merit obvious enough in these days of realism.

Mr. Dalziel's translation of Emile Augier's now celebrated play, "Les Fourchambault," will be produced at the Broadway Theatre on the 13th inst., with a cast including Mrs. Alice Lingard, Miss Dickie Lingard, and Mr. W. H. Lingard. It is claimed that Mr. Dalziel's English version of the play is faithful to the original, in this respect differing from Mr. Albery's, recently produced in London under the title of "The Crisis."

Dr. Damrosch, with the superb orchestra of the Symphony Society, and the assistance of Miss Anna Drasdil, contralto, and Mr. Franz Rummel, pianist, drew a large audience at Steinway Hall yesterday afternoon, notwithstanding the inclement weather. The programme included Schubert's unfinished symphony in B minor, and Schumann's symphony No. 2 in C, for orchestra, a concerto by Greig, for piano and orchestra, and an aria from Handel's "Xerxes," and "La Captiva," by Berlioz, for Miss Drasdil. This programme will be repeated at the concert of Saturday evening, and cannot fail to attract a full house, as the attendance of yesterday showed. Miss Drasdil has increased the reputation she has previously enjoyed by her performances this season, and is not the least attraction of this exceptionally good concert.

A GOVERNMENT SAFE ROBBED.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS STOLEN FROM THE PRINTING OFFICE AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Between 11 and 1 o'clock to-day a thief entered the Government Printing Office, and, watching his opportunity, took from the safe of the disbursing clerk a package of currency containing $10,000, intended for paying off the employes and for the purchase of material, and made his escape without observation. Detectives were immediately put to work, and it is thought the money will soon be recovered. One of the most remarkable circumstances connected with the robbery is that the door leading into the chief clerk's room, adjoining, was open during the whole time, and that room was filled, as usual, with clerks. The money taken was sorted in envelopes ready to be paid out to employes, each envelope bearing the name of the person to whom it was to be given. The whole amount was in notes ranging from $50 to $1. Persons of a suspicious character have been hovering about the building in the vicinity of the disbursing clerk's room for two or three days, and it is known that they succeeded in getting a wax impression of the look to the disbursing clerk's safe and had a key made to fit it. Detectives are at work to-night, but thus far without result. There were so many persons passing in and out of the building about noon that the thieves could easily escape without observation.

Superintendent Walling received a dispatch last night informing him of the robbery and giving a description of one of the men supposed to have been engaged in the theft. On the receipt of this telegram Inspector McDermott and Detective Williamson and McConnell to the railroad depot to await the arrival of the train from Washington, but no such person as described in the dispatch was seen among the passengers.

REVENUE OFFICES TO BE EXAMINED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue this morning issued the following circular to Collectors:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE, WASHINGTON, Jan. 2, 1879.

You are informed that immediately after the closing of the present fiscal year a careful examination will be made of all the Collectors' offices throughout the country, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the public business has been transacted according to law and regulations, and whether the public funds have been duly accounted for. This examination will include the accounts of all Deputy Collectors intrusted with the sale of stamps and the collection of taxes, and also the accounts of all persons who are agents for the sale of adhesive stamps. The fidelity with which the public money has been accounted for during the past two years leads me to believe that the fiscal year 1879 will be signalized by an exhibit showing that every dollar of internal revenue collected during the year was accounted for. I hope it will be found that every office in the United States, in respect to its organization, the manner in which the public business is transacted, the style in which the accounts are kept, and the neatness and order that prevail in the office, will rank No. 1. The Government is entitled to the earnest faithful services of its officers, and I trust that Collectors and all other officers of internal revenue will commence the new year with increased zeal for the promotion of the interests of the public service. Respectfully, GREEN B. RAUM, Commissioner.

LATEST NEWS FROM AUSTRALIA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—The steam-ship Australia, Capt. Cargill, brings news from Australia, to Dec. 8: The minister of Public Works has recommended extensions of the railways of the colony of New South Wales, which would increase them by 1,000 miles. The Government has assumed control of the proposed International Exhibition of 1879. The Australian cricketers received an enthusiastic welcome at Sydney on their return. The strike of sailors continues at Sydney. The men demand the dismissal of Chinamen as sailors on merchant vessels. In the colony of Queensland 55 members of Parliament were elected, 30 of whom belong to the Opposition.

PURSUING HIS FATHER'S MURDERERS.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 2.—A special dispatch says that two men were taken on Tuesday to McMinnville, Tenn., heavily guarded, and lodged in jail, charged with a murder committed during the war. They belonged to Tinker Davis' command, and killed a man named Sparkman and County Judge Baker's son was a child when his father was killed, and, having now attained manhood, intends to see his father's murderers punished.

FUNERAL OF EX-GOV. STEARNS.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 2.—The funeral of the late ex-Gov. Onslow Stearns took place to-day, and was attended by a large number of persons from abroad. Many of the leading officials of the State, and a large delegation of leading railroad men from various parts of New-England, were present. The funeral sermon was delivered by Rev. Mr. Woodbury, of Providence.

DESTRUCTION BY A TORNADO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—A dispatch from Santa Barbara says: "About 9 o'clock last night, in the midst of a storm of wind and rain, a tornado struck this city from the south-east, and, occupying a narrow path, tore through several blocks, unroofing and demolishing houses and outbuildings and uprooting trees. William Goss was killed by a falling chimney. About 90 feet of the steam-boat wharf was carried away.

DEATH OF CALEB CUSHING.

END OF AN EVENTFUL LIFE.

THE CAREER OF A GIFTED AND LEARNED MAN, WITHOUT FIXED PRINCIPLES OR CONSISTENCY—HIS PART IN THE MEXICAN WAR—THE NOMINATION TO THE CHIEF-JUSTICESHIP—MINISTER TO SPAIN.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Jan. 2.—Caleb Cushing failed rapidly during the day. His stomach refused all nourishment, and at noon his friends gave up all hope and saw that his end was near. He was speechless at 9 o'clock this evening, and died at 11:14.

CALEB CUSHING'S LIFE.

To write of Caleb Cushing as the truthful necrologist must write, if he writes at all, would, in the case of almost any other man, seem harsh and cruel, and in open disregard of the restraining and merciful precept that bids us be silent concerning the dead unless we would speak good of them. But the man and his career were so astonishing and exceptional that all restraints of classic precept or common consideration are loosened, and we may write of him, with all the serenity of a commo-place biographical recital, what would seem like intemperate calumny had not the whole world, Caleb Cushing included, known for more than 40 years the grave moral defects of this learned man and great jurist. The evil that can be said of him, however, must be relieved and offset by high commendation. The nation has leaned on this man while it distrusted him; it has gone to him as to an oracle for counsel, and has been guided in grave complications by his great wisdom, though conscious that principle and consistency had never been his guides.

His life began with the century. He was born at Salisbury, Essex County, Mass., Jan. 17, 1800. The wealth his father had acquired in an extensive shipping business relieved him from the necessity of spending the receptive years of youth in labor, and the lad began, what the man kept up, that all-devouring habit of reading and study that made his retentive mind a storehouse of miscellaneous, but well-digested, learning. He graduated at Harvard at the age of 17, which shows how early his intellectual powers were capable of serious and sustained work. He remained at the university for two years as tutor of mathematics and natural philosophy. But law was to be the occupation of his life, and his preparation for it was elaborate. Sumner studied deeply the theory and history of jurisprudence, and listened to the ablest law lecturers in Paris, 40 years ago, but when he returned to Boston and opened an office, he found both that the petty details of practice were distasteful to him, and that he was by no means well versed in statute law or informed in methods of procedure. To Caleb Cushing neither theory nor practice was foreign. He learned all law, from that of the municipal court to that of the international conference, and then set about practice with a facility of application that quickly won him success and local fame. He opened his office in Newburyport in 1822, and by 1825 the young lawyer had made such a reputation that he was sent to the Legislature, or General Court as it was more frequently called. The next year he was a member of the State Senate. Law or politics did not absorb all the powers of his active mind, however, for, young as he was, he was one of the principal contributors to the North American Review. Americans did not go to Europe for their Summer vacations in those days, as they do now, but Prescott and Ticknor had brought home tales of life beyond the seas that charmed all the Boston literary circle. This influence reached and moved young Cushing, and in 1829 he was off for Europe. He traveled two years on the Continent, but France and Spain chiefly attracted him, and on his return he published Reminiscences of Spain—in which he showed a thorough acquaintance with the history and literature of that country—and Review of the Revolution in France—the revolution of July, 1830, which placed Louis Philippe on the throne. His fellow-townsmen were still in need of his legislative services, and in 1833 he returned to the Massachusetts Legislature. But in mere State politics he was hardly outside the domain of private life. His public career began with his election to Congress, as a Henry Clay Whig, in 1835. By three successive re-elections his term of service as a Representative was prolonged for eight years, ending in 1843.

He had hardly crossed the threshold of the chamber of Congress before his peculiar moral constitution began to show itself. Members were forced to admire his splendid intellectual gifts, while they wondered at his total lack of consistency; to marvel at his eloquence while they deplored his want of fixed principles. Elected by Clay men, and relied upon by them to support the Man who "would rather be right than be President," he betrayed them and went over to the John Tyler party as soon as he saw his way clear to greater personal gain or advancement. He voted for four acts that President Tyler vetoed, and then argued in support of the vetoes; but what most astonished his associates was to see his vote again recorded in favor of the acts when the House came a second time to consider them. Mr. Granger, a member from New-York, said of him, in 1843, that, like the circus clown, he would ride any horse that was brought out to him. "First he rode the bank pony; and that having run to death, he mounted the veto charger, and the second bank roadster; then the tariff palfrey, and lastly the stout-limbed tariff hunter were mounted in their turn." Is it strange that when President Tyler, in 1843, nominated him for Secretary of the Treasury, the Senate rejected him? Had he died then, he would have been remembered only as a facile trickster and time-serving politician.

Rejected as manager of the nation's finances, he was accepted as Minister to China, and in 1843 he set out for that country aboard the United States steam-ship Missouri, which, by the way, was burned in the harbor of Gibraltar, where she had put in for fuel. The next year he negotiated an important treaty—the first between China and the United States. He returned to Newburyport in 1846, and the welcome of his admiring fellow-citizens took the form of a re-election to the Legislature. His position upon the questions whose agitation led to the Mexican war was opposite to that of the Whig Party. The Massachusetts Legislature having rejected a bill to raise funds to equip a regiment for that war, Mr. Cushing furnished the means from his own pocket, and went to the seat of war as Colonel of the regiment in the Spring of 1847. President Polk gave him a Brigadier-General's commission on the 14th of April of that year, and he was attached to the army of Gen. Taylor. His espousal of their cause gave him title to the homage of the Democrats, and while still in Mexico he was nominated by that party for Governor of the Bay State, but the party was not united in his favor and he was defeated. In 1850 he was for the fifth time sent to the Legislature, and in 1852 was appointed a Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. When Franklin Pierce was elected President, he made Mr. Cushing his Attorney-General, and he held the place through Pierce's term. He served again in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1857, 1858, and 1859. Caleb Cushing was a leader among the passionate men who met in Charleston, S. C., in April, 1860, to nominate a Democratic candidate for the Presidency. He was, in sympathy and action, a member of the ultra-Southern wing of the party, which was determined to uphold the slave power at all hazards, and in order that his skill as a wily tactician might be of the most service, he was made permanent President of the Convention. The fire-eaters failed to control the convention, however, and Douglass, not Breckinridge, was nominated. When the seceders from the Charleston Convention met in Baltimore, two months later, Mr. Cushing was again President of the convention, and, as is well known, the slave power party named their candidate Breckinridge. Whether or not he intended the logical consequences of his utterances and acts at this time, Mr. Cushing was certainly in full co-operation with the secession party. In December of 1860 he was sent by President Buchanan to confer, as a secret Commissioner, with the secessionists of South Carolina. It is needless to add that the mission amounted to nothing.

The more honorable period of Mr. Cushing's career, and the portion that will shed a certain lustre on his name, began in 1866. In that year he was appointed by President Johnson one of three Commissioners to revise and codify the laws of the United States. The great work these Commissioners undertook was finished in 1873, and the result was reported to the Senate Dec. 10, 1873. Gen. Grant appointed him as one of the counsel for the United States at the Geneva conference for settling our dispute with England over the Alabama claims. On his return from Geneva Mr. Cushing wrote a review of the question, entitled The Treaty of Washington, in which he severely criticised Sir Alexander Cockburn, the arbitrator on behalf of Great Britain. From this time on Mr. Cushing was a constant and valued adviser of the Department of State, a service for which his intimate knowledge of international law and his diplomatic tact well equipped him. President Grant had the greatest confidence in his judgment. When the inhuman massacre of the Virginius prisoners sent a thrill of horror and indignation through the country, and there was a deep popular desire for vigorous measures against Spain, Mr. Cushing's wise counsel shaped the policy of our Government, and all through that anxious period, when our relations with Spain were in a state of high tension, he was in constant consultation with the President and Secretary of State. Gen. Sickles, our Minister at Madrid, misinterpreting our indignation and demands for the surrender of the Virginius and the punishment of the murderers, into a determination to go to war with Spain and set Cuba free, had surrounded himself by entanglements from which there was no escape but by resignation. His resignation was at once accepted, and on Dec. 27, 1873, President Grant nominated Caleb Cushing as his successor. The nomination gave wide-spread satisfaction, and was at once confirmed by the Senate. Mr. Cushing had packed his celebrated carpet-bag, and was about to sail for Madrid, when another affair of state, and an unfortunate one for him, intervened to delay his departure. The Senate, not sharing Gen. Grant's desire to elevate Attorney-General Williams to the office of Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court, then vacant, nominated Mr. Cushing. On Jan. 9 the name of Caleb Cushing was sent to the Senate for the Chief-Justiceship. The nomination was at once referred to the Committee on Judiciary and the Senate adjourned. Everybody was thunderstruck. In the subsequent debate Senator Conkling was a conspicuous supporter of the nomination, and Senators Sumner and Boutwell favored it. But on Tuesday, Jan. 14, in the course of the Republican Senate, Senator Sargent, of California, made public a letter from Caleb Cushing to Jefferson Davis, written March 28, 1861, and recommending to Mr. Davis a young man named Archibald Roane, who had been a Government clerk. This letter spoke of the overthrow of the Union as an accomplished fact, and its publication at once decided Mr. Cushing's fate. His name was withdrawn by Gen. Grant, and shortly afterward he proceeded on his way to Spain. Since his return from Madrid, when he was succeeded by Mr. Lowell, he has held no office, having declined to run on the Butler ticket in Massachusetts last Fall as the candidate for Attorney-General. He was a man of great cultivation, speaking French, German, and Spanish fluently, and was brilliant in conversation. But he held low ideas of morals, that there was no higher law than self-interest. He could argue, with all the ingenuity and force of his gifted mind, either side, or both, of any question, but was utterly unable to tell which was the right one.

GEN. PORTER'S TRIAL RESUMED.

A LARGE AMOUNT OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE INTRODUCED FOR THE GOVERNMENT—A HITHERTO UNKNOWN FACT BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

WEST POINT, Jan. 2.—The Board of Inquiry in the case of Gen. Fitz John Porter reassembled this morning, the members being all present, together with the petitioner and his counsel, Messrs. Bullitt, Choate, and Maltby. The proceedings were opened by the Judge-Advocate, Major Gardner, who stated that some witnesses he expected had failed to arrive on account of the storm, but would arrive later in the day. He then proceeded to offer a large amount of documentary evidence, including telegrams, letters, reports, and other records. There were objections made to the reception of nearly all of them by Porter's counsel. One fact appeared which was new to all connected with the case, including Gen. Porter himself. It was that President Lincoln, on the 5th of September, 1862, ordered a Court of Inquiry as to the conduct of Gens. Porter, Franklin, and Griffin, in August of that year, which was convened three times, and then adjourned, without doing any business. This was about the time of the battle of Antietam, and two months before the court-martial which tried Porter was ordered. Several letters which passed between Gen. Pope and President Grant in 1874 were also admitted. Gen. Pope wrote, hoping that Grant would order an investigation as requested by Porter and his friends, and Grant replied that he had examined into the case, but did not think it called for any action on his part, and he believed on such an investigation would be of doubtful legality.

In the afternoon William Dyer, a farmer of Fayette County, Ohio, was called. He was a member of the First Ohio Cavalry, and an orderly at Gen. Pope's head-quarters; he was one of six orderlies who accompanied Capt. Pope when he carried the "4:30 order" to Gen. Porter on the 29th of August, 1862; he saw Col. Ruggles deliver the order to Capt. Pope, and indicate the direction he was to take to reach Porter, but did not hear what was said; in his opinion, it was somewhat before 4:30 o'clock when they started; the distance between Pope's and Porter's head-quarters he estimated to be about five miles, and the time occupied in the ride did not exceed three-quarters of an hour. He marked on the map the route he remembered the party made both going and returning. Adjourned.

EVIDENCE OF ELECTION FRAUDS.

THE CLERKS OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S OFFICE COPYING OFFICIAL REPORTS FOR THE TELLER COMMITTEE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The President has received a copy of the resolution passed by the Teller committee requesting him to furnish to the committee all the information in his possession relative to the violation of the rights of citizens in the States named in his annual Message. As the official information on which he predicated his remarks came through the Attorney-General, the President has sent the resolution to that officer for a response. The committee also made a call on the Attorney-General for similar information. The few copying clerks of the Attorney-General's office have been busily engaged for several weeks in copying reports of United States Marshals, District Attorneys, and others, in South Carolina and Louisiana, in regard to the Southern outrages. The copies were made to be transmitted to the Senate in reply to the resolution of that body adopted on the 9th of December. On motion of Mr. Cameron, of Wisconsin, calling upon the President for "copies of reports of United States Marshals and other officials, and such other correspondence as he may have relative to the recent elections in the States of South Carolina and Louisiana." Since the adjournment of Congress for the holidays, the Teller investigating committee having passed a resolution calling upon the President and Attorney-General for information upon the same subject, the Attorney-General will probably forward to the Teller committee the copies already made to be sent in response to the Senate resolution. These documents are copies of reports from United States Marshals and others in the States named, reporting outrages, nearly all of which were published during the campaign preceding the recent elections. Other copies can be made for the Senate, but the Attorney-General, should he transmit the copies to the Teller committee, will probably inform the Senate of his action.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2, 1879.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $710,115 10, and from Customs $348,318 56.

Secretary and Gen. Sherman left here to-night for Cleveland, Ohio, to attend the funeral of their brother, ex-Judge Sherman, on Saturday. They will return Sunday evening.

Secretary Sehurz received to-day from the Secretary of War a copy of the letter of Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan on the alleged frauds and mismanagement in the Indian service, and will prepare a reply to it within the next 10 days.

A statement from the Internal Revenue office shows a loss from the tax on tobacco during the month of December, as compared with the corresponding month of 1877, of $49,315, which is attributed to the agitation of the tobacco tax question. Although there was a decrease in December, the books show a net gain on the first six months of the present fiscal year of $922,470, as compared with the first six months of the previous fiscal year.

A circular issued by the Treasury Department to-day makes the eight-florin gold piece the monetary unit of Austria, instead of the silver florin as heretofore. This will require the invoices of merchandise shipped from Austria to this country, purchased in the depreciated paper florin, to be certified by comparing the value of the paper with that of gold instead of silver, and will relieve the trouble for some time existing, by which Austrian imports appear to have been considerably overvalued.

MARINE DISASTERS.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The British steamer Laurestina, before reported stranded near Stockholm, has become a total wreck. The crew was saved.

The British bark Lotus, Capt. Gould, from Liverpool Dec. 19, for Tybee, put into Crookhaven to-day with her pumps choked and a foot of water in her hold.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—The British bark Warwickshire, which arrived yesterday from Manila, reports that the British bark Allen was wrecked on Island Tortuleva, one of the Soochoo group, Nov. 2, while on a voyage from Tokio to Kobe. The crew was saved and remains on the island.

MINERS KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—A Virginia City (Nev.) dispatch says: "W. M. Solomon and D. W. Small were killed yesterday by an explosion of giant powder in the Occidental Tunnel.

HOW POISON WAS FOUND.

PROF. DOREMUS' TESTIMONY IN THE COBB TRIAL.

UNMISTAKABLE EVIDENCES OF STRYCHNINE AS WELL AS ARSENIC—PROF. DOREMUS CROSS-EXAMINED—TESTIMONY OF PROF. JOHNSON FOR THE DEFENSE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORWICH, Conn., Jan. 2.—The usual crowd of curious spectators were present this morning when the Judges, with more than usual promptness, came in. The jurymen were already in their places, and the prisoner, with her friends. For the first time during the trial she sat with her veil up. It was stiff and voluminous, and had the effect of making her face look small as well as pallid. Her countenance was quite composed, but her large eyes were downcast at first, and only quick, stealthy, occasional glances were stolen at Prof. Doremus. The veil of the prisoner's mother, Mrs. Waterman, was up too, which revealed a face of far more ghastly paleness and seriousness. For the first time the child of Mrs. Cobb, a girl of perhaps 12 years, was at her side.

Prof. Doremus began by detailing the methods usually employed to detect vegetable or organic poisons, and their applications in the present case. He dissolved the seven fluid ounces of contents of stomach in alcohol, allowed it to stand, then filtered and slightly acidulated it. The alcohol was evaporated. The residue had no bitter taste. It was diluted with water and shaken with ether, which latter took off in solution certain poisons. The ether was taken off, after standing; part of it was volatilized, and the rest gave the unmistakable reaction of strychnine. The presence of strychnine is known in this way. It placed on a white dish, and a little sulphuric acid added, it remains colorless; but when any substance very rich in oxygen is added the combination goes through a series of colors, blue, violet, red, and yellow. This result is remarkable, not only for the colors, but also for the succession of colors. The quantity obtained was small, but it was strychnine beyond a doubt. Next a test was made with the contents of the stomach and the blood-ooze from all the organs in the jar. In the former case the Stass method was used. In the present experiment the animal charcoal or bone-black method was used. This was unsatisfactory in its results. So he repeated his analysis of the same matter by the alcoholic method, which resulted in showing strychnine in largest quantity. Thirdly, he subjected a third of the liver and half a kidney to the Stass test, but the high color of the liquid obtained interfered with a completion of the experiment; and so he reserved the liquid for an analysis for arsenic, which he described yesterday. Finally, he took the rest of the liver, the heart, and kidney, and by the charcoal test obtained strychnine unmistakably.

At this point the witness was called upon to recapitulate the mere results of yesterday's testimony, which showed the variety of tests for arsenic, all of which showed that substance, and indicated that it had been in the system a long time. The prisoner, during this recital, fixed her gaze on Prof. Doremus, following him with evident interest, but without emotion beyond a faint smile of contempt on her thin but high-colored lips. Col. Ripley, for the defense, objected to the term arsenic would kill. The witness answered that such as is found in the stomach does not kill, but such as is absorbed into the tissue. The amount actually found in the remains need not be enough to kill: it is only necessary to find what is left after a portion may have been eliminated. This theory being questioned by the defense, a number of books were submitted by prosecution under the State Attorney's table and passed up to the witness. He then read from Elwood's Malpractice, page 491; Taylor on Poisons, page 138, and Wormley on Poisons, page 52, in corroboration of this position. In each case the conclusion to which the tests in the authorities quoted were the most eminent, and their declarations among the most recent findings of science. A slight sensation was produced when Wormley was quoted; said Col. Ripley: "Yes, we have heard of him before;" for Wormley was one of the Philadelphia experts whom the defense wanted to get to break down Prof. Doremus' testimony; it was generally regarded as a piece of strategy; the witness still further quoted Tarvieu on Poisons, page 125. The text was in French, and the witness translated as he went along, prefacing it with a remark that he construed liberally rather than literally. These authorities applied equally to all poisons. As a climax, the testimony of Prof. George F. Barker, of Philadelphia, another expert whom the defense had designated for the trial of Lydia Sherman, the "Connect-cut Borgia." He found but one-tenth of a grain in the stomach, and yet this was made the basis for conviction.

The State here asked the witness to tell briefly the results of the analysis of Mrs. Bishop's remains. He said he obtained, by a test of 10 ounces of liver, two and a half of kidney, and 2 of muscle, a slight brown arsenic stain. He weighed the amount and found one-eighth of a grain. From the heart, spleen, and more muscle he got a larger quantity, but could not state the weight, as he had it in the French standard, and could not immediately convert it. There was enough, though, to indicate in his judgment that a fatal dose had been administered. He had nearly completed his tests for morphine, but two or three hours' work was necessary. He had not yet found morphine, but could tell by the remainder of the experiment whether there was any. When this part of the examination, which seemed to take the prisoner by surprise, began, she dropped her eyes, and a moment later, evidently as a bit of by-play, leaned down to whisper with her child, whose high hat thus concealed her face from observation. The direct examination was then briefly rested, and a brief recess was given for the counsel for defense, who satirically said they didn't propose to make any show of words to consult with their expert, Prof. Johnson, of Yale. Prof. Johnson is a slight figure, almost colorless face of quiet, scholarly, and positive cast, and little mustache and imperial. From him the cue was obtained and Mr. Thresher proceeded with the cross-examination of Prof. Doremus. The latter was questioned as to ascertain whether the yellow sulphide of arsenic obtained, and made the basis of estimate of equivalent in white arsenic, was fully separated from pure sulphur which might have been combined with it mechanically in the process. This involved many questions relative to the processes employed, and whether the accuracy of the method rested on his own word or recognized authority. The latter was established. Then the weight of the various stains obtained was examined, to see if they could be actually determined. In some the weight was estimated, but not ascertained. He could weigh them if desired. He could weigh so infinitesimal an amount as 1-6400 of a gramme or 1-1280 of a grain. Even the slightest quantity of arsenic would show a stain. It was then attempted by the defense to find out whether or not minute quantities of arsenic might not have been in the chemicals employed. This led the witness to describe the tests he made to prove their absolute purity. He said he tried harder to find arsenic in the chemicals than in the body.

The witness was then examined as to the constituents of Paris green, perhaps to test his own information, and at some length as to the origin, modification, trustworthiness, and use of the Marsh or electric test. This brought out the statement that the invention was sometimes attributed to Bloxom, of England, but was used by the witness' father, Prof. J. Ogden Doremus, nearly 20 years ago. The trustworthiness of the Proscenius, or cyanide test was next subjected to investigation, as also the Reinsch or copper test; this latter might not be trustworthy, as the copper might contain arsenic. In this case, though the witness had tested his copper slip to prove its purity, he had not completed the test, though, the arsenic was deposited on the slip, but had not yet been converted into the white form. He could do it with chemicals on the table before him if desired. He was not asked to, however.

The next topic of cross-examination was as to the evehness of the rate with which arsenic would pass off with the urine. This, the witness said, might be variable, as there was no telling how much had already been eliminated. And then the quantity voided daily was touched upon. Nominally it would be 40 or 50 ounces. Cobb might have been passing 60 or 70 daily, and less than 30 or 40. Sickness by poisoning might reduce the quantity. Circumstances affected the secretion. A man might sleep, and so secrete less. Another basis of estimating the total amount of arsenic in the system was now considered, namely, whether the rest of the body, especially muscle, would have also contained arsenic. The witness said all past experience justified this conclusion. In the 15 or 20 pounds he analyzed, he found nearly or quite a grain, and in the rest of the body he was sure there was quite as much more. Recurrence was had as to the smallest quantity of arsenic which would give a stain. The witness thought 1-64,000 of a grain would give a stain. He quoted Wormley to the effect that 1-50,000 would give a distinct stain. The question whether the amount actually found was an index of the amount taken was also taken up again. The witness agreed with authorities that it was no accurate index, but afforded some idea; certainly, more must have been taken than was found; yet a man may have died from arsenic without any trace being found.

A slight delay occurred at the commencement of the afternoon session, owing to a long consultation between the counsel for defense and Prof. Johnson. The cross-examination of Prof. Doremus occupied only a short time more, and its only substantial fruits were to show that arsenic-eating is confined almost exclusively to the Styrians, and that Taylor regards it as next to impossible for a man to accustom himself to taking large and continuous doses of arsenic. A little while afterward Prof. Doremus was recalled by the State to testify as to the quantity of strychnine contained in a vial of medicine used by Cobb. At the utmost the vial could have contained only about a grain of that poison when full, and if the directions had been followed it could not have produced a fatal result.

Prof. Rudolph A. Witthaus, of New-York, who occupies the chairs of chemistry and toxicology in the universities of New-York and Vermont, was next called by the State and testified for nearly an hour. He had been present with Prof. Doremus during all his tests for this trial, and was confident that his methods were trustworthy and his chemicals pure; he was satisfied that Cobb's death was caused by arsen

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 2.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—11:15 A. M.

U. S. 6-20s '67. $10,600 ..... 107⅛
U. S. 5s '81. R. 1,000 ..... 105⅞
U. S. 5s '81. C. 10,000 ..... 104⅞
U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $10,000 ..... 107⅛
U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
U. S. 5s '81. R. 1,000 ..... 105⅞
U. S. 5s '81. C. 37,500 ..... 105⅞

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

La. 7s con. $5,000 .. b. 69	K. P. 1st 6s, F. & A., with cp. ser. 1,000 ..... 109¾	Union Pacific. 200 ..... b. 66⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
N. J. C. 1st con. m. 5,000 ..... 72⅛	C. C. C. & I. con. 5,000 .. b. 91⅛	100 ..... 66⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
26,000 .. s15. 72⅛	C. C. C. & I. con. 1,000 92	100 ..... 66⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
10,000 .. b. 72⅛	T. P. & W. 1st, W. D. 1,000 97	100 ..... b. 120¼	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
1,400 .. b. 72⅛	P. C. R. 1,000 92	100 ..... s. 120	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
15,000 ..... 72⅛	L. & S. 1. 1st, s. p. 10,000 92	Chi. & N. W. 700 ..... b. 80⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
N. J. C. conv. as. 6,000 ..... 71⅛	L. & S. 1. 1st, s. p. 5,000 92	500 ..... 80⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
N. J. C. Adjm's. 5,000 63	W. U. T. C. 1900. 1,000 110	700 ..... b. 80⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. R. I. & P. 6s, 1917 C. 10,000 .. int. 108⅛	L. & Nash. 2d. 1,000 ..... 91⅛	Chi. & R. I. 200 ..... b. 111¼	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
R. I. & P. 6s. M. 1st. 1,000 89	Cent. Ex. Bank. 10 118	100 ..... 112⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
500 ..... 68⅜	Delaware & Hud. 150 ..... b. 34⅜	C. C. C. & I. 100 ..... b. 34⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
M. & S. P. 1st D. con. 27,000 .. int. 100	Western Union. 300 ..... b. 38¼	Del., L. & West. 100 ..... b. 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. B. & Q. 7s con. 2,000 .. int. 114	Pacific Mail. 300 ..... b. 34⅜	Del., L. & West. 100 ..... b. 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. B. & Q. 8s con. 1,000 .. int. 114⅜	Erie Railway. 2000 ..... b. 22⅞	Central of N. J. 300 ..... b. 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. B. & Q. 8s con. 5,000 .. b. 114⅜	2000 ..... s. 22⅞	100 ..... 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. B. & Q. 8s con. 1,000 .. b. 114⅜	500 ..... b30. 23	200 ..... 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
Mor. & Es. 2d. 1,000 108	1500 ..... 23⅛	300 ..... 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
N. Y. Ela. 1st. con. 1,000 ..... 91⅜	1500 ..... 23⅛	300 ..... 34⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
N. Y. Ela. 1st. con. 2,000 92	800 ..... 23⅛	300 37	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
10,000 .. b. c. 10 ⅛	2000 ..... 23⅛	C. M. & St. P. 1000 ..... s. 77	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
15,000 .. s3. 104	Canada Southern. 800 .. b3. 23	Rock Island. 1000 ..... s. 77	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
D. & H. C. 1st. 5,000 .. s. 92	1700 23	500 ..... 77⅛	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
15,000 .. b. 92⅜	700 ..... b3. 22⅞	500 ..... s3. 76⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
26,000 .. b. c. 92⅜	Wabash. 700 ..... b3. 22	Del., L. & West. 1000 ..... b. c. 84	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
7,000 .. s. 92⅜	Michigan Central. 100 ..... b. 73⅜	500 ..... 43⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
50,000 .. b3. 92⅜	100 ..... b. 73⅜	1000 ..... 43⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
M. K. & T. con. as. 5,000 74	200 ..... 74⅛	Morris & Essex. 300 ..... b. c. 76	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
4,000 .. b3. 51⅜	200 ..... 74⅛	100 ..... 76⅛	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
Can. So. 1st g'd. 2,000 .. b. 74⅜	600 ..... 74⅛	100 ..... 76⅛	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
Western Pacific. 2,000 .. int. 103	200 ..... 74⅛	300 ..... b3. 76⅛	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
Can. Pac. guar. 2,000 .. b. 74⅜	300 ..... 74⅛	200 ..... 76⅛	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
2,000 .. int. 105⅜	L. S. & M. S. 1800 ..... b. c. 62	Canada Southern. 100 ..... b. c. 84⅝	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
1,000 ..... 105⅞	2000 ..... b. c. 62	100 46	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. P. 1st. S. J. Br. 2,000 .. int. 92⅜	2100 62	100 46	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. P. 1st. S. J. Br. 5,000 .. s. 94⅜	500 ..... b. c. 62	New-Jersey So. 200 ..... b. c. 73	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
Un. Pac. 1st. 2,000 .. int. 105⅜	200 ..... s3. 63⅞	St. L. K. C. & N. pf. 100 ..... b. c. 74⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
Un. Pac. 1st. 5,000 .. b. 74⅜	Illinois Central. 100 ..... b. c. 90	Han. & St. Jo. 100 ..... 74⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
10,000 .. b. c. 88⅞	160 ..... 90⅛	130 ..... b. c. 13⅞	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
C. C. & I. C. 1st. 3,000 .. b. 94⅜	200 90	Ohio & Miss. 200 ..... b. c. 74	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
2,000 .. b. 94⅜	C. C. & I. C. 100 ..... 80⅜	C. C. & I. C. 100 ..... b. c. 6	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
N. Y. C. cs. '83. 1,000 .. 104⅛	700 ..... b. c. 84⅜	300 ..... 84⅜	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛
	300 ..... s3. 84⅜	700 ..... b. c. 6	U. S. 6-20 C. '67. $1,000 ..... 107⅛

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—1:30 P. M.

U. S. 5-20 C. '67. $75,000 ..... 102⅜
U. S. 10-40 R. $35,000 ..... 108¼
U. S. 5s s. '81. $50,000 ..... 105⅞

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—2:30 P. M.

U. S. 5s C. '81. $10,000 107
U. S. 4½ C. '91. $10,000 ..... 104⅞

SECOND BOARD—1 P. M.

La. 7s con. $16,000 .. 67⅞	Western Pac. 12,000 ..... 103⅝	Chicago & Alton. 500 ..... b3. 79⅛
N. J. C. Adjm't. 10,000 83	Amer. Ex. Bank. 29 ..... 100¼	500 ..... s3. 79⅛
M. K. & T. C. G. 7 1,000 104	Western Union. 1100 .. b. c. 98⅞	Han. & St. Jo. pf. 100 ..... b. c. 34⅞
30,000 ..... 103⅞	Pacific Mail. 100 .. b. c. 39⅜	Central of N. J. 100 ..... b. c. 34⅞
K. & D. M. 1st. 5,000 ..... 86⅞	Delaware & Hud. 1,000 39	100 ..... b. c. 34⅞
D. & R. G. 1st. 21,000 .. int. 92⅜	Erie Railway. 10,000 ..... 22⅞	700 ..... 34⅞
3,000 ..... 92⅞	100 .. b. c. 22⅞	500 ..... 35⅛
Mich. So. s. f. 4,000 ..... 109¼	100 .. b3. 22⅞	700 ..... 35⅛
M., K. & T. c. s. f. as. 4,000 .. b3. 51⅞	Michigan Central. 100 .. b. c. 74⅜	Chi. & N. W. 200 ..... b. c. 111¼
R. & St. P. 8s. as. con. 1,000 ..... 101⅜	L. S. & M. S. 1000 .. b. c. 68⅜	100 ..... 112⅜
Can. So. 1st g'd. 5,000 ..... 76⅛	Cent. Ex. Bank. 10 118	S. L., I. M. & S. 100 ..... b. c. 34⅜
M. & St. P. 1st D. con. 27,000 .. int. 100	Delaware & Hud. 300 .. b. c. 38¼	Del., L. & West. 100 ..... b. c. 34⅜
2,000 100	Western Union. 1000 ..... s30. 38⅝	Central of N. J. 300 ..... b. c. 34⅜
C. B. & Q. 7s con. 2,000 .. int. 114	Pacific Mail. 200 ..... s. 34⅜	300 ..... 34⅜
C. B. & Q. 8s con. 1,000 .. int. 114⅜	Erie Railway. 200 .. s3. 23⅛	1000 ..... 34⅜
C. B. & Q. 8s con. 5,000 .. b. 114⅜	2000 ..... b3. 23⅛	800 ..... 34⅜
C. B. & Q. 8s con. 1,000 .. b. 114⅜	1000 ..... 23⅛	1000 ..... 34⅜
Mor. & Es. 2d. 2,000 108	2000 ..... s3. 23⅛	800 ..... 34⅜
N. Y. Ela. 1st. con. 1,000 92	1000 ..... 23⅛	1000 ..... 34⅜
N. Y. Ela. 1st. con. 2,000 92	2500 ..... 23⅛	300 ..... 34⅞
Wells-Fargo Ex. 55 96	1300 ..... 23⅛	100 ..... 34⅞
Sutro Tunnel Co. 1,500 ..... 4¼	800 ..... 23⅛	300 37
Pull. Pal. Car. 50 74	900 ..... 23⅛	1000 37
30 ..... s3. 74	900 ..... 23⅞	Rock Island. 400 ..... 119⅞
At. & Pac. Tel. 10 29	600 ..... 23⅞	Union Pacific. 100 ..... b3. 66⅝
Delaware & Hud. 100 ..... 74⅜	2000 ..... 23⅞	St. Paul. 500 ..... s3. 37⅛
200 ..... 39⅛	Michigan Central. 100 ..... s3. 74⅛	500 ..... 37⅛
200 ..... 39⅛	Canada Southern. 100 ..... 74⅜	500 ..... 37⅛
100 ..... 39⅛	100 ..... 74⅜	500 ..... 37⅛
100 ..... 39⅛	100 ..... 74⅜	500 ..... 37⅛
100 ..... 39⅛	500 ..... s3. 74⅜	500 ..... 37⅛
100 ..... 39⅛	500 .....

JAN 1879

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

No business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Thursday, Jan. 2. The sale announced by Bernard Smyth, of the dwelling, with lot, No. 408 West 26th-st., west of 9th-av., was adjourned sine die. The following auctions are noticed for to-day:

By Louis Meyer, foreclosure sale, S. H. Olin, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brick building, with plot of land 98.9 by 53. No. 383 and 385 Bowery, north-west corner of 23d-st. Also, similar sale, Charles M. Marsh, Esq., Referee, of the five and six story brick buildings, with plot of land 97.3 by 85. Nos. 337 to 343 Park-av., north-east corner of 41st-st.; a portion of the Grand Union Hotel property.

By William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, John C. Bushnell, Esq., Referee, of the four-story brown-stone front dwelling, with lot 16.9 by 100.5. No. 5 East 49 2-3 ft., north side, 162.6 feet east of 5th-av.

By Horatio Henriques, foreclosure sale, John D. Lewis, Esq., Referee, of one lot 25 by 100, on Avenue A, west side, 70.4 feet south of 71st-st.

By Hugh N. Camp, foreclosure sale, Carlisle Norwood, Jr., Referee, of the four-story brick building, with lot, 25 by 75. No. 1,517 1st-av., west side, 51.8 feet south of 81st-st. Also, similar sale, William P. Kreiser, Esq., Referee, of a plot of land, 24.7 by 110.2 by 140.9 by 100, on Clinton-av., north-west corner of 1st-st., 24th Ward; also, two lots, each 25 by 200; on Clinton-av., north side, 250 feet west of 2d-st., running through to Willard-av.; also, a plot of land, 50 by 126.8 by 53.2 by 144.10, on Clinton-av., south side, 300 feet west of 2d-st., running through to Grand-av.; also, two lots, each 25 by 100, on 2d-st., north-east corner of Willard-av., and two lots, each 25 by 100, on Willard-av., north side, 275 feet east of 2d-st., and two lots, each 25 by 200, on Willard-av., south side, 186.11 feet west of 1st-st., running through to Clinton-av.

By Richard V. Harnett, foreclosure sale, Henry E. Rogers, Esq., Referee, of the three three-story brown-stone-front dwellings, with lease of lots, each 25 by 100.8. Nos. 219, 221, and 223 East 87th-st., north side, 325 feet west of 2d-av.; leased Oct. 23, 1873.

By James L. Wells, foreclosure sale, William W. Brackett, Esq., Referee, of one lot, 25.2 by — by 86.9 by —, on Boulevard, west side, 50.4 feet north of 122d-st., running through to Bloomingdale road.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Thursday, Jan. 2.

68th-st., s. s., between 4th and 5th avs. Lots Nos. 286 and 287; Henry G. Freeman to Manufacturers' National Bank..... $2,600

Ed-av., w. s., 50.5 ft. n. of 59th-st., 20x60; Louisa J. Morgan and husband to Louis Schoolherr..... 25,500

63d-st., s. s., 225 ft. w. of 10th-av., 18.9x90; John O'Neill to Patrick Taggart..... nom.

57th-st., n. s., 225 ft. e. of 11th-av., 50x100.5; Thomas McGuinness and wife to Frederick Aldroom..... 36,000

84th-st., n. s., 275 ft. e. of 2d-av., 24.2x100.5; Thomas McGuinness and wife to Frederick Aldroom..... 100

Prince-st., s. s., 47.6 ft. e. of Mott-st., 108.9x 115.2; Samuel Zeimer and wife to John Bonsoel..... 22,500

Rivington-st., n. s., 20.1 ft. w. of Eldridge-st., 58.10x75; Same to Same..... 5,000

Duane-st., n. s., No. 207; S. Jones, Referee, to Bank for Savings..... 10,000

Riverside-av., s. s., 51.1½ ft. e. of 115th-st., 25x 99.7; P. O. Bowman, Referee, to Catharine Carrigan..... 1,000

115 1-st., s. s., 94.4 ft. e. of Riverside-av., 25x 100.11; Same to Same..... 800

Riverside-av., s. s., 75.1½ ft. s. of 115th-st., 25 x100; Same to Same..... 1,000

128th-st., s. s., 225 ft. w. of 6th-av., 20.6x103.3; O. A. Jarvis and wife to Maurice Ahren..... 11,000

1st-av., No. 153, 23.1x100; Henry Gucker and wife to Henry Kaumreyer..... 13,250

8th-av., s. w. corner 74th-st., 100x102.2; Mary A. Tucker and wife to Edward Clark..... 40,000

135th-st., s. s., 225 ft. w. of 10th-av., 18.9x90; Patrick Taggart and wife to Mary Fitzsimons..... 8,000

81st-st., s. s., 292 ft. w. of Lexington-av., 18.6x 100.5; Jennie C. Cremmins to Thomas M. Fernandez..... 20,000

33d-st., n. s., 146.1 ft. e. of 10th-av., 39.8x25x irregular; S. B. Hubbard, Referee, to Mary Jones, Executrix..... 3,200

56th-st., n. s., 235.7 ft. e. of 9th-av., 19.7x98.9; Same to Same..... 4,000

9th-st., s. s., 99.2 ft. e. of 30th-st., 19.5x76; Same to Same..... 6,700

9th-av., s. e. corner of 30th-st., 19.5x76; Same to Same..... 6,700

9th-av., s. e. corner of 30th-st., 19.5x76; Same to Same..... 11,000

150th-st., n. s., 125 ft. w. of Mott-av., 25.2x 125; Elizabeth R. Taylor and husband to William R. C. Chapman..... 4,500

Greenwich-s., Nos. 27 and 29; Edward Burke and wife to New-York Loan and Improvement Company..... 44,000

Amity-st., s. s., 20 ft. e. of Greene-st., 20x75; Mary E. Little to J. B. A. A. Chatain..... 7,000

White-st., No. 40, 25.2x76.1; Samuel Baron and wife to Henry Christe..... 50,500

West 33d-st., No. 24, 20x75; Jesse A. Marshall and wife to J. B. A. A. Chatain..... 20,000

21-st., No. 113, 20x100; Per Cent. for the current six months, free; Joseph Schaeffer and wife to Peter Weber and wife..... 14,500

2d-av., w. s., 98.9 ft. s. of 42d-st., 24.8x100; Julius Gilsey and wife to Paul Weber..... 14,000

121st-st., n. s., 243 ft. e. of 4th-av., 17x100.11; John Barry and wife to Sarah E. Scofield..... 6,250

50th-st., s. s., 140 ft. w. of 6th-av., 25x100.4; A. H. Holmes, Referee, to F. C. Ackham..... 2,200

LEASES RECORDED.

65th-st., s. s., 100 ft. w. of 10th-av., 50x100; also, 64th-st., n. s., 100 ft. w. of 10th-av., 25 x100.5. 15 years; James F. Brush to Benjamin D. Merritt, Jr..... $150

83d-st., West, No. 311, 3 years; Theresa Stidenberg to Simon Goldsmith..... 600

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Berman, Mary, and husband to Michael C. Mosbach; w. s. Attorney-st., s. of Houston-st., 1 year..... $5,000

Bieber, Jacob, and wife to William Hillmann; w. s. Willett-st. Lot No. 106, 5 years..... 3,700

Chatain, J. B. A. A., to Jesse A. Marshall; No. 24 West 33d-st., 3 years..... 18,000

Christe, Henry, and others to Samuel Baron; No. 40 White-st., 3 years..... 15,000

Connolly, John, to Hannah S. Dimon; No. 101 Greenwich-st., 1 year..... 1,500

Same to Same; No. 59 North Moore-st., 1 year.. 1,500

Dudier, George, and wife to Alphone L. Fauchier; E. 9.91st-st., 3 years..... 1,000

German Evangelical Lutheran, St. Luke's Congregational, to John H. Wersing; n. s. 42d-st., 6 2-3d-av., 5 years..... 10,500

Gunther, William H., and wife to the Manhattan Life Insurance Company; Nos. 51 and 53 Greene-st. and Nos. 467, 471, 473, and 475 Broome-st. (in lieu of mortgage for $125,000 cancelled to-day.)..... 1 year..... 75,000

Hachmann, John H., and wife to John D. Hinrichs; s. e. corner of 42nd-st. and 6th-av., 3 years..... 6,000

Heyl, Adolf, to Edward F. Schmedler; s. e. corner of 8th-av. and 44th-st., 8 years..... 15,000

Howe, Sarah, to the Equitable Life Assurance Company of the United States; No. 133 East 21st-st., 1 year..... 12,000

Kammerer, Henry, to Henry Gucker; w. s. 1st-av., s. of 10th-st., 1 year..... 4,250

Lawrence, Amelia, to Henry Morrison, s. s. 22d-st., corner of Avenue B, installments..... 1,677

Logeling, Guillaume, and wife to The Mutual Life Insurance Company; Nos. 239 and 241 East 57th-st., 1 year..... 10,000

McKenzie, William B., and wife to Albert Boogert, Jr.; n. s. 132d-st., w. of 6th-av., 1 year.. Schlesinger, Josephine, and husband to Peter Nayler, Jr., and another, Trustees, &c.; No. 13 John st., 5 years..... 1,000 5,000

Van Sandick, James, and wife to Alexander Massie; s. s. 19th st., s. of 8th-av., 5 years..... 7,500

Weber, Peter, and wife to Joseph Schaeffler; s. s. 2d-st., Lot No. 206, 1½ years..... 500

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Bernhart, Hartman, to Abraham Heidinger..... $3,020

Carpenter, Leonard J., to S. T. Cannon..... 4,000

Doscher, L. M., to Isabella Higgins..... 5,075

Higgins, Isabella, to Same..... 5,075

Lindheim, John L., to William Orth..... 5,000

Meigs, Perverll, to Frederick C. Marschall..... 6,000

Reed, Horatio, guardian, &c., to Ella Reed..... nom.

Rogers, Bernhard, to Samuel Barnett..... 4,500

Rosenstein, Frederick, to John M. Canda..... 1,000

Rosenstein, Frederick, to Theodore P. Jenkins.. 875

Same to Same..... 875

Silver, Jonas, and another, Trustees, &c., to Linda Frankenthal..... nom.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

FOR SALE—THE ELEGANT CABINET FINISH house, No. 14 East 45th-st. For terms and particulars apply to E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st. and No. 1,130 Broadway.

24TH-ST., NEAR MADISON-SQUARE.

A hands me full-size four-story brown-stone house, for sale, in the above location, at a very low price. E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st. and No. 1,130 Broadway.

PROPOSITIONS WILL BE RECEIVED FOR a lease and improvement of the premises No. 190 Chambers-st. Possession 25th inst. Apply at No. 111 Fulton-st., of PETER A. H. JACKSON.

A CHARMING PARK-AV. FULL SIZE HOUSE, near 36th-st.; bargain. V. K. STEVENSON, Jr., 4 Pine, 35 East 17th-st., and 661 5th-av.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.

Houses, stores, flats, to let and for sale. PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.

THE FOUR LOTS WITH THE BUILDINGS THEREON,

Situated at the north-east corner of 41st-st. and Park-av., constituting the southerly portion of the

GRAND UNION HOTEL,

Will be sold at public auction on FRIDAY, Jan. 3, 1879, at 12 o'clock M., at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, by LOUIS MESIER, Auctioneer.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.—WILL BE SOLD BY THE Assignee, ASHFORD WILMERDING & MOUNTS, bankrupts, at public vendue, at the Globe Hotel, Red Bank, Monmouth County, New-Jersey, on SATURDAY, January 11, 1879, at two o'clock P. M., all that tract of and well known as the Mount property, situate on the Highlands of Navesink, in Middletown, County of Monmouth, State of New-Jersey, lately belonging to Wm. S. and Andrew Mount, bounded on the east by lands of Gilbert Giles and others, on the south by Hartshorne, Patterson, and others; on the west by Mrs. —— Worrall and others, on the north by the Raritan Bay, containing 250 acres, more or less; also, at same time, place, 1,102 shares of the Townsend Universal Printing-press Co., &c., of Wilmerding & Mounts.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Jersey, Dec. 30, 1878.

ja3-1aw3wF* EZRA A. OSBORN, Assignee.

CITY HOUSES TO LET.

A DESIRABLE FLAT IN THE WINCHESTER, Broadway above 31st-st. Apply before 11 A. M. and after 3 P. M.; rent low.

TO LET—3D-ST., JUST OUT OF 5TH-AV.—Four story full-size house, partly furnished. T. & CLARK & CO., No. 149 Broadway.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET IN THE TIMES BUILDING. APPLY TO GEORGE JONES, TIMES OFFICE.

BOREEL BUILDING, Nos. 113, 115, 117, and 119 Broadway. OFFICES TO LET.

This Building is now and first-class in all its appointments; perfect ventilation; light on all sides, and large courts. 51 feet square in centre.

Four passenger elevators, and all the conveniences appertaining to a building of its class.

It is strictly FIRE-PROOF.

The rooms are so arranged that they can be rented singly or in suites.

Plans can be seen at our office, No. 5 Pine-st. E. H. LUDLOW & CO.

BOREEL BUILDING.

Large corner office on first floor, 22.6x140 feet, to let. Also, Smaller office adjoining, on Broadway. E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 5 Pine-st.

TO LET OR LEASE—THE FIVE-STORY IRON-front building, Nos. 739 and 741 Broadway. Also, No. 533 Broadway. Apply to ROBERT GORLEY, No. 557 Broadway, or E. A. CRUIKSHANK & CO., No. 68 Broadway.

HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED.

HOUSE WANTED—A FOUR-STORY HOUSE, between 20th and 60th sts., in good neighborhood, for occupation 1st March; rent not over $1,200. Address B. C. G., Box No. 120 Times Office.

FINANCIAL.

CITY OF NEW-YORK

5 PER CENT. CONSOLIDATED SINKING FUND BONDS.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN UNITED STATES GOLD COIN.

30-50 YEARS TO RUN.

Coupon Bonds in sums of $500 and $1,000, convertible at any time into Registered Stock.

A limited amount for sale at 106½ and interest.

DREXEL, MORGAN & CO.
AUGUST BELMONT & CO.
WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.

New-York City

6 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, COUPON OR REGISTERED, payable in 1896.

BUFFALO CITY 5 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1882.

BUFFALO CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1890.

ROCHESTER CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1893.

JERSEY CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS, payable in 1891.

ALSO, A CHOICE LOT OF FIRST-CLASS RAILROAD BONDS.

FOR SALE BY

DANIEL A. MORAN,

40 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY,

NO. 26 EXCHANGE-PLACE, NEW-YORK.

CHARTERED 1822. CAPITAL, $1,000,000.

TRANSFER AGENTS AND REGISTRARS OF STOCK.

LEGAL DEPOSITORY FOR MONEY.

Capital and surplus invested in Government securities.

PARTIES DEPOSITING MONEY WITH THIS INSTITUTION will receive INTEREST from date of deposit, and may make and withdraw the same at pleasure.

EXECUTORS, TRUSTEES, AND OTHERS will be accorded every attention.

This Company is authorized to act in every position of trust.

R. G. ROLSTON, President.
G. F. TALMAN, Vice-President.
R. C. BOYD, Second Vice-President.
G. P. FITCH, Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:

MOSES TAYLOR, G. F. TALMAN,
J. J. ASTOR, SAMUEL SLOAN,
ISAAC BELL, EDWD. MINTURN,
R. G. ROLSTON.

VIRGINIA BONDHOLDERS

Whose assent is not already given are invited to examine the PROPOSITION FOR PROPORTIONATE FUNDING INTO FOUR PER CENTS SECURED BY TAX-RECEIVABLE COUPONS AND A SINKING FUND. This proposition is believed to meet fully the requirements of the case, and has the approval of many leading members of the Legislature. The indications are that it will become a law, but a prompt co-operation by bondholders will secure its passage. Communications may be addressed direct, or through either of the following houses:

BANK OF NEW-YORK, N. WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.
B. A., CHAS. M. FRY, Pres. THIRD NATIONAL BANK,
Pres. BANK, N. Y.
DREXEL, MORGAN & CO. HUGH McCULLOCH.
L. VON HOFFMANN, & CO.

THE FUNDING ASSOCIATION, U. S. A., (LIMITED.)
Room No. 93 Drexel Building.

OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER.
CITY OF ALLEGHENY, Nov. 27, 1878.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF ALLEGHENY 4 PER CENT. RAILROAD COMPROMISE BONDS.—In accordance with section third of an act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania approved April 10, 1868, entitled "An Act relative to the railroad indebtedness of the City of Allegheny," notice is hereby given that the said City of Allegheny is prepared to retire the following series of 4 per cent. railroad compromise bonds, viz.: Numbers 17, 34, 42, 72, 73, 74, 75, 79, 82, 54, and that the said outstanding bonds not surrendered within ten days from the date of this advertisement will cease to draw interest thereon, and the holder or holders of such bond or bonds shall look only to the deposit in the Bank of Pittsburg for payment of the same. JAMES BROWN, Controller.

J. & W. SELIGMAN & CO., BANKERS,

No. 21 Broad-st., New-York,

Issue Letters of Credit for Travelers,

PAYABLE IN ANY PART OF EUROPE, ASIA, AFRICA AUSTRALIA AND AMERICA.

DRAW BILLS OF EXCHANGE AND MAKE TELEGRAPHIC TRANSFERS OF MONEY ON EUROPE AND CALIFORNIA.

GEORGE OPDYKE & CO., BANKERS,

EQUITABLE BUILDING, BROADWAY CORNER CEDAR-ST.,

Do a General Banking business; allow interest on deposits, buy and sell municipal and other investment bonds, and all securities dealt in at the Stock or Gold Exchanges. LETTERS OF CREDIT AND MORTGAGE securities, yielding 9 and 10 PER CENT. INTEREST, for sale at PAR.

WOOD & DAVIS,

BANKERS AND BROKERS,

NO. 31 PINE-ST., NEW-YORK.

GOVERNMENT BONDS, MUNICIPAL AND RAILROAD SECURITIES BOUGHT AND SOLD ON COMMISSION.

C. D. WOOD. SAM'L D. DAVIS.

FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. SINKING FUND BONDS OF THE SCIOTO VALLEY RAILWAY CO. OF OHIO.

Principal due Jan. 1, 1886.
Coupons due January and July.
Issued at $13,000 per mile.
A small amount for sale at 95 and interest, by WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.,
No. 26 Nassau-st.

THE MARKET NATIONAL BANK, New-York, Dec. 14, 1878.

NOTICE.—STOCKHOLDERS ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that on the 31st day of December next the capital stock of this bank will be reduced ($500,000) five thousand shares. On and after which date new certificates will be issued for the remaining shares, and payment made for the reduction, with interest.

A dividend of THREE AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. on the reduced capital has been declared, payable at the same time.

The transfer-books will be closed from this date to Jan. 1, 1879, except for transfer of fractional shares.

By order of the Board. A. GILBERT, Cashier.

NOTICE.—A SPECIAL MEETING OF THE stockholders of the New-York, Catskill, and Albany Steam-boat Company, "Limited," will be held at Cash Hill, Greene County, N. Y., on Monday, Jan. 13, 1879, at 1 o'clock P. M., for the purpose of amending or adding to the by-laws.

By order of the Board of Directors.
WM. H. MORTON, President.

Dated ALBANY, Dec. 31, 1878.

FINANCIAL.

CITY BONDS AT PUBLIC AUCTION.

ON THE 18TH OF JANUARY, 1879, THE CITY OF KINGSTON, N. Y., will sell at the City Hall, in Kingston, N. Y., at 12 o'clock M.

$88,000 COUPON BONDS,

issued in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, chapter 276, passed Feb. 16, 1878.

The bonds bear interest at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the 15th of January and 7th of July each year, and have 30 years to run, with the option of the City to pay them after 10 years. Five per cent. of the purchase money will be required to be paid on the day of sale, and the balance, with accrued interest, on or before the 28th day of February next—the cash payment of five per cent. to be forfeited on failure to complete purchase.

Further information can be had by addressing any of the Presidents of the several banks in Kingston, N. Y.

THOS. CORNELL, } Committee.
C. D. BRUYN, }

JERSEY CITY BONDS.

7s, DUE 1893, 1894, 1897, 1900, 1906.

(COUPON OR REGISTERED.)

CITY OF HOBOKEN BONDS.

6s, Due 1889, 1894.

WARREN COUNTY (N. J.) BONDS.

5s, Due 1881 to 1888,

FOR SALE BY

GEO. K. SISTARE,

NO. 17 NASSAU-ST., N. Y.

OFFICE OF THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, No. 26 EXCHANGE-PLACE, WILLIAM-ST., NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, of the City of New-York, as Trustee under the Sinking Fund of the Construction and Equipment bonds of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad Company, hereby give notice that, in accordance with the provisions of the said sinking fund, they have drawn by lot the following numbers of seventeen (17) of said bonds, viz.: Nos. 15, 22, 160, 311, 334, 633, 850, 911, 899, 974, 914, 981, 1,153, 1,151, 1,206, 1,300, 1,320, and that on presentation and delivery to them of said 17 bonds, or any part of the same, they will be redeemed at the par value thereof, and that from and after the said 17 bonds, not presented for redemption on or before the 1st day of July next, will cease from and after that date.

R. G. ROLSTON, President.
The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

WANTED

The following Kentucky county bonds: Bourbon County, Fayette County, Clark County, Montgomery County, Mason County.

Also, Second Mortgage bonds of the Kentucky Central Railroad. Address

RANDAL H. FOOTE, BANKER, NO. 70 BROADWAY, N. Y.

HENRY CLEWS & CO., BANKERS, NO. 18 Nassau-st., members of the New-York Stock, Gold, and Government Bond Exchanges.—Securities (in fractional or large quantities) bought and sold on commission; also carried as long as required on 5 per cent. margin; advances made on approved collateral at market rate; deposits received subject to check at sight: 4 per cent. interest allowed on balances; orders executed at the San Francisco and London Stock Exchanges.

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO

Capital, $10,000,000, gold. Reserve, $3,500,000, gold.
NEW-YORK AGENCY NO. 62 WALL-ST.
Buys and sells exchange and telegraphic transfers.
Issues commercial and travelers' credits.
Executes orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,

NO. 59 WALL-ST.,

ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS, BANKERS, NO. 12 Wall-st., New-York, issue Letters of Credit or Circular Notes on the Union Bank of London for the use of travelers in all parts of the world.

SAVINGS BANKS.

METROPOLITAN SAVINGS BANK,

Nos. 1 and 3 Third-av.
FIFTY-FIRST DIVIDEND.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

INTEREST AT THE RATE OF FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $1,000 and under, and at the rate of Four per Cent. on amounts over $1,000, which have remained on deposit during the three or six months ending Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid according to the by-laws on the 7th inst.

DIVIDEND not withdrawn will be added to the deposit and draw interest from Jan. 1.

DEPOSITS made on or before the 10th of January will draw interest from Jan. 1.

ISAAC T. SMITH, President.

G. N. CONKLIN, Secretary.

61ST SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND.

East River Savings Institution,

No. 3 Chambers-st., New-York, Dec. 30, 1878.

Interest for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1878, at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $3,000 and under, and at the rate of FOUR PER CENT. on the excess, has been declared, and will be payable after Jan. 10, 1879.

Bank open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

W. H. SLOCUM, President.
CHARLES A. WHITNEY, Secretary.

GREENWICH SAVINGS BANK,

New-York, Dec. 23, 1878.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES HAVE ORdered interest to be paid to depositors entitled thereto under the by-laws at the rate of five (5) per cent. per annum on sums of $400 and under, and at the rate of four (4) per cent. on sums over $400 and not exceeding $3,000, and payable on and after Jan. 20, 1879.

Deposits will not be received from any one depositor to an amount in excess of $3,000.

Bank open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

HENRY BOGARDUS, President.
CLINTON GILBERT, Treasurer.

SAM'L B. VAN DUZER, } Assistant
ALEX. McLEOD AGNEW. } Secretaries.

IRVING SAVINGS INSTITUTION, No 96 WARREN-ST., New-York, Dec. 30, 1878.

THE TRUSTEES OF THIS INSTITUTION have ordered interest to be paid on all sums that have remained on deposit for the three and six months ending Dec. 31, 1878, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable on and after Jan. 20.

Interest not withdrawn will be added to the principal and draw interest from Jan. 1. Money deposited on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1. Bank open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

C. D. HEATON, JOHN CASTREE,
Secretary. President.

NEW-YORK SAVINGS BANK, 8TH-AV. and 14TH-ST.—THE TRUSTEES HAVE ORDERED a dividend to depositors entitled thereto, at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum was declared Jan. 1, 1879, on ALL SUMS from $5 to $5,000, interest commencing the 1st of each month. Money deposited on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1.

Assets..... $3,519,126 16
Surplus..... 518,413 77

RICHARD H. BULL, President.
C. W. BRINCKERHOFF, Secretary.

UNION DIME SAVINGS BANK,

Broadway, 32d-st., and 6th-av.

Interest on deposits from $5 to $3,000, at the rate of Five Per Cent. per annum; and on all sums exceeding $3,000, at the rate of Four Per Cent. on the excess, payable on or after Jan. 20, 1879. JNO. W. BRITTON, GARDNER S. CHAPIN, Treasurer. President.
CHARLES E. SPRAGUE, Secretary.

ELECTIONS.

OFFICE OF THE WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY, TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 21, 1878.

NOTICE.—THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE stockholders of the Wabash Railway Company for the election of Directors and the transaction of other business, will be held at the office of the company, at Toledo, Ohio, on WEDNESDAY, the 29th day of February, 1879, at 10 o'clock A. M.

As this meeting will be submitted, as required by law, the execution of a mortgage to secure the bonds of the Hannibal and Naples Railroad, to secure the bonds of this company to be issued in payment for said railroad in the sum of five hundred thousand dollars.

The transfer-books will be closed twenty (20) days prior to said meeting. W. B. CORNEAU, Secretary.

OFFICE METROPOLITAN GAS-LIGHT COMPANY, BROADWAY, CORNER OF 46TH-ST. NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS of this company for the election of Directors to serve for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of other business, will be held at the company's office on MONDAY, Jan. 13, 1879. Polls open from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M. The stock transfer-books will close Saturday evening, TUESDAY, Jan. 28, 1878, and reopen Tuesday morning, Jan. 14, 1879.

C. F. ZOLLIKOFFER, Secretary.

MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 7, 1878.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKholders of this bank for the election of eleven Directors to serve the ensuing year, will be held at the banking-house, TUESDAY, JAN. 14, 1879.

Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M. By order of the Board, C. V. SANTA, Cashier.

DRY DOCK, EAST BROADWAY AND BATTERY RAILROAD COMPANY, OFFICE, No. 605 Grand-st. NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

ELECTION.—THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR Directors of this company, and for inspectors of next election, will be held at its office on Tuesday, Jan. 14 inst., from 12 M. to 1 P. M.

R. KELLY, Secretary.

MECHANICS' NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 13, 1878.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR DIRECTORS of this bank will be held at the banking-house, on TUESDAY, the 14th day of January next, between the hours of 12 M. and 1 P. M.

WM. H. COX, Cashier.

NATIONAL BROADWAY BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 30, 1878.

ELECTION.—THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR Directors of this bank and for inspectors of the next succeeding election will be held at the banking-house, on TUESDAY, Jan. 14 next, between the hours of 12 M. and 1 P. M.

J. L. EVERITT, Cashier.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 13, 1878.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR DIRECTORS of this bank will be held at the banking-house on TUESDAY, the 14th day of January, 1879, between the hours of 12 M. and 1 P. M.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

OFFICE OF THE EAGLE FIRE COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR DIRECTORS of this company, and for Inspectors, will be held at the company's office, No. 24 Wall-st., on TUESDAY, the 14th inst., commencing at 12 o'clock M. and closing at 1 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of amending or adding to the by-laws.

By order of the Board of Directors.
WM. H. MORTON, President.

Dated ALBANY, Dec. 31, 1878.

DIVIDENDS.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF EXCHANGE-ST. NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

THE FOLLOWING COUPONS, DUE JAN. 1, 1879, are payable at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York:

Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Company, Jan. 1, 1878, of Series A.
Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark Railroad Company.
Union Pacific Railroad Company, First Mortgage.
Erie and Pittsburg Railroad Company.
Grand Rapids, Newago and Lake Shore Railroad Company.
Michigan Central Air Line Railroad Company.
Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroad Company.
Grand River Valley Railroad Company.
City of Rochester.
City of Syracuse.
North-western Telegraph Co.
Holliday Coal Company.
Peekskill Water Bonds.
St. Louis National Stock Yards.
Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Registered Interest.
Town of Covington.
Town of Wheatland.
Town of Gainesville.
Town of Stephentown.
Town of Warsaw.
Town of Pavilion.
Town of Middlebury.
Town of German Flats.
Town of Leroy.
Town of Chesham.

JAS. H. OGILVIE, Secretary.

THE FOLLOWING COUPONS ARE PAYAble at the FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, No. 26 Exchange-place, on and after 2d January, 1879:

Burlington & Missouri R. R. Co.
Buffalo, New-York & Philadelphia.
Ohio Coal Co.
Cleveland & Pittsburg R. R. Co.
City of Evansville, Ind.
City of Pittsburgh, N. Y.
Coney Island & Brooklyn R. R. Co.
Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville R. R.
Evansville & Crawfordsville R. R. Co.
Evansville, Terre Haute & Chicago, 2d coup.
Houston City St. R. R. Co., coupon of July, 1878.
Indianapolis, Peru & Chicago R. R. Co.
Indiana Block Coal & R. Co.
Jeffersonville, Madison & Indianapolis R. R. Co.
Syracuse & Northern R. R. Co.
The Thomas Iron Co.
Alabama & Great Southern R. R. Co.
Hannibal & St. Joseph R. R. Land Grant Coupons.

FIFTY-THIRD DIVIDEND.

HANOVER FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

A semi-annual dividend of FIVE (5) PER CENT. is payable on demand at the office of the company, No. 120 Broadway. I. REMSEN LANE, Vice-President and Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1879.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF EXCHANGE-ST. NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, Trustee, will pay, on and after Jan. 1, 1879, TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS in gold upon the coupons maturing Jan. 1, 1879, on the bonds of the Union Pacific Railway, Southern Branch, which have been stamped, subject to the agreement of March 1, 1876. Coupons must be left over night for examination.

EDWARD KING, President.

OFFICE OF THE LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 24, 1878.

NASHVILLE AND DECATUR RAILROAD Company First Mortgage 7 per cent. coupons.
SOUTH AND NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD Company First Mortgage 8 per cent. gold coupons.

All due Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid on presentation at the office of Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co., corner of Wall and Broad sts., New-York, on and after that date.

W. BANNEY, Secretary.

OFFICE OF WELLS, FARGO & CO., No. 65 BROADWAY, Dec. 16, 1878.

THE REGULAR SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of FOUR PER CENT. has been declared by the Directors of this company, payable Jan. 15, 1879, at our office as above.

The transfer-books will close Jan. 4, at 2 P. M., and reopen Feb. 6. H. B. PARSONS, Assistant Secretary.

SOUTHERN MINNESOTA RAILWAY COMPANY, 82 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.—An interest payment of Thirty-five dollars on each Consolidation bond of the Southern Minnesota Railroad Company, represented by certificates of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, will be made on and after January 2, 1879, at the office of said Trust Company. The transfer-books will close December 24 and reopen January 2.

CORNELIUS G. HOLT, Jr. Gen'l Manager.
CORNELIUS K. G. BILLOTT, Chairman Executive Committee.

BANK OF AMERICA, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTORS OF the Bank of America, have this day declared a dividend of FOUR (4) PER CENT. for the current six months, free from tax, payable to the stockholders on and after Thursday, Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-books will remain closed from this date until the morning of Jan. 9, 1879.

ROBERT JAFFRAY, Cashier.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 16, 1878.

THIRTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of Three per Cent., free of tax, out of the profits of last six months, payable Jan. 2, 1879. Transfer-books will close 21st instant P. M., until 2d January.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

BROOKLYN TRUST COMPANY, No. 177 MONTAGUE-ST., CORNER OF CLINTON, BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 30, 1878.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable Jan. 6, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed from Jan. 2 to the date of payment. WM. B. BUNKER, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE NEW CENTRAL COAL COMPANY OF MARYLAND, Nos. 6 AND 6½ TRINITY BUILDING, New-York, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of TWO DOLLARS per share, payable Jan. 22, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed Jan. 10 and reopened Jan. 16. WM. S. JACQUES, Secretary.

OFFICE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 28, 1878.

THE COUPONS DUE JAN. 1, 1879, OF THE Florida Central Railroad Company's 8 per cent. gold bonds, issued in 1877, will be paid on presentation at the banking house of Messrs. Baltzer & Lichtenstein, No. 52 Exchange-place, New-York. AARON MARSH, Treasurer.

FIRST DIVISION OF THE ST. PAUL AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.—The coupons due Jan. 1, 1879, upon the $700,000 issue of mortgage bonds of the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Company will be paid on presentation on and after 2d January, 1879, at the office of Messrs. J. S. Kennedy & Co., No. 41 Cedar-st., New-York. JOHN S. KENNEDY, Trustee.

MECHANICS' NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Three (3

A MEMORABLE MARRIAGE.

YESTERDAY'S WEDDING IN TRINITY CHURCH.

THE UNION OF REV. JOSEPH BLOOM WETHERILL AND MISS KATE ANNIE SMITH—MAGNIFICENT FLORAL DECORATIONS OF THE CHANCEL—THE NOTABLE GUESTS PRESENT—THE COSTUME OF THE BRIDE—A DESCRIPTION OF THE TROUSSEAU—AN LIST OF THE PRESENTS.

A choral wedding occurs so seldom in this City as to rank as an event of public importance. More than this, the near relation of the bride to Mrs. A. T. Stewart, and the fact that gossip has designated her as Mrs. Stewart's heir, combined to render the wedding ceremony at Trinity Church yesterday morning a fashionable occasion. It was known, too, that the floral decorations would be something unexampled, and the ceremony one of the most imposing that ever occurred in this City—a parallel at Trinity to the two or three princely weddings that have taken place at St. Patrick's Cathedral. The snow fell in showers of feathery flakes as the gardener of Trinity parish and his three sturdy assistants placed the last dwarf fern and begonia for the magnificent marriage ceremonial that was announced to take place at 11 o'clock. The work of floral decoration, under the superintendence of Rev. Joseph Bloom Wetherill, the groom, was begun immediately upon the conclusion of the afternoon service on Wednesday, but it was no bit of holiday pastime to bank the whole vast altar space of Trinity waist deep with flowers, as those persons who saw it last Easter are sufficiently well aware. The plan of the decoration—one that was seen to be extremely artistic from the organ loft, but was scarcely visible from the main floor—was that of creating a floral vista from the massive stone railing that shuts off the congregation from the chancel to and beyond the low but finely-carved railing that encircles the inner sanctuary. Upon the altar itself, relieved by the carved background and saints of the reredos, stood four colossal bouquets composed of carnations, violets, and daphnes. Along the cornice of the reredos, as if springing from dainty nooks in the carving, rested masses of the Ageratium purpura and purple primroses, relieved as occasion required with white daphnes. Beneath this floral cornice were trails of ivy and swinging festoons of green smilax, with its pale, delicate leaves. From this point the design slowly opened out so as to form a widening causeway for the passage of the bridal procession. And here the resources of the Trinity conservatory had been exhausted for varieties of the graceful palm. For starting points, at the corners of the table, rose two gigantic broad-leaved palms of an Eastern variety, two smaller ones standing next them. The less lofty Dracena Braziliensea, Dracena pustifolia, and Strelitza, the fish-tail, fan, and rare fern palm composed the rest of the pyramid, amid the deep green verdure of which nestled two specimens of the Euphorbia Poinsetta, with palm-shaped and widely-separated scarlet petals and orange-colored stamens. The latter were in the full bloom of that strange, almost goblin blossom that once seen is always remembered. The drooping leaves of the Panadame—one of the rarest and most expensive plants, not to be duplicated for less than $200—ferns in a dozen exotic varieties, pots of Magnolia elongata, and a pair of waxy-leaved India-rubber trees, furnished the lining and filling in of these gigantic floral pillars, and sloped gradually down to the causeway of smaller plants that opened outward in two curving lines toward the congregation. On one side, this avenue was composed of a dense thicket of scarlet begonias; on the other, of white. At the slightly wider opening of the chancel railing stood two of the largest india-rubber trees ever seen in this climate, their thick, waxy leaves and unyielding trunks serving as the basis for clumps of daphnias, camellias, primroses, and jessamines—all of that pale purplish white that the eye of the botanical student knows so well. From the foot of each of these extended long ribbons, composed of carnations, ageratiums, and raphellas, with occasional clumps of the Yuca variegata and Americana. The gilded candelabra formed the basis of two more pyramids of flowers, still taller and more parti-colored than their predecessors just mentioned. At the very top, their leaves enswathing the golden arms of the candelabra, climbed two gracefully drooping ferns with variegated foliage. Against these rose bushes of begonias massed with white arbutilum, beneath which were deep thickets of Dracena, with india-rubber trees. From the base of the mass peeped forth the long, lance-like leaves of the Iris sticata, and the broad base of the whole was planted deep with calla lilies, one of the specimens of every conceivable variety, and other exotics of strange name. Besides this, the massive stone railing was heavily festooned with smilax. Mr. Owens observed, when the last garland had been placed, and having slept since Tuesday night, that the resources of the Trinity conservatory had never before been so severely taxed. Finally, across the central aisle, a few feet from the altar, was looped a white silken cord, which was intended to shut off the spectators from the front pews reserved for the favored few, and two stalwart policemen were placed at each entrance to examine cards of invitation and maintain good order.

The doors of the church were opened at 10:45 o'clock, and almost in the twinkling of an eye the vast interior was crowded with people—mostly general spectators, representatives of the best circles of society, and music-lovers attracted by the magnificent choral service that had been arranged. At 11 o'clock Mr. Henry Carter entered to the organ loft, to which a few favored spectators, among them Mrs. Dix, the wife of the Rector, had been admitted. The services were opened with a movement of Raff's "Lecopore" symphony, and continued with a special composition by Mr. Carter—the "Mareh Placida." The famous march from Wagner's "Tannhauser," the "Scherzando" from Beethoven's eighth symphony, Jansen's "Bridal Song," "Lachner's Marche Festive," and a selection from Meyerbeer's "Prophete," occupied the half an hour that intervened between the opening of the services and the entrance from the left of the choir of Rev. Dr. Dix, the venerable Bishop Littlejohn, Rev. Dr. Rylance, and Rev. Mr. Hitchings. Then, at a signal from the sexton, the organ broke into the solemn notation of the processional hymn, No. 212 of "Hymns Ancient and Modern." The massive door at the left swung open, and the white-robed choristers, preceded by the sexton, entered, two by two, singing:

> "The voice that breathed o'er Eden
> That earliest wedding day,
> The spiritual marriage blessing,
> It hath not passed away."

Dr. Dix, accompanied by Bishop Littlejohn and the assistant clergy of the parish, followed, the Bishop, Deacon, and assistant priest taking their places in the chancel, the former in the middle of the altar, the second on the epistle, and the last on the Gospel side. Dr. Dix stood aside while the choristers were taking their seats, and then advanced to the entrance of the chancel, and took a position at the top of his three steps to await the advance of the bridal party. The processional finished, the organ strain merged suddenly into the music of Mendelssohn's "Sommernachtstraum" march, and all eyes were turned toward the main entrance. Ladies leveled their glasses, gentlemen turned in their pews, the vast mass of people were on their feet, trying to obtain a glimpse of the bride. Positively ladies took opera glasses into the toilet. It is the good or evil fortune of bridegrooms that they are of no consequence at their own weddings.

Those who obtained a satisfactory glimpse, saw a tall and graceful lady, with an intellectual head and graceful carriage. A bridal veil that simply threw an illusion over the face, but did not conceal it, fell nearly to the floor, as Miss Smith walked composedly down the aisle, leaning upon the arm of her father. The costume consisted of a white satin princess robe, with sleeves in the Marie Antoinette style, elaborately trimmed with point gaze lace; square neck. Her head was wreathed with a tiara of white orchards and orange blossoms. The veil was three yards of gleaming satin; the veil was real point lace, fastened to the hair with a gold pin set in real pearls. Her ear-rings were of pearls; her necklace, a gift of the groom, consisted of seven strings of pearls around the throat, having a diamond pendant, to which was fixed a diamond cross. The fan was of point lace, satin, and pearls set in brilliants on silver and gold. It was fastened to a pearl chatelaine. The bainpeuse of the train was deep valenciennes lace. The bodice was double pointed, the postilion being of point lace. The small veil worn over the face during the ceremony was of snow white, the point lace handkerchief, and a diamond necklace, the gift of Mrs. Stewart, of very curious and exquisite design, overlaid with laurel leaves in such a manner as to form a laurel wreath, the berries of which were of pearls and diamonds, completed the toilet. At the throat the necklace supported a double pendant, composed of two clusters of large diamonds, inclosing an emerald of the rarest lustre and size. The lower part of the pendants was fixed a diamond dove, supporting in its beak a third pendant composed of a diamond cluster inclosing a very large emerald. Two bridesmaids in white satin followed on the arms of their escorts. At the altar the groom and bride knelt for an instant upon the velvet cushion at the feet of Dr. Dix, then rose and stood before him, Judge J. Lawrence Smith, the bride's father, the bridesmaids, Miss Ella B. and Miss Bessie Smith, his remaining daughters, and their escorts falling back and forming a circle around the pair.

Everybody had had a glimpse of the bride by this time; opera-glasses slipped back into their morocco cases, and the ceremony was commenced by Dr. Dix with the usual prefatory ritual and exhortation of the Protestant Episcopal service. At the words "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" Judge Smith stepped forward, took the hand of his daughter, and placed it in that of the groom, who turned to receive it. At this juncture the low murmur of the organ, in the overture to "Euryantha," swelled once more into a diapason that made the air tremulous. The choir took up the note, and the interior of the building rang with the anthem. "God be Merciful!"—while the bridal pair, hand in hand, followed by the two bridesmaids, arm in arm, advanced through the long avenue of begonias to the communion railing. The venerable Bishop Littlejohn rose to receive them and recited the remainder of the service, concluding with the benediction, uttered with an impressive depth and fervor of tone that for the moment stopped every whisper. The responses, which were given at the chancel railing, were uttered in low, subdued and indistinct tones by the groom, but very clearly and distinctly by the bride, whose extraordinary self-possession, by the way, was the subject of many a complimentary murmur. While Bishop Littlejohn was performing the last part of the marriage service, the organ had continued reciting, in low tones, an "andante" of Wely; but scarcely had the last word of the benediction melted into silence than it pealed forth the notes of a sounding anthem, while the groom and bride walked slowly down the central aisle, the bridesmaids and their escorts following. A triumphant military air was the last piece on the programme, save that, as the party were driven home, the bells in Trinity steeple sounded all the permutations in their repertory. The ceremony was over. Two by two the choristers filed into the vestry again, led by the gray old sexton, singing the Recessional Hymn, No. 213:

> "How welcome was the call,
> And sweet the festal lay,
> When Jesus deigned in Cana's hall
> To bless the marriage day."

Dr. Dix and Bishop Littlejohn followed, the deacon and priest completing the procession. The notes grew more and more remote; the iron door closed with a clang. This broke the spell, but many of the spectators, particularly the ladies, still lingered, as if they expected that the imposing spectacle was to be repeated. One begged a sprig of begonia from good-tempered Gardener Owen; another a fern leaf; a third a leaf of palm. But there was one palm, a gigantic fleshy-boled sago, with not a leaf of which the old man would part. "The next time that is cut," he said, "it will be to strew the coffin of some dead parishioner. It has been a fashionable wedding to-day; it may be present at a fashionable funeral to-morrow."

As this marriage has been one of the events anticipated in society for some weeks, a great deal of gossip has obtained currency. The groom, Joseph Bloomfield Wetherill, is an Episcopal clergyman by profession, and has been stated to be an assistant of Dr. Dix. Such is not the case, however. He was at one time connected with Trinity Parish, and officiated at old St. Paul's, but never at Trinity. He has no parish at the present time, and will not probably find it necessary to assume such duties hereafter. Mr. Wetherill is about 33 years of age, of dark complexion, with full black beard, black eyes, and black hair, and is a High Church clergyman. He is descended from an old and wealthy Philadelphia family, and has a very ample fortune of his own. Gen. Bloomfield, of Revolutionary fame, was one of his ancestors. Mr. Wetherill has lived for some years in Newark, N. J., where he owns a fine home. He was formerly secretary of Bishop Doane, of New-Jersey.

The bride, nés Kate Annie Smith, is the daughter of Judge J. Lawrence Smith, formerly of Smithville, Long Island, but now occupying a City residence at No. 537 Fifth-avenue. Miss Smith is the grand-niece of Mrs. A. T. Stewart, and has resided with her for so long that gossip has credited her with being the heiress to Mrs. Stewart's fortune. This may be, but it is unauthenticated, and rests wholly on a popular rumor, denied in authoritative quarters. Among those who were present as invited guests were Mrs. A. T. Stewart, Judge Hilton and wife, Prescott H. Butler and Mrs. Butler, brother-in-law and sister of the bride; ex-Secretary Bristow, Mrs. Gouverneur Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. Hewson, of Philadelphia; Mrs. George Riche, of Philadelphia; Miss Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, Hon. Clarkson N. Potter, Mr. W. H. Wickham, Mr. Floyd Jones, Mrs. Edwin Stevens and her two daughters, of Hoboken; the Misses Shippen, Mrs. Robert L. Stuart, Mrs. Orme, and Mrs. Strong. The ushers were Edward B. Hilton, son of Judge Hilton; James Smith, William Haight, Delancey Nicholls, William Hunston, James W. Vitali, Hilborne L. Roosevelt, and Frederick K. Lawrence. They were all in full dress, distinguished by badges at the button-hole. The groom was in a simple, half-dress clerical suit.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to the house of the bride's father, at No. 537 Fifth-avenue, where an informal reception was held until the middle of the afternoon. A wedding breakfast awaited the party, prepared and served by the caterers. The centre pieces of the table were two large nougats, one representing a railroad bridge, with full train of cars, about 6 feet long. Among the relatives of the bride present were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hewey Smith, brother and sister-in-law of Judge Smith; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Hall Butler, sister and brother-in-law of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne, of Chicago, sister and brother-in-law of the bride; James C. Smith, brother of the bride; the Misses Clinch, half-sisters of Mrs. Stewart; Mrs. Anne Clinch, daughter of Charles P. Clinch; Edward H. Smith, son of R. B. Smith; the Misses Harriet and Josephine Hilton, Judge Henry Hilton, his sons Edward B. Hilton, James B. Hilton, and Henry G. Hilton, and his daughter, Mrs. John M. Hughes and her husband, of Cleveland, Ohio; Samuel Mitchell, Mrs. and Dr. Hewson, of Philadelphia, sister and brother-in-law of the groom, and George Bryce Wetherill, of Philadelphia. There were also present Judge Gilbert and family, of Brooklyn; Judge and Mrs. Pratt, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. John Bigelow, Bishop Littlejohn, wife and daughter; Mrs. Wesson, Rev. Dr. Howland and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Jones, Judge Henry E. Davies, Mr. Stevens, of Castle Point, Hoboken, and Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Carpender and her sister, Miss Floyd-Jones; Mrs. Edward Livermore, Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Lawrence, and about 300 others. After the reception the bride and groom started on a trip of a month's wedding tour in this country. In two weeks they will sail on the Celtic for England. Mr. and Mrs. Wetherill will pass the Winter in Southern Europe. During the reception at the bride's home one entire room was devoted to the exhibition of the many and costly presents, among which were the following:

A diamond, pearl, and emerald necklace and pendants, a camel's hair shawl, and a certified bank check from Mrs. A. T. Stewart; a diamond necklace and pendant worn by the bride during the ceremony, a pearl throat-pin and pendant, and ear-rings to match, from the groom; a pearl and gold throat-cross and pendant, ear-rings to match, from John M. Wetherill; a full set of jewelry from Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Wetherill, of Walnut-street, Philadelphia; a rare majolica vase from Mr. and Mrs. Wetherill, of Chestnut-street, Philadelphia; a gold bracelet, from Mr. and Mrs. John M. Hughes; a solid silver tea-set of seven pieces—sugar-bowl, slop-bowl, coffee-urn, tea-urn, pitcher, water-pot, sewing over lamp, all gold-lined, and waiter from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hilton; a solid gold scarf pin, with six pendent jewels, from James B. Hilton; a silver pitcher and stand from Henry G. Hilton; a carved case containing full set solid silver cutlery, including 60 pieces—one dozen knives, one dozen forks, one dozen tablespoons, one dozen dessert-spoons, and one dozen teaspoons, the spoons all gold-lined—from Edward B. Hilton; a marble bust of Psyche, on variegated alabaster, surmounted by a clock, and bronze vases, from Mr. and Mrs. Horace Russell; a pair of Royal Worcester mantel vases, from the Misses Clinch; a jewel-box, solid silver, gold-lined, Japanese chasing on outside, lid swung on massive gold hinges, from Mr. and Mrs. James Moir; a solid gold chain bracelet from Dr. and Mrs. Haight; a large solid silver ladle from Mrs. T. T. Nicoll; a silver paper-knife from Mrs. Charles A. Miller; a silver tray from Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno; a gold-lined silver ladle from E. W. Lawrence; a pair of card-plates, Japanese design, from Mr. and Mrs. H. Penniman; a Japanese plaque china basket, from Helen and Rossiter Johnson; a piece of Satsuma crackle, from Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Riché; a cut-glass perfume barrel, swung on a gold derrick, and with a gold spigot, from Mr. and Mrs. H. Decker; a tea-kettle, from Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Cressou; a French toilet mirror, with gold candlesticks, from Mr. and Mrs. William Hoes; a majolica dish from Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Whipple; a pair of rare China mantel-pieces from Mr. and Mrs. Carpender; a Satsuma vase from Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens; a tortoise-shell fan, from Mrs. Joseph F. Barnard; carving cutlery fan from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bell; Satsuma dish from Mr. G. F. Lawrence; gold writing set from Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Uhlerbrook; two Cypriote glass urns from Mrs. F. B. Lord; silver candlesticks, with painted candles, in Russia case, from Mr. and Mrs. John D. Jones; silver urn and tray from Mr. and Mrs. De Witt; silver ladle, gold lined, from Mr. and Mrs. Folsom; silver scent-bottle and clasp from Mr. J. W. Walsh, Jr., pearl and point lace fan, in case, from Mr. P. H. Butler; silver ladle from Mrs. Thomas Bailey; gold chain bracelets from Mr. and Mrs. S. Wetherill; toilet-set from Dr. and Mrs. Howson; gold shawl-pin from Mrs. C. E. Wilson; silver ice-cream set from the Misses Harriet and Josephine Hilton; cloisonné enamel tea-set from E. B. Smith, and a china tea-set from Mrs. R. W. Grumbes.

The following is a description of the bride's trousseau: One black silk dinner-dress, trimmed with satin and jet, with corsage cut in low, heart-shaped neck, and two-and-a-half-yard trail; neck filled in with real Valenciennes lace of the most elaborate pattern and narrow satin ribbon; entire dress trimmed with pure Valenciennes lace, and has deep basque, and is belted at sides with narrow satin ribbon. One rich black silk walking-dress, trimmed with black satin ribbon en cascade. One moonlight-blue satin and brocade dinner-dress, with elbow sleeves and square neck; neck and front are trimmed with white point de Venise lace around the neck. From throat to waist on each side of the bosom is a jabot of point de Venise lace, the bosom being otherwise quite plain. The same lace, with light blue satin ribbon to match, is put in torsade from the waist to the feet in front. The sides of this dress are quite plain. The train and the back is a princesse of brocade, trimmed with plaitings of blue satin half way up. The train is two and a half yards long, and the dress buttons are all silver. One dark trimmed dress, with gold silk dress, with duchesse train; two and a half yards long, high neck and three-quarters sleeves. This dress is trooped on one side with bows of silk, inlaid with brocades, and has buttons on waist of pearl inlaid on turquoise of blue shade to match general tone of dress. The sleeves and neck are trimmed in duchesse lace. The rest is pointed, back and front, and is made in Louis XIV. style. One velvet and silk robe dinner dress, with round-square neck, three-quarter sleeves, and square train two and a half yards long. The vest is pointed, back and front. The front of the skirt opens over a plaited front of satin, the sides of the front being faced with velvet and satin, and trimmed in real laces held with solid gold buckles. The waist is buttoned in front with solid gold buttons. One brown real India cashmere silk and velvet walking dress, with outside garment and vest of coffee-color damask, with pearl and silver buttons inlaid in shades to match. One blue and black cashmere and silk walking dress, with plaited waist and kilted skirt and sash, buttons of dark-blue pearl. One royal blue velvet reception dress, trimmed in cream satin and duchesse lace, with surplice neck and elbow-sleeves, and square train two and a half yards long. This has a revers of silk across the front, trimmed in straps and real pearl buttons. Twelve other dresses of cashmere, silk, velvet, and satin. With each dress there are one dozen point lace handkerchiefs, one dozen hose in pure silk to match the dress, and one dozen of each of the articles that go to make up a suit of ladies' lingerie. The trousseau also includes a bonnet and a hat for each dress to match it, all in the latest style, and of material and quality to suit. It also includes one dozen kid gloves for each dress, of a shade to match; also, one dozen morning robes for each dress, of the softest and richest goods, trimmed in pure laces.

THE LATE HENRY WELLS.

FUNERAL SERVICES AT HIS HOME IN AURORA ON THE LAST DAY OF 1878.

The body of Henry Wells, who died in Glasgow, Scotland, on the 10th of December last, reached his home in Aurora, N. Y., Friday, the 27th ult., and the public funeral services in his honor were held on Tuesday, the 31st. Among the friends of Mr. Wells present were Gen. H. W. Perkins and William Brookfield, of this City; Hon. C. J. Folger, of the New-York Court of Appeals; Hon. C. B. Sedgwick and Rev. Dr. Chester, of Syracuse; Hon. T. M. Pomeroy, Gen. William H. Seward, Gen. J. N. Knapp, of Auburn; Dr. Henry Foster, of Clifton Springs, N. Y., and many other gentlemen of distinction. The pall-bearers were Hon. William G. Fargo, Hon. E. B. Judson, Gen. William R. Seward, A. Higgins, Esq., representing the American Express Company, and Messrs. William H. Bogart, Henry Morgan, T. Delafield, and Rev. Dr. E. S. Frisbee, all of Aurora. The College for Young Ladies at Aurora, which Mr. Wells founded, and which bears his name, was represented in part only by teachers and students on account of the holiday vacation. A memorial service, however, with an address by President Frisbee, was held at the college previous to the separation for home. On Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, a brief service, at which only the nearer friends beside the family were present, was held at the house, conducted by Rev. William Aikman, D. D., Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of which Mr. Wells was a member. An hour later the church was thronged by friends and neighbors, to pay their last respects to him whom they delighted to honor. After the procession had entered the church, four young ladies, students of the college, advanced to the casket in front of the pulpit, and placed upon it a wreath and an anchor of exquisite flowers, and a sheaf of wheat entwined with a sickle of flowers. Among the other floral decorations was a pillow of immortelles, which displayed the first line of Mr. Wells' favorite hymn, 'Nearer, my God, to Thee.' At the close of the organ voluntary the choir sang an adaptation of Himmel's Battle Prayer, "Father, I bend to Thee." Rev. William H. Casey, Rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Aurora, read selections from the 15th chapter of First Corinthians, after which, led by the choir, all united in the hymn "Nearer, my God, to Thee." Rev. Charles Hawley, D. D., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Auburn, in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Wells long ago expressed to his family and others, delivered the commemorative address, an unexaggerated, impartial estimate of a man whose life was a power for good. After the address the services at the church were concluded with prayer by Rev. Dr. Aikman.

HEAVY WEATHER AT SEA.

ACCIDENT TO AN OCEAN STEAMER—THE CREW OF A SCHOONER RESCUED—A BARK 100 DAYS OUT.

The steam-ship Alsatia, of the Anchor Line, which arrived from London yesterday, sailed from that port on the 18th of December, and met with heavy weather. Head gales, with frequent squalls of terrific force, made the seas extremely irregular, and the vessel was frequently compelled to drive through them, and the result was that she was almost submerged at times. On Christmas Day the storm was terrible, and tremendous seas were shipped. The vessel labored so violently that on the following day, when 600 miles from this port, it was discovered that the intermediate shaft was cracked. It was temporarily repaired by means of clamps, and the vessel was able to proceed at half speed. Fortunately, the weather was fine afterward, and the Alsatia arrived yesterday, only three days overdue, and was towed up to her pier. She has on board a new intermediate shaft, which will be put in here.

The bark Crown Jewel, which arrived from Hamburg yesterday, passed the Banks of Newfoundland 27 days ago, and since that time up to her arrival in port she experienced heavy gales. Her foremast was sprung and the rudder-head split. The ship Josephine, from Cardiff, which is found to the Clerk to-day, has been 4600 miles, and has had terrific weather. The Themis is bound from London for this port, and has been already 100 days out.

The schooner Mary Ann Guer, while leaving Fire Island inlet for this port on Wednesday, ran ashore. There was a very heavy surf on, and being in great danger, Capt. Ward hoisted a signal of distress, which was seen by the crew of the Fire Island station, No. 25. Mr. Leander A. Jeffrey ran to their assistance, and with his help the crew got her off. Capt. Ward said, on his arrival yesterday, that he would certainly have been lost, with his whole crew, but for Mr. Jeffrey's timely assistance.

THE LIABILITY OF SURETIES.

The trial of the suit brought by the City of Hoboken against Louis Budenbender, William C. Harp, Charles Clinton, Philip Heramer, William Stahr, August Semrad, Henry C. Reiche, and Charles Cohen to recover $60,000, was begun in the Hudson County Circuit Court, before Judge Knapp, yesterday afternoon. John C. Besson, formerly City Attorney of Hoboken, appeared for the plaintiff. The defendants were represented by Gilbert Collins. John Kamena was for many years City Treasurer of Hoboken. He filed bonds annually for the faithful discharge of his official duties. The defendants became his sureties in June, 1877, and continued in that capacity till he was compelled to resign in December of that year. When he went out of office a deficiency of $60,000 was discovered in his accounts. He was indicted for embezzlement a year ago, but his trial, postponed from term to term, has never yet been taken place. Suit was finally commenced against the latest bondsmen to recover the amount of the deficiency, and it is the trial of this suit which was begun yesterday.

The defendants allege that Kamena's defalcations occurred before they went upon his bond, and that during the time covered by their undertakings he faithfully disbursed the city's moneys. They claim, therefore, that the responsibility should rest, if it is to rest anywhere, upon the earlier sureties.

The City, through its counsel, claims, on the other hand, that, when at the opening of the fiscal year, for which the defendants became Kamena's sureties, Mr. Kamena entered upon his duties, he charged himself upon his books with his deficiency; that whatever moneys he collected during that time, were appropriated to the payment of that deficiency, and that the latest set of bondsmen are, therefore, liable. The case presents an interesting legal question.

The witnesses sworn yesterday afternoon testified only to the making of the bond by the defendants and its acceptance by the Common Council, on the 1st half of the City. The trial will be resumed to-day, and will probably consume the remainder of the week.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS WITH BRAZIL.

The increased trade and facilities of communication between this country and Brazil have called the attention of merchants and capitalists to the need of direct commercial relations between the two countries. In the present condition of affairs, bills of exchange on Brazil must be procured by way of London, with the payment of a double commission to the London banker. To save this commission, as well as time and annoyance, a movement is on foot to establish a banking-house in this City, with a branch at Rio Janeiro. The capital is to consist of 2,000 shares, $500 each, or $1,000,000, described in this City, $500,000 in Brazil. A gentleman of high reputation as a financier of ability and integrity is at the head of the project here. Little doubt is entertained as to its success, since more than $300,000 have already been subscribed in this City, and in Brazil the movement is greeted with equal interest and readiness to provide the capital. The establishment of such a bank would remove one of the chief disadvantages with which American merchants have to contend in their efforts to build up such a trade with Brazil as justly belongs to a country which purchases yearly more than one-half of Brazil's entire production.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

John Beck, of No. 308 East Forty-sixth-street, kept New Year's Day in a sober manner, and was walking on the street near his house at 3 o'clock in the afternoon when a young man and a boy ran up against him. The former seized Beck's arms and held them securely, while the boy took his silver watch and chain from his pocket and ran away with the booty. Beck tackled his assailant, and struggled with him until an officer arrived. At the Forty-seventh-street Police Court yesterday the robber gave his name as John H. McGill, of No. 300 East Forty-sixth-street, and his age as 19. He had no defense to make, and was held by Justice Kassaire in $1,000 to answer at the General Sessions.

SEEKING AID FOR THE POOR.

A committee representing the several charitable institutions of this City, recently organized at the call of the Mayor, has issued circulars announcing that it will send wagons through the City, accompanied by agents, who will collect articles of clothing and provisions for the poor from those desirous of contributing them on Tuesday, Jan. 14. Each person soliciting donations will be provided with a certificate bearing the signatures of Rev. C. T. Woodruff, Willard Parsons, and Charles A. Bunting.

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

STATE COURT NATURALIZATIONS.

JUDGE BLATCHFORD DECIDES IN FAVOR OF THE LEGALITY OF THE 1868 PAPERS FROM THE SUPERIOR COURT.

Among the persons arrested by John L. Davenport in October for having alleged fraudulent naturalization papers was Peter Coleman, whose certificate of citizenship was one of the many issued by Judge McCunn, in the Superior Court. Coleman used his certificate in getting registered as a voter in the Eleventh Election District of the Second Assembly District. His arrest was on the complaint of Supervisor Mosher. Coleman was held by Mr. Davenport to await the action of the Grand Jury, the charge being that the prisoner had used his certificate of naturalization knowing it to have been unlawfully issued or made. Though Coleman was discharged from custody on the ground of want of guilty knowledge on his part, a test case was made up by agreement between the prosecutors and Coleman's counsel in order to have the legality of the 1868 papers legally determined by the Federal courts. The argument was had before Judge Blatchford, who rendered his decision yesterday. Perhaps the only point seriously discussed was the one whether a formal entry on the regular minutes of the court is necessary to make the naturalization legal, the prosecution maintaining the affirmative, and the defense contending for the negative. It is well known that from 1858 to 1874 the only record of naturalizations kept in the Superior Court—outside of the judgment-rolls in such cases—consisted of entries in a book entitled "Naturalization Index," containing an alphabetical list of the names of the persons naturalized, or supposed to have been naturalized. Judge Blatchford is of opinion that an applicant for citizenship is not responsible for noncompliance with any conditions other than such as he has the power to comply with. The applicant can declare his intention, take the prescribed oath, and make the prescribed renunciation of allegiance to the foreign Government of which he was a subject. He can produce a witness as to his residence and character, and can appear in person in the proper court, and be sworn there in open court, with his witness, as to the matters prescribed in the statute. When this is done, says Judge Blatchford, the applicant can do nothing more except to receive such certificate from the court as that which Coleman received from the court. The evidence produced on the subject from the files and records of that court show that the certificate sued on claim the right to hold that a person appeared in the court and applied to it to become a citizen, and produced to it such evidence, and made such declaration and renunciation, and took such oaths as the statute required. Besides the three oaths of Coleman, embracing also the necessary declaration and renunciation by him, and the oath of the witness as to his residence and character, are all sworn to in open court, and are on one and the same piece of paper, at the head of which is a title showing that all the proceedings are in the matter of the application of Coleman to the Superior Court to become a citizen of the United States. The original page of paper is on file in that court, and bears the mark of having been filed on the same day on which the certificate was issued. This filing was a recording within the meaning of the statute. The evidence in this case shows very clearly that the Superior Court regarded what is found in the "Naturalization Index" in regard to Coleman, in connection with the paper, oaths, &c., and the initials of the Judge on such paper, as sufficient to make an order for the admission of Coleman to be a citizen. The evidence shows that there was no other record or entry of any order for the admission of Coleman; but it equally shows, not only that it was understood that there was an order for his admission, but it shows what it was that was understood by the court to be an order for his admission. Judge Blatchford adds that there is no foundation in fact for the suggestion that the United States District Attorney that the "Naturalization Index" was not regarded by the Superior Court itself as a sufficient record; "that, on the contrary, the certificate of the Clerk of the Court, presenting it as the basis of naturalization, showed that the court regarded the book as one of its records, and knew of its existence, and that it was not a private, unofficial book, and that it was kept by the authority and direction of the court, and of its Clerk, and that it was not the property of some deputy. So, too, it was a proper legal conclusion on the same evidence that the entry in the book was made at a proper time and by proper authority. So, also, it is to be presumed, from the initials of the Judge in connection with the other evidence, that he did hold the court, and that he wrote his initials as an authority to the Clerk to do what had already been done, namely, to enter the name of Coleman in the 'Naturalization Index' as admitted to citizenship, with the date and the other matters found in the book kept, and as authority to file the oath and affidavits, and as an assertion that the court held by him, and he, while holding the court, had received the application of Coleman, and acted judicially in the matter covered by the oaths or affidavits, and by the evidence of the witnesses as to residence and character of Coleman, and had admitted him thereupon to be a citizen of the United States. It is to be presumed, in the absence of evidence, that Coleman and his witnesses gave the necessary facts to the satisfaction of the court. None of the objections taken in respect to the affidavits are regarded as tenable. It therefore appears that Coleman was duly admitted a citizen of the United States, and that the legality of his admission was not invalidated by any act or omission which occurred either prior or subsequent to his admission. As he was legally admitted, it was proper for the court to give him the right to hold that certificate was not unlawfully issued or made. On this ground he is entitled to be discharged from arrest." Judge Blatchford also reiterates the opinion expressed by him when he discharged Coleman from actual custody, that the latter, when he used his certificate of citizenship for the purpose of registering, did so not believing it to have been unlawfully issued or made, and hence was not subject to arrest and punishment.

The United States election officials are of opinion that this decision does not affect the legality of all the disputed certificates of naturalization issued from the State courts in 1868, but only about 12,000 of them. The remainder of the 50,000 or 60,000 they still consider to be in force, and as not coming within the purview of the rule laid down by Judge Blatchford.

AN OLD COPARTNERSHIP DISSOLVED.

The oldest billiard copartnership that existed in the City, that of Peter Marron and Timothy Flynn, better known as "Tim," was dissolved on New Year's Day, after an existence of 17 years. When the firm was established in its present site, so long and favorably known, "Tim" and "Pete" bought out Roberts, since deceased, who had employed "Tim" as a game-keeper. The future pool expert was very popular with the public, and drew a large and fashionable patronage to the cosy rooms of himself and partner, "Pete." Nearly every billiard expert that has come to America or made his reputation here has been a visitor at the rooms, and customers in by-gone years were often entertained by exhibitions of skill by Phelan, Dudley Kavanaugh, "Mike" Dee, and other old celebrities, who swung the cues during the reign of the American four-ball game. When the latter gave place to the more scientific French game of three-ball caroms, and "Tim" used frequently to cross cues with Vignaux, Ubasy, and Albert Garnier, and Sexton, Dion, Slosson, Gallagher, Daly, Rudolphe, "Joe" Dion, and his brother Cyrille were frequently seen in the rooms. "Tim" employed Jacob Schaefer about three years ago, and backed him during the engagement in the Delaney championship tournament, when but few of the public knew him as a billiard expert. Mr. Flynn's popularity rests not a little upon a reputation, only too true, as billiard circles, of never having thrown a match game, or played in the "pool-box" interest. Peter Marron bought out Flynn's interest, and will in future conduct the business of the late firm as usual. The fun and jovial "Conn" Flynn, who so long presided over the pool-room, where he was rather inconsistently called the "skeleton," leaves with "Tim" Flynn.

REHYPOTHECATION OF STOCK.

William R. Gould and another brought suit in the Supreme Court against the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and others, and the plaintiffs demurred to the answer. The plaintiffs borrowed from Bonner & Co. $15,000, pledging with them stocks worth about $19,000. Bonner & Co. took these stocks and some stocks pledged with them by other persons and pledged them to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company for a loan of $35,000. Subsequently Bonner & Co. borrowed, over and over, upon their collaterals, various sums of money, and on one day in particular they borrowed a sum, pledging collaterals which were declared to be insufficient. Their agent, however, made a remark to the effect that the collaterals on the other loans, with these, were sufficient, and thereupon the loan was made. The plaintiffs now claim the return from the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of their proportion of the excess of the value of the collaterals pledged at the one particular time with them. The defendants claim the right to hold that surplus to meet deficiencies on subsequent loans. Judge Barrett decides, however, that the pledge was a single transaction, and that the subsequent reference to the pledge did not in any way impair the lien of the defendants on it, and that they gave no additional credit upon it. He therefore gives judgment for the plaintiff.

A MAN WHO WANTED TO DIE.

Yesterday morning the passengers on the ferry-boat Commodore Barney, of the Grand-street line, while on her 9 o'clock trip from Brooklyn, noticed a young man on the bow of the boat acting in a very strange manner. He walked up and down the deck talking wildly to himself. Suddenly, when the boat was within 10 feet of the slip, he sprang overboard. The pilot rang the bell to reverse the engine. When the would-be suicide rose to the surface one of the deck-hands threw him a rope, but he refused to take hold of it, and made no effort to keep afloat. He drifted into the slip, and Patrolman Lefay Schulum obtained a boat-hook and brought the drowning man ashore. He was taken to the Thirteenth Precinct Station-house, where he gave his name as Frank St. Clair, a clerk, residing at No. 45 Johnson-street, Brooklyn. He was divested of his wet clothing and wrapped in blankets, and was permitted to sit near the stove in the sitting-room, as he was chilled by being so long in the water. During the temporary absence of the doorman St. Clair again attempted to commit suicide by hanging himself to a clothes-peg in the room with a woolen scarf. He was discovered and cut down before he had received any injury, and he was subsequently taken to Bellevue Hospital. St. Clair is believed to be insane.

THE HARKINS-FISKE SUIT.

WHAT THE DEFENDANT HAS TO SAY ABOUT THE FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE'S MANAGEMENT—GUNNING S. BEDFORD MADE RECEIVER.

The application by Daniel H. Harkins against Stephen Fiske, for an injunction and for the appointment of a Receiver of the affairs of the present management of the Fifth-avenue

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8523. NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

AFFAIRS IN THE TROUBLED EAST.

THE DISTRICT OF GHOST IN AFGHANISTAN OCCUPIED BY THE BRITISH—THE COUNTRY AROUND KANDAHAR FLOODED—OPPOSITION TO THE BERLIN TREATY IN PODGORITZA.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Standard's Hazarapir dispatch says: "Gen. Roberts, with a large force, has entered the district of Khost, which he intends to occupy, to overawe the mountaineers. No opposition is expected."

The Telegraph's correspondent with the Quettah column reports that the Afghans have flooded the country around Kandahar, and that all non-combatants are leaving that city.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Paris says M. Waddington has informed the Council of Ministers that the Tunis affair is in a fair way of settlement.

The Times' Vienna dispatch states that Prince Dondoukoff Korsakoff has made a special request to the Czar asking his intervention in behalf of the Bulgarians in Macedonia, who declare that 120 of their villages have been burned and 6,000 persons massacred during the suppression of the insurrection. The Bulgarian fugitives have petitioned the foreign Ambassadors for deliverance from Turkish rule.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 3.—The Porte has advised the Bey of Tunis to come to an amicable arrangement with France.

VIENNA, Jan. 3.—The Political Correspondence says intelligence has been received from Scutari that the inhabitants of Podgoritza have telegraphed to the Sultan their determination not to submit in any case to the enforcement of the Berlin treaty. Simultaneously with this notice the authorities of Podgoritza demolished the dwellings of those inhabitants of Spuz who had gone to tender submission to Montenegro.

THE MAN-OF-WAR DISASTER.

TEN MEN KILLED AND THIRTY-THREE WOUNDED ON THE THUNDERER — THE TURRET OF THE SHIP DISABLED.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The following telegram has been received from Admiral Hornby, commanding the British fleet in the Sea of Marmora: "One of the 38-ton guns of the turret-ship Thunderer burst this morning, (Jan. 2,) killing Lieuts. Coker and Daniell, two petty officers, four seamen, and a marine. The gun burst just in front of the trunnion, the muzzle blowing overboard. The gun had been fired with a blistering charge, but when it burst it was loaded with a full charge and an empty shell. A boatswain and 32 men were wounded. 12 of them very badly. The turret was disabled, but the ship is otherwise uninjured."

Three petty officers were killed by the explosion on board the Thunderer, instead of two, as previously reported.

GEN. GRANT IN IRELAND.

A HEARTY GREETING IN DUBLIN—THE GENERAL PRESENTED WITH THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY AND GIVEN A BANQUET.

DUBLIN, Jan. 3.—Gen. Grant arrived in Dublin this morning. He was accompanied by Gen. Noyes, United States Minister to France, and was met by the Lord Mayor, who presented him with the freedom of the city. On arriving at the City Hall, Gen. Grant was cheered by a large crowd who had assembled to see him. The Mayor, in presenting the freedom of the city, referred to the cordiality always existing between America and Ireland, and hoped that in America Gen. Grant would do everything he could to help a people who sympathize with every American movement. The freedom of the city is inclosed in an ancient carved bog-oak casket. Gen. Grant replied that no ceremony had given him such satisfaction as the present one. He was proud to belong to a country containing many Irishmen. He said he was not an eloquent speaker. He could only thank them for the honor done him. Three cheers were given for Gen. Grant, and three more were called for and given for America. Dr. Butt, as the first honorary freeman of the city, made a speech highly complimentary to Gen. Grant.

Two hundred guests were present at the banquet given in honor of Gen. Grant this evening. The Lord Mayor presided. Gen. Noyes returned thanks for a toast to President Hayes' health. Gen. Grant, replying to a toast to his health, commented upon the cordiality of the popular reception accorded him. He believed and hoped that the trade depression in America would soon be over. He said Americans strove to be honest and to pay their way as they became prosperous; so, also, would England. His speech was loudly cheered.

CORK, Jan. 3.—The Corporation of this city has received an intimation of an approaching visit from Gen. Grant. A strong feeling is manifested against giving him a public reception because of his supposed hostility to Catholicism.

CURRENT EVENTS ABROAD.

APPEARANCE OF A PLAGUE IN ASTRAKHAN—THE DANISH ELECTIONS—THE THREATENED ENGINEERS' STRIKE—A DIPLOMATIC RUPTURE BETWEEN GERMANY AND DENMARK FEARED.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 3.—A plague has appeared among the Cossacks of Astrakhan. The sufferers are isolated. Many doctors have been summoned to their relief. Of 195 persons attacked since the 1st inst., 143 have died.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The Post, discussing the attitude of the Danish Court toward the Hanoverian Separatists, says it considers itself justified in asking whether the relations between Germany and Denmark are about to undergo a change.

MADRID, Jan. 3.—Conformably to traditional usage, Moncasi was handed over to-day to the brotherhood charged with accompanying condemned persons to execution. A chapel has been erected in his cell, where he will remain 24 hours in prayer. His execution will be by the garrote.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 3.—In the elections for members of the Folkething the Moderate Left has lost 14 seats, of which the Right gained seven. The Radical Left lost six seats to the Right, and the latter lost two seats. The Radical leaders, Hansen and Berg, were defeated. The final results show 36 members of the Right, 33 Radicals, 28 Moderate Left, and 2 of unknown opinions. Two elections will be held later.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "A full pardon has been granted to 24 Communist exiles in New-Caledonia for their services against the insurgents in that colony."

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A common understanding was reached yesterday by all the societies connected with the engineering trade, to resist to the utmost any increase in the number of hours of labor. It is stated that the Clyde and the great ship-building districts of Greenock have virtually dropped their demand to correspond with that of the London masters.

The cotton masters at Hudderafield are considering the advisability of reducing wages in the same proportion as at Oldham.

The Standard's dispatch from Copenhagen says: "The attacks of the anti-official Prussian press threaten to cause a diplomatic rupture between Germany and Denmark.

The Journal D'Alsace states that the greatest destitution and distress prevail throughout Alsace and Loraine.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Paris says: "It is reported that the wound received by Signor Cairoli, the Italian ex-Prime Minister, at the hands of the would-be assassin of King Humbert, is festering, and that he is about to undergo a dangerous operation."

The Times' Paris correspondent telegraphs as follows: "The Police have prohibited an intended manifestation in the streets in favor of the imprisoned Communists. The Government seems to have decided to grant individual pardons to all the Communists except about 400 of the ringleaders and participators in massacres."

A strike has occurred among the freight train guards of the Midland Railway against prolongation of the hours of labor. Demonstrations have been made at London, Bradford, Bedford, Manchester, Leeds, Sheffield, Nottingham, and Leicester. Disturbances are feared at Leicester.

MAINE'S NEW GOVERNOR.

GARCELON CHOSEN — ELECTION OF OTHER OFFICERS, ALL DEMOCRATS.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 3.—A vote for Governor was taken in the House to-day, as follows: Alonzo Garcelon, 85; Joseph L. Smith, 85; Selden Connor, 64; Frederick Robie, 64. There was one member absent on each side. The House having chosen the names of Joseph L. Smith and Alonzo Garcelon as candidates to be sent to the Senate for Governor, the Senate appointed a committee of three to receive, sort, and count the votes for Governor. They reported as follows: Whole number of votes cast, 31; necessary to a choice, 16; Alonzo Garcelon had 21 and Joseph L. Smith 10, every Republican Senator having voted for Garcelon. The President thereupon declared that Alonzo Garcelon, of Lewiston, had been elected Governor for the ensuing political year.

At the convention of both branches of the Legislature, formed at 12:30 P. M. for the election of State officers, the nominees of the Democratic-Greenback caucus were elected, as follows:

Secretary of State—EDWARD H. GOVE, of Biddeford.

State Treasurer—CHARLES A. WHITE, of Gardiner.

Attorney-General.—WILLIAM A. MCLELLAN, of Belfast.

Adjutant-General.—SAMUEL D. LEAVITT.

The caucus then proceeded to the election of the following Executive Councilors: Edward C. Mody, of York; Charles H. Chase, of Portland; Frank M. Fogg, of Auburn; Simon Brown, of Fairfield; Halsey H. Monroe, of Thomaston; John R. Foster, of Bangor; Fred. G. Parker, of Presque Isle. The convention then dissolved. Each branch appointed a committee to wait upon Gov. Garcelon, and inform him of his election. The branches adjourned to Tuesday afternoon. The new Governor will probably be inaugurated on Wednesday.

BURGLARS CAUGHT BY A WARNING.

ONE KILLED AND ANOTHER DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED—BETRAYED BY A PRETENDED ASSOCIATE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 3.—A very exciting capture of a gang of burglars was made last night at Oaktown, a thriving village nine miles north of this city. On Wednesday the Postmaster received a letter from the Postmaster of Bloomfield, Ind., giving him notice that a gang of burglars from Bloomfield would visit Oaktown for the purpose of plundering its stores; also describing a young man, Mont John, who would accompany the gang, but who was to be protected, as he was playing the part of a detective. That night five men were stationed in each business house, but no attack was made. These precautions were repeated last night. About 11 o'clock the men in Madigan's saloon heard a noise at the door, and immediately prepared for work, so that when the door yielded to the force of a pinch-bar the burglars, three in number, found themselves looking into the muzzles of four revolvers. Quick as a flash they fired and fled, the saloon party immediately firing in return. Noah Williams ran about 200 yards and fell, fatally wounded, his jugular vein being severed. He expired in 15 minutes. Gainey reached the railroad track and followed it, pursued by a large crowd, who, upon the first noise of the firing, had come to the assistance of the saloon men. The firing was continued for the distance of a quarter of a mile. Henry Norton, one of the pursuers, received one of Gainey's bullets in the mouth. Gainey, already suffering from a shattered arm, returned the fire until all but one chamber in his revolver was gone, when he fell exhausted. Dr. Warner, one of the pursuers, stooped over him and asked him if he was hurt, whereupon he turned and pulled the trigger of his revolver, which descended on the last cartridge, but fortunately failed to explode.

Another party during this time had pursued and captured Dick Baird, who proved to be Mont John, and who had miraculously escaped bullets which passed in close proximity to his ears. His story is as follows: About a year ago Gainey approached him, endeavored to induce him to unite with himself and Williams in robbing places in Bloomfield. John refused, but upon warning several citizens, was advised to enter into the plans and lead on the burglars until they were successfully entrapped. A general attack upon Bloomfield was given up, and plans were laid for the extensive burglary at Oaktown, with which place Gainey was familiar. Mont John immediately gave notice to the Postmaster, who wrote the letter, with the results mentioned above. Noah Williams, alias Dixon, the burglar who was killed, lived at Oaktown one year, but had returned to Bloomfield. He was a large man, about 25 years old, and had served two terms in the Penitentiary. Adam C. Gainey, son of W. H. Gainey, a wealthy merchant of Bloomfield, has been a terror to that place for years. He has served three terms in the Penitentiary, having been sent there for 10 months when only 16 years of age. The second time was for 8 months, and another for 11. He is a desperate ruffian. His wounds are dangerous, but not necessarily fatal.

ACCOUNTING FOR YELLOW FEVER.

TESTIMONY BEFORE THE COMMISSION—A PHYSICIAN WHO BELIEVES IN THE GERM THEORY.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 3.—Mr. Silas Weeks, Agent of the Dominion Steam-ship Line, was examined to-day by the Yellow Fever Commission in regard to the present quarantine system. Dr. Carrington, Quarantine Physician, was examined in regard to the steamer Emily B. Souder. He said he had had some experience in yellow fever, but had not practiced since 1855. He was doubtful of the case of Clark, whom he saw on the Souder; he had left that steamship to his assistant, a very good young physician, but with very little experience in yellow fever. Dr. F. Loeber, a practicing physician, and member of the Board of Health, testified in regard to the case of Elliott, of the Souder, who was treated by him. The case was one of congestive fever, and this diagnosis was concurred in by Dr. Boyer, of the Hotel Dieu, who saw Elliott before death. Dr. Loeber said, in the course of his examination: "I believe yellow fever to be indigenous, because it has never been satisfactorily proved to me to have been imported, but at the same time I cannot say that it has always been indigenous. If the conditions, atmospheric and others, are not present, or are not favorable, the disease is not generated from the germ, and in this way I account for years in which we have escaped yellow fever in an epidemic form. I also believe germs to be indigenous to Mobile and Galveston. As regards Vicksburg and Memphis, I believe it to have been imported from New-Orleans. I believe that the best means of prevention are by a thorough hygienic system in this city, such as is in operation in New-York and Baltimore, where I also believe germs to have been indigenous and where I believe these were eradicated by strenuous sanitary regulations. The necessary conditions are heat, long continued inviscerature, a lack of efficient hygienic measures, improper drainage, and a general low condition of sanitary regulations. I think that the first genuine case of yellow fever I saw was in consultation with Dr. Axson on July 7. The case was on Annunciation-street. I made a careful inquiry in the vicinity, but failed to discover any cases from which this one might have originated, and, indeed, I fail to connect it with any other case in the city, as the patient had not left the house for some weeks previous. Dr. Axson agreed with me that the case was one of genuine yellow fever. In some regions of this city which were extremely filthy, I account for the absence of fever by the absence of the germ. Had the germ been present I think the fever would have been present in an aggravated form. I believe in atmospheric influences to the extent that the germs may be transmitted by currents of air, but to what distance I cannot say."

At the evening session Dr. Joseph Jones, member of the Board of Health, was examined. He said the yellow fever could be imported, but he could not trace the last epidemic to that source. He believed an epidemic could occur in New-Orleans without importation, provided the causes were favorable. He was in favor of a rigid quarantine. He believed in the germ theory.

NATIONAL CAPITAL TOPICS.

NO POPULAR DEMAND FOR GOLD.

THE TREASURY OFFICERS SURPRISED AND GRATIFIED AT THE SUCCESS OF RESUMPTION—THE PET THEORIES OF FINANCIAL DEMAGOGUES PROVED TO BE FALLACIOUS—WHAT MR. EWING SAID A YEAR AGO.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The result of the first two days' experience under the Resumption act shows that there is no popular demand for gold, and no anxiety in the public mind about the successful maintenance of specie payments. The Treasury officials are agreeably surprised. It was believed by them that several million dollars would be required to meet the first few days' redemption of legal tenders, but thus far the coin reserve has been strengthened rather than diminished. Even the "bloated bondholders" have manifested an indifference toward coin, and have cheerfully accepted United States notes in exchange for matured coupons and checks for registered interest. This fact deprives the demagogues in Congress of their main source for argument, and the failure of the "bullionists" to rush to the Sub-Treasury for gold demolishes all the calculations of Messrs. Kelley, Ewing, and their followers. It is perhaps too early to pronounce judgment upon the stability of specie payments, but there is certainly good cause for public congratulation upon the exhibition of confidence in the result manifested by the people, and it is very probable that even Judge Kelley is now prepared to change the opinions heretofore expressed by him about the "experiment."

A little more than one year ago the Resumption act was repealed by the House by a vote of 133 to 120, but it is safe to predict that the Repeal bill, if presented now, would not receive 25 votes. In his carefully-prepared speech in the House on Nov. 22, 1877, advocating the repeal of the Resumption act, Mr. Ewing said: "The national banks, the importers, the gold rings in New-York, the desperadoes in Wall-street, the money kings of Europe, to whom we are financially enslaved, will present the greenbacks for redemption and destruction as fast as the gold can be paid over the counters of the Treasury." In view of the experience of the past two days under the operations of "that sum of financial villainies, the Resumption law," which is the way Mr. Ewing characterized the Resumption act, it is probable that that gentleman would like to have the privilege of revising his recorded utterances and modifying his illogical predictions.

A NEW DEPARTURE BY THURMAN.

REPORTS THAT HE IS ABOUT TO RETURN TO THE HARD-MONEY CAMP—HIS PURPOSE TO BE ANNOUNCED IN A SPEECH AT COLUMBUS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senator Thurman will leave here on Monday night for Columbus, to participate in the celebration of the anniversary of the battle of New-Orleans by the Ohio Democrats. The Senator has prepared a speech for delivery upon that occasion, and it is expected that he will improve his opportunity to give the Democracy of Ohio the reasons that have induced him to decline the use of his name in connection with the Governorship of that State. Mr. Thurman's friends say that he will also, in his forthcoming speech at Columbus, advocate the wisdom of maintaining specie payment, and produce his celebrated speech of a couple of years ago at Hamilton, Ohio, to show that he always favored resumption on the day fixed by law. Senator Thurman is a sagacious trimmer, and he is fully prepared to furl the sail he has been carrying for the past two years. If he makes such a speech at Columbus as is predicted by his friends it will show that he has now a proper appreciation of the direction and strength of the popular gale. Had he been more careful in taking his bearings two years ago it would have been better for him.

THE CHINESE TREATY QUESTION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Chinese immigration question was discussed at the Cabinet meeting to-day, and resulted in its reference to the Secretary of State for correspondence with the Chinese Embassy, with a view to the modification of the Burlingame treaty. It is understood that there is a division of sentiment in the Cabinet upon this question, some members favoring the abrogation of the treaty and others favoring modification, so that only a limited number of immigrants from China may be limited. It is known that the Chinese Government will resist any offer to modify the treaty, but will not formally object to its abrogation should the United States insist upon that course. The Burlingame treaty contains no provision for its abrogation, but should this Government decide to ignore it, the Chinese Government would be forced to acquiesce.

WILKESBARRE BANKERS EMBARRASSED.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Jan. 3.—None of the other banks of this place are affected by the failure of Bennett, Phelps & Co., with the exception of the Miners' Savings Bank, on which there is a slight run, and the 60 days' limit has been adopted. Bennett, Phelps & Co.'s liabilities will probably amount to $500,000. They claim that creditors will not lose a dollar, as their property will more than cover the above sum. The amount due to depositors is $276,000, and to the Miners' Savings Bank about $50,000. The latter amount is covered by the assignment made yesterday. It is said the firm loses about $300,000 by the suspension of J. H. Swoyer and the Riverside Coal Company. Several business houses here are seriously embarrassed by the failure of Mr. Swoyer to meet his obligations, one of which, N. Wolfe & Co., druggists, made an assignment last night. It is believed that the Forty-Fort Coal Company will not suspend, Messrs. J. H. Swoyer and C. F. Shoemer having made an assignment of their interest, and it is now in the hands of other persons.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1879.

Hon. John A. Bingham, Minister to Japan, has arrived in this city.

The subscriptions to the 4 per cent. loan to-day amounted to $2,613,180.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $198,744 30, and from Customs $269,187 05.

The Department of Justice was draped in mourning to-day, as a mark of respect for the late Caleb Cushing.

Charles Francis Adams, Jr., has tendered his resignation as Government Director of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

It is expected that the Secretary of the Treasury will to-morrow issue another call for the redemption of $10,000,000 5-20 bonds, consols of 1867.

Senators Teller, Cameron of Wisconsin, Kirkwood, Bailey, and Garland, constituting the sub-committee of investigation appointed under the Blaine resolution, left Washington this morning for New-Orleans. They took with them a clerk, two Assistant Sergeants-at-Arms, and two stenographers.

The Springer committee, conducting the "Seward investigation," resumed its sessions to-day. The proceedings were confined to the identification and partial examination of a large number of books received from the State Department, containing letter-press copies of Consular correspondence and records of fees, &c. The committee will meet again to-morrow.

The Mint Bureau yesterday turned into the Treasury $575,000 as profits accruing to the Government from the coinage of the standard silver dollar during the past three weeks. This amount was the net profit after buying the silver for coinage, paying for transportation, and allowing for wasting in the process of coinage. Since the commencement of the coinage of the standard dollar, the Government has profited between the legal-tender value and the real value of the bullion which it contains, to the amount of about $1,600,000.

The delegation from the Ute tribe of Indians, which arrived in this city last night, will have an interview with the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to-morrow. The Utes have agreed to a change of locality in Colorado, and, as part of the land which they will relinquish is valuable for mining purposes, one of the subjects affecting their interests which will be discussed during their present visit is the question of what compensation, if any, should be allowed as representing the difference in value of the two reservations.

All the members of the Cabinet were present to-day, with the exception of Secretary Sherman.

The Treasury Department was represented by Assistant Secretary Hawley, who reported interesting facts concerning the resumption of specie payments. The question of refunding the national debt was discussed as the principal financial aim of the Treasury Department, now that specie resumption has been accomplished. The large increase in the subscriptions to the 4 per cent. bonds, which is a funding loan, was considered a good indication of success in the consummation of such measures.

It is said at the State Department that the Mexican Government has made arrangements for the payment of the third instalment—$300,000—of the indemnity to American citizens, due this month. The previous instalments are being distributed. The department is now engaged in the examination of the Weil and La Abre awards, involving about $1,500,000, to the payment of which the Mexican Government objected on account of alleged frauds, and which awards, by a law of Congress, were excepted from distribution until they could be examined by the department. Various papers have been furnished by the Mexican Government to support its allegations, the Weil case being the first to pass under review. This is the larger of the two awards.

In redeeming the 10-year District of Columbia bonds, Treasurer Gilfillan has discovered that between $8,000 and $10,000 in these bonds presented for redemption do not contain the requirements of the act creating their issue, namely, "that they shall be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Registrar, and have affixed the seal of the Corporation of Washington." Being not affixed in the amount above named, the bonds thus wanting were returned to those presenting them, the Treasurer being unable to redeem them unless the seal is affixed as required by law. The District Commissioners have been informed of the defect, and say in reply that they have no power to correct the omission until after the records of their office have been examined. This will be begun at once.

MARINE DISASTERS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Signal Corps station at Chatham, Mass., reports to the chief signal officer as follows: "An unknown schooner came ashore on Common Flat this afternoon. They have cut away the masts and the crew are considered in a precarious situation. No one can reach her on account of the prevailing gale and the sea."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—The schooner E. A. Clark, of and for New-York, from New-Bedford, went ashore last night on Rice Rocks, Newport Harbor. She lies easy, and will probably come off.

The steamer Wm. Lawrence, at this port, from Baltimore, supplied provisions yesterday to the ship Herrina, 97 days out from London, for New-York. The steamer fell in with her 20 miles south-east of Absecom.

ST. JOHN, Newfoundland, Jan. 3.—The schooner Ellen was driven ashore on Duck Island on the 22d inst. Two of her crew got ashore. The remaining three, after clinging to the wreck for some time, were weakened by exposure, swept off, and drowned. Their bodies were recovered the next day and buried on the island.

ZETA PSI IN CONVENTION.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The annual convention of the Zeta Psi Fraternity met in this city to-day. Notwithstanding the storm, there is a large attendance. The session to-day was devoted to the routine business of the fraternity. This evening there were literary exercises and a banquet at the Troy Music House, with an address by Hon. Lot W. Rhodes, of Troy, and poems by Judge Samuel B. Sumner, of Bridgeport, and William H. McElroy of the Albany Journal. The convention will finish its labors to-morrow. Seventeen subordinate chapters were represented to-day, and it is hoped, if the storm breaks, that the attendance to-morrow will be largely increased. This account little important business was transacted.

THE WHISKY BELL-PUNCH.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 3.—The General Assembly met to-day pursuant to the order of adjournment previous to the holidays. There was no quorum in the House. The proceedings in both branches were unimportant. Auditor Taylor sent in a report of the operations of the Moffett Liquor law, showing the total receipts to be $472,834, being an excess of $210,638 over the assessments of the preceding year, which, after deducting the rebates allowed under the law, leaves a net balance of $210,161 in excess of the results of the old law. The Auditor says the result of the experiment shows clearly that the law is capable of being made a most powerful agency for raising revenue, and suggests a number of modifications and changes to that end.

MUTUAL LIFE'S NEW PLAN.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—A meeting of policy-holders in the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New-York was held this evening to consider the action of the board in allotting a portion of the accrued surplus fund to the new insurants. Addresses were made by J. W. McCullough, of New-York, against the new departure, and ex-Judge Fallon and George H. Andrews, of New-York, in behalf of the management. The meeting adjourned for one week.

NAVY AND ARMY MATTERS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Rear Admiral Le Roy has been detached from the command of the European station, and ordered to proceed home, and report his arrival. Capt. John L. Davis, commanding the flag-ship Trenton, will be left in charge of the station until a successor to Admiral Le Roy shall be designated.

The Richmond will probably leave for the East Indies toward the close of next week.

The President to-day signed about 60 military commissions, for the most part First and Second Lieutenants, recently confirmed by the Senate.

In compliance with the recommendation of Gen. Sheridan, the names of the following Western military posts will be changed: Camp Baker will be known as Fort Logan; Standing Rock will be named Fort Yates; Fort Cheyenne will be changed to Fort Bennett; the post at Lower Brule Agency will be known as Fort Brule; Sidney Barracks to Fort Cramp Brown; Camp Douglass to Fort Douglass, and Camp Robinson to Fort Robinson.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The United States steamer Tuscarora arrived at Madeira on the 24th of December.

BISHOP WHITTINGHAM SERIOUSLY ILL.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 3.—An afternoon paper says Bishop Whittingham, of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, who has been in very feeble health for several years, is reported to be seriously ill at his residence in this city. For a year past the Bishop has been confined to his room, and some weeks ago became much worse, causing painful apprehensions among his friends. This morning he was not better, and his condition is regarded as critical, though his life is not despaired of. The Bishop is 73 years of age.

THE COLORADO LEGISLATURE.

DENVER, Jan. 3.—The State Legislature completed its organization yesterday. Hon. James P. Maxwell, of Boulder, was elected President pro tem. of the Senate, and Rhad Stranahan, of Boulder County, was chosen Speaker of the House. The Governor's Message will be submitted to-day.

DROPPED TO THE FLOOR AND KILLED.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 3.—Mr. Magrie Hageley, living in Ward-street, Urbana, left her house for a short walk yesterday, leaving her infant on the bed in the care of a daughter 4 years old. The infant beginning to cry, the daughter attempted to take it up to soothe it, when the babe fell upon the floor, breaking its neck.

FITZ JOHN PORTER'S TRIAL.

THE CLOSING ARGUMENTS BEGUN.

STRENUOUS EFFORTS OF THE PETITIONER TO INTRODUCE IMMATERIAL EVIDENCE—IMPORTANT DOCUMENTS OFFERED BY THE GOVERNMENT—GEN. GRANT'S OPINION AS TO THE LEGALITY OF REOPENING THE CASE—ONE OF PORTER'S CLAIMS DISPROVED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WEST POINT, Jan. 3.—The final disposition of the Fitz John Porter case, so far as the military commission appointed by the President is concerned, will not probably be arrived at before the end of next week. The sessions of the commission were resumed yesterday in the library of the Military Academy, Gens. Schofield, Terry, and Getty being present. There were a few persons present yesterday to hear the fag-ends of the evidence, but nothing material was offered. William Dyer, of the First Ohio Cavalry, detailed as an orderly at Gen. Pope's head-quarters in August, 1862, corroborated the evidence of Capt. Douglass Pope and Orderly Duffy as to the route taken and the hour of delivery of the famous 4:30 order on Aug. 29, which instructed Gen. Porter to make an attack. Porter's counsel introduced two witnesses to rebut the testimony of Dyer in certain minor particulars.

The counsel for the petitioner offered in evidence this morning the correspondence of Gen. Pope with the Count de Paris as to the conduct of the campaign in August, 1862, which terminated in the battle of Manassas. It was claimed by counsel that Gen. Pope had made certain statements in this correspondence which were material to their view of the case. The document was admitted and handed to the stenographer. The petitioner next offered in evidence a letter from Gen. Pope to Gen. Sherman, dated Oct. 23, 1878, in which the former explains the manner in which the blunder of transferring a paragraph of "Stonewall" Jackson's report of the engagement of Aug. 30 to Aug. 29 occurred. Gen. Pope gives substantially the same explanation of the mistake that McDowell did in his evidence before the commission. In Jackson's report the three days are connected in narrative form, and no special attention is paid to the dates. Hence, at a cursory reading, such a mistake was very likely to occur. Gen. Pope did not, moreover, make the extracts personally, but intrusted the work to a subordinate. When the correctness of the rendering was first questioned, long previous to the formation of the present commission, Gen. Pope sent his extracts to the War Department to be verified by comparison with the original narrative on record there; and they were returned with some verbal corrections, which did affect their general import. He speaks very frankly respecting the matter, which, by the way, although endlessly harped upon by Porter's counsel, is wholly immaterial, if not utterly irrelevant; for it is not denied that Gen. Porter's corps behaved gallantly on the third day of the battle, and Jackson's testimony to the fact in no way strengthens the petitioner's cause. Again, as Recorder Gardner has repeatedly explained, although if the reference of Jackson were to the first day's battle it would be corroborative of the statements of Gens. Heintzelman, McDowell, Sigel, and a host of minor witnesses—the Government loses nothing by the correction, and regrets as sincerely as the petitioner possibly can that the error was ever committed. Gen. Pope gives a satisfactory explanation of the manner in which the passages from the reports of Longstreet and Stuart were obtained for his "Brief Statement," namely, that they were copied by a subordinate, and afterward verified at the War Department.

Finally, by way of closing their case, the petitioner's counsel introduced Gen. George H. Gordon to show the disposition of the corps of Gen. Banks on Aug. 20, and to refute the evidence of Col. Dobson and Prof. Andrews, of the United States Military Academy. Gen. Gordon, who commanded a brigade in Gen. Banks' corps, contradicted the official report of the latter in several particulars, and described the disposition of the brigade under his command. The Recorder did not cross-examine the witness at any length, not seeing exactly how the position of Gen. Banks on that day was relevant to Gen. Porter's failure to obey orders. This closed the case for the petitioner.

Recorder Gardner offered some important documents for evidence, a few of which were admitted, and the most weighty, excluded. Copies of the papers of Col. Ruggles, Gen. Pope's Adjutant, with reference to Piatt's telegram; the official report of the condition of Gen. Morell's division (Porter's corps) on the morning of Aug. 31, 1862; a letter from Rev. F. Stringfellow, one of the petitioner's witnesses, asking that his evidence be stricken from the record; the returns of the second corps [Bank's] for the month of August, 1862, and the correspondence between Gen. Pope and President Grant in April, 1874, relative to the proposed re-opening of the Porter case, were all admitted. The following is the correspondence alluded to. Gen. Pope writing to President Grant in the first instance, and the President in reply giving his reasons for declining to appoint a commission:

WASHINGTON, April 18, 1874.

Gen. U. S. Grant, President of the United States:

MR. PRESIDENT: It is no doubt known to you that Gen. F. J. Porter claims to have procured evidence since his trial, yet attainable at the time, which would have secured his acquittal, for which he stands convicted, or greatly modify the finding and sentence of the court-martial before which he was tried, and that he has embodied in a printed pamphlet what he claims to be a portion of this evidence, and what he expects to establish by it, together with an appeal for a rehearing of his case. It is widely asserted by those who are in sympathy with him, and probably believed by many who have no personal interest in his case, that influences hostile to him have restrained you from examining this statement of his case, and have thus worked great injustice, by preventing the exercise of power from considering statements of evidence which might vindicate his reputation. It is needless to say to you that I have never used any influence with you, personal or other, to prevent the investigation of his statements, nor even intimated to you in any manner that I objected to any action you might think proper to take in the premises. Nevertheless, as I am not willing even to seem to consent to any additional misconception concerning me or my action in this case, I beg, if you have not already done so, that you will yourself, Mr. President, examine as fully into the question as you think justice or mercy demands, or that you will order a board of competent officers of high rank, unconnected with the armies or transactions involved, to investigate fully the statements of this new evidence made by Gen. Porter, and report to you what bearing, if any, it would have upon the findings and sentence of his court-martial, even if it could be fully established. I am, Sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant, JOHN POPE,

Brevet Major-General United States Army.

Gen. Grant held this note under consideration until May 9—about three weeks—and then replied, as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 9, 1874.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Your letter of April 18, in regard to your position in the matter of a rehearing of the Fitz John Porter court-martial, was duly received. You are under the apprehension that I had not fully considered the case—or rather, that the public so thought—and that you had used means to prevent me from giving the subject fair consideration. In reply, I will make two emphatic statements: First, that I have no recollection. I have never had but one letter from you on this subject, prior to the one I am now answering, and that simply contained the request that, if I could conveniently reopening the case, I would examine both sides. I read during the trial the evidence and the final findings of the court, looking upon the whole trial as one of great importance, and particularly so to the Army and Navy. When Gen. Porter's subsequent statement was published I received a copy of it, and read it with care and attention, determined, if he had been wronged, and I could right him, I would do so. My second statement is that no new facts were developed that could be fairly considered, and that it was of doubtful legality whether, by the mere authority of the Executive, a rehearing could be given. Yours truly, U. S. GRANT.

As to the allegation of the petitioner that he was on the best of terms with Gen. Pope for several days after the battle, and that his conduct was never called in question except as an afterthought when the disastrous campaign was closed, Major Gardner offered an attested copy of an order from President Lincoln, dated Sept. 5, 1862, directing an inquiry into the conduct of Gen. Porter on Friday, Aug. 29, where he was, and why he did not take part in the action; also, an inquiry respecting the conduct of Gen. Franklin and of Gen. Griffin during the campaign, the former having been four days and four nights on the way from his former position to Manassas. The report of the proceedings under this order were also offered, together with a letter from Secretary Stanton to Gen. Halleck, dated Aug. 28, 1862, as to what orders had been given to the Army of the Potomac to move from the James River; whether such orders had been obeyed with promptness; what orders had been issued to Franklin, and whether such orders had been obeyed as promptly as the imminent peril demanded. The report of Gen. Halleck in response to this request was submitted, together with the materials embodied therein, respecting the failure of Porter to move upon the enemy as several times directed between Aug. 27 and 30, 1862; those respecting the case of Franklin, and those respecting the conduct of Griffin. A controversy ensued, and the documents were not admitted.

Mr. Maltby, of counsel for Porter, then began his argument for the petitioner, which is comprised in a printed pamphlet of 100 pages. He will continue his pleading to-morrow. Mr. Bullitt will sum up on Monday and the Recorder on Tuesday.

FURBER'S TRIAL NEARLY ENDED.

THE CLOSING ARGUMENT FOR THE STATE FINISHED AND THAT FOR THE DEFENSE BEGUN.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Jan. 3.—Mr. Hammersley closed his argument for the State in the Charter Oak case at noon to-day, and traversed many points which were covered in his address yesterday. In reply to the legal question raised by Mr. Swett for the defense, that in describing in the information certain named policy-holders without identifying them, there was a variance, he held that the obligation, which embraced also 20,000 policy-holders to the jurors unknown, and others to become policy-holders, who were to be cheated and defrauded, was divisible, the naming of more than three being surplusage. As to the approval of the Furber contract by Commissioner Stedman, he argued that the Commissioner qualified his approval by an understanding requiring certain things to be done which were not done; for in fact, as he claimed to show by figures, more than $100,000 of the money taken out by Furber was taken from the reserve; but whether it was or not, he maintains that whatever money belonged to the company as surplus was the property of the policy-holders, and was a trust in the hands of the officers, to be administered by them for the benefit of the insured. In the contribution of Furber to the company it appears that he did not put in a dollar, but put in a mortgage for $800,000, and on that got a credit of $300,000, above the $500,000 contributed, and thus drew good securities out of the company, or their equivalent in cash, instead of adding anything to the valuable assets. Concerning the value of the New-York real estate, he said he supposed Furber and Mathews knew what it was worth, and they sold it to the company for about $2,000,000, and it went into the assets for $3,000,000. There was an inflation of $1,000,000, and it was for the reason that real estate could be inflated that Furber went into it, when he found that the company had valueless securities like the Valley bonds. The evidence shows that these bonds and certain mortgages were put in by Mathews for $1,200,000, and afterward Furber got them back again for $125,000. In closing, Mr. Hammersley asked the jury to give the accused the benefit of every doubt, and in doing so he believed it would be impossible to award a verdict of guilty.

An argument occupying over an hour was then made by Mr. Hawley in behalf of Mr. Walkley, who, he claimed, had not been shown to have been in any combination of any extent, and under the allegations was found to be innocent.

Mr. Hyde followed in the closing argument for the defense, and attributed the failure of Furber and Wiggin to bring the company out successfully to a persistent purpose which was displayed by certain men—who either wanted to be Receivers or counsel for a Receiver—to destroy public confidence in the company. If they had been let alone, the company would be paying to-day all its obligations in full. Not only were the accused driven out of the company, but they were indicted by a Grand Jury, a thing never done before in Connecticut except in cases where the penalty was hanging or imprisonment for life. To increase public prejudice, the case was complained of by the State Attorney for not having proved their innocence, as if men accused of crime must establish their innocence rather than be proved guilty by the State. Mr. Hyde then reviewed the evidence in CONFIDENCE SWINDLERS.

HOW THEY GET DUPES IN NEW-YORK

AN OUTLINE OF THEIR SCHEMES—THEIR CIRCULAR TO AGENTS—ANXIETY TO RECEIVE MONEY FOR EXPRESS CHARGES—A PIANO WORTH SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS.

The confidence swindlers of New-York are very shrewd people, and very industrious after their own peculiar fashion. Their industry, however, is vicious in the respect that it is exercised only in enterprises made misdemeanors or felonies by statute. No thorough-paced confidence man would demean himself or his profession by addressing his talents to honorable pursuits, although the energy and spowleese of character that he devotes to crime would yeild larger results if honorably directed. It is fortunate for their victims that the class is not numerous, but what they lack in numbers is largely supplied by the versatility they display in projecting what appears to be new and captivating schemes upon communities that have already suffered by very similar devices. It is a notable fact that the methods that yield a rich harvest to-day to the faro banks frequented by the swindlers differ in no essential respect from those that have from time to time for 20 years been exposed in the columns of THE TIMES. It is equally true that the most productive patrons of the faro banks of to-day are the inheritors of the nefarious schemes of 20 years ago. Their prime stock in trade is an unvarying quantity—the natural desire of many people to get something for nothing, to obtain unearned money.

There is no season of the year that compares with holiday times as a harvest for the swindlers. They ground-bait their favorite fishing grounds for weeks ahead with such circulars as the following:

OFFICE OF THE HANCASTER PRIZE ASSOCIATION.

In response to your order of 26th, you will find herewith inclosed one ticket, which we have drawn for you, and circulars of terms, &c.

Having no agent in your locality, we should be glad to have you act in that capacity for us. If you should be one of the fortunate and secure a valuable prize we trust that you will show it to your acquaintances as an inducement for them to favor us with their patronage.

Our stock of jewelry, silverware, imported and domestic fancy goods, embraces all the latest patterns and designs, which we should be glad to have you call and examine when in this City.

Address all orders for prizes or tickets to our cashier, and they will meet with prompt attention. Send all money by express only, and it is sure to reach us safely. Peculiar in future, address all correspondence to our cashier, Thomas Smith, No. 24 Ann-street.

All prizes drawn, regardless of value, will be promptly sent as directed by mail or express, on receipt of charges. Soliciting further favors, remain yours truly,

THE MANAGERS.

Be particular to send all money letters by express.

All charges for expressage and packing must be forwarded with the order for the prize. No goods sent C. O. D. or exchanged.

The ticket therein alluded to purports to be a lottery slip which drew some article of value named upon the schedule of prizes which accompanies it. The schedule contains two ruled columns in which are set opposite each article its alleged value and the sum charged the lucky drawer as the price of packing and expressage. The generous managers of the Mercantile Prize Agency demand nothing more than the charges, which usually amount to somewhere between $2 and $3. It makes no difference in the purpose of the holder of the supposed lucky ticket that he never ordered it—the Agency of Thomas Smith have selected him as the most suitable man in his neighborhood to act as their agent—so he swallows the bait, hook and all, and remits the required sum by express. Of course he waits in vain for the promised equivalent. Perhaps when visiting the express office he encounters half a dozen neighbors on the same errand. If they compare notes they come to the conclusion that they are swindled, but they are seldom the less liable to be imposed upon again when Mr. Smith, under a different name, and representing a nominally different agency, presents to them in the same box the same with some similar proposal. The fact is so well known to the swindlers that a man once duped is all the more likely to be gulled again through his desire to "get square," that some years ago, when such schemes were exceptionally productive, the lists of country "customers" commanded high prices from those who were about to undertake that means of relieving the wind.

In one respect these swindlers have been latterly very much embarrassed. Postmaster James has kept a vigilant watch to prevent the mails from being used to promote swindling designs. In the circular given above remittrs are respectfully cautioned to send only by express. Whenever, of late years, registered letters have been coming to one address, and that not in the Directory, the Postmaster has taken the liberty of inquiring of the senders. The express companies have taken similar measures occasionally, but access to their facilities is much more easy, and a slight change of name gives the swindlers renewed lease of income.

A decided improvement on this scheme was lately put in practice by a former employe of the Elias Brothers. His method has been to advertise in the weekly papers as the agent for certain non-existing State lotteries, otherwise gift distributing companies. The concern gathered consideration from the fact that a supposed square dealing jewelry firm was made the agent for the distribution of the watches, which, for some reason, were in the habit of drawing, the company distributed. In consideration for their cashing the prizes the house alluded to claimed 10 per cent. of the alleged value of the prize. The watches are generally valued at $200, and the amount to be remitted by registered letter or express was, consequently, about three times the value of the thinly-gilded brass watch which the firm forwarded. By changes of name this concern managed to have its New York office in this City before it was driven to Camden, N. J., and afterward to Boomfield, in the same State. They are now exhibiting their wares in West Third-street, but have been hit or miss advertising business, in fact, awaiting the result of their numerous notifications of drawn prizes, as well as of the advertisements with which they have liberally patronized the numerous weekly newspapers whose conscience lies in their cash-box.

A not inconsiderable amount of money flows into New-York annually from the source of certain weekly or monthly newspapers. Every year brings a recurrent crop of these alleged educators, some of which bear names that have grown venerable from long use. Their proprietors promise all sorts of prizes and inducements for clubs, in addition to purchasing bureaus which advertise to furnish subscribers with any desired household or wearing articles at City prices, without commission. The subscription price for these journals is so small that it furnishes a most attractive bait for country folks who trust to their illusive promises. Before any of the latter have been realized the subscribers have occasion first to berate their Postmaster for non-delivery of their papers, and, having ascertained his innocence, they resort to correspondence with some reputable City newspaper, only to find that their weekly treasure never passed beyond its first edition.

Such newspapers are valuable allies for the general dissemination of the swindle about to be described. Long enough before Christmas to make it lucrative country districts were fairly flooded with the following, lastly set-forth as "unparalleled offer," which was limited to 30 days only. Its circular recited "a beautiful Bristol piano, solid black walnut case, ornamented legs, given away free." It emanated, according to the signature, from the Bristol Piano Company, New-Bedford, Mass. Among the promises of their circular was the declaration of their intention that the Bristol piano should reach every part of the country within the next 30 days. It was further stated, however, was only to ship this magnificent article of ornament and use "free" upon the receipt of the names of 20 of the neighbors of the recipient. No price was alleged for this piece of beauty, "turned and ready for use," but it was suggested that the sender of the 20 names would have to pay $2 25 for the packing and shipment of their prize. They might also, it was gently suggested, be called on to pay an additional 75 cents or $1 for the expressage of the same.

A subscriber to THE TIMES thus describes the result of the acceptance of this tempting offer by one of his farm laborers: "The piano was 16 inches long, 8 inches wide, and 4 inches thick. There were 12 pieces of iron laid on two sticks, with blocks to strike them with." In other words, this splendid walnut-cased instrument which figured as the head of their advertisement as a full sized piano was a metallophone which now goes begging at 75 cents apiece. It would be well for all who feel inclined to nibble at such alluring baits to reflect that the citizens of New-York are no more charitably disposed than their own neighbors, and do not habitually give away things for less than their value, much less advertise their generosity to a waiting world.

THE DEATH OF MR. PETRIE.

An investigation was made yesterday in the case of James L. Petrie, whose strange death at Bellevue Hospital was published in THE TIMES yesterday, and showed that Petrie had not been clubbed to death, but that his injuries resulted from his falling heavily to the ground while he was in an intoxicated condition. The autopsy made by Coroner Ellinger and Deputy Coroner Goldschmiedt showed that Petrie died of alcoholism and compression of the brain, the latter being due to a fracture of the skull extending from the base to the forehead. The scalp was not cut, as it would have been had the man been struck by a policeman's club with force sufficient to produce the fracture of the skull, nor was there any other indication of the man having received a clubbing. Petrie's friends admit he had long been in the habit of drinking to excess, and that he was often in the streets in a helpless condition. His family are satisfied that his death was not caused by violence on the part of the Police. The deceased came of a good family, and was a man of culture. His father, James Petrie, was a well-known dry goods merchant of this City, and his brother is married to a daughter of ex-Mayor Wickham.

THREATENING TO KILL HIS WIFE.

Mrs. Lillian Duke, the wife of a well-to-do contractor and builder, residing at No. 221 East Eighty-fourth-street, caused the arrest of her husband and his arraignment before Justice Duffy, in the Harlem Police Court, yesterday, on a charge of assault with intent to kill. Mrs. Duke charged that her husband had made her life miserable for many years, having shot at her within six months of their marriage day, and many times choking and beating her. On Thursday night he first tried to slash her with a chisel, and then threw a dirk-knife, the blade of which was six inches in length. She escaped from the house, and took refuge with some neighbors. Mr. Duke put in as his defense that his wife first stabbed him with a pair of scissors, and that he only wanted to frighten her. Justice Duffy held Duke in $500 bail to keep the peace, and assigned several of the neighbors who were afraid of Duke because they had befriended his wife that he would see they were protected.

MODERN OLYMPIAN GAMES.

THE FLEET OF FOOT AND THE STRONG-LIMBED CONTESTING IN GILMORE'S GARDEN FOR SUPREMACY—SEVERAL EXCITING STRUGGLES—A LARGE ATTENDANCE.

The second annual Winter meeting of the New-York Athletic Club began last evening in Gilmore's Garden. Despite the bitter weather there was a very good attendance, between 4,000 and 5,000 spectators being present. A fair proportion was of the gentler sex. The arrangements for announcing the winners and the time were entirely inadequate, that duty being performed by a gentleman with a thick voice and indistinct pronunciation. A series of blackboards would be a decided improvement. First on the programme was a 75-yards run, divided into a series of five trial heats. Of the five entries in the first heat four started; George E. Payne, of the Astoria Athletic Club, won in 0:8 1-5. Four out of five started in the second heat; I. F. Jenkins, Jr., of the Glenwood Athletic Club, won in 0:8 2-5. Only two out of five started in the third heat; A. B. Wilson, of the Carman Rowing Association, won easily in 0:7 4-15. S. Stern, of the Amateur Athletic Club, had a walk-over in the fourth heat, there being three withdrawals; the time was 0:10. Three out of four started in the fifth heat; A. Noel, Jr., of the Short Hills Athletic Club, won in 0:8 1-5. The winners will run in a final heat this evening.

The second event was a 440-yards run—twice around the Garden—divided into trial heats. Three out of six started in the first. L. E. Meyers, of the Knickerbocker Yacht Club, handily won in 0:57 1-5, with J. H. Booth, of the New-York Athletic Club, second. Five out of six started in the second heat. After an exciting contest W. R. Hewitt, of the American Athletic Club, crossed the line first, in 0:58 2-5. F. W. Janssen, of the Staten Island Athletic Club, being close behind. All six started in the third heat. It was won by Ralph Voorhees, of the Greenpoint Athletic Club, in 0:58 3-5, Henry C. Rommel, of the Triton Boat Club, being second. The firsts and seconds will compete in a final heat this evening.

The third event was a mile walk—eight times around the Garden—open to those who had not previously beaten 8:30. There were two trial heats. This was the only racing event in which the contestants were not handicapped. In the first heat six out of seventeen started. The winner was William O'Keefe, of the Yorkville Athletic Club, James H. Gifford, of this City, being second; James Cameron, of the Young Men's Christian Association, third, and F. A. Lachemacher, of the Clinton Athletic Club, fourth. Time, 8:11½. The entire 16 started in the second heat. W. C. Rowland, of this City, won in 8:21½; W. A. Elks, of Port Henry, N. Y., being second; J. W. Adams, of Newark, N. J., third, and E. H. Bowley, of the Orion Rowing and Athletic Association, fourth. These contests were very exciting, and the young men were frequently greeted with cheers. Many found the pace too much for them and fell out. Others were caught running and were ordered out; if the latter was W. C. Bennett, of the Manhattan Athletic Club, who in the second heat, led almost to the end, and then broke into a run involuntarily on being hard pressed by the winner, O'Keefe, the winner of the first heat, is a little bit of a fellow. He came in 150 yards ahead of all the others. In the second heat George Laing, of the New-York Caledonian Club, a big, powerful man, started off with a rush that carried him far ahead of the ruck, but on the third lap he suddenly stopped and gave up. Albert Forstbauer created much merriment in this heat by walking at the rear behind the others, and only made two laps to finish the mile, after everybody else was through. He was greeted with derisive applause, but paid no attention to it. It is surmised that his action was the result of a bet. The first four in each trial will compete in a final heat this evening.

The next event was a 220-yards run, divided into three trial heats. All six started in the first. M. J. Gilligan, of the Clinton Athletic Club, won in 0:26. W. Dittmar, Jr., of this City, being second. All five started in the second. It was won with the greatest ease by L. E. Myers, of the Knickerbocker Yacht Club, in 0:27. John C. Wetmore, of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, being second. The same order was kept in the third. It was won handily by William H. Douglas, of this City, in 0:27. J. Steele, Jr., of the Scottish-American Athletic Club, being second. The firsts and seconds contested in a final heat at a subsequent stage of the programme, and the race was won by M. J. Gilligan, L. E. Myers being second and William H. Douglas third. Time—0:26.

The tug of war was next in order. There were four entries of teams. The tossing for choice the Scottish-American Athletic team was pitted against the Ninth Regiment team and the New-York Athletic Club team against the Empire City Gymnasium. The Scottish-American boys pulled their opponents over the line, hand over hand, in 2:11¾, amid the yells of the crowd. The second trial was intensely exciting. At the start the Athletic Club men gained inch by inch, an advantage of several feet, but the expenditure of strength required to accomplish this proved fatal. The Empire City men were tough, and kept tugging after their opponents could only lie still and hold on. They did hold gamely, but the others made a supreme effort and gained an inch amid tremendous cheers. Another effort was rewarded with another inch, and so on until the red line indicating the centre of the rope lay squarely over the central chalk mark on the ground. Then the Athletic Club men braced themselves, and the others strained and strained without being able to budge them. Twelve minutes passed and neither had the advantage. Meantime, the crowd became wrought up to a high pitch of enthusiasm that found vent in continuous yells of delight and encouragement and peal after peal of cheers. Then the Empire City men gathered themselves together and gained an inch—two, three, ten inches. At this point the others made a desperate rally, and tugged and tugged, but to no avail. The pistol-shot which was the signal of the 15 minutes' limit was fired, and the Empire City men were declared the victors. The final trial between the latter and the Scottish-American team this evening will doubtless be well worth witnessing.

A mile run, with 26 entries, followed. It was won easily by W. H. Robertson, of Brooklyn, in 4:52¾. C. Horton, of the Scottish-American Athletic Club, being second; F. Noel, of the Short Hills Athletic Club, third; T. K. Hastings, of this City, fourth, and Reginald H. Sayre, of the Columbia College Athletic Association, fifth.

The next event was the Seventh Regiment tug of war. In the first trial, Company's team, commanded by Capt. Waldo Sprague, was pitted against another team from the same company, commanded by Capt. George G. Stow. The former won in 1:41. In the second trial the contestants were Companies B and E, Company B won in 3:29½. Company I's team having withdrawn, the third trial advertised with Company K's team did not take place. The final trial between Capt. Sprague's team and Company B's will occupy this evening.

Sandwiched in between these trials was a 440-yards hurdle race over 20 hurdles, each 2 feet 6 inches in height. It was won by Joseph Lafon, of the Mystic Boat Club, beating four competitors, in 1:13¾. Arthur W. Anderson, of the New-York Athletic Club who came in second, had the lead until the last 100 yards.

The contests were ended by 10:15 P. M. Medals will be given to the first, second, and third in each race, and a set of colors will be awarded to the winning teams in the "tugs of war."

ARTICLE XIV. AGAIN DISCUSSED.

At the meeting of the Sixth Assembly District Republican Association, held last evening, at No. 160 Clinton-street, a written protest, signed by William O. Cloyes, Daniel Crowley, and several others, was presented against the election of John Simpson as President, of Patrick Clark, and John Hunt as delegates to the Central Committee, and of John Fay as Inspector of Election. The signers of the protest claim that the gentlemen named are office-holders under Democratic authority, and that their election was in violation of Article 14 of the constitution and rules of the district association. In the cases of Messrs. Clark and Hunt it was explained that the former had been removed from office two weeks before the holding of the primary election, and that the resignation of the latter, who was a clerk at Police Head-quarters, was in the hands of the Commissioners before the election. On motion the paper was rejected. The appointment of the regular standing committees was postponed until the next monthly meeting. A resolution was unanimously adopted recommending the repeal of Article 14 of the constitution.

WORK OF THE SURROGATE'S OFFICE.

Eight hundred and seventy-four wills were admitted to probate in this County during the past year. The probate of 66 was contested. In 45 of such cases the wills were admitted; three were rejected, and 18 are still pending. The number of foreign wills admitted was 59; 813 letters testamentary, 1,470 letters of administration, 472 letters of guardianship, 37 letters of testamentary guardianship, and 609 decrees of final accounting were granted. The special motions heard and disposed of were over 5,000; the orders granted, signed and entered were 4,230, and the collectors and Receivers appointed, 20. A great deal of clerical work, in arrears for many years, has also been done during the past year.

ANGELL, THE DEFAULTER.

The Pullman Palace Car Company have received a cable dispatch from Lisbon saying that the Portuguese Government has formally turned over to Henry Starring, the company's agent, Charles W. Angell, the defaulter, together with the $30,000 in money and securities found in his possession. Mr. Starring says that he will take a prisoner direct to the United States on a skipper-ship in order to avoid complications which might arise by touching at ports of other countries.

PROBABLE WIFE-MURDER.

A BAD CASE OF WIFE-BEATING.

THE TROUBLES OF THE DENNEDY FAMILY—A WOMAN FOUND IN AN UNCONSCIOUS CONDITION—HER INJURIES OF A DANGEROUS CHARACTER.

Mrs. James Dennedy, of No. 502 West Thirty-second-street, was removed to Roosevelt Hospital yesterday morning in a dying condition, suffering from injuries inflicted by her husband, James Dennedy. The woman is Dennedy's second wife. The Police say that when she married Dennedy she had quite a sum of money. Her husband, it is alleged, after the marriage induced her to surrender a portion of her savings to set his son up in the liquor business in Brooklyn. It is also said that she subsequently refused to part with any more of her money despite the persuasive efforts of her husband, and that this resolution on her part was productive of a bitter difference between the couple, and lately of many quarrels. On New Years Eve Thomas Gregory and Peter Sheridan, living in the same house, heard loud cries issuing from the Dennedy apartments, and they went into the hall to listen. They heard Mrs. Dennedy crying, and after awhile heard her say to her husband, "Oh, James, for God's sake, please don't beat me any more with that club!" After that the two men heard the noise of several blows in the room quite distinctly. Then everything remained quiet. They were accustomed to similar occurrences, and retired. Yesterday morning at an early hour, Mrs. Gregory, not having seen Mrs. Dennedy for two days, went to her rooms to call upon her to ascertain if she was ill. She found her insensible and covered with blood. Horrified, she ran from the room, and told her husband, who, with Peter Sheridan, went to the Twentieth Precinct Station-house and related all that had come to their knowledge. Capt. Washburne sent Roundsman McCarthy and Officer Hanrahan with Gregory and Sheridan to investigate the case. The officers found Dennedy's door locked. They rapped, and Dennedy, in a surly tone, demanded to know "who they were, and what they wanted." McCarthy ordered him to open the door. Dennedy said "he'd be d—d if he would." He was then told that if the door were not at once opened, it would be broken in. The officers were told to go ahead, and the door was at once burst in. Mrs. Dennedy was found lying unconscious on the outside of the bed, her clothes all torn and bloody, her body covered with bruises and discolorations. There was no fire in the room. Dennedy was underneath the bed coverings with his boots and hat on, as if he had quickly jumped in there in a stupid attempt to deceive. He was dragged out and told he was under arrest. An ambulance was telegraphed for, and the insensible woman was removed to Roosevelt Hospital. Dennedy said he had no idea that his wife was injured, and supposed she was merely drunk. While the officers were not watching him he rushed over to a small bureau in a corner, and, drawing from a drawer a heavy club, made a furious onslaught with it on both officers. McCarthy, by a dexterous blow with his mace, disarmed the man and sent him to the floor. When he was seen he was standing in his night-dress, and said he would go to the station-house quietly. When about to be taken out, a new idea struck him, and he asked the officers, as a favor, to be allowed to get his overcoat. Permission was granted, and he went over to a stand in the kitchen. Instead of getting his overcoat, he drew from a place of concealment behind the sink a long, heavy, old, and rusty sword, and with this he made a second assault on his astonished jailers, which, as it was irregular, required all the agility of the policemen to escape being hacked to pieces, and it was only after a prolonged and fierce fight that Dennedy was overpowered and disarmed. He was then locked up in the Twentieth Precinct Station-house and locked up.

When questioned about his wife's injuries, Dennedy said he had no idea how she received them. He said she was accustomed to drink, and probably hurt herself while intoxicated. She prepared his breakfast and dinner on Tuesday, and was then all right. When he went home to supper he found her standing in the hall in a dazed manner, apparently drunk. He was surprised, and asked her what she was doing there. She said she was going home. He told her that was her home. She denied it, and said she was going home to get her husband a supper. He then took her to a seat. The first time that happened afterward, but he was sure he had not beaten her.

At the hospital, all efforts to revive the unfortunate woman proved fruitless. She lay unconscious, and gave no sign of life except by heavy and labored breathing. Her body was literally covered with bruises and discolorations. Her face was mashed into shapelessness. The Surgeon of the hospital made a careful examination of her wounds, and found her to be in an extremely critical condition, suffering principally from concussion of the brain and from a contused wound on the temple. She is also injured by violent kicking, or jumping heavily on that part of her person. It is believed that Dennedy, in a quarrel with his wife about her money, beat her senseless, kicked and jumped upon her, and thought he had found how dangerously he had injured her, locked himself in the room with her to await her death, intending to then flee. He is a laborer, is little known to the Police of the Twentieth Precinct, and is very rough and uncouth in personal appearance.

Officer McCarthy last evening took a certificate about Mrs. Dennedy's dangerous condition from the Roosevelt Hospital Surgeon to Justice Plummer, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, and obtained from the court a commitment against Dennedy, authorizing his detention in the station-house to await the result of his wife's injuries.

VANDERBILT'S NEW LINE.

ARRIVAL OF TWO OF THE STEAMERS—AN UNUSUALLY TEMPESTUOUS VOYAGE.

The Lottie, the first steamer of the new Unicorn Line to be run in connection with the New-York Central Railroad, arrived at Quarantine on Thursday evening from Sicily with a general cargo of green fruit consigned to the Fruit Merchants' Association of New-York. Yesterday morning she went up to Pier No. 41 North River to unload, and will thence proceed to the foot of Sixty-fifth-street to take her first cargo of American produce for Hamburg. She will sail as soon as possible after the 11th inst. She had one of the stormiest voyages which Capt. Weddell says he ever experienced. She left Catania on Nov. 23, Messina on Nov. 26, Palermo on Nov. 29, Malaga on Dec. 7, and Gibraltar on Dec. 8. She had hardly started from the latter place when she met strong head winds, which continued during the first third of the voyage, growing stronger every day. When off Bermuda she encountered a series of gales veering from south-west to north-west, but always coming from the west, and consequently always ahead. The sea was unusually heavy all the time. All her sails except the jib and square forecourse were split, and the forecourse and staysails were carried bodily away. The steering gear broke, but a spare steering gear which was on board was with difficulty rigged up, and this held. The worst weather of all was met with on Dec. 27 and 28. On the latter day, the weather which had looked very dirty, and the wind gradually increased until 4 P. M., when the rapidly-falling barometer and a sudden change in the direction of the gales gave every evidence of the approach of a cyclone. Soon it came from the west-north-west. Capt. Weddell caused his ship to heave to, but was not able to avoid getting into the centre of the cyclone. It rained in sheets, so that the ship's lights did not show at a distance of two feet. After passing out of the centre of the cyclone she felt the force of the gale for an hour and a half. She went ahead under a single sail, that double-reefed. Then the wind struck her from the other side of the compass. While passing the centre of the cyclone Capt. Weddell saw, on his port bow to the south-east, a boat 200 yards away, a vessel which showed a light, evidently from her stern, and probably asking for assistance. When he was on the crest of the waves he could see it distinctly, but when in the hollow it was lost to view. From this he concluded that she had no topgear standing. It would have been madness to send out a boat, as the sea was too terrific, and the Captain could not turn the ship around. Subsequently the Lottie passed through a succession of hurricanes in calms, and when off Barnegat she split her main topsail and main gaffsopsail.

The Zansibar, of the same line, was reported last night as coming up the Bay. In consequence of the loss of the State of Louisiana she will be taken off the route which was originally laid out for her, and will make her first voyage to Glasgow.

THE ELMORE DIVORCE CASE.

In October last Henry S. Elmore, a wealthy resident of Brooklyn and a member of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, of which Rev. T. De Witt Talmage is Pastor, was the defendant in a suit for divorce brought by his wife in Monroe County. The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff. Within a few weeks Mr. Elmore was cited to appear before the session of the church to answer to the charge of immorality, the charge being founded on the verdicts procured against him by his wife. He failed to obey the citation issued by the church and a second summons was issued, directing him to appear before the session on Thursday. Failing to respond to the summons, the session, which was presided over by Dr. Talmage, unanimously resolved that the charges were sustained. On Sunday next the Pastor will read the decree of the session suspending Mr. Elmore from membership in the church.

BROWN THE WHISTLER IN TROUBLE.

"Brown the Whistler" was found yesterday a 10-day prisoner in the Jefferson Market Prison.

He returned from Williamsburg yesterday morning, and got on a Houston-street car to amuse the City. The man who sat next to him turned up his nose and said he was a fool for sitting alongside of nine cents." That made the colored artist very angry, and he quarrelled with his insulter. A row ensued, and the conductor put Brown off the car in spite a hurry that the whistler left behind him his fur cap. The conductor wouldn't stop the vehicle to answer to Brown's cries, but drove faster than usual to make up for lost time, and Brown ran after it through the street, uttering dreadful imprecations, to the great scandal of people in the street. He was arrested by a policeman, and committed for disorderly conduct.

PENNSYLVANIA'S POLITICAL LEADER

SOME OF THE PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS OF THE LATE ROBERT W. MACKEY.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Telegraph, Jan. 2.

On the better side of Mr. Mackey's character were generosity to those in trouble, loyalty to friends, liberality, and truthfulness. He did many acts of kindness which will never be forgotten, and he helped many a man to a good start in the world for which he received no return. He always stood ready to help a friend politically, whether he was of his own or the opposing party. He had always friends to help through Democratic conventions, by ways and means similar to those he adopted in Republican conventions. He was as eager sometimes for the nomination of his Democratic cronies as he was for the success of Republicans—would make journeys, lavish money, and write letters. Often this was in expectation of using the Democrat elected by his influence, but again it would be disinterested and because of personal liking. When Gen. Cass was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor some years ago, Mr. Mackey laboured hard and spent a great deal of money to carry delegates for him, without his knowledge. The reason, he said, was that the General, in a turning point of his (Mackey's) career, had aided in securing him a bank position, and he never would forget it. He worked to nominate Gen. Cass, and would have also worked to defeat him at the polls; but if there was to be a Democratic Governor, he wanted the man that had befriended him when a boy.

In his business relations he was remarkable for his sound judgment. An officer of one of the national banks of this city said of him this morning, "I have always considered Mackey one of the best financiers in the country. He always had a smooth way of getting out of difficulties. In times of financial distress Bob had a way of inspiring confidence that more than once saved his bank. In the case of a threatened run on the institution he was the 'forlorn hope,' and he invariably succeeded in bridging over difficulties. As is well known, on several occasions gentlemen connected with the bank met with serious business reverses, but these, owing to the sound judgment, remarkable foresight, and watchful care of the interests of the bank exercised by Mackey, were never permitted to involve it in any of those business troubles. No improper use of the funds of the bank was ever permitted while Mackey had charge of it."

One characteristic strongly marked was his choice of people about him in public offices. Contrary to general public impression, his appointments were always made with a regard to a faithful performance of duty rather than political assistance. He found a man capable and honest he always protected him in his place without regard to his political importance. Some notable instances of this, in this city, might be called, if necessary. He had a great affection for members of his family, and he never suffered them to want for anything that would contribute to their comfort or happiness.

In his dealings with public men he had two methods. For those whom he respected, he showed great consideration; but for those whom he could buy, he had no mercy. He ruled them with a rod of iron, and while they might be the pets of Governors when pacing before the public, he forced them to prompt and unquestioning obedience when he needed them. One secret of his power of later years, was his possession of dangerous secrets, compromising many public men of both parties. He respected the law to such, in his kindly way, but they knew better than to mistake the hand of iron because of its velvet cleaking.

THE FAILURE OF OLYPHANT & CO.

The schedule in the matter of the assignment of William W. Parkin, George W. Talbot, Robart S. Geary, Talbot Olyphant, Tobias Pim, and John F. Seaman, composing the firm of Olyphant & Co., merchants, engaged in the Chinese trade, was filed in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, by Henry M. Olmstead, the Assignee, by reason of two of the members of the firm being in China. The Assignee states that the accounts of Parkin, Talbot, Geary, and Olyphant exhibit large debit balances, but that he believes these arise in consequence of their being drunk. He was surprised, and asked her what she was doing there. She said she was going home. He told her that was her home. She denied it, and said she was going home to get her husband a supper. He then took her to a seat. The first time that happened afterward, but he was sure he had not beaten her.

ASSETS.
	Nominal Value.	Actual Value.
Merchandise	$154,888 00	$104,013 00
Cash	3,181 64	3,181 64
Book accounts	135,800 78	79,066 84
Total	$293,870 42	$186,261 48

LIABILITIES.
Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company	$18,646 85
Henry M. Faber, (partly secured)	29,000 00
Second National Bank of Cleveland, (partially secured	10,000 00
Ludewig & Co., Lima	13,000 00
Republic of Peru	96,252 59
Prevost & Co	10,000 00
A. Eau	12,100 00
Frances M. Parker	14,508 18
Bird, Savage, Brother & Co	11,040 00
Bazalle & Rennick, (secured)	12,226 95
Drexel, Morgan & Co., (secured)	95,939 86
S. S. Howland & Co., London, (secured)	29,536 00
Brown, Shipley & Co., London	97,285 35
National Bank of the Republic, (partially secured)	15,000 00
Forbes, Forbes & Co., London	150,597 89
Total	$612,143 72

Other small liabilities embraced in the schedule will swell the total to about $645,000.

The schedule on the individual assignment of William W. Parkin gives his personal liabilities amounting to $68,302 48; assets of the nominal value of $70,314 08, and $28,249 02 actual value.

A JUST VERDICT.

Some time ago Crevier Brothers, real estate agents, of Hoboken, rented part of a house to ex-Constable Charles Meuss. The Constable has become much reduced of late, and fell in arrears for rent. Ejectment proceedings were commenced against him, and the dispossess warrant was delivered to Constable John Lewis for execution. When Lewis reached the house he found Mrs. Meuss lying apparently at the point of death, and was satisfied that her illness was not assumed when a doctor's certificate had been shown him, declaring that if she suffered any excitement, she would die. Common humanity forbade the execution of the warrant, and Lewis left the lady and her family undisturbed. The Creviers thereupon sued Lewis for $200 damages in Judge Ogden's Civil District Court. The suit was tried Thursday night before a large crowd of citizens. Judge Hoffman, who defended Lewis, was frequently applauded during the delivery of his address, and every reference to the Creviers aroused a storm of hisses. When the jury rendered a verdict for the defendant, the court-room resounded with cheers.

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

At 10:30 o'clock last night a fire occurred on the top floor of the two-story frame building at No. 314 E. Broome-street, occupied by Joseph Brooks as a necktie manufactory, causing a loss on the stock of $500 and on the building of $300. At the time of the fire, Hugo Brooks, brother of the proprietor, and 26 other persons, were working in the room which looked very dirty, and the wind gradually increased until 4 P. M., when the rapidly-falling barometer and a sudden change in the direction of the gales gave every evidence of the approach of a cyclone. Soon it came from the west-north-west. Capt. Weddell caused his ship to heave to, but was not able to avoid getting into the centre of the cyclone. It rained in sheets, so that the ship's lights did not show at a distance of two feet. After passing out of the centre of the cyclone she felt the force of the gale for an hour and a half. She went ahead under a single sail, that double-reefed. Then the wind struck her from the other side of the compass. While passing the centre of the cyclone Capt. Weddell saw, on his port bow to the south-east, a boat 200 yards away, a vessel which showed a light, evidently from her stern, and probably asking for assistance. When he was on the crest of the waves he could see it distinctly, but when in the hollow it was lost to view. From this he concluded that she had no topgear standing. It would have been madness to send out a boat, as the sea was too terrific, and the Captain could not turn the ship around. Subsequently the Lottie passed through a succession of hurricanes in calms, and when off Barnegat she split her main topsail and main gaffsopsail.

The Zansibar, of the same line, was reported last night as coming up the Bay. In consequence of the loss of the State of Louisiana she will be taken off the route which was originally laid out for her, and will make her first voyage to Glasgow.

THE ELMORE DIVORCE CASE.

In October last Henry S. Elmore, a wealthy resident of Brooklyn and a member of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, of which Rev. T. De Witt Talmage is Pastor, was the defendant in a suit for divorce brought by his wife in Monroe County. The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff. Within a few weeks Mr. Elmore was cited to appear before the session of the church to answer to the charge of immorality, the charge being founded on the verdicts procured against him by his wife. He failed to obey the citation issued by the church and a second summons was issued, directing him to appear before the session on Thursday. Failing to respond to the summons, the session, which was presided over by Dr. Talmage, unanimously resolved that the charges were sustained. On Sunday next the Pastor will read the decree of the session suspending Mr. Elmore from membership in the church.

BROWN THE WHISTLER IN TROUBLE.

"Brown the Whistler" was found yesterday a 10-day prisoner in the Jefferson Market Prison.

He returned from Williamsburg yesterday morning, and got on a Houston-street car to amuse the City. The man who sat next to him turned up his nose and said he was a fool for sitting alongside of nine cents." That made the colored artist very angry, and he quarrelled with his insulter. A row ensued, and the conductor put Brown off the car in spite a hurry that the whistler left behind him his fur cap. The conductor wouldn't stop the vehicle to answer to Brown's cries, but drove faster than usual to make up for lost time, and Brown ran after it through the street, uttering dreadful imprecations, to the great scandal of people in the street. He was arrested by a policeman, and committed for disorderly conduct.

A BRASS TWENTY-FIVE-CENT PIECE.

From the Scranton (Penn.) Republican, Jan. 2.

A gentleman connected with one of the banking institutions in this city offered a young man a $5 gold coin as a New Year's present. The young lady abandoned the counsellor's love furiously, and finally declined receiving it, remarking that now was not to be fooled "with a brass 25-cent piece."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

VARIOUS SUBJECTS DISCUSSED.

THE PAST AND FUTURE OF THE COAL TRADE.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

When the prodigious sum invested in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania and the carrying lines leading therefrom to market is considered—for the aggregated investment exceeds $500,000,000—wonder ceases that the staple fuel is a standard topic.

In the consideration of the coal question, however, it is too often overlooked, in the two great cities where the bulk of the coal investments are held, that a war may prevail among the anthracite corporations in the tide-water markets, and yet not extend to the retail coal-yards in Philadelphia and New-York. Hence not a little that is said about cheap coal is stuff and nonsense in its application to the domestic consumption in Philadelphia and New-York. In Philadelphia, the Reading Company occupies 10 coal yards for local distribution, and, as it is lessee of the Schuylkill Canal, it can, with its cars and its boats, substantially command the retail business. To be sure, anthracite is brought here by rail and by boat from the Lehigh and from the Susquehanna, but the quantities are small contrasted with the arrivals via the Schuylkill Valley. Moreover, in recent years, since the development of the Mahanoy coal basin, a white-ash region of coal as hard and as pure as any in Pennsylvania, the old distinction between the Lehigh white ash and the Schuylkill red ash has disappeared, and the old assumption of superiority has passed away, for now all the varieties of antaracite are in the market.

In New-York City the bulk of the local consumption is supplied by the Lackawanna companies, commonly called the New-York companies, while in the adjacencies to New-York there is more competition than in New-York City, as, for example, in Newark, where the Lehigh Coal Company's coal-yard cost $60,000 to fit it for the retail of coal for local consumption. The general sea-board market, particularly in New-England, is most favored by the low prices for coal quoted in the newspapers. And as trade conducted at a loss is sure to go to wreck, the only safety is in prices that afford a moderate profit. It costs Philadelphians and New-Yorkers too much to mine coal and carry it to tide-water to sell at less than cost to consumers, to whom it is indispensable. And wherein is the difference between selling a product below cost and giving a consumer a premium for accepting coal as a gift? One process may reach ruin sooner than the other, but that is all the difference. The combination of the seven companies entered into Jan. 13, for the calendar year 1878, did not advance coal prices above a very moderate profit, and the unanimous vote cast at a meeting of managers held at Long Branch Sept. 17, to continue the compact until April 1, 1879, was very discretionary, to save the market from a break of prices in Winter time, and after the people of New-York and Philadelphia had stored their supply for domestic consumption. That very necessary measure was frustrated by the action of the Lehigh Valley operators, at two meetings held at Bethlehem in November. What followed? A break in prices, and a depreciation in them; the loading of the good work done, and all because one of the party to the combination "wanted more" of the collective tonnage. No doubt, every one of the seven parties would be pleased to have a percentage of tonnage larger than was allotted to it, but what of the seven parties knew and appreciated that the bottom purposes of the combination were to save vast investments from excessive depreciation, and meantime foster

GLEANINGS FROM THE MAILS

THE ICE-BRIDGE AT NIAGARA.

A SOLID SPAN SIXTY FEET IN THICKNESS.

From the Buffalo Courier, Jan. 2.

A Courier reporter was sent to the Falls yesterday, and learned that the ice-bridge became assured fast on Sunday last. It is really a child of the great snow-storm of last week, which accounts for its uncommonly early formation. For some days a large amount of snow-covered ice from Lake Erie has been passing over the Falls, and about the beginning of the present week old inhabitants began to look expectantly for an ice-bridge, though it was at least a month earlier than the usual appearance of this phenomenon. At 8 o'clock Sunday morning the accumulated mass of ice came to a stand-still beneath the new suspension bridge, and the watchers began to hope that there would be a bridge with a smooth surface—a thing unprecedented so far as history or tradition bears record. But the hope was soon dispelled, for the huge dam of ice suddenly began to heave, grind and break up into fragments, with a loud noise which is described as being exceedingly trying to the nerves. At 10 o'clock there was a second stand-still, and it seemed certain that the bridge had been formed, but at 2 in the afternoon there was a third and more severe disturbance, and the imprisoned waters exerted their giant strength in an effort to be free.

The battle was a grand one. Vast quantities of ice and snow were caught in the water's arms and tossed hither and thither like playthings, fighting and struggling with one another, and grinding themselves to fragments in the fierce engagement. Great mountains, weighing tons of tons, were pushed into the air and remained there as monuments of the fearful battle. Large boulders were torn from the shore and swept into the stream, and the solitary tree which was wont to smash the lazy waves into foam became a victim to the warring elements, though ordinarily it stands three feet above high water. The slow, awful strength of the infuriated waters was so apparent that it seemed as if they must, in the great scene of havoc in twain and escape from their thralldom by some new road; but there was only one gateway open for them, and as they could not break the walls-wide dam in two, they lifted it up bodily and swept away beneath, still raging, but completely conquered by the armies of the Frost King. Having thus succumbed to this inevitable humiliation, the water allowed the ice to rest above it, accepting the yoke which it could not break despite its boasted strength. And now the victor rests quietly—torn and ragged, it is true, but invincible; and so it will remain until the mightier beams of the Spring sun bestow it of its strength and once more restore Niagara to its accustomed freedom. The bridge is nearly a mile in length, extending from a line drawn perpendicularly to Point Lookout, in the American Park, half way to the railroad bridge, and filling the gorge from shore to shore.

The ice mountain is still in its comparative infancy, but if the wind and mercury are favorable it will soon be in a condition to form a coasting hill for the people as it did during the Winter of 1875. The great ice-bridge itself is a counterpart in miniature of an Alpine glacier, and fully as interesting as it 10 days of sea-sickness were a necessary preliminary to seeing it. You have to row, broken ice-fields, the hummocks reaching 10, 15, 20 feet into the air, the startling fissures gaping, perhaps, with a depth of 30 feet in the solid ice; and you have the pure snow ice itself in a condition strange and unexpected to you; but there is an association of terror in this place which does not belong to the genuine glacier, and which may come from the muffled roar of the water-fall; the chasms the thongsts of 200 feet of water seething and boiling beneath your feet. Many of our readers have stood on the bank beside the Whirlpool Rapids and seen the wrathful waters mount upward toward the air in a cauldron strange and unexplainable

JANUARY 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—7th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—5th col.
BOARD WANTED—Seventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—1st col.
COAL AND WOOD—Seventh Page—4th col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Seventh Page—4th col.
DANCING—Sixth Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—6th and 7th cols.
DIVIDENDS—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
ELECTIONS—Seventh Page—4th col.
FINANCIAL—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
HELP WANTED—Seventh Page—7th col.
HOTELS—Seventh Page—6th col.
ICE-CREAM—Sixth Page—5th col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—5th col.
LEGAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—6th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Sixth Page—7th col.
MUSICAL—Sixth Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
POLITICAL—Fifth Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Sixth Page—7th col.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—2d col.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Sixth Page—4th and 5th cols.
SAVINGS BANKS—Seventh Page—4th col.
SHIPPING—Sixth Page—6th and 7th cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Seventh Page—7th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STATIONERY—Sixth Page—5th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Sixth Page—5th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—1st & 2d cols.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—5th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Seventh Page—6th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JAN. 4, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

UNION-SQUARE.—The Banker's Daughter. Matinée.
FIFTH-AVENUE.—Rip Van Winkle. Matinée.
BROADWAY THEATRE.—Uncle Dan'l. Matinée.
STANDARD THEATRE.—Almost a Life. Matinée.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—At Last. Matinée.
BOOTH'S THEATRE.—Evangeline. Matinée.
PARK THEATRE.—Babes in the Wood. Matinée.
COMIQUE.—Christmas Joys and Sorrows. Matinée.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO HALL.—Love's Endurance. Matinée.
NIBLO'S GARDEN THEATRE.—Peep o' Day. Matinée.
MASONIC HALL.—Tom Thumb Troupe. Matinée.
STEINWAY HALL.—Symphony Concert.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition.....10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum.....2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum.....2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum.....1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

The Times Up-town Office—No. 1,258 Broadway.
Paris Office of The Times—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
The Times is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day in this region, diminishing north and west winds, backing to south-west, stationary or slightly higher temperature, rising barometer, clear weather.

The Republican Party of the State is more thoroughly represented in the Assembly than it has been at any time during the last five years. We should, therefore, assume that the choice of Speaker would be controlled by influences in harmony with the intelligence and conscience of the majority of Republican voters. Before making the election of Speaker a sort of preliminary skirmish for the struggle over the nomination of a Republican candidate for Governor, it may be well to bear in mind that the question of whether that nomination will be a barren one or not will largely depend on the record of the present Legislature. Railroad and insurance corporations have had in the past a good deal more to say in the election of Speaker, and, consequently, in the make-up of committees, than was good either for the interests of the party or the public. The man to be chosen now should be conspicuous for his independence of all such influences; should be capable of so molding the legislative action of the Republican majority that the work of the session should be at once a valuable contribution to the welfare of the people of the State, and a help, not a hindrance, to Republican success next Fall, and in the still more momentous struggle of 1880. In deciding on the claims of the two prominent candidates for the Speakership, or of any third candidate who may be preferable to either, these considerations should be kept very clearly in mind.

Controller Kelly has issued another of his delusive debt statements, in which it is claimed that the reduction of the City bonded debt since Dec. 31, 1876, has been $6,392,906. The bonded debt payable from taxation and from the sinking fund was $119,631,313 on the 31st of December, 1876. On the 31st of December, 1878, it was $126,128,815, showing an increase of $6,497,502. The assessment bond debt two years ago was $22,371,400; it is now $13,221,200, showing a decrease of $9,149,800. That is to say, some seven millions of a debt which, two years ago, was regarded as a temporary obligation, payable by property-owners, has been converted into bonds payable from 30 to 50 years hence, out of the proceeds of taxation or City revenues, and the net decrease of the bonded debt in two years is $2,752,298, or nearly four millions less than the amount claimed by Controller Kelly.

But the impudent misrepresentation contained in the Controller's statement does not end here. During the last two years, the revenues of the assessment fund have, according to the official statements of the Department of Finance, aggregated, in round numbers, five millions of dollars. During the same period there has been included in the tax levies $2,700,764 for the redemption of the City debt. That is to say, while property-owners assessed for local improvements and the tax-payers at large have contributed, during 1877 and 1878, seven millions and three-quarters available for the reduction of the bonded debt of the City, that debt shows a decrease of but two millions and three-quarters. Add to the debt one million of bridge bonds, the question of whose issue is now before the courts, and it will be seen that the obligations of the City, as represented by bonds, have been increased by six millions during the last two years, instead of being reduced by a similar amount. Even after taking account of the $3,847,540 which have been added to the sinking fund from the proceeds of market, water, and dock rents, and other City revenues, during the last two years, there has still accrued during Controller Kelly's administration a new debt of over two millions of dollars. His claim of having effected a reduction of $6,392,906 is, therefore, an obvious fraud upon the public.

The Maine Greenbackers won a barren victory. In the lower branch of the Legislature they elected 57 members, the Republicans 66, and the Democrats 27, and there was 1 Independent. There being no choice for Governor, the House, under existing law, was required to nominate to the Senate two candidates to be balloted for by that body. The Senate is composed of 20 Republicans, 2 Democrats, 8 Greenbackers, and 1 Independent, or 20 Republicans to 11 of the combined opposition. The Democrats and Greenbackers of the House combined and sent to the Senate the names of Garcelon and Smith, the former being the Democratic candidate for Governor in the late election, and the latter being the Greenback candidate. To the Republican Senators, who hold the final voting power in this case, was presented the hard alternative of choosing a Democratic or a Greenbacker for Governor. Garcelon, the Democrat is a pronounced hard-money man. Smith proposes that the Government shall print "all the notes which the business of the country needs." The Republican Senators yesterday all voted for Garcelon, who received 21 of the 31 votes cast, Smith receiving the other 10. Garcelon was accordingly declared elected, and the Greenbackers are left without the Governor or a majority in either branch of the Legislature.

It is now some two years and a half since the Democratic National Convention which placed in nomination that eminent financier, Mr. Samuel J. Tilden, called for the repeal of the Resumption act because it was a hindrance to resumption. Probably there never was a more impudent piece of platform juggling accomplished in the United States. The cry was taken up, however, by men who ought to have known better, and Mr. Tilden was supported by many from the avowed motive that his election on the platform made for and by him would hasten specie payments. We trust that these gentlemen, some of whom are just now congratulating the country on the easy and complete success of the first stage of resumption, may be induced to review their course in 1876 in the light of existing facts. If Mr. Tilden had been elected, it is nearly certain that the Resumption act would have been repealed and the country would have been left to "grow up" to specie payments. As it is, the law is in successful and quiet operation, and the only obstacles to the permanence of its action lie in the acts of February and May in regard to silver and the reissue of greenbacks, which Mr. Tilden's partisans have forced on the country, but which, for the time being, are practically void.

THE STATE CANALS.

The business done on the canals of this State during the official year, which closes Sept. 30, yielded a less gross revenue to the State than last year, but the expenses have been so much less that the net revenue is nearly a quarter of a million of dollars. Last year it was merely nominal. The loss in gross receipts was $64,700. The decrease in expenditures was $310,580. The former is due to lower tolls; the latter to better management, brought about by the new system of performing the work on the canals. The superiority of this system is still more strongly shown by a comparison between the expenses for the first third of the year, when the canals were under the care of Commissioners on the old plan, and the remaining two-thirds of the year, when they were under the charge of the Superintendent of Public Works. For the first four months the expenditures were $279,296; for the following eight months they were only $297,807. In other words, the Superintendent kept the canals in repair twice as long as the Commissioners for only 6 per cent. more money. This speaks volumes for the system of responsible and centralized control as against divided responsibility and supervision.

But, although under the improved management expenses have been reduced sufficiently, in spite of lower tolls, to turn a quarter of a million into the Treasury, the unpleasant fact remains that this amount does not pay one-half of the annual interest on the outstanding canal debt, while there is a deficit in meeting the charges fixed by the Constitution upon the canal revenues of $950,029. There is a deficiency in meeting the interest and the sinking fund of the canal debt alone of $750,029. It is plain, therefore, that the canals fail at present to carry out the purpose of the Constitution. They are not self-supporting. On the contrary, they impose a considerable annual burden on the tax-payers. To this result the different canals sustain a very dissimilar relation. The Erie Canal alone, of those of any importance, earns anything above expenses. Yielding $900,000 in gross revenue, or more than nine-tenths of the whole, this canal returns $321,403 to the Treasury. The remaining canals, ten in number, (leaving out of the account three insignificant works,) earn only $88,651, and cause to the State a net loss of $236,508. The Erie Canal, together with the Champlain, the Oswego, and the Cayuga and Seneca, (which last three cost the State $84,000 last year,) cannot, by the Constitution, be sold. Of the remainder, four, the Crooked Lake, a portion of the Chenango Canal, the Chemung, and the Genesee Valley Canals have been abandoned at various periods during the last two years. The others are not of sufficient importance to be greatly considered, and what may be called the canal question relates to the four "constitutional canals" which we have mentioned above, which are permanently the property of the State, and which must remain in their present situation unless the Constitution is changed. They cannot be sold, and they must be maintained from their own revenues; and their revenues do not pay the cost of maintenance and the interest on the canal debt.

Mr. George W. Schuyler, the Auditor of the Canal Department, from whose forthcoming report we take the statistics which we have given, recommends that the constitutional provisions regarding the canals shall be amended, and that those among them which are important channels of commerce shall be made free, and maintained at the expense of the taxpayers of the State. He points out that if a proposition of this character were submitted to the present Legislature, and approved by its immediate successor, it could be voted on by the people in the Fall elections of 1880, and, if adopted, could be put in force so as to make the canals free from the opening of navigation in 1881. Should this be done, he further recommends a change in the locks, and in the form of boats, which would enable the canal to carry, with ease, boats of 275 tons burden, the cost to the State being $700,000, or less.

The question will undoubtedly be seriously considered at the approaching session of the Legislature. The position of the canals at present is an anomalous one. They are a burden on the Treasury, which would be increased to about one million of dollars if they were made free. This, Mr. Schuyler argues, would be many times made up to the State by the increased commerce which would be attracted, and by the increased tax-paying capacity which would follow. The argument is a plausible one, but it is not conclusive. By Mr. Schuyler's own showing the advantage which competing routes to Baltimore, for instance, enjoy is but half a cent per bushel on grain. By abolishing tolls this half cent would be placed on the side of the New-York route. But it is by no means certain that this slight advantage would remain with New-York. Her competitors, who have already reduced their charges far more than than this, and who still find their rates profitable, might very probably effect a still further reduction. But the Government of New-York would have exhausted its resources, and unless it was prepared to pay a premium on freight carried on the canals, would still be unable to compete with its rivals. It is extremely doubtful whether the Legislature or the people are prepared to adopt a radical departure from traditional policy, with extreme uncertainty as to results.

TAXATION AND DEBT IN VIRGINIA.

Everywhere, repudiators and readjusters for their own purposes fix a maximum of possible taxation, and as this is uniformly insufficient for aught beyond the current expenses of local government, bonded obligations are unprovided for. The convenience of tax-payers is alone consulted. The hardship inflicted upon creditors is ignored. In some cases, notably in Tennessee, the limit thus arbitrarily established is so ridiculously narrow that the demand for readjustment is palpably dishonest. All that is needed for the fulfillment of oustanding obligations might be raised, and still the rate of taxation would be light in comparison with that maintained in other States. Default, therefore, implies a deliberate disregard of the public credit which according to present appearances will render Tennessee infamous.

Virginia readjusters avail themselves of the same popular prejudice to strengthen their position. They know that however divided are the people in regard to the policy to be pursued toward the creditors of the State, they are all but unanimous in their opposition to any increase of taxation. They have a better excuse for their sensitiveness on this subject than their neighbors, the Tennesseeans. On the part of the latter, default in the payment of interest on the State debt is rascality, pure and simple. On the part of Virginia it is in some degree the result of causes for which the people are not immediately responsible. No State, probably, suffered so severely from the devastation of the war. Apart from the absolute losses inflicted, the productive resources were so grievously impaired that under the best system of local administration, the utmost care would have been essential to the preservation of credit. In reality, however, its revenue system is the worst imaginable. It bears about the same relation to the fiscal systems of well-organized States that the tariff of the United States bears to the tariffs of civilized nations. Its vexatiousness is equaled only by its unproductiveness. Annual deficits were mainly attributable to this cause. And as with each deficit came a clumsy effort to regain lost ground, the revenue system became worse and worse, until it attained its present characteristics.

At the close of the war, the Federal revenue system was a curiosity. Its tariff had been constructed on the assumption that the commerce of a country thrives in proportion to the obstacles which retard its foreign growth. The internal revenue service seems to have been devised with the view of determining how many burdens home industry and trade could sustain, and live. The report of the Auditor of Virginia shows that the same ideas prevailed in the minds of the local law-givers when they gradually built up its system of revenue. There are a capitation tax and an income tax. The State's own bonds are taxed. Banks are taxed on deposits as well as capital. Loan societies and insurance companies are taxed. Sales of land are taxed. The weighing of live stock is taxable. Legal instruments—wills, deeds, mortgages—are all taxed. The merchant pays a percentage on his purchases: if a Petersburg retailer buys from a Richmond wholesale house, the percentage is paid twice. Everybody in business is taxed in the form of a license. Commission merchants, and agents for articles manufactured out of the State; private bankers and brokers; lawyers and doctors; dentists and photographers; land, house, and labor agents; boarding-houses; even "stallions and jacks,"—all must pay tribute. These are but specimens of the objects of taxation which stupid ingenuity has selected. In addition, of course, are licenses for liquor and tobacco dealers, for auctioneers, and for all amusements. Nothing is too great, nothing too small, for Virginia taxation. There is, however, only a very light tax on real and personal property.

The Virginia revenue system, then, has no parallel among the States. The most proper of all taxation—that on real and personal property—is but fifty cents on the $100, and the assessments are notoriously unequal. There is no revision of the assessments—no central power to secure equalization; and flagrant inequality and injustice are the consequences. The tax on merchants' sales drives wholesale trade out of the State. The retailers go to Baltimore for their goods instead of buying them at Richmond. The whole effect of the system is fatal to enterprise. Trades and professions are paralyzed by cumulative taxes, and the masses of the people suffer in every conceivable manner. And, after all, this system is not productive. The income tax yields less than $35,000 a year, and the total product of that wonderfully ramified system of license taxes—including taxes on sales, but excluding those on liquor-dealers and amusements—was (in 1877) only $541,444. The Moffett punch, which sanguine teetotalers have proposed to introduce into other States, proves to be more potent in the hands of knaves than in those of the tax-gatherer; its yield being less than that derived from the ordinary license system.

It is but just to admit that while a majority of the present General Assembly have shown a readiness to readjust the debt by "scaling" it, they have not been unmindful of retrenchment. The adoption of biennial sessions, reforms in the management of public institutions and in the criminal code, and a tolerably sweeping reduction of public salaries, will tell legitimately in the right direction. We can hardly blame the members for being unwilling to cut down the expenses connected with education, though their professions would be more worthy of respect if their morality in the matter of debt were a little better. To preach for the benefit of the rising generation one day, and to attempt to plunder the public creditor the next, is not the way to improve the reputation of the State or the morals of the people.

Gov. Holliday sets forth an unwelcome truth when he insists that if the State would avert the stigma of repudiation it must submit to an increase of taxation. He indicates an increase of the tax on real and personal property as a source of revenue to be opened in the last resort. It should be the first measure employed. But a reform of the revenue system is as necessary as an increase of the revenue, and unless the two go together, it will be idle to look for the fulfillment of the honorable promises which the Governor would have the State make to its creditors. Even on the basis of the propositions submitted by bodies of creditors, the State will be unable, with its present system of taxation, to maintain its credit. On the other hand, if the State simplify its revenue system, abolishing the vexatious taxes, whose collection costs almost as much as they produce, and substituting for them a heavier tax on real and personal property, with provision for its efficient administration, the net result to the Treasury would be all that can be desired, while the effect on the prosperity of the State would be as marked as the effect on its credit. If the Legislature will supplement retrenchment with revenue reform, the State may be spared the disgrace of readjustment.

CALEB CUSHING'S CAREER.

Although Caleb Cushing lived through many of the most eventful years of the Republic, and was closely identified with all of the political movements of his time, his death has not removed a prominent historical figure from the stage of human activity. His career was long, sometimes brilliant, and often picturesque. His entry into public life may be said to have been made when he was elected to Congress as a Henry Clay Whig, in 1835. It had ended when he was nominated candidate for Attorney-General of Massachusetts by the Butler mob, in 1878. Between these two widely-separated points was crowded a career, active, erratic, and unique. During this period Caleb Cushing so intimately concerned himself with public affairs that it would be impossible to write an accurate history of American politics without frequent mention of his name. The civil war has pushed far back into the past many events which marked the middle life of Cushing's age. It seems as if a century had elapsed between John Tyler's veto of the United States Bank bill and the Virginius affair. Cushing's peculiar powers were roused when the first of these incidents had astonished the country; and his ripened judgment was required in the adjustment of the latter difficulty.

If we consider the advantages which Caleb Cushing enjoyed, we should expect more of his career than we find. Though born in the harsh climate of New-England, his nature was more tropical than Northern. His fertility of imagination and indomitable audacity were Southern. With a natural talent for study, he never knew the cruel necessity of forsaking his favorite pursuits in order to earn a livelihood. Moved by a restless desire to know everything, he had ample leisure to explore any branch of human inquiry which might allure him. He threw himself with enthusiasm into an almost infinite variety of studies. He enriched his mind by foreign travel; and the value of the theories and precepts of philosophers he tested by applying his shrewd observation to great political revolutions which passed under his own eyes. The coldness with which he discussed the French revolution of 1830 was the coldness of a scientific man wholly removed from human interests and passions. To other rare gifts was added a wonderful memory, and we can readily believe that when he reached maturity his mind was richly stored with acquisitions gathered in every department of human knowledge. An incident in a criminal trial would send him to a study of toxicology, and, in a few days, he would surprise specialists with his intimate and accurate knowledge of poisons. Allured by the charm of a foreign nation, he would apparently master its language and literature in his intervals of leisure. Nor was he merely a smatterer in anything. Art, politics, law, jurisprudence, literature, moral science, and occult mysteries of the under-world by turns engaged his attention. These he mastered, not so much as a thoughtful student, but as an explorer driven by a never-satisfied curiosity.

But, with all his mental endowments and his prodigious acquirements, Caleb Cushing never used his learning to accomplish any great work. He was profoundly versed in the law; he was eloquent; he could pour forth a stream of knowledge and captivate those who listened to him by a display of erudition which was as marvelous as it was varied. Nevertheless, this man never seemed to have any purpose in life, or special aim, or errand. He acquired knowledge as other men gather curiosities, for the gratification of a passing fancy. He was methodical only in his modes of study. His mind was like a vast treasure-house, in which were stored rare gems, curious weapons, the gold of other men's thoughts, and the bric-à-brac of the literature of many nations. But this strange museum was without classification or catalogue. Possibly, its owner knew where to lay his hand on any desired object. But, as he never collected these things for any definite purpose, it was only by accident that any of them were ever used.

It is difficult to understand how such a rarely-equipped person could enter into politics, petty and partisan, with great zest. But he was a politician before he was a voter. When he was 25 years old he was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. Ten years later he entered Congress, where he staid eight years. From that time forward he was constantly in public life. As Minister to China, when he was 43 years old, he negotiated the first treaty between the United States and the Celestial Empire. In the Mexican war, he showed his contempt for the Whig opposition by raising and equipping, at his own cost, a regiment which he took into the fight. New-England-born and looking to New-England for political support, he threw himself into the cause of the fire-eaters, and, as leader of the Breckinridge men at Charleston and Baltimore, in 1860, he was in the van of the secessionists. Later, when the flag at Sumter had been struck, he calmly recorded his opinion that the Union was finally dissolved; and when, years afterward, this record was used to defeat his nomination for Chief-Justice of the United States, he treated its revival with apparent indifference. As State or national legislator, jurist, Minister, attorney, or politician, he invariably manœuvred for his own personal advantage, with a disregard for consistency that was simply grotesque. No reproof could abash him; no presentment of his piebald record moved him. Probably Lowell, in his famous satire of "John P. Robinson he," fairly summed up the political side of Caleb Cushing's character, thus:

> "Gineral C. is a dreffle smart man,
> He's ben on all sides that give place or pelf;
> But consistency still was a part of his plan—
> He's ben true to one, an' that is himself."

It is easy to see why such remarkable acquirements as those of Caleb Cushing's were not utilized as they might have been. It is also easy to see why a man with so many useful talents failed to make a broad mark on the history of his country.

THE ARKANSAS BOURBONS.

The outrageous election frauds in South Carolina and Louisiana have attracted so much public attention that the equally audacious, though it may be not so extensive, crimes against the ballot in other Southern States have been somewhat lost sight of. This is particularly true of Arkansas, in the interior and almost inaccessible portions of which the White League Bourbons, without regard for the laws or fear of punishment, seem to have thrown away even the show of decency, controlled the election absolutely according to their own sweet wills, and utterly without regard to justice, or even that rude sense of fair play which is commonly supposed to exist among thieves. The whole truth respecting the election farce which occurred in that State last November will in all probability never be known, but enough has recently been made public to indicate that the Teller committee would find a good field for investigation in the neighborhood of Helena and Little Rock. Nor would they have to look for their witnesses among "carpet-baggers" or "black Republicans." Native white men—Democrats to the manner born, but who, for good reasons, have rebelled against the regular organization—could, as we are informed upon unquestionable authority, be found by the dozen, not only ready but anxious to testify against the Bourbon leaders, who by fraud and force controlled the election. Foremost among such men may be named Judge J. Cole Davis, a lifelong Democrat, a man who for four years risked his life for the Confederate cause, and who since the war has been prominently identified with the interest of the section in which he lives. When such men publicly sustain the very worst charges yet brought against the Southern White League, it will hardly be possible for even the adroit Senator Garland or the fair-spoken Chalmers to attribute such accusations to "partisan malice." And this is precisely what Judge Davis does. In the most public and detailed manner he accuses the leaders of his party of fraud, violence, and outrage.

The main points of his forcible indictment against the Arkansas Bourbons are well worthy of the most careful consideration. He is, and has been for a long time, a respected citizen of Helena, in that State, and last Fall exercised what is popularly supposed to be the right of every American citizen, by allowing himself to be nominated as an independent candidate for Mayor of his city. It must be distinctly understood that he accepted the nomination in question without any regard to the Republican Party; indeed, he and every one else in Helena knew that the Republican Party as such was dead in Arkansas, dead almost beyond hope of resurrection. He was "an Independent," but none the less a Democrat; yet because he dared to oppose the White League candidate of the regular Bourbon organization, he was treated with very much the same consideration which was accorded to Jere Haralson, the unfortunate black man who ran for Congress in Alabama, or to Messrs. Smalls and Rainey in South Carolina. A few mornings after he was nominated his wife opened the door of their residence to find on the threshold the traditional pine coffin with which the gentlemen of the Kuklux are in the habit of intimidating the families of men who are bold enough to oppose their will in politics. On the day following this little evidence of Bourbon activity, a number of Democratic ruffians, "the wild young men," as they are called, who do the desperate work for the White League leaders, met Judge Davis on the streets, and, holding their "long navy sixes" to his head—pistols, by the way, which were supplied by the Democratic State Government—assured him that if he did not retire from the campaign he would soon be in the coffin which had previously been placed at his door. He still persisted in going on with his canvass, however, and finding that there was every prospect that he would be elected, the Democratic Committee determined that even more desperate means would have to be resorted to. Accordingly, a meeting of the "native and best" was called, and resolutions were passed calling upon him to retire at once from the canvass or "take the consequences." A sub-committee was then appointed to wait on him—it will be noticed that everything was done with becoming order—and he was peremptorily informed that he must cease to be a candidate or he would be forced to leave the State. He at once went to the Court-house, and from its steps tried to inform the crowd which had assembled of the outrageous conduct of the Bourbon leaders. The committee was before him, however. Several of "the wild young men" were already on the ground when he arrived, and with a dozen pistols pointed at his head, he was obliged to seek safety in his home.

In spite of all those violent demonstrations, however, he announced that he was still a candidate, and, with the aid of a few friends, who armed themselves for the purpose, he made the best canvass possible under the circumstances. On election day, however, when he appeared at the polls to encourage his followers, he was seized by twenty-five or thirty of the White League, the Chairman of the Democratic County Committee at their head, and held in close confinement for several hours. His friends protested, but fearing for their lives, neither he nor they offered any resistance. Meanwhile, the election farce went on. Two or more armed Democrats were stationed at every poll. Judge Davis' tickets were taken from the hands of those who desired to vote them; others were taken from his boxes, torn up, and thrown into the streets. Many of his friends were abused and driven from the polls, while others, believing that discretion was the better part of valor, remained at home and did not attempt to vote at all. The result was that the usual city vote of eight hundred and fifty was reduced to two hundred and forty-eight, and, of course, the regular Bourbon candidate was declared elected. These statements will, doubtless, seem almost incredible to many good people in the law-abiding portions of the country, and yet they give but a faint idea of the means by which the Arkansas Bourbons win political victories. Men who, like Mark Gary, think that "there is room for only one party in the South," and there are many such men in Arkansas, stop at no act, no matter how desperate, which promises to bring about the result they desire. How long Judge Davis and the other "Independent" Democrats in the cotton States will allow their rights to be thus trampled upon, however, remains to be seen.

Complaints of the hap-hazard way in which the trains of the East Side elevated railroad are run are loud and frequent. Repeated failures to heat the cars, in such weather as this, are nothing short of an outrage, and the delays experienced above One Hundred and Sixteenth-street, for lack of switching facilities, as well as the capricious fashion in which down-town stations are passed without stoppages, involve a species of neglect which, if persisted in, should be treated as a flagrant violation of the company's charter. The employes of the New-York Elevated Road are earning a character for rudeness and incivility which will not conduce to public indulgence for its manifold shortcomings. In its entire management the corporation seems to have taken a leaf from the book of its surface rival, the Third-avenue car line, and the greater value of the franchise which it has received from the public will merely have the effect of securing for it a proportionately larger share of public odium.

The terrible accident which occurred on the British iron-clad Thunderer by the bursting of a 38-ton gun while at practice on Thursday last is not the first calamity that has befallen this powerful vessel. By this last disaster one of the turrets was destroyed, ten men were killed, and thirty odd wounded. The Thunderer is one of four heavy turret ships which the English Government has built of late years. Each carries two turrets, in which are a pair of guns, consequently the whole armament is but four cannon. The Thunderer carried a pair of 35-ton guns in one turret and a pair of 38-ton guns in the other, firing a 700-pound shot or shell. In one of these turrets the guns were worked by hand, in the other by hydraulic machinery. The other ships of the same series are, The Devastation, which has a pair of 35-ton guns in one turret, and a pair of 25-ton guns in the other; the Dreadnaught, which is armed with four 38-ton guns that fire 800-pound projectiles; and the Inflexible, which is to receive on board the four 80-ton guns now being finished at Woolwich. The Thunderer was so named after a 74-gun ship in Lord Howe's fleet in the fight of June 1, 1794, and which was also one of Nelson's fleet at Trafalgar. She was launched in 1872, but did not start upon her trial trip until in July, 1876. On the 14th of that month, while steaming in Stokes' Bay, one of her boilers exploded, instantly killing fifteen persons and injuring many others. There were 500 men on board at the time, of whom thirty were in the stoke-hold at work at the furnaces. All were either killed or fatally injured; and between fifty and sixty others were shockingly scalded. The naval Captain who had been assigned to her command by the Admiralty had one of his fingers blown off and his arm paralyzed by the shock. Sailors are a superstitious set of persons, and hereafter it will be somewhat difficult to keep the ship's crew on board the Thunderer up to the required standard in numbers.

Hardly any man of his time was so unwearied and unwearying a student as the late Caleb Cushing. The extent and variety of his reading were prodigious, and his bodily condition was usually so excellent that for a period of 40 years he spent, as he himself often said, 16 hours out of every 24 in intellectual pursuits—writing, studying, and the like. It scarcely seems possible that any man could continue such application—and in Cushing's case it was absorbing—for so long a time, especially without taking in-door or out-door exercise, and yet retain unimpaired health. The closet appeared to be his natural place. He very rarely, if ever, went into the outer air except on some special business, and he never seemed to need recreation. Fine conversationalist though he was, and fond of talking at times, he had no love of society or even of companionship, but found his pleasure and comfort in mental acquisition. His constitution was more German than American—he could spend his life over books and manuscripts, neglect, if not violate, every hygienic law, and remain vigorous and capable of the severest labor nearly up to four-score. A striking evidence of his political inconsistency was that, after the civil war had begun and while he was shut up at Newburyport, (fearing that, on account of his avowed sympathy with the South, he might be mobbed if he should appear in the streets,) he conceived the idea of raising a regiment for the Union cause, and placing himself at its head. After assurance by his friends that he need have no apprehension of violence in a law-abiding town like Newburyport, he emerged from his house, and would have gone into the field, had not the Government naturally considered him, from his antecedents, an unfit person to command Northern troops. He would no doubt have been loyal enough; for, apart from self-interest, which was always his highest purpose, the coldness, not to say rudeness, of his reception at Charleston, S. C., when sent thither by President Buchanan to make some arrangement about Fort Sumter, had materially alienated him from the South, as it necessarily would a man of his extraordinary self-love and egotism.

The strict prohibition at the Naval Academy at Annapolis against smoking seems to be managed somewhat as Roman Catholic indulgences are. It was removed for a time through the mediation of the wife of Admiral Worden, (she was probably regarded by the students as a saint on account of her kind offices,) who had great influence with Secretary Robeson; but it was afterward reimposed. Now Secretary Thompson has again suspended the rule as a recompense to the students for gallantry displayed at the late fire at Annapolis. Those familiar with the capital of Maryland must know that it is anything but progressive, and that the means furnished by the city for extinguishing fires are of the most old-fashioned and least effectual sort. When the fire got well under way, the students went to the aid of the clumsy firemen, and showed them what should be done. They ran their hose down to the River Severn, when the fire-plugs failed to supply water, and put out the flames with becoming energy and promptitude. Therefore are they permitted to smoke. How can it be expected that these young fellows should regard smoking as an evil, if the privilege of smoking be granted them as a reward for good deeds! They must very naturally attach undue importance to a habit which, whether pernicious or beneficial, is associated with honor and honorable achievement. If the Directors of the Naval Academy believe smoking injurious, they have taken the worst way possible to demonstrate their belief.

Horace W. S. Cleveland, landscape architect, of Chicago, was engaged some years ago to lay out the boulevards leading to South Park and the Park itself, in that city. As he has talent, taste, and skill, as well as strict integrity and conscientiousness, he performed the work thoroughly and faithfully. But when it had been finished another set of Park Commissioners had been chosen, and Cleveland not being their man, they refused to pay his very reasonable bill, pretending that it was extravagant; that the work was not properly done, &c. They thought to bully him into compliance with their terms, but he was not of the temper they had imagined. He refused to abate an iota of his charges, and declared he would recover the whole amount at law. He was as good as his word. After various vexatious delays, the case has just come to trial before a jury who have given a unanimous verdict in favor of his full bill—$3,526 90. The jury was out only a few minutes, and its members expressed to the plaintiff personally their regret that they were not allowed to add interest to the amount awarded. The Chicago public has been, from the first, in full sympathy with Cleveland, and it is pleasant to know that once in a while an honest, determined man can get justice in a great city against an incompetent and corrupt political ring. The example is as encouraging as the fact is wholesome.

Considerable excitement of the minor sort still exists in Boston on account of the unwillingness of some of the orthodox churches there to admit journalists into the sacred fold, because they break the Sabbath by working on Monday morning newspapers. It seems that a number of the Boston journalists hold evangelical opinions, and these have taken active sides with their rejected brothers of the quill, believing that any and all of their labor performed on Sunday comes under the head of necessary labor, and that any other view savors of pharisaism. They aver, with pertinency and truth, that clergymen and church congregations are always pleased to see Sunday services and sermons chronicled Monday morning, and that if such chronicling be a sin, the over-pious readers must in some degree share the sin. All the liberal feeling of Boston is evidently opposed to this narrow construction of Sabbatarianism; but some unco righteous persons are stoutly in favor of it. Not much personal interest would be felt in such discussion in other large cities, from the fact that the majority of working members of the press are either occupied with professional duties or compelled to take all the rest they can get the first day of the week. In Boston many of them go to church because it is respectable, and then it does not involve much labor to get up a Boston newspaper on any day of the week. We should suppose that the Boston scribe might have leisure to attend church three times on Sunday, and he ought to, for the benefit of many scribes who cannot.

Now that New Year's has passed, the thousands of men who faithfully discharged, as it is termed, their duty to Society, (as if any man, in any strictness, owes duty to so conventional and indifferent a thing as Society, and as if Society cares for or thinks of any such duty,) must be puzzled at the variety of notions and customs bearing upon cards. At some houses in New-York it is thought etiquette for a caller to present his card, on entering, to the servant at the door, to be carried to the drawing-room, and to wait until it has been delivered. In other instances, he is expected, very awkwardly, to accompany his card. In other houses, he is looked to to leave his card in the basket in the hall on retiring. In other houses, where he has been a frequent visitor, it is held superfluous, affectedly conventional, to send in or leave his card at all, intimacy of acquaintance dispensing on the 1st of January with such formality. There is the same difference of understanding as to sending cards. Many ladies deem it unnecessary to send out cards to their masculine acquaintances before New Year's, unless they have changed their residence or are to receive at a new place. Others think it a social duty to send out cards to all the gentlemen they would like to see. Some gentlemen, not intending to call, send cards before New Year's; some consider it proper to have their cards delivered on the day itself; others, again, count it polite to send cards after the 1st, so that it may appear as if they had tried to call, and had been unable to get round; the special politeness consisting in the untruth it implies. These are very small matters; but it would be well, since New Year's calling is so general, if there were some uniformity of habit and harmony of opinion respecting them. Men well acquainted with society are frequently at a loss just what to do; and no wonder, when they are expected to act differently at nearly every other house they visit. They would be saved much needless trouble if ladies who had decided to receive would send out cards, before the 1st to all the gentlemen they desired to see. Then they would not have to drive—or walk—blocks out of their way to find a basket at the door, or to learn that Miss or Mrs. —— had moved, or was out of town. It ought to be understood that, when gentlemen do not receive cards from ladies, their presence on New Year's is not wished for.

GENERAL NOTES.

Col. William M. Lowe, Congressman-elect from Alabama, now repudiates in toto an "interview" the Democratic paper in Washington recently printed. But the paper asserts its genuineness.

Miss Fanny Davenport and Miss Mary Anderson are to appear at rival theatres in St. Louis next week, and the Times-Journal of that city thinks it will be interesting to observe the kind of audiences, rather than the size of the audiences, that patronize them.

A Virginia newspaper prints a paragraph which says: "A marriage took place at Burkeville on Saturday, the groom being Col. Foster, aged 72, and the bride a Miss Cumings, but three years his junior. They had been affianced since youth, but as the lady insisted on a gift of $30,000 from the Colonel on her wedding day, the event was postponed until the lady compromised."

The Maryland Penitentiary paid $6,356 36 above expenses last year. During the year 498 prisoners were received, making the total 1,355. The highest number in prison at one time was 983, the lowest 857, and the average 939. The average under contract was 717, at trades as follows: Shoemakers, 361; furniture marble work, 161; stoves and hollow ware, 119; shirts and overalls, 55; ready-made clothing, 47. (females.)

Hon. Alfred M. Waddell has written a note to the Raleigh (N. C.) Observer in which he says: "Recently, several 'interviews,' purporting to have been held with me, have been copied in North Carolina papers. I have not been 'interviewed,' that I know of, since Congress assembled, but have seen attributed to me conversations which never occurred, and in one instance a perversion of one remark made in reply to a mere salutation from a man whose connection with the press I did not even suspect." Here is a chance for certain Democratic journals to explain.

WINTER'S SUDDEN ATTACK.

COLDER WEATHER THAN FOR SEVERAL YEARS.

WHERE THE COLD WAVE CAME FROM—EXPERIENCE IN THIS CITY—FERRY TRAVEL DELAYED BY ICE IN THE RIVERS—COMPARISONS WITH THE TEMPERATURE OF PREVIOUS YEARS.

"A cold snap like this don't happen twice in 20 years," said an old North River Captain last evening, and the Captain did not greatly exaggerate, as anybody who faced the icy wind yesterday will testify. It was the coldest day New-York has had since Jan. 10, 1875, when the thermometer touched 6° below zero. At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the mercury was down to 2° below zero, having risen 1° since early morning, when it stood at 3° below. After 8 o'clock the mercury rose steadily, but slowly, during the rest of the day and evening, and at 11 o'clock last night it marked 11° above zero at the Signal Service Station on the Equitable Building. The "cold snap" gave a fair warning of its approach on Thursday afternoon. At 5 o'clock on that afternoon the thermometer stood at 27°, near which it had ranged all day. Between that hour and midnight it fell 23°, standing at 4° above zero at 12 o'clock Thursday night. It kept on falling until about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, when it reached the lowest point, 3° below zero. The fall of the thermometer was accompanied by an increase in the velocity of the wind, which blew from the north-west during the forenoon, at a rate of from 20 to 28 miles an hour. In the afternoon it veered to the west ward, and gradually decreased in velocity as the mercury rose.

This cold wave has traveled all the way from the British possessions, where it gathered up its forces for a grand march eastward, about Dec. 31. On its way it passed through Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, and other intervening States, with a temperature varying from zero to 24° below, and at one place, Brecknridge, Minn., the mercury fell to 30° below zero.

The effect of the sudden cold here was especially disastrous to ferry travel on the North and East Rivers, particularly on the former. A large field of pack ice extended along the New-York side of the North River from the Battery up for miles, and all the ferry-lines had trouble in making their trips. As the day advanced this trouble increased, and in the afternoon the ice had become so firmly wedged that hours were sometimes consumed in a single trip of a ferry-boat. At 4 o'clock the Corslandt-Street Ferry-boats were laid up. Later on the Desbrosses-Street line ceased running, and about 8:30 o'clock the last trip on the Twenty-third-street branch of the Pavonia Ferry was made. The other ferries kept their boats going, but only at very long intervals, and with great difficulty. The Hoboken Line had fourboats running, one behind the other, and, when necessary, the boats in the rear of the procession would help the forward one to cut through the ice by pushing it with full steam on. The boats of the Pavonia Ferry Line made trips so nearly regular during the day that no connections with the Erie Railroad trains were missed. In the evening, however, this line was as seri usly delayed as any of the others. Capt. Bloodgood, of the Susquehanna, said: "I've been steam-boating out of New-York for 42 years, and I've seen such an ice blockade as this. Three years ago we had one, but it was only for a short time, while, unless the wind changes, this ice will be so frozen together that no boat can get through it to-morrow." The boat which left Jersey City at 9:30 P. M. reached the foot of Chambers-street just two hours and a half afterward. On the East River the ferry-boats were delayed from 15 minutes to an hour during early forenoon, but in the afternoon the wind and tide carried the ice out enough to enable the boats to make their trips nearly or quite on time.

The Fire Department took special care of the fire hydrants, and no trouble was experienced from their freezing.

All the Police Precinct station-houses were crowded to overflowing last night by lodgers who begged a shelter from the bitter cold. There being 436 lodged altogether throughout the City.

The only vessel which sailed from this port yesterday was the steam-ship Harold, bound for Rotterdam. Several other vessels had cleared, but it was deemed advisable that they should remain at their docks until the weather moderated somewhat. A steam-ship from the Mediterranean and the Fanita, which put back, were the only vessels which arrived and passed Quarantine during the day. The steam-ship Zanzibar arrived, but did not come up to the City. All the sailing vessels have probably been driven off the coast by the westerly gales of Thursday night and yesterday.

The steam-ship Fanita left for Philadelpnia on Thursday afternoon, and while going down the Bay was struck by a furious squall, which carried away the foremast, and as it fell it struck the boat's pilot, Thomas Capt. Smith severely on the foot. She then started to return, an', after a terrific night, reached Quarantine yesterday morning. She came up to the City for repairs and for medical assistance for the Captain later in the day.

Owing to the large quantities of ice in the North River it has been a most impossible to get the furnace fires of the steam-ships during the past week, and there has, consequently, been considerable delay in loading.

The following record shows the changes in the temperature for the past 24 hours, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy, where it is not exposed to the wind:

1878.	1879.		1878.	1879.
3 A. M.	11°	3:30 P. M.	23°	10°
6 A. M.	11°	6 P. M.	20°	9°
9 A. M.	12°	9 P. M.	17°	9°
12 M.	18°	12 P. M.	16°	8°

Average temperature yesterday.....6°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year.....16½°

The coldest days experienced in this City since the beginning of the year 1872, according to the quotations from Hudnut's thermometer were:

Year.	Date.	Average Temperature.	Lowest Temperature.
1872—	Tuesday, March 5	7½°	4°
1873—	Wedne-day, Jan. 29	6½°	3°
	Monday, Feb. 24	9½°	—2°
1874—	Thursday, Dec. 31	4½°	2°
1875—	Sunday, Jan. 10	5½°	—2°
	Tuesday, Jan. 19	9½°	zero
	Tuesday, Feb. 9	9½°	zero
1876—	Sunday, Dec. 10	11½°	5°
1877—	Thursday, Jan. 4	14½°	11°
1878—	Monday, Jan. 7	15°	8°
1879—	Friday, Jan. 3	6°	zero

In December, 1872, there was a week of steady cold weather, beginning and ending as follows:

Date.	Average Temperature.	Lowest Temperature.
Sunday, Dec. 22	10½°	5°
Monday, Dec. 23	20½°	10°
Tuesday, Dec. 24	19½°	9°
Wednesday, Dec. 25	10½°	9°
Thursday, Dec. 26	11½°	9°
Friday, Dec. 27	11½°	8°
Saturday, Dec. 28	17½°	10°

In 1875, Tuesday, Jan. 19, was a day of remarkable changes. At 6 o'clock in the morning the mercury stood at zero; at 9 A. M. it was 10° above zero, but by 3:30 P. M. it had run up to 22°. From Feb. 5 until Feb. 15, 1875, there was some bitterly cold weather, alternating in a strange fashion with periods of comparatively high temperature, as the following table will show:

Date.	Average Temperature.	Lowest Temperature.
Friday, Feb. 5	15°	10°
Saturday, Feb. 6	20½°	10°
Sunday, Feb. 7	10°	8°
Monday, Feb. 8	12½°	9°
Tuesday, Feb. 9	2½°	Zero.
Wednesday, Feb. 10	12½°	2°
Thursday, Feb. 11	24°	22°
Friday, Feb. 12	17°	11°
Saturday, Feb. 13	22½°	16°
Sunday, Feb. 14	7½°	3°
Monday, Feb. 15	9½°	5°

A youth named Henry McGimpsey, of No. 208 Elm-street, employed as porter at No. 637 Broadway, while splitting wood last evening had his hands so benumbed by the cold that he lost his grip on the axe-handle and struck himself a hard blow with the bit on the instep, producing a painful and serious wound. He was removed home.

Mary Sloane, of No. 248 West Seventeenth-street, was found helpless in the street yesterday evening suffering from the cold, and removed to the New-York Hospital.

Mary McKown, of No. 434 East Thirteenth-street, was found insensible from the cold at Eighteenth-street and Sixth-avenue last night, and removed to the New-York Hospital.

Jane Collins was found lying in the alley-way in the rear of No. 54 Oliver-street last night, insensible from exposure to the cold, and removed to the Chambers-Street Hospital.

James Bell, a homeless man, was found helpless in a barn on Woodlawn Heights last evening, with both feet frozen. Dr. Varian had him removed to his office, and there attended him preliminary to removing him to a hospital.

Mary Dessart, a homeless woman, was found insensible from cold on No. 450 Third-avenue last evening, and removed to Bellevue Hospital.

Lawrence Kenney, aged 40, of No. 406 First-avenue, was found at a late hour last night, at Twenty-first-street and First-avenue, insensible, suffering from a fracture of the skull, produced by a fall on the pavement. He was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

BELOW ZERO ALMOST EVERYWHERE.

A COLD WAVE EXTENDING OVER THE WHOLE COUNTRY—THERMOMETER FROM SEVEN DEGREES ABOVE TO THIRTY BELOW ZERO—SNOW-STORM IN THE NORTH.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Extreme cold weather still prevails in this city, and over the entire West and North-west. The lowest temperature for years has been experienced here the past three days, and much suffering is reported in consequences. The telegraph wires along the Michigan Central, Illinois Central, and several Western roads have suffered for miles from contraction. Freight and passenger trains on all railroads are much behind time. At an early hour this morning a Cottage Grove-avenue car caught up with a farmer's team that was proceeding at a slow pace in the car-tracks. The driver called for the farmer to him out, but he paid no attention. Upon examination, the man was found frozen to death, sitting upright on the seat, with the lines in his hand. Last evening a team stopped at Armour's packing-house at the stock-yards. The horses stopped of their own accord. No driver was visible. After standing there for some time, one of the men from the packing-house went out, and behind one of the boxes with which the wagon was loaded, the driver was found, dead. It is supposed that he froze to death. The mercury has ranged from 23° below zero at 5 o'clock this morning to 21° at 7, 20° at 8, 19° at 11, and 10° at 1 o'clock. This evening the weather has moderated somewhat.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

MILFORD, Penn., Jan. 3.—The cold wave swept down from the north-west yesterday afternoon, lowering the temperature nearly 40° during the night. The mercury marked 10° below zero at 6 o'clock this morning. In the more remote districts, several families in destitute circumstances suffered severely from the cold. The Delaware River is frozen over, and teams can cross with safety at many points. To-night the weather is bitterly cold.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 3.—In this city the thermometer went down as low as 3° below zero during the night, and at noon to-day registered 7° above. At the United States Signal Office, from all parts of the State reports of intense cold are received, the thermometer at an early hour ranging from 4° below at Harrisburg to 8° below at Pottsville. At Wilmington, Del, the mercury showed 5° below zero. At 5 o'clock this morning the thermometer at Germantown marked 6° below, a fall of 40° since noon yesterday. The harbor here is full of ice, but is kept open by the ice-boats. The Schuylkill River is completely frozen from its mouth inland.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Jan. 3.—The Signal Service Office reports the lowest temperature during the past 24 hours at 7° below zero. In more exposed parts of the city it fell to 21° below zero. There is great detention of travel on railroads, particularly on the Pennsylvania Central, from the severe weather.

ALTOONA, Penn., Jan. 3.—A heavy storm is raging in the mountains. There is a blockade upon the railroads, and trains are considerably delayed. The thermometer marks 14° below zero.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 3.—The cold snap set in here last evening. The thermometer at sunrise this morning indicated 7° above zero, a fall of 40° since 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A high wind from the west has prevailed during the past 24 hours.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 3.—The weather is extremely cold. The thermometer this morning at daylight had fallen to 6° above zero. The river is filled with floating ice, making navigation above this point hazardous.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The temperature after midnight gradually fell until, this morning, the mercury stood 22° below zero in exposed places in the city. Several cases of freezing are reported, but only one was fatal. Reports from points north-west show that the cold is continued and severe, with the thermometer recording from 15° to 30° below zero. Trains are delayed on all the roads, but no accidents of importance have occurred. The mails are being moved, but active efforts are being made by the Relief Society to relieve the destitution and discomfort.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Jan. 3.—The westerly gale which commenced about 3 P. M. yesterday has not subsided in the least. The cold is so intense that all out-of-door work is suspended. This morning at 7 o'clock the thermometer indicated six degrees below zero, and it is now growing colder hourly. At Sandy Hook and Shrewsbury Bay the ice is packed as far as the eye can reach. The steamer Jesse Hoyt and the Herald yacht are frozen in at the New-Jersey Southern Railroad dock. The latter tried to get out this afternoon, but found a return after getting 200 or 300 yards. There are in sight, fast in the ice, three schooners, two sloops, and two tugs. The embargo is caused by the wind blowing the drift-ice from New-York Bay into the Shrewsbury, where the intense cold freezes it into a solid mass four or five feet thick.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The storm which commenced yesterday morning in this region is more severe than the preceding one, and traffic on the railroads is almost entirely suspended. Snow-plows are of little use, as the drifts fill as fast as clearances are made. On the New-York Central Road no trains are moving to-day from here. Several passenger trains are delayed at Batavia. The Niagara Falls and Lockport trains are stalled at North Buffalo Junction. The Erie Railway generally is blocked. The last train came in at 1 o'clock this morning. The force of the storm extends from Castile to this place. On the Lake Shore Railroad the snow is very deep in the vicinity of Dunkirk. No trains have started from here to-day. The last train on that road came in at about 10 o'clock last night. A train on the Buffalo and Jamestown Railroad is stalled at Gowanda. The Canada Southern is running trains from 12 to 24 hours irregularly. The Great Western is blocked at Niagara Falls. The Grand Trunk trains have been generally abandoned. It is still snowing slightly, but blowing hard. The snow is drifting badly. It is intensely cold, the thermometer registering about zero. Several cases of suffering have been reported, but no fatal cases at this writing.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The gale and cold continued, and by to-morrow every ferry-boat on the New-York City will be abandoned. At all points above here people cross the river on the ice, and at Rhinebeck and north of that place teams cross on the ice. Railroad telegrams report more serious detentions of trains than for years. The Albany Division West of Rochester the running of all trains has been abandoned, and west of Utica to Buffalo the situation is worse than during the last storm. Two trains ran as far as the track to-day, but no one was injured. His engine and tender, and was dragged and pulled by the No engines were wrecked. Nick Hagar, engineer of the second engine, was thrown down the embankment with his wrecked engine, and badly bruised. Alexander Girvan, his fireman, was also badly bruised and about the head. Second Engineer James Van Voipt, of the head engine, escaped, but his fireman fell between the engine and tender, and was dragged and pulled by the broke block of feed-pipe, and badly bruised and hurt internally. All these men lived in Albany. The express messenger, George H. Butts, of Syracuse, was overturned with his car, and held down by 3,000 lbs. The car took fire and was consumed, together with its contents. Butts' hand and head were cut, and he barely escaped being burned alive, being entirely surrounded by fire when rescued. Albert Eldridge, a brakeman, had his foot sprained. A train was made up at the wreck, and reached Utica at 9:50 P. M., going east at 10:30. No other train from the west is expected to-night. The engines at Canastota are badly wrecked, but it is thought the track will be cleared by morning. The Rome and Watertown Road is hopelessly snowed under. The Utica and Black River train from Ogdensburg and Watertown made but one trip, and will be run out in the morning at 7:30 o'clock. The Southern Road trains are all right.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 2.—The temperature is notably milder here, the thermometer registering 5° below zero at 10 o'clock. A Bismarck, Dakota Territory, dispatch says the temperature is 33° below zero there. A special dispatch from Winnipeg to the Pioneer-Press reports that the temperature is 29° below zero there; 35° below at Fort Reilly, and 60° below at Battleford, the capital of North-west Territory.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 3.—A brakeman named Opdyke was frozen to death while coming down on a Central Railroad freight train from Easton.

A man is also reported frozen on a North Pennsylvania freight while going over the Central Division. His name is not yet known.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 3.—Mattie Cary, 9 years old, living near Vincennes, started for school a mile distant yesterday morning. Some time afterward she was found lying on the ground insensible and badly frozen.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Jan. 3.—Benjamin Davis was frozen to death at Mill Hollow last night.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 3.—An unknown man was frozen to death near Macon last night. He had been intoxicated. The mercury registers 13½° above zero.

SEVERE WEATHER ABROAD.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—A Dundee correspondent, writing last night, says: "A fresh snow-storm has begun in Scotland. It is falling heavily, and it is not unlikely that there will be a renewal of the railway blockade in the North. The frost is as keen as ever, and the air piercingly cold. All outdoor labor, which had been partially resumed, has again been interrupted."

A Paris correspondent telegraphs that the rivers continue to rise in consequence of the rapid thaw, the Rhone, Saone, and Loire being among the rivers principally affected. The Aube has overflowed its banks in the direction of Nogent.

GOVERNMENT WEATHER REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4—1 A. M.—The area of high barometer and cold west winds has continued slowly moving south and east, and is central in the Lower Missouri Valley. An area of remarkable low pressure has very slowly moved over Eastport into New-Brunswick. North-west gales and high winds have prevailed throughout the lake region, Middle States, and New-England. The rivers rose on Friday at Cincinnati and Nashville, but fell at Augusta, Cairo, Memphis, and Vicksburg.

INDICATIONS.

For the South Atlantic States, rising barometer, stationary temperatures, north-west winds, partly cloudy weather.

For the Gulf States, northerly winds, stationary temperature, increasing cloudiness, possibly followed by sleet or rain in the south-west, slightly higher pressure.

For Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, stationary or higher temperature, stationary, followed by lower barometer, north-west to south-west winds, clear or partly cloudy weather.

For the upper lake region stationary, followed by falling barometer, warmer, cloudy, or hazy weather, diminishing north-west winds.

For the lower lake region and the Middle Atlantic States, diminishing north and west winds, backing to south-west, stationary or slightly higher temperature, rising barometer, clear weather, and over the lower lakes, light snow.

For New-England, rising barometer, stationary or lower temperature, partly cloudy weather and westerly winds.

For the Pacific States, increasing cloudiness, and in the North Pacific, possibly light rains.

The rivers will generally fall where not frozen.

Cautionary signals continue at Lewes, Grand Haven, Milwaukee, and Ludington. Cautionary offshore signals continue at Indianola, Galveston, Port Eads, Pensacola, Mason, Cape Lookout, Cape Hatteras, Kitty Hawk, Cape Henry, Norfolk, Baltimore, Cape May, Atlantic City, Barnegat, Sandy Hook, New-York, New-Haven, New-London, Newport, Wood's Hall, Boston, Section Eight, Portland, Section Seven, and Eastport.

MISS HAUK IN BOSTON.

"CARMEN" AND THE PRIMA DONNA WELL RECEIVED BY A CRITICAL AUDIENCE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The first appearance of Minnie Hauk and the opening performance of "Carmen" to-night attracted a large audience, though the house was not full. It was an audience coolly critical, reserved and slow to express its verdict, either on prima donna or opera. The reception of Mlle. Hauk on her entrance upon the stage was respectful, though quiet, but as the evening wore on the applause was more pronounced, and toward the close of the performance grew at times quite hearty. So it was with the reception of the opera. During the first act the audience was exasperatingly cool, and at its close the majority appeared indifferent and disappointed. But as the work unfolded itself, its interest steadily increased; it grew more and more appreciative, warmer in its applause, and at the fall of the curtain at the close of the third act was almost flattering in its indorsement. But it can not be said that it was heartily enthusiastic. Toward the close of the performance it approached enthusiasm as nearly as at any time during the evening. That the opera gave a good deal of real pleasure to its hearers, and that the prima donna steadily grew in favor was clearly manifest, and considering the mood of the audience, and its disposition to form its own opinion, Mlle. Hauk may well be gratified with her evening's work. It was not a triumph, but it was a success. She succeeded in considerably thawing an icy but very polite company. It was a genuine Boston audience that sat before her, including the closest musical critics.

It is stated that Marie Rôze Mapleson, having recovered from her recent illness, will arrive here to-morrow, and appear in the "Magic Flute" next Wednesday.

RECENT DEATHS.

Roswell C. Brainard, an old and well-known resident of Brooklyn, died late on Thursday night at No. 145 Hewes-street, in that city, at the age of 59 years. In 1853 he was elected Alderman of the Second Ward, his opponent being Senator Frank Spinola, now of this City. He held the position of Corporation Counsel for one term, and was for two years President of the Board of Supervisors. In politics he was a Democrat, and at one time was Chairman of the Democratic General Committee of Kings County. In 1858 he was elected Surrogate and was re-elected in 1864 for four years. At the time of his death Mr. Brainard was head of the law firm of Brainard & Rice, whose offices are at No. 59 Liberty-street, in this City.

James S. Rockwell died at noon yesterday at No. 4 Montague-terrace, Brooklyn, after a short illness of diphtheria, induced by scarlet fever. Mr. Rockwell was 60 years of age, and had been a resident of Brooklyn for 38 years. At the time of his death he was a Director in the Brooklyn Trust Company, and the proprietor of a large morocco factory situated at the corner of Flushing and Classon avenues. Mr. Rockwell was reported to be worth $1,500,000.

COLLISION ON A MICHIGAN ROAD.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 3.—The Michigan Central Pacific express, bound west, ran into the west-bound Kalamazoo accommodation train, at Pokagon, at 8 o'clock this morning. A passenger named Milhan, of Berrien, had a leg broken, and the engineer of the express train and several others were somewhat cut and bruised. The cause of the accident is unknown. It is stated that a severe storm prevailed at the time the accident occurred.

AN INSANE WOMAN'S WANDERINGS.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Jan. 3.—Bridget Tobin, of New-York, who is evidently of unsound mind, was brought to the Police station here yesterday. She stated that she wished to go to Halifax. A ticket was given to her, and she was placed on the train, but returned by a later train. She was arrested, and remanded on charge of vagrancy for further inquiry.

DEATH OF A PROVIDENCE MERCHANT.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—William Whittaker, a retired merchant, died suddenly this afternoon, of apoplexy, at the age of 64 years. He was an Alderman-elect in the Fourth Ward, and Vice-President of the Phœnix National Bank. He was greatly respected.

A HORSE STOPS, NEVER TO GO AGAIN.

From the Elizabeth (N. J.) Journal, Jan. 3.

Last night, at about 6 o'clock, as Martha Keating was driving through Third-street, between Fulton and Franklin, his horse suddenly stopped, like "Grandfather's Clock," never to go again. The animal did not fall, but stood like a statue, almost immovable. An effort was made to start him, but without success. He would move his fore feet a little and try to drag his hind feet, but could not move them. There he stood, his kindlege and a part of his body as stiff as if they were frozen, though that was impossible. For three hours the horse stood there, his hind legs perfectly rigid, and though strenuous efforts were made by rubbing and warming and binding up in cloths, &c., to restore power of locomotion, they proved wholly unsuccessful. At about 9:30 o'clock, when it became evident that the poor horse must freeze to death if left in the bitter cold, he was mercifully shot. It is supposed that the horse was attacked with paralysis, though their usually acts differently, causing the limbs to become limp. The case is a very singular one.

HOW COBB WAS POISONED.

BISHOP TELLS HIS PART IN THE CRIME.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY AS TO COBB'S ILLNESS—MRS. COBB'S PARTNER IN GUILT UPON THE WITNESS STAND—A SHAMEFUL CONFESSION OF ILLICIT RELATIONS AND MURDER.

NORWICH, Conn., Jan. 3.—The Cobb trial was resumed this morning, the crowd being if anything greater than ever before. The first witness called was Dr. Perkins, Cobb's family physician. He testified that Cobb was in good health up to Feb. 22 last, two weeks after Mrs. Bishop's death. That night he was taken ill with symptoms indicating poison of some sort; the symptoms might have been produced by either arsenic or aconite; his first impression was that they might have been caused by accidental lead-poisoning, but later he thought it was aconite; the symptoms were continued during the next few days, and he especially called Mr. Cobb's attention to the possibility of poisoning, and asked him to consider carefully what chance of accidental poisoning he remembered; Mr. Cobb was unable to think of any possible means by which anything of the sort could have happened; he found the water-pipes in Cobb's house all of iron, and that no fresh paint had recently been used; on May 29 Dr. Perkins again visited Cobb, and found him greatly debilitated, with symptoms of numbness and tingling increased. He gave him some bismuth powders. He next visited the house on June 6, after Cobb's death. Up to this time he had only suspected an accidental poisoning, and had never suggested intentional poisoning, either in Mrs. Cobb's presence or elsewhere.

Upon cross-examination, Dr. Perkins said that up to February he knew little of Cobb; he gave him bismuth on the suspicion that the tea was steeped too long; Cobb had taken some medicines of his own notion, without consulting with any physician, among them bitters and elixir of phosphates; the scaly appearance of the skin noticed on Cobb's body at death had been seen some time before death; it was unlike anything he had ever seen in skin diseases; the quinine prescribed as a tonic could not have caused nausea; the elixir of phosphates ought not to have caused headache or distress at the stomach; he considered one-eighth to one-thirtieth of a grain of arsenic a medicinal dose, and from one to three grains a fatal dose; he did not believe a man could accustom himself to the use of large doses.

Dr. Carleton testified that the authorities regarded from one grain of arsenic upward a fatal dose; in exceptional cases one-half a grain had caused death; two grains were generally sure, but there was no definite maximum known; he thought there had been cases where a man had taken five grains and lived; he defined the symptoms of arsenic poisoning; he could not decide whether arsenic or aconite caused Cobb's February illness, but thought it was aconite; the April illness was due to arsenic; the May illness was also due to arsenic; inflammation of the eyes, of the œsophagus and stomach, and dropsy, were almost certain accompaniments of chronic as distinguished from acute arsenic poisoning; they were all absent in the Cobb case; he did not regard Roscoe as an authority on arsenic eating; he did not believe any one could accustom himself to eating the twentieth of a grain of arsenic a day for more than two or three weeks safely; arsenic was neither a cumulative nor an accumulative poison. In the absence of any other cause of death he should say that Cobb's death was caused by arsenic. The falling out of Cobb's beard was not in itself a conclusive proof of arsenical poisoning. He did not believe the story about the Styrians eating arsenic. He knew of one woman who took arsenic to improve her complexion, &c., and it came near killing her. The effect of its continued use was not really to fatten but to bloat.

Dr. Paddock testified as to Cobb's symptoms more definitely than any of the preceding witnesses. He had lost strength; the sense of feeling in his feet was so deadened that he could not regulate his step; his wrists dropped; he was unable to hold his pen, and was generally weak and devoid of sensitiveness; he thought the symptoms at that time (June 2) characteristic of lead poisoning. There were, however, all symptoms also of arsenic poisoning, and several positive symptoms of lead poisoning were absent. After the analysis of Prof. Doremus and the post-mortem examination, he had no doubt that Cobb's death was caused by arsenical poisoning. He did not believe that human lungs could habituate themselves to the use of arsenic. He did not believe the Styrian story.

Dr. Johnson testified that on the morning of the day, but of the trial came this afternoon, when Wesley W. Bishop, already under indictment for killing his wife, and also for complicity in Mr. Cobb's murder, was put upon the stand. He was a tall, well-built scientific interest attached to Prof. Doremus' testimony, but the shocking nature of the facts about which Bishop was to talk awoke the most morbid appetite of the community. Several leading clergymen of Norwich were in the audience. There was a throng of women, neighbors of the prisoner on trial, who crowded into the area within the bar. Bishop is somewhat tall, about 32 years old, with very angular frame, light brown mustache and goatee, a blue eye, and a general look of moral weakness. His manner was composed, and, though he spoke in so low a tone that Judge Park needed to ask him to raise his voice, he told a very straight story. There was no hesitation, no contradiction, no emotion. He even corrected the counsel for the State as to one or two dates in his questioning. The story harmonized, wherever he alluded to the case of Cobb, with the testimony of the local physicians as to the times of Cobb's illnesses. There was considerable sparring again over the introduction of certain parts of the evidence, but with one exception Judge Park allowed the testimony. Mrs. Cobb sat directly facing the witness, not 15 feet from him, but did not raise her veil.

Bishop began by saying that he was not actuated in his examination by either promises from the authorities or by hope of saving his life. His acquaintance with Mrs. Cobb began 14 years ago, one year before he married. His own wedding prevented the development of that acquaintance until late in 1876, when he met her at a masquerade ball and danced with her. His calls for orders at Cobb's house, on behalf of the grocery store with which he was connected, promoted their intimacy through 1877. During that year he called every day or two and then grew more frequent though short. Assignations were made at these times for certain public excursions, like that by steamer to Newport on July 4. Then, as tokens of friendship, they exchanged presents. Soon after they began to exchange notes, especially when either of them was out of town, and after a time including poetry to one another. Although most of these letters had been destroyed, the correspondence being clandestine, much of the poetry was preserved and read in court and provoked much laughter. It was of a very sentimental character. Here is a sample of it:

> "Since I have known his love was mine,
> How bright the stars above me shine;
> How bright the joy that on me beam,
> Though I awake as though I dream.
>
> "Now night no longer veils the sun,
> For I an endless day have won,
> And life has grown a gift divine,
> Since I have known his love was mine.
>
> "Since I have known his love was mine
> No longer need my soul repine;
> With joy I lift my eyes above,
> For God is love, and love is love.
>
> "This is no longer earth to me,
> While o'er it flows the glory sea,
> For life has grown a bliss divine,
> Since I have known his love was mine."

In the original the word "her" was written for "his" where italics are used, but Mrs. Cobb, in transcribing, made the change to suit the case. Bishop identified many sheets of stuff sent by Mr. Waller, the State's Attorney. Lies were told Cobb about the presents to his wife; she pretended to have bought the mirror given her out of town. A pearl-handled, gold-tipped pencil-case she said she had found on a steam-boat. Bishop also gave her stationery. She reciprocated with a blue silk handkerchief, a watch-charm, and cup and saucer. By October the affair took the way of visitations and exchanging kisses. In November they had got along to embraces and sitting in each other's laps. Late in October he asked the question: "Kate, do you ever expect to be mine?" They decided that, while Bishop could treat his wife so that she would sue for divorce, Mrs. Cobb could only free herself by burying her husband—he was so true. Bishop having no money except what he made by his position, was unsuited to such a step. The next night she declared her purpose to bury Cobb, and asked Bishop to help her. They then talked about various kinds of poisons.

They had secret meetings while Cobb was away at Masonic or Grand Army meetings, and were necessarily short. In December they fixed a time for their marriage. They thought both might be free in March. Bishop's mother was to live with Kate, would be Bishop's birthday. A continuation of presents ensued, and before December was ended Bishop had bought morphine for Mrs. Cobb. During January, 1878, Mr. Cobb was out of town four nights in succession, and Bishop staid with Mrs. Cobb every late each night, but their intercourse was marked only by endearments. They were alone and unobserved. Early in March Bishop's mother was taken ill, Kate would be there, his kind legs perfectly rigid, and though for four days; his wife was then dead, and his mother lived with him; he informed Mrs. Cobb of this and gave her a latch-key to his house; she came each night; the second and third nights they had criminal intercourse. It may be here noted that Mrs. Bishop died on Feb. 7, but no testimony was given in regard to her death or its cause by the witness. During this month, he called with Mrs. Cobb about usually acts differently, causing the limbs to become limp. The case is a very singular one. obtained morphine pills for Mrs. Cobb, but she had had no chance to use them. On the night of Feb. 25 Bishop called on Mrs. Cobb, and she told him that she had given aconite recently, and it had "raised the devil;" next morning she told him about the illness which the Doctors described in the morning's testimony. In March there was an article in a paper about arsenic, which made them think about that poison. Almost immediately Bishop bought half a grain, and Mrs. Cobb expected to use it immediately. Bishop went out of town for two days for appearance's sake, and expected to read of Cobb's death while away, but no chance offered for some time.

The first arsenic was given by Mrs. Cobb in coffee, but without effect. What the witness told of the administration of poison he had from Mrs. Cobb's own lips. He did not see it; he merely bought the poison for her. Mrs. Cobb kept this up, sometimes giving three doses a day, until they thought Cobb was proof against poison. A point was reached when Cobb had a great deal of bowel difficulty and was much exhausted, and Bishop refused so far as to ask Mrs. Cobb whether or not they had better abandon the attempt, but she scouted the idea and resolved to try morphine a while. Arsenic was bought twice again, however, at Bishop's request, but Mrs. Cobb said she would put into her husband's bottle of bitters, which he was taking, and also into his whisky. Bishop bought strychnine on June 4, which was the last poison the stand a long time, from which it is inferred that much more direct testimony will be taken to-morrow, aside from the cross-examination, which will doubtless be very rigid. Great curiosity is felt to see how Bishop will stand this latter test, for it is believed by many that he is suppressed or distorted the truth in some parts of his story, and is a man of no originality or quickness.

BURNED AS SOON AS FINISHED.

DESTRUCTION OF A NEW CHURCH, COSTING $200,000, AT ST. LOUIS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ST LOUIS, Jan. 3.—The members of the Second Baptist Church of this city, at the conclusion of the services on Sunday morning, Dec. 22, held a business meeting in order to raise money to clear off the debt on their new church, a barely-completed structure at Twenty-seventh and Locust streets. Forty thousand dollars was required to complete the payment of the $200,000 which the church had cost, and the whole sum was raised on the spot. The church building was acknowledged to be the handsomest in the city, its architecture being of the early English style, with a pleasing admixture of the Gothic. It had a seating capacity of 1,500.

The final touches were being put to the church by the painters this morning, one of whom, a few minutes before 10 o'clock, discovered it to be on fire. The Fire Brigade was soon on the spot, and worked hard to relieve themselves of the odium resting upon them since the serious fire of three weeks ago. Their bad management, had incurred the displeasure of the underwriters, many of whom are clamoring for the removal of Chief Sexton and the reorganization of the department. They could do nothing to save the church, however, which at 10:30 A. M. was doomed to almost total destruction. The flames enveloped the body of the church and crept up the steeple, which, at 10:50, fell across the street.

At about this time the Mary Institute, the leading female educational establishment of the city, and a branch of the Washington University, was discovered to have caught fire from the burning church opposite. The firemen, however, succeeded in saving the institute after little damage had been done. The loss to the church society will reach about $200,000, of which $140,000 is covered by insurance, as follows: Americs, Newark, $5,000; Home, New-York, $10,000; Guardian, England, $2,500; Ætna, Hartford, $5,000; Connecticut, $5,000; Hartford, $10,000; Boylston Mutual, $3,000; American Central, $10,000; Continental, $10,000; German American, $7,500; Franklin, Pennsylvania, $5,000; Phœnix, Hartford, $5,000; Springfield Fire and Marine, $10,000; Manufacturers' and Marine, $7,500. The Board of Trustees, at the head of which is Hon. Nathan Cole, Congressman from the Second Missouri District, met this afternoon and decided to begin the rebuilding of the church to-morrow morning. The cause of the fire is unknown.

OTHER LOSSES BY FIRE.

A fire at Portland, Me., at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, destroyed Fling's wool factory, on Grove-street, and four tenement-houses, turning several families into the street. The wool factory was valued at $45,000, and was not insured. The tenement-houses were owned by Elliot F. Clark, and were insured for $3,000, of which $1,800 was in the Niagara Insurance Company in favor of the Portland Savings Bank. The total value of the houses destroyed was $6,000.

At 9 o'clock Thursday night, Dempster Hall, at Evanston, Ill., was discovered to be on fire, and it was burned to the ground in a short time, all efforts to save it being unavailing. The loss is $25,000; insurance, $12,000. The building is a theological home of a large number of the Methodist ministers of the North-west, it being a branch of the Evanston University.

A fire at Reese, Mich., on the Detroit and Bay City Railroad, Thursday night, destroyed the stores of John Westerby, J. L. Hood & Co., J. J. Gies, and the Post and express offices. The total loss is estimated at from $7,000 to $10,000. There is no insurance. The fire originated in Newberry's store, and was caused by a defective stove-pipe.

The new First Presbyterian Church, at Quincy, Ill., caught fire at 9 o'clock Thursday night and was completely destroyed. Loss, $60,000; insurance, $20,000. The church was to have been dedicated next Sunday. The fire caught from the heating apparatus.

The roof of C. A. Rudd & Co.'s grocery, and J. M. Eaton's shoe store, at Columbus, Ga., were burned at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. The damage to the buildings and stocks is $6,000, which is fully covered by insurance.

The two-story farm-house of Benjamin Neal, at Walpole, Mass., was burned yesterday. Loss, $2,000; no insurance. Mrs. Neal perished in the flames. The fire originated accidentally.

A fire at Chatfield, Minn., on Tuesday, destroyed the Post Office Building and its contents and seven other buildings. The loss is estimated at about $12,000; partly insured.

A house at Allentown, Penn., belonging to Mrs. Jones, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Loss, $5,000, on which there is no insurance.

A fire at Schoolcraft, Mich., Thursday night destroyed five stores on the main street. The total loss is estimated at $15,000; insurance unknown.

Martin Griffin's farm buildings, at Walpole, Mass., were burned yesterday morning. Loss, $5,000; insured.

The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's railroad depot, at Roure's Point, N. Y., was

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, Jan. 3, 1879.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since our last have been as follows:

B. & P. Pkts. bags	38	Molasses, hhds.	2,621
B. W. Flour, pkts.	4,350	Spirits Turp., bbls.	1,410
Broom-corn, bales	43	Oil-cake, tons	46
Cotton, bales	3,073	Oil, Lard, bbls.	6
Castor-seed-oil, bbls.	200	Oil, crude, bags	1,063
Copper, slabs	16	Pork, bbls.	97
Eggs, pkts.	842	Beef, pkts.	67
Flour, bbls.	15,852	Cut-meats, pkts.	6,779
Corn-meal, bags	396	Lard, kegs	2,195
Wheat, bushels	60,750	Lard, kegs	125
Corn, bushels	19,000	Butter, pkts.	1,503
Oats, bushels	7,875	Cheese, pkts.	3,901
Malt, bushels	1,175	Dressed Hogs, No.	588
Barley, bushels	4,400	Sugar, hhds.	322
Grease, pkts.	298	Stearine, pkts.	50
Grass-seed, bags	58	Tallow, pkts.	76
Hides, No.	283	Tobacco, hhds.	72
Hides, bales	431	Tobacco, pkts.	304
Hops, bales	18	Whisky, bbls.	526
Leather, sides	16,363

BOOTS AND SHOES—Business in the wholesale line has been very large on the unchanged prices.

BRICKS—Have been held with firmness, on a moderate offering of the leading kinds, but have been quiet.

COFFEE—Rio quoted nominally with sales of 2,545 bags per Graf Bismarck, 619 bags per Kron Prinz, and at Baltimore 1,300 bags per May Queen, and 1,400 bags per Acadjoack, on private terms....Other kinds firm, but quiet.

COTTON—Has been comparatively quiet for early delivery at unchanged quotations, closing dull.... Sales are reported for 3,073 bales, of which 290 bales, (of which 167 bales were on last evening,) including 300 bales to shippers, 163 bales to spinners, 15 bales to speculators, and 2,595 bales in transit....Low Middling quoted at 9 1-16c.@ 9 3-16c.; Strict Low Middling at 9 ⅛c.@9⅜c.; Middling at 9 7-16c.@9 9-16c.; Fair at 11 1-16c.@11 3-16c.

And for forward delivery, Cotton has been in fairly active request, but at reduced prices....Sales have been reported since our last of 78,700 bales, of which 14,100 bales were on last evening, and 65,600 bales today,) with 5,600 bales on the calls, on the basis of Middling, January, 9.56c.@9.61c.; February, 9.64c.@ 9.69c.; March, 9.80c.@9.81c.; April, 9.93c.@9.94c.; May, 10.05c.@10.06c.; June, 10.16c.@10.17c.; July, 10.28c. @10.29c.; August, 10.41c.@10.42c., showing a decline of 17@19 points, closing barely steady....The receipts at this port to-day were 3,073 bales, and at the shipping ports, 7,915 bales, against 22,516 bales for the same day last week, and thus far this week 139,172 bales, against 192,873 bales same time time last week....The receipts at all the shipping ports since September 1, 1878, have been 2,706,420 bales, against 1,509,374 bales in the preceding Cotton year....Consolidated exports (six days) for Great Britain, from shipping ports, 45,879 bales; exports to the Continent, 29,363 bales; stock at France, 9,337 bales; to the Channel, —— bales; consolidated stock at the ports, 854,412 bales....Stock in New-York to-day, 104,907 bales....The week's exports hence have been 6,573 bales.

FLOUR AND MEAL—A moderate business has been reported in State and Western flours, partly for export, City Mill Extras again attracting a fair share of attention from buyers for the West Indies, and low grade Spring and Winter Wheat Extras meeting with some demand for the English markets. Holders generally were offering supplies with freedom, and responding promptly to the requirements of purchasers at the ruling figures, which in instances indicated a slight weakling in values, though the changes have been reported since our last of 10,100 bbls. of all grades.....Included in the reported sales were 2,700 bbls. low Extra, for shipment, within the range of $3 50@3 65 for Spring Wheat, and $3 65@3 90 for City Mill Extras, mostly for the West Indies, at $4 60@5, the latter for fancy, mostly at $3 85@4 50, of which about 1,900 bbls. from Ice-houses, at $4 60@5 00, inclusive, (these at $4 35@5 50 for very poor to fancy, mainly at $4 50@5 10;) 750 bbls. Patent, (chiefly at from $5 75@7 50;) 2,750 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (these at $3 65@5 60, largely at $3 85@5 for poor to choice, of which 1,700 bbls. for export at $4 35@ $5, and $5 25@5 60 for strictly choice to fancy;) and 525 bbls. Patent Extras, (these chiefly at $5 25@7, of which 200 bbls. poor as low as $5;) 440 bbls. Superfine, (these at $3 for very inferior to $3 60 for fancy;) and 580 bbls. No. 2, (these at $2 40@3, mostly at $2 50@ $2 80; 50 bbls. fancy Indiana Winter went at $3;) and sundry lots Minnesota and Sour Flour at from $2 25@$5, mostly at $3 75@4 50.....Southern Flour dull, and quoted weak; 700 bbls. sold, in lots, mostly Extras, at from $4 25@5 50, chiefly for export.

RYE FLOUR—Has been quiet and steady; 200 bbls. sold, in lots, mostly Extras, at $3 90@4 10.

Corn-meal was quiet but steady; 396 bbls. sold, in lots, at $2 15@2 35 for Brandywine, and $2 10@2 15 for Western.

Wheat, bushels.....60,750 | Lard, kegs.....125
Corn, bushels.....19,000 | Butter, pkts.....1,503
Oats, bushels.....7,875 | Cheese, pkts.....3,901
Malt, bushels.....1,175 | Dressed Hogs, No.....588
Barley, bushels.....4,400 | Sugar, hhds.....322
Grease, pkts.....298 | Stearine, pkts.....50
Grass-seed, bags.....58 | Tallow, pkts.....76
Hides, No.....283 | Tobacco, hhds.....72
Hides, bales.....431 | Tobacco, pkts......304
Hops, bales.....18 | Whisky, bbls.....526
Leather, sides.....16,363

BOOTS AND SHOES—Business in the wholesale line has been very large on the unchanged prices.

BRICKS—Have been held with firmness, on a moderate offering of the leading kinds, but have been quiet.

COFFEE—Rio quoted nominally with sales of 2,545 bags per Graf Bismarck, 619 bags per Kron Prinz, and at Baltimore 1,300 bags per May Queen, and 1,400 bags per Acadjoack, on private terms....Other kinds firm, but quiet.

COTTON—Has been comparatively quiet for early delivery at unchanged quotations, closing dull.... Sales are reported for 3,073 bales, of which 290 bales, (of which 167 bales were on last evening,) including 300 bales to shippers, 163 bales to spinners, 15 bales to speculators, and 2,595 bales in transit....Low Middling quoted at 9 1-16c.@ 9 3-16c.; Strict Low Middling at 9 ⅛c.@9⅜c.; Middling at 9 7-16c.@9 9-16c.; Fair at 11 1-16c.@11 3-16c.

And for forward delivery, Cotton has been in fairly active request, but at reduced prices....Sales have been reported since our last of 78,700 bales, of which 14,100 bales were on last evening, and 65,600 bales today,) with 5,600 bales on the calls, on the basis of Middling, January, 9.56c.@9.61c.; February, 9.64c.@ 9.69c.; March, 9.80c.@9.81c.; April, 9.93c.@9.94c.; May, 10.05c.@10.06c.; June, 10.16c.@10.17c.; July, 10.28c. @10.29c.; August, 10.41c.@10.42c., showing a decline of 17@19 points, closing barely steady....The receipts at this port to-day were 3,073 bales, and at the shipping ports, 7,915 bales, against 22,516 bales for the same day last week, and thus far this week 139,172 bales, against 192,873 bales same time time last week....The receipts at all the shipping ports since September 1, 1878, have been 2,706,420 bales, against 1,509,374 bales in the preceding Cotton year....Consolidated exports (six days) for Great Britain, from shipping ports, 45,879 bales; exports to the Continent, 29,363 bales; stock at France, 9,337 bales; to the Channel, —— bales; consolidated stock at the ports, 854,412 bales....Stock in New-York to-day, 104,907 bales....The week's exports hence have been 6,573 bales.

FLOUR AND MEAL—A moderate business has been reported in State and Western flours, partly for export, City Mill Extras again attracting a fair share of attention from buyers for the West Indies, and low grade Spring and Winter Wheat Extras meeting with some demand for the English markets. Holders generally were offering supplies with freedom, and responding promptly to the requirements of purchasers at the ruling figures, which in instances indicated a slight weakling in values, though the changes have been reported since our last of 10,100 bbls. of all grades.....Included in the reported sales were 2,700 bbls. low Extra, for shipment, within the range of $3 50@3 65 for Spring Wheat, and $3 65@3 90 for City Mill Extras, mostly for the West Indies, at $4 60@5, the latter for fancy, mostly at $3 85@4 50, of which about 1,900 bbls. from Ice-houses, at $4 60@5 00, inclusive, (these at $4 35@5 50 for very poor to fancy, mainly at $4 50@5 10;) 750 bbls. Patent, (chiefly at from $5 75@7 50;) 2,750 bbls. Winter Wheat Extras, (these at $3 65@5 60, largely at $3 85@5 for poor to choice, of which 1,700 bbls. for export at $4 35@ $5, and $5 25@5 60 for strictly choice to fancy;) and 525 bbls. Patent Extras, (these chiefly at $5 25@7, of which 200 bbls. poor as low as $5;) 440 bbls. Superfine, (these at $3 for very inferior to $3 60 for fancy;) and 580 bbls. No. 2, (these at $2 40@3, mostly at $2 50@ $2 80; 50 bbls. fancy Indiana Winter went at $3;) and sundry lots Minnesota and Sour Flour at from $2 25@$5, mostly at $3 75@4 50.....Southern Flour dull, and quoted weak; 700 bbls. sold, in lots, mostly Extras, at from $4 25@5 50, chiefly for export.

RYE FLOUR—Has been quiet and steady; 200 bbls. sold, in lots, mostly Extras, at from $3 90@4 10.

Corn-meal was quiet but steady; 396 bbls. sold, in lots, at $2 15@2 35 for Brandywine, and $2 10@2 15 for Western.

Wheat, bushels.....60,750 | Lard, kegs.....125
Corn, bushels.....19,000 | Butter, pkts.....1,503
Oats, bushels.....7,875 | Cheese, pkts.....3,901
Malt, bushels.....1,175 | Dressed Hogs, No.....588
Barley, bushels.....4,400 | Sugar, hhds.....322
Grease, pkts.....298 | Stearine, pkts.....50
Grass-seed, bags.....58 | Tallow, pkts.....76
Hides, No.....283 | Tobacco, hhds.....72
Hides, bales.....431 | Tobacco, pkts

JAN 1879

THE REAL ESTATE MARKET.

The following business was transacted at the Exchange yesterday, Friday, Jan. 3:

Louis Meyer, foreclosure sale, Charles M. Marsh, Esq., Referee, sold the five and six story brick buildings, with plot of land 97.3 by 85, Nos. 637 to 643 Park-avenue, north-east corner of 41st-st, a portion of the Grand Union Hotel property, for $75,000, to Irvin McDowell, plaintiff.

William Kennelly, foreclosure sale, John C. Bushnell, Esq., Referee, sold the four-story brownstone front dwelling, with lot 18.9 by 100.5, No. 5 East 49th-st., north side, 162.6 feet east of 5th-av., for $17,000, to G. P. Kissam.

Hugh N. Camp, foreclosure sale, Carlisle Norwood, Jr., Referee, sold the four-story brick building, with lot 25 by 75, No. 1,517 1st-av., west side, 51.8 feet south of 81st-st., for $5,000, to Janet De Witt, plaintiff. Also, similar sale, William P. Dixon, Esq., Referee, disposed of the following unimproved 24th Ward property: One plot of land, 94.7 by 110.2 by 140.9 by 100, on Clinton-av., north-west corner of 1st-st.; two lots, each 25 by 200, on Clinton-av., north side, 250 feet west of 2d-st., running through to Willard-av.; a plot of land, 50 by 126.8 by 53.2 by 144.10, on Clinton-av., south side, 300 feet west of 2d-st., running through to Grand-av.; two lots, each 25 by 100, on 2d-st., north-east corner of Willard-av.; two lots, each 25 by 100, on Willard-av., north side, 275 feet east of 2d-st., and two lots, each 25 by 200, on Willard-av., south side, 186.11 feet west of 1st-av., running through to Clinton-av., for $4550, to Charles Mall.

Richard L. Barnett, foreclosure sale, Henry E. Rogers, Esq., Referee, sold the three three-story brown-stone-front dwellings, with lease of lots, each 25 by 100.8, Nos. 219, 221, and 223 East 87th-st., north side, 225 feet west of 2d-av.; leased Oct. 23, 1873; term 21 years; ground rent $450 per annum; for $2,000, to Joseph Murry, plaintiff.

Scott & Myers, foreclosure sale, Frank Thompson, Esq., Referee, disposed of a plot of land 240 by 130 by 330 by 90, on Claremont-av., east side, running west corner of High Bridge Road, West Farms, for 53,088 to Elizabeth M. Douglass, as Executrix and plaintiff.

The two following foreclosure sales were adjourned: Sale by Horatio Henriques of one lot on Avenue A, south of 71st-st, to Jan. 17 and sale by Louis Meier, of the house, with lot, No. 383 Avenue A, north-west corner of 23d-st., adjourned sine die.

RECORDED REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

NEW-YORK.

Friday, Jan. 3.

86th-st., n. s., 86.8 ft. e. of Boulevard, 203.8x 112.8½x Irregular; William I. Bell and wife to Clark B. Hugustine	$600
53d-st., s. s., 393 ft. e. of 7th-av., 15.6x100.5; Augusta Eising and husband to James E. Breen and others	14,000
66th-st., s. s., 140 ft. e. of 5th av., 20x100.5; James E. Breen and wife and others to Augusta Eising	32,000
18th-st., n. s., 475 ft. w. of 9th-av., 55x84; Henry Christie and wife to Margaret Forrester.	20,000
3d-av., s. w. corner of 88th-st., 40.6x100x78; Leopold Simons and wife to Carrie Gans	nom.
Same property; Same to Same	nom.
Benson-st., s. w. corner of Morris-av., 53.3x100; 23d Ward; Francis J. Hudner to Mary Hudner	700
3d-av., n. s., 393 ft. e. of Avenue A, 25x102.2; Same to Same	1,500
Downing-st., n. s., 180.4 ft. w. of Bleecker-st.; 18.11x79.10, ½ part of; Hugh G. Crozier, Executor, to William Kirk	4,000
Houston-st., s. s., 40 ft. w. of 9th-av., 20x100, 1-9 part of; Henry J. Haight and others to Richard K. Anthony	nom.
Sheriff-st., No. 25, 100; Elizabeth Ferg to Moritz Loewenstein	250
57th-st., s. s., 200 ft. e. of 5th-av., 25x200; Jane M. Cooper and others to Henry C. Russell	74,500
1st-av., n. w. corner of 124th-st., 21.2x76; also, 124th-st., n. s., 41.2 ft. w. of 1st-av., 16.8x100; Lafayette Ranney and wife to Isaac Hendelson	nom.
129th-st., s. s., 45 ft. w. of Lexington-av., 20x 99.11; Eugene King and wife to Ann E. Stewart	800
3d-av., s. w. corner of 88th-st., 40.8x100x 78; Myer Gans and others to Leopold Simon	nom.
King-st., s. s., No. 38, 20x100; Thomas Hodgson and wife to Sarah Kemp	9,000
Chatham-st., n. s., 50 ft. e. of Tryon-row, 80x 25; also, Centre-st., e. s., 92.3 ft. s. of Tryon-row, 25x50; also, Duane-st., s. w. corner of Church-st., 15.5x75x irregular; G. P. Smith, Referee, to James N. Platt	800
125th-st., s. s., 310 ft. w. of 5th-av., 25x 9.11; Susan Frasee and husband to Jennette Smith	1,700
7th-av., e. s., 33.9 ft. n. of 31st-st., 20x60; Mary T. Kinber to Michael Swick	8,250
2d-av., w. s., 126 ft. n. of 85th-st., 25x75; Charles Lammer and wife to Joseph Stern	15,000
Houston-st., s. s., 40 ft. w. of Pitt-st., 20x50; Adam Mosbacher and wife to Bertz Blantz	6,750
47th-st., n. s., 250 ft. e. of 9th-av., 25x100.5; David Read and wife to Charlotte A. Morris	15,000
62d-st., s. s., 100 ft. e. of 10th-av., 20x100.5; Julia Whitehurch and others to Lizzie Clark	6,000
40th-st., s. s., 105 ft. w. of 2d-av., 14x98.9; William Topping and wife to Hartman Kerckhoff	4,500
4th-av., n. e. corner of 41st-st., 85x97.3; C. M. March, Referee, to Irvin McDowell, Trustee, Central Railroad-av., s. s., 191 ft. n. of 167th-st, 50x 100, 23d Ward; F. G. Salmon, Referee, to Charles Lanzetta	3,000
Broad-st., s. s., 83; E. S. Zappallo, Referee, to Herman Schnepel	11,050
Guental, George and Louis, to Thomas Alexander. General assignment.

LEASES RECORDED.

Thames-st., No. 7, 5 years; Rynear S. Young to James J. Hartigan	$800
Avenue A, w. s., 48.1 ft. n. of 4th-st., 16x100, 20 years, William B. Astor to Caroline Hilbberger	243
3d-av., w. s., 167.10 ft. s. of 11th-av., 19.4x75, 5 years; Mary K. Stuyvesant to Andrew Milligan	425

MORTGAGES RECORDED.

Block, Mary, to Jael Lodge No. 6, N. O. T. S.; n. s. 51st-st., e. of 2d-av., 5 years	$5,000
Born, John, and wife to Peter Doelger; n. s. 56th-st., w. of 3d-av., 5 years	4,500
Braisted, Garrett D., and wife to Catharine M. Hilliker; s. e. corner of 10th-av. and 115th-st., 5 years	5,000
Christie, Henry, and wife to Anna S. Christie; n. s. 119th-st., w. of 8th-av., 5 years	1,500
Deesle, Andrew, and wife to Thomas E. Lyde, Executor, &c.; n. s. 74th-st., w. of Avenue A, 2 years	1,420
Doying, Ira E., and wife to the New-York Life Insurance Company; s. w. corner of 4th-av. and 67th-st., 1 year	16,000
Same to Same; s. s. 67th-st., 20 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	15,000
Same to Same; s. s. 67th-st., 40 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	15,000
Same to Same; s. s. 67th-st., 60 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	15,000
Same to Same; s. s. 67th-st., 100 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	16,000
Same to Same; s. s. 67th-st., 120 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	16,000
Same to Same; w. s. 4th-av., 80 ft. s. of 67th-st., 1 year	15,000
Doying, Ira E., and wife to Eliza P. Barton; s. s. 67th-st., 80 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	16,000
Doying, Ira E., and wife to Joseph W. Patterson; s. s. 67th-st., 60 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	16,000
Doying, Ira E., and wife to Anne and Kate Warner; s. s. 67th-st., 160 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	16,000
Doying, Ira E., and wife to Presbyterian Hospital in New-York; s. s. 67th-st., 180 ft. w. of 4th-av., 1 year	16,000
Doying, Ira E., and wife to Willets Bronson; s. w. corner of 4th-av. and 67th-st., 1 dar	49,000
Edebohls, Catharine, Executrix, &c., to Magdalena Kilsell; n. s. 4th-st., e. of Avenue A, 5 years	4,000
Hearn, John, to Jacob Bertram; n. s. 15th-st., 320.6 ft. e. of Avenue A, 3 years	2,500
Huber, Anton, and wife to Peter Stark; n. s. Henry-st., e. of Scammel-st., 5 years	1,000
Monte, Charles F. F., and wife to Karl Nebhardt, s. s. 80th-st., Lot No. 164, 5 years	5,000
Paul, Valentin, to Franz Maier and wife; n. s. 7th-st., w. of Avenue A, 1 year	1,700
Schneider, William F., and wife to Peter Stark; n. s. e. of 1st-av., installments	4,000
Schnepel, Herman, and wife to Emil Briner and another; No. 88 Broad-st., 5 years	5,000
Schnepel, Mary, and husband to Henry Rabe; n. s. 22d-st., s. of 8th-av., 5 years	5,000
Schwarz, Jacob, and wife to the Mutual Life Insurance Company; No. 1,561 2d-av., 18 months	4,000
Smith, Jennetta, and husband to Seal Cockey; n. s. 134th-st., w. of 8th-av., 3 years	2,800
Sock, John, and wife to Peter Grein; n. s. 3d-st., e. of Avenue C, installments	5,300
Widberger, Caroline, to Heinrich Volz; w. s. Avenue A, 2 of 4th-st., 3 years	3,000

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Bladhorn, William H., to John A. Wiegand	$5,000
Bladhorn, William H., to John Sattler and another	3,000
Canda, John M., to Augustus F. Hoily	2,000
East River Savings Institution to Mary E. Seaman, Executrix, &c	10,000
Hearn, John, to Jacob Bertram; n. s. 15th-st., 320.6 ft. e. of Avenue A, 3 years	2,500
Huber, Anton, and wife to Peter Stark; n. s. Henry-st., e. of Scammel-st., 5 years	1,000
Monte, Charles F. F., and wife to Karl Nebhardt, s. s. 80th-st., Lot No. 164, 5 years	5,000
Paul, Valentin, to Franz Maier and wife; n. s. 7th-st., w. of Avenue A, 1 year	1,700
Schneider, William F., and wife to Peter Stark; n. s. e. of 1st-av., installments	4,000
Schnepel, Herman, and wife to Emil Briner and another; No. 88 Broad-st., 5 years	5,000
Schnepel, Mary, and husband to Henry Rabe; n. s. 22d-st., s. of 8th-av., 5 years	5,000
Schwarz, Jacob, and wife to the Mutual Life Insurance Company; No. 1,561 2d-av., 18 months	4,000
Smith, Jennetta, and husband to Seal Cockey; n. s. 134th-st., w. of 8th-av., 3 years	2,800
Sock, John, and wife to Peter Grein; n. s. 3d-st., e. of Avenue C, installments	5,300
Widberger, Caroline, to Heinrich Volz; w. s. Avenue A, 2 of 4th-st., 3 years	3,000

ASSIGNMENTS OF MORTGAGES.

Bladhorn, William H., to John A. Wiegand	$5,000
Bladhorn, William H., to John Sattler and another	3,000
Canda, John M., to Augustus F. Hoily	2,000
East River Savings Institution to Mary E. Seaman, Executrix, &c	10,000
Kern, John, and wife to Elias Wolf and wife	4,000
Kingsland, George L., and another, Trustees, &c., to Mary B. Tompkins	nom.
Manhattan Savings Institution to George Dethof	5,000
Meigs, Henry, Jr., and another, Trustees, &c., to Oswald Ottendorfer	4,658
Pease, Catharine G., to Joseph L. R. Wood	3,000
Simonson, Thomas H., and brother to Benjamin L. Hayden and another	529
Taylor, Moses, and another, Executors, &c., to Amelia M. McLean	nom.
Taylor, Moses, to Moses Taylor and another, Executors, &c	nom.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

A SUPERIOR BUILT AND LOCATED four-story high-stoop brown-stone dwelling, 53d-st. and Madison-av., for sale at decided bargain. Permits from

McCAFFERTY & CO., 650 5th-av., or
V. K. STEVENSON, Jr.,
Offices 4 Pine, 35 East 17th st., and 661 5th-av.

FOR SALE—THE ELEGANT CABINET FINISH house, No. 14 East 45th-st. For terms and particulars apply to E. H. LUDLOW & CO.,

No. 3 Pine-st. and No. 1,130 Broadway.

FOR SALE—CHEAP HOUSES.—10 NEW HOUSES, accessible by street cars, taken for mortgages, $1,250 and $1,800; less than cost. Apply to
R. A. YOUNG, No. 20 Exchange-place.

HARLEM—RAPID TRANSIT.
Houses, stores, flats, to let and for sale. PORTER & CO., No. 173 East 125th-st.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

BOREEL BUILDING.
Large corner office on first floor, 22.6x140 feet, to let.
ALSO,
Smaller office adjoining, on Broadway.
E. H. LUDLOW & CO., No. 3 Pine-st.

TO LET OR LEASE—THE FIVE-STORY IRON-front building, Nos. 739 and 741 Broadway, also, No. 283 Broadway. Apply to ROBERT GOELET, No. 677 Broadway, or J. A. ROUILHAMM & CO., No. 52 Nassau-st.

STORES, &C., TO LET.

OFFICES TO LET
IN THE
TIMES BUILDING.
APPLY TO
GEORGE JONES,
TIMES OFFICE.

REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer.

SUPREME COURT SALE IN PARTITION.
VALUABLE STORE PROPERTY, NORTH-WEST CORNER OF 6TH-AV. AND 14TH-ST.

ADRIAN H. MULLER & SON will sell at auction, on TUESDAY, JAN. 7, 1879, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, under the direction of J. S. Williamson, Referee, the five four-story brick buildings (with stores) and lots, on the north-west corner of 6TH-AV. AND 14TH-ST., and the four-story brown-stone front dwelling-house and lot, on 14th-st., in rear of 6th-av. stores. It is seldom that so desirable a piece of real estate, situate on the corner of one of the most thriving avenues in this City, is offered at public sale. The property is very accessible from almost any portion of the City, the following railroad lines stopping at this corner, viz.: Metropolitan Elevated Railroad, Sixth-Avenue Railroad, and Fourteenth-Street and Christopher-Street Ferry Railroad. ALSO, at same time, house and lot, No. 237 East 10th-st., houses and lots, Nos. 23, 25, and 27 Tompkins-place, Brooklyn, and about 10 acres of land in the City of Oswego, N. Y.

THE SALE WILL BE ABSOLUTE.
60 PER CENT. ON BOND AND MORTGAGE.
Maps and particulars at office of auctioneers, No. 7 Pine-st., or at office of the Referee, No. 9 Pine-st.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO., BANKERS,

16 and 18 Nassau-st., New-York.

Dealers in United States Bonds, and Stocks of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn.

Buy and sell on Commission, for cash or on margin, all securities dealt in at the New-York Stock Exchange.

Interest allowed on deposits, subject to draft at sight.

JAMES A. TROWBRIDGE, DONALD MACKAY,
LATHAM A. FISH.

New-York City

6 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS,
COUPON OR REGISTERED,
payable in 1896.

BUFFALO CITY 5 PER CENT. BONDS,
payable in 1882.

BUFFALO CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS,
payable in 1890.

ROCHESTER CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS,
payable in 1893.

JERSEY CITY 7 PER CENT. BONDS,
payable in 1891.

ALSO, A CHOICE LOT OF FIRST-CLASS RAILROAD BONDS.

FOR SALE BY

DANIEL A. MORAN,

40 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK.

SUPREME COURT, CITY AND COUNTY
Of New-York.—BARTHOLD SCHLESINGER AND OTHERS against THE ST. LOUIS AND SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY, CONSOLIDATED.—In pursuance of a judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York, made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 31st day of December, 1878, I, the undersigned, am appointed in said judgment, will sell at public auction on SATURDAY, the 11th day of January instant, at 12:30 o'clock P. M., at the Exchange Sales-room, No. 111 Broadway, in the City of New-York, by E. H. Ludlow & Co., auctioneers, the following securities, which were pledged and deposited with the plaintiffs as collateral security for the payment by the defendant of certain four promissory notes in the complaint mentioned, viz.: Eighty bonds of the St. Louis and South-eastern Railway Company, bearing date the first day of October, 1873, each conditioned for the payment by the said The St. Louis and South-eastern Railway Company, Consolidated, to the bearer thereof of the principal sum of five hundred dollars on the first day of November, 1902, with interest thereon in the meantime at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually in gold coin, on the 1st days of February and August in each year, on the presentation and delivery of the coupons for such interest thereunto annexed, the said bonds being designated as First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds of the St. Louis and South-eastern Railway Company, Consolidated, and purporting to be part of a series of bonds of said Company limited to an amount not exceeding twenty-one thousand dollars for every mile of track of railroad of said Company, of like tenor and date, and secured by a mortgage of the railway and property of said Company to George Opdyke and Philo C. Calhoun, of New-York, as Trustees, and which bonds are numbered as follows, that is to say, from No. 1921 to 2000, both inclusive, together with the coupons so annexed.

Dated New-York, January 3d, 1879.

RUFUS G. BEARDSLEE, Referee.

EVARTS, SOUTHMAYD & CHOATE, Plaintiffs' Attorneys.

GEO. P. ROWELL & CO.

NO. 10 SPRUCE-ST.,
(Printing House-square, opposite the Tribune Building.)

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING BUREAU.

New-York Agents for all Newspapers in the United States and Canada.

Advertisements forwarded daily, (as received,) to every section, from Newfoundland to Texas, and from Florida to British Columbia. Also to all New-York City dailies and weeklies.

Eight Thousand Newspapers kept regularly on file for inspection by advertisers, including all the great dailies from Boston to San Francisco, from Montreal to Galveston.

PUBS. OF AMERICAN NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY.

FIRST MORTGAGE

SEVEN PER CENT. BONDS
OF THE
Sioux City and Pembina R. R. Co.,

Issued at less than $6,000 per mile of road, and GUARANTEED, principal and interest, by the DAKOTA SOUTHERN R. R. CO.

The road is completed, and the net earnings are in excess of the interest on its entire mortgage debt.

Only a few of these bonds remain for sale at 90 and accrued interest.

WALSTON H. BROWN & BRO.,

No. 34 Pine-st., New-York.

OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER,
CITY OF ALLEGHENY, Nov. 27, 1878.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF ALLEGHENY 4 PER CENT. RAILROAD COMPROMISE BONDS.—In accordance with section third of an act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania approved April 10, 1865, entitled "An Act relative to the railroad indebtedness of the City of Allegheny," notice is hereby given that the said City of Allegheny is prepared to retire the following outstanding four per cent. railroad compromise bonds, viz.: Numbers 17, 34, 42, 72, 73, 74, 75, 79, 82, 54, and that the said outstanding bonds not surrendered within six weeks from the date of this advertisement will cease to draw interest thereon, and the holder or holders of such bond or bonds shall look only to the deposit in the Bank of Pittsburg for payment of the same.

JAMES BROWN,
Controller.

OFFICE OF THE SILVER ISLET CONSOLIDATED MINING AND LANDS COMPANY, No. 52 BROADWAY,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 26, 1878.

PROPOSALS IN WRITING ARE INVITED and will be received until 3 o'clock P. M. of Wednesday, the 15th day of January, next, for the sale to the Trustee for cancellation of $75,000 of the bonds of this company, or portions thereof, naming numbers of the bonds offered.

No proposals at a price exceeding par can be accepted under the trust authority to purchase; interest accruing to Jan. 15 only will be allowed.

Proposals to be addressed to C. P. Dixon, Trustee, at the office of the company.

EDWARD LEARNED, President.

KIMBALL, HOWELL & CO.,

MEMBERS N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE,
No. 17 New-st. and No. 68 Broadway,

Buy, sell, and carry on margin all active stocks dealt in at the Exchange. Special attention given to

LOTS OF 5, 10, 20 SHARES OR MORE.

CITY AND COUNTY BONDS.

We offer some choice bonds bearing 7 and 8 per cent., issued for municipal purposes. First-class securities for investment always in hand.

A. W. BEASLEY & CO.,
No. 12 Wall-st., N. Y.

ALL SPECULATIVE ACCOUNTS DECLINED.

J. HARMANUS FISHER,
(Member of Baltimore Stock Exchange for past 24 years.)
BANKER AND STOCK BROKER.
Post Office Box No. 69, Baltimore, Md.
Solicits correspondence and orders. Refers, by permission to Messrs. Saligman & Co., Messrs. G. T. Bonner & Co., John B. Manning, Esq.

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO
Capital, $10,000,000, gold. Reserve, $3,000,000, gold.
NEW-YORK AGENCY NO. 62 WALL-ST.
Buys and sells exchange and telegraphic transfers. Issues commercial and travelers' credits. Executes orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL-ST.,
ISSUE COMMERCIAL AND TRAVELERS CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

FINANCIAL.

CITY BONDS

AT PUBLIC AUCTION.

ON THE 18TH OF JANUARY, 1879,
THE CITY OF KINGSTON, N. Y.,
will sell at the City Hall, in Kingston, N. Y., at 12 o'clock M.,

$65,000 COUPON BONDS,

issued in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, chapter 28, passed Feb. 16, 1878.

The bonds bear interest at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the 15th of January and July in each year, and have 50 years to run, with the option of the City to pay them after 10 years.

Five per cent. of the purchase money will be required to be paid on the day of sale, and the balance, with accrued interest, on or before the 28th day of February next—the cash payment of five per cent. to be forfeited on failure to complete purchase.

Further information can be had by addressing any of the Presidents of the several banks in Kingston, N. Y.

THOS. COREY, Jr., } Committee.
C. D. BRUYN, }

JERSEY CITY BONDS.

7s,

Due 1893, 1894, 1897, 1900, 1906, 1913,

(COUPON OR REGISTERED,)

FOR SALE BY

GEO. K. SISTARE,

No. 17 NASSAU-ST., N. Y.

ST. LOUIS, IRON MOUNTAIN AND SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY,
No. 20 NASSAU-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

Stockholders of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company are requested to call at the Agency of the company, No. 20 Nassau-st., and sign the funding agreement.

D. W. MCWILLIAMS,
Treasurer.

NEW-YORK LOAN AND IMPROVEMENT
Stock wanted by W. H. DICKINSON,
Member New-York Stock Exchange,
No. 14 Wall-st.

DIVIDENDS.

THE INTEREST AND DIVIDENDS ON THE following bonds and stocks are payable at the banking house of WINSLOW, LANIER & CO., No. 28 Nassau-st., on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

Alleghany Valley R. R. 7 3-10 per cent. bonds.
Alleghany City, Penn., Compromise bonds.
Anderson, Ind., bonds.
Anglaise County, Ohio, bonds.
Cincinnati, Richmond and Chicago R. R. 1st Mtge. bonds
Columbus, Ind., City bonds.
Danville, Ind., School bonds.
Dayton and Michigan R. R. 1st Mtge. bonds.
Frankfort, Ind., School bonds.
Grant County, Ind., bonds.
Hamilton County, Ind., bonds.
Howard County, Ind., bonds, called in.
Indianapolis, Ind., bonds, various issues.
Indianapolis, Ind., Car Company bonds.
Kokomo, Ind., City bonds.
Marion, Ind., Water-works bonds.
Marion County, Ind., bonds.
Massillon and Cleveland R. R. 1st Mtge. City of, bonds.
Mercer County, Ohio, bonds.
Peru, Ind., City of, Water-works bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway 1st Mtge. bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway 2d Mtge. bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway Construction bonds.
Scioto Valley R. R. 1st Mtge. bonds.
St. Johns Railway Co., Florida, 1st Mtge. 10 p. ct. bonds.
Scioto County, Ohio, coupons from Turnpike bonds.
Scioto County, Ohio, R'w'y bonds, principal and interest.
Scioto County, Ohio's home bonds.
Scioto County Bridge bonds.
Terre Haute, Ind., bonds issued to E., T. H. and Chicago Railway Company.
Wheeling, West Va., Compromise bonds.
Pitts., Ft. W. and Chicago Railway Company, Special Guaranteed Stock. Quarterly Dividend of 1¾ per cent.
Semi-annual Dividend of 4 per cent. on Stock of the Louisiana National Bank of New-Orleans, La.
Jan. 7, 1872—Erie, N. W. and Chicago Railway Co. Guaranteed Stock. Quarterly Dividend of 1¾ per cent.
Jan. 15, 1879—Richmond, Ind., 8 per cent. bonds.
Jan. 20, 1879—Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton R. R. Co., 2d Mtge. bonds.
Jan. 25, 1879—City of Fort Wayne, Ind., 8 per cent. bonds.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK,
No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF RECTOR-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

THE FOLLOWING COUPONS, DUE JAN. 1, 1879, are payable at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York:

Indianapolis and St. Louis R. R. Company, Jan. 1, 1879. Series A.
Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark Railroad Company.
Union Pacific Railroad Company, First Mortgage.
Erie and Pittsburg Railroad Company.
Grand Rapids, Novagge and Lake Shore Railroad Company.
Michigan Central Air Line Railroad Company.
Jackson Lansing and Saginaw Railroad Company.
Grand River Valley Railroad Company.
City of Rochester.
City of Syracuse.
North-western Telegraph Co.
Holliday Coal Company.
Peekskill Water Bonds.
St. Louis National Stock Yards.
Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Registered Interest.
Town of Cheektowaga.
Town of Wheatland.
Town of Gainesville.
Town of Stephentown.
Town of Warsaw.
Town of Pavilion.
Town of Middlebury.
Town of German Flats.
Town of Leroy.
Town of Chatham.

JAS. H. OGILVIE, Secretary.

NEW-YORK CITY INSURANCE CO.,

NO. 100 BROADWAY.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

The Board of Directors have declared a semi-annual dividend of FIVE PER CENT., payable on and after Jan. 6 inst.

WM. M. RANDELL,
Secretary.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK,
No. 73 BROADWAY, CORNER OF RECTOR-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 28, 1878.

THE UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW-YORK, will pay, on and after Jan. 1, 1879, TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS in gold upon the coupons maturing Jan. 1, 1879, on the bonds of the Union Pacific Railway, Southern Branch, which have been stamped, subject to the agreement of March 1, 1876. Coupons must be left over night for stamping.

EDWARD KING, President.

OFFICE OF THE PLUMAS NATIONAL QUARTZ MINING COMPANY, No. 54 BROAD-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a Dividend of Ten Cents per share of the capital stock of this company out of the net earnings for the month of December, 1878, payable at the office of the company on and after Jan. 17. Transfer-books will close on the 10th and reopen on the 21st of January. HENRY J. ROGERS, Transfer Secretary.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK,
No. 141 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THIRTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS have this day declared a semi annual dividend of Three per Cent., payable on and after the 2d of July proximo, payable Jan. 2, 1879. Transfer-books will close 21st instant P. M., until 2d January.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

BROOKLYN TRUST COMPANY,
No. 177 MONTAGUE-ST., CORNER OF CLINTON,
BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 30, 1878.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable Jan. 6, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed from Jan. 2 to the date of payment.

WM. S. BUNKER, Secretary.

OFFICE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY,
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 28, 1878.

THE COUPONS OF THE 7 PER CENT. ON THE Florida Central Railroad Company's 7 per cent. gold bonds, issued in 1877, will be paid on presentation at the banking house of Messrs. Salligman & Co., No. 52 Exchange-place, New-York.

AARON MARVIN,
Treasurer.

MECHANICS' NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Four per cent., free of tax, payable on and after 2d of January next. The transfer-book will be closed until that date.

WM. H. COX, Cashier.

OFFICE OF THE MERCANTILE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 166 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a DIVIDEND of Five (5) per cent., payable on and after Jan. 6, 1879.

C. W. PARMELEE,
Secretary.

THE NATIONAL SHOE AND LEATHER BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

FIFTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS of this bank have declared a dividend of Four (4) per Cent., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

The transfer-book will be closed from Dec. 26, 1878, until Feb. 1, 1879.

J. M. CRANE, Cashier.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 31, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of Four (4) per Cent., free of tax, payable on and after Jan. 8 next, until which time the transfer-books will remain closed.

A. S. APGAR, Cashier.

IRVING NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 30, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of FOUR (4) PER CENT., free of all tax, payable on the second (2d) day of January, 1879, until which date the transfer-books will remain closed.

GEO. E. SOUPER, Cashier.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
OFFICE, No. 5 BOWLING GREEN, Dec. 27, 1878.

THE COUPONS DUE JAN. 1, 1879, ON THE second mortgage bonds of the Pacific Railroad Company (of Missouri) will be paid on and after Jan. 2, 1879, at this office.

C. K. GARRISON, President.

NATIONAL BROADWAY BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 24, 1878.

FIFTY-EIGHTH DIVIDEND.—A SEMI-ANnual devidend of EIGHT PER CENT. on the capital stock, free of all taxes, will be paid on and after Jan. 2, proximo.

J. L. EVERITT, Cashier.

OFFICE OF THE STAR FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS company have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of SIX (6) PER CENT., payable on demand.

JAMES M. HODGES, Secretary.

TRADESMEN'S NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 18, 1878.

A DIVIDEND OF THREE AND A HALF (3½) PER CENT. will be paid on JAN. 2, 1879.

A. HALSEY, Cashier.

PENNE NATIONAL BANK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 28, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS OF THIS BANK HAVE this day declared a Dividend of Three (3) Per Cent., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

JOHN PARKER, Cashier.

OFFICE RIDGEWOOD INSURANCE COMPANY,
BROOKLYN, Dec. 26, 1878.

A DIVIDEND OF FIVE PER CENT. IS DEclared, payable Jan. 2, 1879, at the New-York office, No. 170 Broadway.

WM. A. SCOTT, Secretary.

DIVIDENDS.

OFFICE
OF THE HOFFMAN
FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y,

No. 130 BROADWAY.
NEW-YORK, Jan. 3, 1879.

A DIVIDEND OF FIVE PER CENT. IS THIS DAY declared, payable on demand.

JOHN D. MACINTYRE, Secretary.

FIFTY-THIRD DIVIDEND.

HANOVER
FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

A semi-annual dividend of FIVE (5) PER CENT. is payable on demand at the office of the company, No. 120 Broadway.

L. REMSEN LANE,
Vice-President and Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1879.

SAVINGS BANKS.

METROPOLITAN SAVINGS BANK,
Nos. 1 and 3 Third-av.
FIFTY-FIRST DIVIDEND.
NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

INTEREST AT THE RATE OF FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $1,000 and under, and at the rate of Four per Cent. on amounts over $1,000, which have remained on deposit during the three or six months ending Dec. 31, 1878, will be paid according to law, by us on Wednesday, Jan. 15.

DIVIDEND not withdrawn will be added to the deposit and draw interest from Jan. 1.

DEPOSITS made on or before the 10th of January will draw interest from Jan. 1.

ISAAC T. SMITH, President.

G. M. CONKLIN, Secretary.

61ST SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND.
East River Savings Institution,
No. 3 Chambers-st., NEW-YORK, Dec. 30, 1878.

Interest for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1878, at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $3,000 and under, and at the rate of FOUR PER CENT. on the excess, has been declared, and will be payable after Jan. 10, 1879.

Bank open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

W. H. SLOGUM, President.

CHARLES A. WHITNEY, Secretary.

DRY DOCK SAVINGS INSTITUTION,
NOS. 341 AND 343 BOWERY.

The Trustees of this Institution have declared a dividend for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1878, at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum on all sums of $2,000 and under, and on the excess of $2,000 at the rate of FOUR PER CENT. per annum, payable on and after the THIRD MONDAY IN JANUARY, 1879.

DEPOSITS made ON or BEFORE JAN. 10 will be entitled to INTEREST from JAN. 1.

ANDREW MILLS, President.

WILLIAM V. WESTER, Secretary.

UNION DIME SAVINGS BANK,
Broadway, 6th-av., and 32d-st.

Interest on deposits, from $5 to $3,000, at the rate of (5) Five Per Cent per annum; and on all sums exceeding $3,000, at the rate of (4) Four Per Cent. per annum on the excess, payable on and after Jan. 20, 1879.

Deposits on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1.

Bank open daily from 10 to 3, and on Monday and Saturday from 10 to 7 JNO. W. BRITTON,
GARDNER S. CHAPIN, Treasurer. President.
CHARLES E. SPRAGUE, Secretary.

IRVING SAVINGS INSTITUTION, No 86 WARREN-ST.,
New-York,

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

REFORMERS ADVISING THE MAYOR.

A DEPUTATION OF MR. WEBB'S SOCIETY WAIT UPON MR. COOPER—THEIR VIEWS ON THE SITUATION.

A deputation of the "Council of Reform," who were until recently known as the "Council of Political Reform," called upon Mayor Cooper yesterday in the City Hall, for the purpose of congratulating him upon his election and pledging him their support in any measures he may take to correct abuses in the City Government. Among those present were Messrs. William H. Webb, Henry Day, Gen. Viele, Willy Wallach, Henry J. Scudder, Orlando B. Potter, Gerard Beekman, Dr. Alfred C. Post, R. B. Cornell, George N. Williams, Henry Haight, E. G. Dunn, Henry Muller, J. W. Haws, Frederick Schack, J. H. Saunders, ex-Alderman Falconer, Edward Fitch, Henry N. Beers, Prof. Theodore W. Dwight, Dexter A. Hawkins, and James M. Requa. After the delegation had been introduced to the Mayor, Mr. Henry Day stepped forward and read the following address in their behalf:

Hon. Edward Cooper, Mayor of the City of New-York:

SIR: The Council of Reform take great pleasure in meeting you on your accession to the office of Mayor of this great City, and they congratulate you on your election to so honorable, important, and responsible an office. Your election is to a great extent the result of the votes of independent citizens, who look more to the general welfare of our City than to the interest of any political party. This fact places you in a more independent position than has been enjoyed by many of your predecessors, and will enable you to introduce and carry out reforms in the administration of the public affairs of this City, which it was impossible to obtain while party influence predominated. Besides this, we believe that the present charter gives you ample power not only to exercise a strict supervision over all subordinate departments, but also to hold all City officials to a prompt and honest enforcement of the existing laws. Your former actions and your influence in the framing of our present charter lead us to expect from you a just but fearless execution of these powers.

With the co-operation of the Governor of the State and the Common Council of this City assured, you will be able to fill vacancies which may occur during your administration, in our public offices, with men who possess special personal qualifications for the same, and without regard to their political opinions and party connections.

In following this course of action you will have the hearty sympathy and support of all good citizens, and will make your administration satisfactory to yourself, advantageous to the City, and a safe example for those who may succeed you.

By order of the Council of Reform.

WILLIAM H. WEBB, President.

Mr. Day then said that probably there was not a man that stood around him that had not worked to have just such a man put in the Mayor's chair as he [Mr. Cooper] was. His election was due to the votes of independent citizens, rather than to those of any political party. That would enable him to make important and much-needed reforms in the City Government. He had powers under the charter which would enable him to effect such reforms, and his former actions would justify the hope that he would do whatever lay in his power to advance the interests of the City. His would have the co-operation of the Council of Reform in any measure calculated to bring about a better and more economical administration of the City Government. They required that men should be appointed who had special qualifications for the offices to which they aspired, and not because of their connection with politics. The object of the Council in presenting themselves there was that him was not a political one. They had no men of higher character for probity, learning, and enterprise than were in its ranks. They could and did create public sentiment in order to improve the character of their local Government. They wanted no offices. What they desired to effect was economy and efficiency in the administration of the City Government. Mr. Day then remarked that the Council knew what was going on in the different departments, and they were ready to aid the Mayor in having them administered economically. The Mayor had greater authority than some of his predecessors and many could envy. He had power to displace bad men, and he would have the aid of Gov. Robinson, who was an honest man. They wanted to keep corrupt men out of office. In the present hard times the people required reforms in needed economy. It had been said that eternal vigilance was the price of liberty, and it might also be said that eternal vigilance was the price of economy.

Mayor Cooper, in reply, thanked the deputation for the confidence they had reposed in him. They had very well summarized what they desired to effect, and he agreed with them as to the necessity for economy and efficiency in the City Government. It would be his endeavor to select good men for the places to be filled. He did not care to indulge in promises, but he would let his performances speak for him, and that was the best way for them. In closing, the Mayor remarked that he would be glad to receive suggestions as to improving the City Government, and he felt much obliged to the deputation for their congratulatory address.

THE VANDERBILT WILL CASE.

CORNELIUS J. VANDERBILT APPLIES FOR THE REMOVAL OF THE EXECUTORS—HIS ALLEGATIONS ABOUT THEIR METHODS.

A new phase is given to the contest over the will of the late Commodore Vanderbilt by an application, which is to be discussed before Surrogate Calvin on Monday next, for an order to the Executors of the will to show cause why they should not be superseded as incompetent, and for an injunction to prevent them from continuing to act as Executors until the question as to their removal or retention shall be determined by the Surrogate. The application is made by Cornelius J. Vanderbilt. He alleges that he is a legatee under the will, being entitled to the income of $200,000 for his maintenance; that his income is endangered by the precarious methods pursued by William H. Vanderbilt and his fellow-Executors in the management of the estate, and that, being incapacitated from earning his living by continuous labor, his interests are entitled to protection. He then details the following reasons for the granting of his petition:

"First—That the estate of said testator consisted of real and personal estate, and amounted to over $100,000,000; that the real estate of which he died seized or possessed, was of a value of not over $5,000,000; that the residue of his estate was personal, and consisted mostly in the bonds, stocks, and securities of various railroad corporations, and other transferable and negotiable securities.

"Second—That said William H. Vanderbilt has no property that he has not acquired from said deceased, and that his individual property is not sufficient, in many millions, to meet the obligations and liabilities hereinafter referred to.

"Third—That Cornelius and William K. Vanderbilt are sons of William H. Vanderbilt, and have no property of any considerable value independent of the legacies given them by said will.

"Fourth—That Samuel Barton has no property of any considerable value, and that the joint property of the said three last-named Executors, independent of any interest in the will, does not amount to the one-thousandth part of said estate; and your petitioner believes that it is in fact less than such thousandth part.

"Fifth—That William H. Vanderbilt in fact controls the estate and the action of the other Executors is under his direction whenever he sees fit to exercise the authority he has assumed.

"Sixth—That William H. Vanderbilt has paid three of the legacies given to his sons in the codicil of the will, amounting to over $8,500,000, notwithstanding the filing of such allegations.

"Seventh—That William H. Vanderbilt is speculating in stocks on a gigantic scale, and to a greater extent than has ever been known, and that to carry on such speculations he has used, and is using, the assets of such estate to a large amount as collaterals to loans or otherwise, and has borrowed, and is owing, over the sum of $18,000.000 for speculating purposes.

"Eighth—That William H. Vanderbilt has lost, in such speculations several millions of dollars.

"Ninth—That William H. Vanderbilt is of an excitable and reckless temperament, and is endeavoring to sustain the will, expending large and unnecessary sums of money in procuring and intimidating witnesses, and is offering large sums to induce witnesses sworn by the contestant to change their statements which they have made under oath as such witnesses, and has declared that to sustain such will he would spend the whole estate in litigation.

"Tenth—That William H. Vanderbilt and the other Executors are not qualified to manage with prudence and reasonable sagacity so large an estate, and particularly that William H. Vanderbilt is not only wild and reckless in his financial operations, but is enlarging his railroad interests by paying more than the interests parties are worth, and is using the assets of such estate for said purpose, greatly to the hazard thereof.

"Eleventh—That William H. Vanderbilt is contracting a large debt to the various railroad corporations of which he is President by withholding, for his own benefit, large sums of money from such corporations, to which their creditors or their stockholders are entitled. That such money is withheld by him, and appropriated to his own use by various contrivances, among them interior companies or corporations for the carrying of freight and passengers, as "The Merchants' Dispatch, and "The Wagner Palace Car Company," and that the aggregate sum thus diverted from such railroad corporations is very large. That the amount so received is recklessly invested, so that it does not, in fact, increase the value of his estate, while subjecting him to large liabilities, which may at any time be enforced against him.

"Twelfth—That said deceased left him surviving 10 children, and, in case the probate of said will is revoked, said estate will be divided into 10 equal shares, of which the said William H. Vanderbilt will be entitled to but one-tenth, as the releasee he holds from several of the heirs and next of kin in such case would fail for want of consideration, or on the ground that they were fraudulently obtained. That about the time said William H. Vanderbilt procured said releases, not in consideration thereof, but as a gift, and for the purpose of inducing them not to file allegations under the statute to revoke the probate of such will, he gave to the persons who executed such releases, about the sum of $3,000,000, and has paid to them the legacies in said will bequeathed to them, amounting to about $2,500,000. That the legacies so paid to them and to his said sons, amounting in the aggregate to about $11,000,000, such gifts amounting to about $3,000,000, the sum borrowed, as aforesaid, for the purpose of speculation, amounting to $18,000,000 or over, the other indebtedness before referred to, excluding the amounts to which, upon the distribution of the estate of said deceased, his next of kin will be entitled, and including the amount lost by said William H. Vanderbilt, as before stated, will, in the aggregate, amount to a sum not much less than one-half of the personal estate which the said decedent had and possessed at the time of his death.

"Thirteenth—That the habits, associations, speculations, and expenses of the said William H. Vanderbilt are such as to create a belief entertained by many who have the best and fullest opportunity of knowing of them, that the property he controls will ultimately be wasted."

NEW-YORK ELEVATED A FAILURE.

THE FIRST COLD SNAP TESTS ITS EFFICIENCY—BAD ARRANGEMENTS AND INSOLENT OFFICIALS.

One of the principal arguments advanced by the advocates of rapid transit, when the stockholders of the New-York Elevated Railroad sought to secure the right to erect their ponderous columns in the principal thoroughfares of this City, was that in the cold wintry season peculiar to our northern climate, it would be possible to move swiftly from the Battery to Harlem in comfortably-heated cars. Graphic pictures were painted of the discomforts of riding in the horse-cars, drawn through the drifting snow by four struggling animals at a snail's pace. The pictures produced some effect. Many members of the business community reside in Harlem, and a considerable number live in the vicinity of the Third-avenue branch of the New-York Elevated Railroad. Not a few down-town merchants own property on the line of the road. Besides this class of citizens, the merchants and storekeepers doing business along Third-avenue, in Yorkville and Harlem, have submitted to the inconvenience of having their sidewalks incumbered by iron pillars, bearers, and girders, and the street in the immediate vicinity blockaded with huge piles of dirt for the past year, so that the community might derive a benefit from rapid transit. Now that the line is completed, and the benefits, if there are any, should be manifest, they find the whole thing is a piece of fiction. A gentleman living in Westchester County, who has been in the habit of traveling by the New-York Central Railroad to Forty-second-street, and thence by the Fourth-avenue horse-cars to the Post Office, said yesterday that he recently had business in the vicinity of the Canal-street station of the elevated railroad, during the hours in the evening at which passengers are carried at a reduced fare. Having transacted his business he concluded to try the new route to Harlem. He ascended to the platform at Canal-street, paid his fare, and passed through the gate, where he found a closely-packed crowd, pushing and hauling in the effort to look out for an approaching train, and discussing the prospects of being able to get aboard. Many were growling because several trains had already passed without taking them on. When the train arrived there was a grand struggle to get on, "and" the gentleman said, "it was a mercy that no one was crushed beneath the wheels." The train was already packed to its utmost capacity, the platforms being even crowded, and only stopped long enough to allow those who desired to get off at Canal-street. It was fully 10 minutes before the next train arrived, and in the meantime the jam on the platform was indescribable. The ticket-seller continued to sell tickets in the most reckless manner, and snarled at everybody who took advantage of the rule of the company allowing passengers to return their tickets and receive back their money. After three trains had passed without taking on a passenger, the gentleman, with many others, returned their tickets, demanded their money, and went home by other routes. The story of this gentleman's experience was the talk of many business men, and may be confirmed any evening by those sufficiently curious to try the experiment at any of the stations between Hanover-square and Thirty-second-street. The observance of the managers is the total absence of any means of heating the cars on the East Side line of the New-York Elevated Railroad. Ever since the first cold snap the cars of the Metropolitan Railroad have been heated by steam, while no attempt in that direction has been made by the New-York Elevated Railroad Company beyond placing beneath the seats in each car a huge cylinder, which intimated that at some future day heat was to be supplied to the passengers. The past few days and particularly yesterday, the car windows were coated with white frost, and the comfortless passengers were not even protected from the wind, which entered the crevices of the sliding doors. At distances of two blocks before reaching a station the brakemen open wide the doors simultaneously at each end of the cars, and a biting draught circulates from one end to the other of the train. The doors are not closed until a block or more distance has been passed, so that the time during which the doors are open generally is longer than while they are closed. On Monday evening last a party of ladies and gentlemen living in Harlem, while returning home from the Academy of Music, were detained for 40 minutes on the track between One Hundred and Sixteenth and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth streets, and such delays are not infrequent. The delay was occasioned by a lack of switching accommodations at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, but the railroad officials might at least have told those who had purchased tickets that they would have to wait for some time at the station. If they had been told that they would have to wait 40 minutes, they would, of course, have gone away and either taken the horse cars or walked the nine blocks. Merchants who do business in the lower portion of the City, and who live in Westchester County, along the line of the Harlem Railroad, bitterly complain that connections are not made in time to catch the trains on the Harlem Road, and they, in fact, lose time by taking the elevated trains.

Yesterday morning part of the machinery of a locomotive gave way at Houston-street, and 12 trains were soon blockaded up at that point. With heated cars, delays of this character would be more bearable, but it is a matter of surprise that passengers are not notified of probable delays between stations, in order that they may leave the trains at preceding stopping-places. The insolence of the employés on the trains is also the subject of much complaint. They are instructed to call out the name of a station immediately before reaching it, and the name of the next stopping-place directly after the train starts. This they do in a mumbling tone, utterly unintelligible to strangers, and many persons are frequently carried beyond the point at which they wish to get off. An instance of this kind occurred last evening when a passenger wanted to get off from car No. 101 of a train stopping at Franklin-square. Not understanding the name, he discovered his arrival at that station too late to get off, and was taken to Fulton-street. Upon remonstrating with the brakeman for not calling the station more plainly, the fellow insolently replied, "What'll you bet I didn't?"

The sudden cold snap yesterday froze the water in the service-pipes which supply the engines at Harlem, and below Franklin-square, and in many of the locomotive boilers. It was after midday before trains ran regularly below Franklin-square. The patent air-brakes worked badly, also, and many of the trains were brought to a halt by the hand-brakes. In some instances trains were not stopped until they had passed the stations, and were backed up, causing much loss of time. The last train left One Hundred and Twenty-ninth-street, Harlem, soon after 6 o'clock last night, and passengers for that train were refused purchasing tickets that there might or might not be another train going down, but no other means was adopted of notifying passengers of the uselessness of climbing the long stairways to the platforms. No shelter had been provided for the passengers who shivered and stamped around the platform to keep warm.

WORK FOR THE NEW CITY JUDGE.

Nearly a dozen cases of homicide will be submitted by the District Attorney to the Grand Jury which is to be sworn in on Monday. Five cases of murder will be placed on the calendar of Part II. of the Court of General Sessions, over which City Judge Cowing will preside, on Monday, for the purpose of fixing dates for their trial. The cases are those of Angelo Spagnolo, a native of Gibraltar, who is accused of having brutally stabbed Matthew Drake on East Broadway, on Nov. 14; Francis and John McKenna, liquor saloon keepers, for having shot and killed William B. Wilse in Mulberry-street, on Sept. 21; Peter O'Rourke, in having caused the death by drowning of Edward Sullivan, whom he struck on the head with a brick, precipitating him into the East River, at Forty-sixth-street, and John S. Downing, who is charged with having kicked and beaten his wife Margaret to death. These cases are of murder in the first degree. The fifth case, which is one of murder in the second degree, is that of Francisco D. Jane, an Italian, who stabbed and killed William Pease in a quarrel in the Italian Tenement-house, in New-York-street, Nov. 22. Assistant District Attorney Rollins will prosecute in Judge Cowing's court during the January term.

TRYING TO REDUCE THE PRICE OF MILK.

The milk-dealers of New-York and Brooklyn made a united attempt last Winter to secure the passage of a bill through the Legislature reducing the price of freight on milk from 60 to 40 cents per can. But it was late in the session when the bill was introduced, and it was delayed six weeks in the committee to which it was referred, so that it was not reported to the House until May, and then it came with an adverse report from the committee. Notwithstanding that fact, however, the bill passed the House by a vote of 61 yeas to 11 nays. It never got any further, and the milkmen have openly charged that they were sold out by the member who had it in charge. The same bill has been revived, the reduction has been fixed at 30 cents per can, instead of 40, and the matter has been placed in the hands of Assemblyman Stegman of Kings County, who is said to have pledged himself to introduce the bill at an early day and to do his utmost to secure its passage. Assemblyman Treadwell, of Kings, has also promised to support the bill. A meeting of the Kings County Milk Exchange was called yesterday afternoon to make arrangements for the circulation of petitions and the raising of money to send a committee to Albany to look after the bill in the Legislature, but owing to the fact that there was not a quorum present, the meeting was postponed. Mr. Kilmer, the Secretary of the Exchange, said that milkmen were paying five times as much for freight as any other class of shippers on the railroads and they thought it was unjust. Even at the price to which it is proposed to reduce the freight, they would be paying three times as much as anybody else, and they were willing to pay that sum. Their object, he said, was to make milk as cheap as possible, and that whatever reduction they got they would give the consumers the benefit of.

SLEIGHING WITH BLUE NOSES.

THOSE WHO BRAVED THE COLD AND PIERCING WIND ON THE BOULEVARDS AND ST. NICHOLAS-AVENUE YESTERDAY.

It was suggested "down town" yesterday that the weather was altogether too cold for sleighriding, and that Central Park and the boulevards would be deserted. By way of reply though, it was said that weather could not be provided cold enough to deter certain New-Yorkers from taking advantage of good sleighing when it was to be had. The correctness of this response was proved by the appearance in the localities named of hundreds of neat turnouts yesterday afternoon, and the merry sound of the sleigh-bells rang out far and wide on the keen air. The sleighing was capital in the Park, and here was the most animated scene. Fast trotters, singly and in pairs, sped by, whizzing light cutters over the snow as though they and their occupants were the merest feather-weights. Heavy double sleighs, warmly lined with rich furs, and drawn by sleek, high stepping horses, glided more decorously over the frozen surface, bearing gay parties of ladies and children. All were well bundled up in furs, and bade defiance to the stinging cold. A number of the horses were provided with the Russian dreasky bells, the ring of which is clearer and more musical than that of ordinary sleigh-bells, and many were decked with plumes of scarlet horse-hair that streamed backward in the wind. The road north of the Park was almost wholly given up to the trotters, and in spite of the cold quite a number of them were to be seen on St. Nicholas-avenue, the whitened surface, and entering as keenly as did their masters into the spirit of the sport. The road was so hard that a horse had to be very sharply shod to keep his feet, and many whose owners became over-confident of their speed to make perfect sleighing an inch or two more of heavy snow and a slight thaw is needed. The best of the road was for a mile on either side of Lambert's Club-house, and it was made the rendezvous of all whose love of fast horses and fast driving induced them to try and produce them to brave the cutting wind that swept the road. The sheds were well filled most of the afternoon with horses buried beneath blankets and fur robes, while their owners loitered about the glowing stoves inside the house, or stamped up and down the porch watching and commenting upon the flyers as they sped past. But few of the occupants of the glancing sleighs could be recognized, so thoroughly were they muffled in furs and great coats and disguised by the goggles used to protect their eyes from the flying snow; but each man on the porch knew every horse on the road, and from his gait could name him and his owner.

Among those who thus afforded amusement and food for gossip to the watchers on the porch were many well-known politicians, sporting men, and other proverbial lovers of fast horses. Mr. Sheppard Knapp whirled by behind what he fondly calls the "colts," a pair of 5-year-old beauties—Middletown and Idol by name. The Knapp boys were also on with the "old gray," who frequently astonished more pretentious roadsters simply by passing them when they were at their best. One of the prettiest and speediest turnouts on the road was that of Underhill Briggs, the dark bay mare Tip and her mate, Mose, a pair that easily get inside of 2:40. Mr. Phil. Collins drove a fine bay team. Mr. Robert Bonner was not on the road, but Albert and Edward Bonner were out, the former driving the bay mare Mamie B., and the latter the bay horse Taylor. Mr. Moses B. Brown was a sufficiently ardent lover of the sport to appear with a fine gray lead-team, the stock he is wont to drive, because, as he explained, none of the others was sharp shod. Sam Louden was out with his 2:40 chesnut horse, and L. M. Pulford showed off the points of his bay mare Midnight. Nathaniel Hunting drove a 2:35 black mare rejoicing in the name of Lady Hunting, and Nicholas Honsman was seated behind the pretty little bay Nimpy Horse. Wallace Ross had reason to be proud of his imported bay mare Vienna, and Mr. Freeman caused his bay horse Star to do some pretty work. Vanderbilt Allen drove a speedy white-foot bay horse, and S. S. Ingersoll, with his 2:28 bay horse Frank-mare Boy, drew forth many exclamations of admiration. There were very few brushes, and but little speeding, as the footing was too insecure, and the cold was so intense that, in spite of the moonlight, the road was deserted at an early hour.

LOCKING UP A WOMAN.

THE WORK OF A BOSTON DETECTIVE—SHE IS DISCHARGED BY JUSTICE OTTERBOURG.

A young man of handsome appearance, fashionably dressed, giving his name as Charles Illing, and claiming to be a private detective, was brought before Justice Otterbourg, yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, by Patrolman Crowley, of the Fourteenth Precinct, on a charge which at first sight seemed to be a very serious one. A good-looking woman, attired in deep mourning, appeared as the complainant. She gave her name as Mrs. Mary Rohe, and said she resided at No. 317 Broome-street. Illing was arrested at Earle's Hotel, whither he induced Mrs. Rohe to go, locking her up in a private room. Illing left Mrs. Rohe alone for a few moments, and not liking her position she screamed for help and attracted the attention of the hotel attendants in the office. Illing told Justice Otterbourg that in view of prospective remuneration he was working on his own account as private detective in the case of Frederick Shulte, who was brutally murdered in South Norwalk on Dec. 27. He said that the man Buckholz, now under arrest in South Norwalk for the murder of Shulte, was a friend of the Rohe family, and as he had learned that they were on very intimate terms, and as Mr. Rohe was to be a witness in the case, he thought it advisable to come to New-York and obtain from Mrs. Rohe, in her husband's absence at South Norwalk, all the information possible in regard to the antecedents of Buckholz. Illing showed to Justice Otterbourg a telegram which the District Attorney at Norwalk had sent him, and which contained directions for him to follow. Justice Otterbourg was of the opinion that under the circumstances he had no jurisdiction in the matter, and he directed the officer to take the prisoner and Mrs. Rohe before Superintendent Walling. The latter, after investigating the matter, discharged Illing from custody, remarking that the young man Illing had gone a little too far, but, as no improper motive was shown, he would not detain him. He also told Mrs. Rohe that she was at perfect liberty to go to Norwalk with Illing or not, as she saw fit. Mrs. Rohe said that she was willing to go with the detective, but not in the absence of her husband, as that would leave her apartments entirely unprotected and at the mercy of thieves. Mr. Walling informed her that, if she determined to accompany Illing to Norwalk, she should notify Acting Captain Webb, of the Tenth Precinct, who would see that her property was guarded. Mrs. Rohe and Illing left the Central Office together.

TESTIMONY IN MR. PINCKNEY'S FAVOR.

Justice John A. Dinkel gave the most important evidence for the defense yesterday at the trial of Justice Pinckney. He testified that, in his opinion, Justice Pinckney was a very useful, careful, and conscientious Justice; he had known him repeatedly to suffer from chills and fever, but had never seen him under the influence of liquor; Justice Dinkel presided in Justice Pinckney's court often while the latter was ill; one night early in November, 1878, a messenger called at witness' residence with a request that he should hold court the following morning for Justice Pinckney; the court is usually opened at 9:30 A. M.; he reached the building at 9:40, and was informed that the Clerk, Patrick Anthony, had assumed the responsibility of adjourning for the day; a great many persons were in the corridor, and some excitement prevailed; witness sent for Anthony, and asked him why he had adjourned the court; the Clerk replied that he had done so because there was no Judge present at the opening hour; witness, who thought it very singular that such a hasty adjournment should have been ordered by the Clerk, observed that too much maliciousness and spite had already been evinced against Justice Pinckney; Justice Dinkel presided on the trial days of the court for the succeeding two weeks, during which he discovered that the court was run by the Clerk, not the Judge; on one occasion he told Anthony not to make any more trouble, as there had been too much of it already; the answer of the Clerk was, "I want to get even; he had no business to remove me; there is not a man in the world that I would not get square with; I have never been beaten in my life;" Justice Dinkel replied, "You will be beaten this time," and then left him. Witness believed that the testimony tending to show that Justice Pinckney was a drunkard was false, and that the whole prosecution was a malicious one, and the result of a political fend existing between the attachés of the court and the Judge and others connected with him. Several witnesses then testified that they had never seen Justice Pinckney drunk on the bench. A further hearing will be had on Monday.

RESUMPTION NOTES.

Resumption continues to work smoothly, and there was yesterday no demand for gold anywhere. At one of the banks, whose payments in gold during the past three weeks have averaged between $100,000 and $150,000 per day, they paid out yesterday less than $10 in the precious metal over the counter, and the demands upon it from country banks did not aggregate $5,000. At the Sub-Treasury $80,000 in gold were paid out during the day, of which one bank took $50,000. It received $200,000 in gold coin from one bank—the German-American—in exchange for legal tenders. The payments of United States notes in lieu of gold coin on Thursday aggregated $2,089,000.

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

Minnie Cummings, manager of the Drawing-Room Theatre, is dangerously ill with pneumonia at the Hotel Hamilton.

The Controller's monthly report, which was issued last evening, shows that on Dec. 31, 1878, the City debt was $113,418,403 49.

The receipts of the Department of Public Works for Croton water supplied to the shipping amounted to $117,207 52 last year.

The first Customs seizure of the year was made yesterday. It consisted of 400 fine cigars, found on the sidewalk in West-street. The boxes were blackened as though they had been hidden under the coal of some steamer.

The settlement of the order before Judge Davis, in Supreme Court, Chambers, in reference to the mandamus granted against the County Clerk on motion of the Committee of the Bar Association, was yesterday adjourned by consent until to-day.

In consequence of the blocking of the railroads from the West, the freight market, especially for steamers, was dull and weak on the Produce Exchange yesterday. Should the blockade continue, a serious depression is looked for in this interest next week.

The next lecture in the Cooper Union free course of Saturday Night Lectures for the People will be delivered this evening, at 8 o'clock, in the Great Hall, by Prof. J. W. S. Arnold, of the University of New-York, on "The Physiology of Animal Motion," with stereopticon illustrations.

A quantity of the remaining assets of the bankrupt banking and brokerage firm of Greenleaf, Norris & Co. were sold by order of the Receiver at the Exchange Sales-room yesterday. They consisted mainly of mortgaged out-of-town real estate and uncollectable accounts, and realized only nominal prices.

Assignments were filed in the office of the County Clerk yesterday by the following persons: George Guenthal and Louis Guenthal, (the firm of George Guenthal & Son,) to Thomas Alexander, Jr., with successive preferences amounting to about $33,000; Otto Hueter to George F. Boose, with preferences amounting to $2,632 65.

American shippers have been formally notified that the Marine Underwriters of Sorrento, Italy, have passed a resolution refusing to insure any vessel on which Capt. Raffaele Scarpati, formerly of the bark Nuevo Virginia, may be commander. The Captain was found guilty of attempting to defraud the underwriters by giving a fictitious general average.

The adjourned hearing in the case of Mrs. Kisbey, formerly Miss Jessie Hunt, who complained that her husband, David H. Kisbey, forced her to fast because she refused to do his will, was called in the Fifty-seventh-Street Police Court yesterday, but by consent of both parties another adjournment was had to Jan. 27. It is more than probable that the case will never go to trial, as it is understood an amicable arrangement has been entered into by the parties interested.

At the annual meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine the following officers were elected: Fordyce Barker, M. D., LL. D., President; William T. White, M. D., T. Gaillard Thomas, M. D., James R. Leaming, M. D., Vice-Presidents; John G. Adams, M. D., Corresponding Secretary; Horace T. Hanks, M. D., Recording Secretary; Edwin F. Ward, M. D., Assistant Secretary; Francis V. White, M. D., Statistical Secretary; Horace D. Arnold, M. D., Treasurer; Austin Flint, M. D., Samuel T. Hubbard, M. D., Isaac E. Taylor, M. D., S. S. Purple, M. D., Trustees.

A meeting of citizens who "favor such a revision of the tariff as will provide for an honest collection of the duties on sugars," and also to protest against adulterations in refined sugars and syrups, will be held in Chickering Hall on Monday evening next. The call has been signed by a large number of eminent citizens, bankers, physicians, and other persons uninterested in the refining or sale of sugar. Addresses will be delivered by Judge Noah Davis, Hon. Algernon S. Sullivan, the President of the New-Orleans Board of Trade, and other gentlemen of distinction not yet named.

The advent of the holidays just ended stimulated the genius of imitation that had been slumbering in the brain of some manufacturing company, and the outgrowth of this awakened mental activity is now in circulation among the public in the shape of counterfeit imitations of the national silver coins. So good is the imitation that it is only by the closest scrutiny that one can detect the silvered pasteboard from a genuine coin laid by its side. The new pasteboard coin is of the same size and thickness of every coin denomination, with the exception of the silver half-dime, which is replaced in a complete set by a capital imitation of the 5-cent nickel piece.

The case of "Red" Leary was up in the United States District Court yesterday morning, when Judge Choate rendered a decision dismissing the writ of habeas corpus, and remanding the prisoner to the custody of the Sheriff. It was the opinion of Judge Choate that he could not issue any process to compel the Governor of Massachusetts to act in the grounds upon which he issued a requisition for Leary as one of the Northampton Bank robbers. After his decision, Leary's counsel obtained from Judge Choate a stay of proceedings for ten days, in order to prepare for an appeal to the United States Circuit Court. It is their intention to carry the case to the United States Supreme Court if they are forced out of the Circuit Court.

BROOKLYN.

Assemblyman-elect D. W. Talmage yesterday resigned his clerkship in the Tax Collector's office.

Bertha Mangel, a servant employed at No. 216 Washington-avenue, was scalded about the face and arms yesterday by the bursting of a water-back range.

A steam-radiator exploded yesterday in the plumbing shop of J. Scollay, No. 76 Myrtle-avenue, slightly injuring William Scollay, William Simpson, and John Conselyea. The damage to the shop amounted to about $300.

Moritz Newman, who was shot on Thursday evening by Moritz Soehow during an altercation in the latter's saloon, No. 130 Hudson-avenue, over a game of cards, was in a critical condition yesterday. The physicians who are attending the wounded man think that he may recover.

C. E. Von Folkenberg, who is known to the Police as an old confidence operator, was arrested yesterday on a charge of obtaining $40 by false pretenses from A. F. Pflinghaupt. Folkenberg obtained the money by pretending that he was about to take the complainant into partnership in a lucrative business.

City Works Commissioners Flaherty and Bennett, Water Purveyor Milne, and Superintendent of Sewers Dady, indicted by the Grand Jury for conspiracy to defraud the city out of $50,000, gave bail yesterday, each in the sum of $2,500. The indictments have been transferred from the Court of Sessions to the Court of Oyer and Terminer. The accused will not probably be called for trial before the February Term of the court.

Registrar of Arrears Scott having a balance of $150 01 unexhausted at the end of the year, divided it among some of the clerks in his office who were required to do overwork during the collection of the tax levy. Mayor Howell refused to sign the pay-rolls of the clerks who received this increase of salary, on the ground that the Registrar of Arrears had no right to increase the salaries of his clerks. The latter has employed counsel to apply for a mandamus to compel the Mayor to sign the warrants for their salary.

An adjourned meeting of the Kings County Elevated Railroad Company was held last evening, at the office of C. J. Lowery, in Montague-street, but no business of importance was transacted. Messrs. Campbell, Clements, Calyer and Lowery, Rapid Transit Commissioners, appeared before Justice Gilbert, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, and certified under oath that the Kings County Elevated Railroad Company had complied with the conditions prescribed by the Rapid Transit Commission. The certificate was handed to the Directors of the company at their meeting in Mr. Lowery's office.

NEW-JERSEY.

During the last year the Excise Board of Newark granted 1,126 licenses, the receipts being $50,538. The receipts for the year 1877 were $55,607.

John Berry was arraigned before Justice Otto, of Newark, for attempting, while drunk, to kill his wife with a hatchet. He was committed to the County Jail. Mrs. Berry was not injured.

Kate McCune, a servant-girl who had been arrested for drunkenness, hanged herself to her cell bars in the Hoboken Police Station early yesterday morning. She was cut down in time to save her life.

Rev. S. L. Baldwin, formerly of Newark, has been elected President and Acting Bishop of the Foochow (China) Methodist Episcopal Annual Conference. He has had charge of the Foochow Mission for several years.

The failure of John B. Coles, a well-known real estate agent of Jersey City, was announced yesterday. His assets and liabilities could not be ascertained. He was at one time agent for the Coles estate, but has no longer control over it.

Uzal D. Ward, of No. 169 Roseville-avenue, Newark, and engaged as a bookseller at No. 150 Nassau-street, New-York, died very suddenly of heart disease, Thursday, at his residence in Newark. He was 61 years of age, and had for some time been the Treasurer of the American and Foreign Bible Society.

A few days ago Daniel Dougherty was convicted in the Court of Sessions at Jersey City of having robbed the house of Charles Mersch, on Jersey City Heights. The conviction was based mainly on the evidence of Charles Hendricks, his confederate, who turned State's evidence. Yesterday Dougherty was sentenced to three years' imprisonment in the State Prison. Hendricks afterward, Hendricks was arraigned by Mr. McGill for his participation in the burglary. He pleaded guilty, and James Garretson promptly imposed upon him the same penalty he had imposed on Dougherty. "Ha!" said Dougherty to Hendricks contemptuously when the sentence had been pronounced, "you didn't gain nothin' by givin' the thing away."

IS SHE INSANE?

A WIDOW WHO IS ACCUSED OF BEING A LUNATIC—SHE IS COMMITTED TO THE TOMBS.

Mary A. Helms, a widow, about 40 years of age, was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court, before Justice Flammer, yesterday, on a charge of lunacy. Mrs. Helms is a very respectable looking woman and was neatly clad. She is about five feet two inches in height, of fair complexion, and was very pale while at the bar. She exhibited no traces of mental derangement, and her language in reply to all the questions of the court was precise and intelligent. She is the widow of Mr. Helms, formerly an undertaker in Bedford-street. She is at present the lessee of the building No. 50 Sixth-avenue, and has many sub-tenants. The complainant in the case is Mrs. Jarrow, the wife of Thomas Jarrow, one of her tenants. Mr. Thomas charged her with insanity. He alleged that she had a daughter 18 years of age, who was afraid to live with her, and was staying with Dr. King, of Washington-place. Miss Helms used to go to Mr. Thomas and claim his protection, saying that her mother constantly threatened to take her heart out and stick it in a fork. Mr. Thomas also said that Mrs. Helms was in the habit of breaking her own furniture, "just for fun," and of otherwise annoying those who lived in her house. Two physicians—Dr. E. H. Warner, also a tenant of Mrs. Helms, and Dr. King, the family physician—had called to see the daughter, as they believed the widow was crazy. Dr. Warner said she had not eaten a pint of food in 14 days. Neither physician, however, made affidavit to his opinions.

Mrs. Helms denied that she was insane. She couldn't imagine why any one should charge her with being a lunatic, unless in the case of Mr. Thomas. She insisted on her tenants being more prompt than they were in the payment of their rents to her, as she had to be very punctual in her own payments. She admitted that she had had trouble enough to make some women crazy. She had deposits in several banks, she said. She had quite a sum in the Sixpenny Savings Bank, which she had lost through its failure. She also had a large sum in the Manhattan Savings Bank, and she considered that practically as good as lost, because since the suspension following the robbery she had been unable to calculate with any certainty on ever getting it at a stated time. She had accounts in other banks which she refused to name. She denied the story about her daughter's heart, and said that the child concocted the story in order to have an excuse for her absence, which was really owing to her having stolen all her mother's bank-books and concealed them.

Justice Flammer said that for his part he could see nothing in the prisoner to denote insanity of a kind to warrant her commitment, although she might be very insane, but upward enough to conceal it during a brief acquaintance. But, as a reputable physician thought differently, he considered it his duty to be guided by the professional opinion, and he therefore ordered Mrs. Helms to be taken to the Tombs, and there have her mental condition inquired into.

THE HOBOKEN CITY TREASURER.

In the trial of the suit against the bondsmen of ex-City Treasurer Kamena, of Hoboken, on trial before Judge Knapp, in Jersey City, yesterday, it was shown that by the books Kamena had in his hands when the defendants became his bondsmen, in June, 1877, $127,000 of the city moneys, and that, upon that basis, he is a defaulter to the city to the amount of $61,000. Of the $35,000 school moneys received by him, warrants for but $10,900 could be produced. The rest had been paid out without warrant. Among other irregularities, it was shown that he had on one occasion transferred $2,100, and on another occasion $1,000 from the city funds to his own private account. The witness for the defense was the plaintiff, Mr. Collins, counsel for the defense, moved a nonsuit, claiming that the books were not sufficient evidence of the amount Mr. Kamena had in hand at the opening of the fiscal year of 1877 to charge the bondsmen. Attorney-General Stockton, for the plaintiff, said he had actually had. The defense allege that the defalcations had occurred prior to 1877. The court refused the nonsuit, holding that the entries in the books were prima facie evidence, and the case is still on.

ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS.

Henry R. Pierson, of Albany, is at the Everett House.

Gen. Wager Swayne, of Ohio, is at the Windsor Hotel.

Judge Amasa J. Parker, of Albany, is at the Brevoort House.

Gen. C. H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, is at the Hotel Brunswick.

Senator J. R. McPherson, of New-Jersey, is at the Gilsey House.

Paymaster-General Horatio Bridge, United States Navy, is at the Park-Avenue Hotel.

Bishop E. de Schweinitz, of the Moravian Church, and Prof. T. J. Backus, of Vassar College, are at the Astor House.

Congressman Thomas Turner, of Kentucky; ex-Gov

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8523. NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, JANUARY 5, 1879.—TRIPLE SHEET. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

THE CONTEST AT ALBANY.

ASPECTS OF THE FIGHT FOR THE SPEAKERSHIP.

ARRIVAL OF GOV. ALVORD—CLAIMS OF MR. SLOAN'S FRIENDS—BOTH CANDIDATES CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS—A PARTIAL CANVASS OF THE REPUBLICAN MEMBERS—GEN. HUSTED NOT IN THE FIELD.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 4.—"Old Salt" and his friends, who had been blockaded in the snow on Friday, broke through the barriers that separated them from the capital, and at 2 o'clock this morning they reached the depot in this city, the candidate for Speaker feeling very much relieved to find himself in the field. He went immediately to Stanwix Hall, where he established head-quarters. Before his arrival had become generally known I called upon him. He was receiving visitors with great warmth, giving a cordial grip of the hand and a characteristic greeting to each. To the question, "How goes the canvass?" he quickly and very emphatically replied: "Canvass? Why, there is no canvass. It's all right. Of course I am elected." He then told about his detention on the road, but did not offer to make any elaborate explanation of the reasons for his confidence of success. Among those who called upon him during the day were Mr. John F. Smyth, United States Marshal Louis F. Payn, and others, who have been working very industriously in his behalf. As the day wore on, the excitement, which had been delayed so long, began to be manifest among the members who gathered in the hall of the Delavan House to discuss the situation. It had been confidently predicted by the Alvord men that as soon as the Lieutenant-Governor arrived the absurdity of the pretensions of Mr. Sloan's supporters would be made apparent. "Old Salt" came, but the prediction was by no means fulfilled. Mr. Sloan kept his room, and its door swung frequently to admit men who came to assure him of their determination to vote for him. Congressman-elect Warner Miller is acknowledged as the head of the Sloan party. He is unremitting in his work. Constantly on the alert, he meets the arriving member frankly, and soon becomes satisfied as to his standing.

A personal canvass of some extent made to-night in order to learn the truth of the current reports about the relative strength of the two candidates in the contest may be of interest if not important. I say two candidates, for Gen. Husted is out of the race. He admitted this frankly this morning. When asked if there was any truth in the statement that he had withdrawn from the contest for the Speakership, he replied, "Why, whoever said I was a candidate? I never was, and have not asked a solitary member to vote for me." It seems that Gen. Husted—who would not have been averse to opening the new Capitol, and thus enjoying the double honor of presiding over the last body that met in the old building, and of directing the first to meet in the new one, was resolved that he should not be made a candidate unless there was a clear promise that he would be the unanimous choice of the caucus. He said this in conversation to-day. When he found that there were two other gentlemen who were spoken of, all thought of entering the contest was abandoned by him. On inquiring the opinion of Hon. Cadwallader Baldwin, of Rockland, he declined to say what he expected, but he has since given out freely his preference for Mr. Alvord, and has not only expressed his belief that Alvord will be the next Speaker, but that there will be only one candidate in the caucus on Monday night. This is decidedly hopeful, not to say sanguine, and gives one no ground upon which to base an estimate of the relative strength of Sloan and Alvord, to which I was about to allude. The Sloan men name their votes. To-night they claim 53, and endeavor to establish their claim to a great many of the number. Cattaraugus is set down for Sloan. From Cayuga one, and possibly two votes, are expected, the certainty being assured by the member alluded to. Chautauqua is claimed by Mr. Sloan's friends, but not positively. Both Delaware members are set down on the Sloan list. One member from Dutchess is outspoken for Sloan. Erie is mowed up somewhere between Albany and Buffalo. Its five members are all except one against Sloan. Franklin, Fulton and Hamilton, and Genesee are included in the Sloan claim. Mr. Sheard, of Herkimer, is one of the stanchest opponents of Gov. Alvord, while the two Jefferson men—Skinner and McAlister—are not resting for a moment in their work for Sloan. Of the Kings County Republicans, there are here to-night Ogden, Trowbridge, Stephenson, and Talmadge. Ogden and Stephenson are pronounced friends of Sloan, and are working for him. Lewis, Livingston, and Montgomery are claimed for Sloan, and a member is also claimed for the same side in both the Madison and Monroe districts. The most ardent friends of Mr. Sloan do not claim more than three of the New-York Republicans. Mr. Deane is supposed to prefer Sloan, Mr. James M. Varnum has declared and is working for him, and Simonson is considered as almost certain to vote for the Oswego candidate. Oneida was heard from to-night, and I am assured by Mr. Sloan's friends that he has all three Republicans from that county. In Oswego one member is ranged on the Sloan side. Otsego is outspoken for him; Fish, of Putnam, has been working for him all day; St. Lawrence is "solid" for Sloan; Saratoga is said to be divided, and the Sloan list is completed with Steuben, Tioga, Tompkins, and Ulster—a vote in expectancy going down for each district.

On the other hand, while they are unwilling to go into details, the Alvord side are as sanguine as their opponents. The Sloan side became very jubilant to-night, because Gov. Alvord, who has had his head-quarters at Stanwix Hall, suddenly engaged rooms at the Delavan, and moved into them. He is now on the same floor with Mr. Sloan, at the opposite end of the same hall, and late in the evening Mr. Sloan paid a friendly visit to his opponent. It did not seem at all strange. The contest between the two has been conducted with excellent temper, and the meeting of the two Republicans was perfectly unconstrained and cordial. The effect of this movement of Gov. Alvord, whether truly or not, has been construed as indicating weakness on his side. Still, the friends of the veteran claim for him 60 Republican votes at least. I have endeavored to obtain a list of the votes claimed, but could not succeed. It is generally admitted, however, that Albany County will be found solid for Alvord; Allegany is spoken of as in his favor; one vote from Chautauqua is credited to Alvord, and a claim is made upon Chenango and Clinton, both members from Columbia, one in doubt from Dutchess, four from Erie, the member from Essex, three from Kings, two from Monroe, five from New-York, three from Onondaga, the members from Ontario, Orange, and Queens, two from Rensselaer, Rockland, Schenectady, Schuyler, Seneca, Warren, and Yates. Westchester is claimed by both sides, and there is some probability that it will be divided. Counting up votes thus claimed by both sides, including several votes counted for Alvord that have been enumerated as having promised Sloan, personally, to support him, the result in figures appears to be—for Alvord 41, for Sloan 42; 12 or more votes are considered as safe for Sloan, but it was difficult to ascertain where they are to come from. Mr. Alvord was sanguine as ever to-night. "Canvass," said he, "when I asked for the latest prospects, "there is no canvass; it's all over; I was elected two days ago. There will only be one candidate in the caucus, I tell you, and Alvord won't be out of the race either." He chooses to keep his counsel, and so do his friends. They were to-night waiting for the trains from the west and one of the sanguine ones declared in my hearing that "the other man" would be out of the way to-morrow night. Of course, there is no present intention to withdraw Mr. Sloan, and his friends do not believe that Mr. Alvord will be nominated by acclamation. The noisy advocates of both candidates are claiming votes enough for each to make a House of 150 Republicans, and the Democrats are not taken into account.

One hears very little about corporations and their influence in the contest, but the fact that several men known to be interested in insurance corporations are here, that they are talking for a candidate, and that Mr. Alvord is their preference, may or may not lend color to the report that the insurance interests would prefer to see Mr. Alvord elected.

Mr. J. J. Belden, of Syracuse, ex-Canal Commissioner Wright, and Mr. Willard Johnson are here. Mr. Belden visited Gov. Alvord to-night, and takes a friendly interest in his cause. Mr. Wright is said to be disposed to encourage the veteran, and Mr. Johnson thinks he would make a very able speaker. In the crowds, and among disinterested persons who go with the tide of feeling, the tendency to-day has been to join in the strong cheer that is asked for Mr. Sloan. There is no telling how it will be to-morrow.

THE ASSEMBLY OF 1879.

INFLUENCES OF THE NEW CHAMBER—THE MEMBERS AND THEIR ANTECEDENTS—INEXPERIENCED LEGISLATORS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 4.—Visitors to the grand new Assembly Chamber do not have an opportunity to think about what sort of men are to sit in the sumptuous mahogany chairs that are now ranged in solemn rows before the Speaker's mahogany desk. It is the impression among the inexperienced that the members will behave themselves uncommonly well during the session. Probably they will, for a few weeks at least, if there is really any influence in magnificent and inspiring surroundings. Perhaps for a week or two it will be difficult to keep the eyes of the curious student of architectural forms and allegorical paintings from wandering toward the sweeping arches, rich with tracery carved with admirable skill and brought out by coloring of vermilion and ultramarine, or to the mural paintings that seem to have grown up with the building rather than found their way to their places from the painter's brush. A fortnight of study of, and constant association with, this beauty and grandeur will accustom the men to it even who have been taught to consider Tammany Hall the acme of all architectural perfection; and when business becomes interesting and contests warm, there is little likelihood that the course of events will differ much from that recorded year after year in the old brown-stone building just in front of the new one.

Some of the 128 members of the new Assembly have yet to learn everything necessary to make them useful legislators. Only 53 of them have ever seen service in the State Legislature. Of this 53, however, there are but 19 who have served more than one term. First on the list, alphabetically, and in the order of his importance as a veteran, is Hon. Thomas G. Alvord, Republican, who was first elected in 1844. He was in the Assembly, also, in the years 1850, 1862, 1864, 1870, 1871, 1872, 1874, 1875, 1877, and 1878; was Speaker in 1858 and 1864, while he was Lieutenant-Governor and presiding officer of the Senate in 1865 and 1866. Following the alphabetical order, Erastus Brooks, Democrat, comes next. He was Senator in 1854, 1855, 1856, and 1857, and his experience in the upper house has been supplemented by one term in the Assembly—in 1878. Hamilton Fish, Jr., will begin his fifth term, having before served in 1874, 1876, 1877, and 1878. Four terms ordinarily serve to make a member discreet and useful, and there are but few instances on record of men re-elected so frequently to the Legislature who have so utterly failed to develop sagacity or influence. John Galvin, Democrat, of New-York, has been here five times. Henry A. Glidden, formerly Clerk of the Senate, held that position four years, and is well educated in parliamentary business. Dr. I. I. Hayes, Republican, begins his fourth term, while A. Barton Hepburn, of St. Lawrence, comes back for the fifth consecutive time, and will doubtless be found among the useful and efficient members. Gen. James W. Husted, former y the Bald Eagle of Westchester, but now the Bald Eagle of Rockland, in recognition of his sweeping victory of last Fall, scores the tenth consecutive year of his service as a member of the lower house, having been elected first in 1869. He has three times occupied the Speaker's chair, in 1874, 1876, and 1878. Thomas D. Penfield, Democrat, of Oneida, was here as an Assemblyman in 1855, 1862, and 1865. Jacob Seybacher, of New-York, will, if he stays, serve his fourth year. George B. Sloan, of Oswego, comes back for the fourth time, having served in 1875, 1876, and 1877, and having held the office of Speaker during the latter year with signal credit to himself and honor to the party. Robert H. Strahan, the Republican member from the Thirteenth New-York District, is a veteran of four terms, the first of which was served in the interest of the Newburg District.

It has always seemed a matter of some interest to examine the roll of members, in order to see what preparation the men elected have had for becoming law-makers. At no time does a district seem so poor as when it sends to the Assembly chamber in the person of an ignorant or stupid man, one who is by nature and lack of education entirely unfit for the place he pretends to fill. There is great diversity of business represented in the Assembly of 1879. Our laws will this year be made by 28 farmers, 24 lawyers, 16 merchants, 7 manufacturers, 5 physicians, 5 real estate dealers, 4 clerks, in lines not specified; 3 each of bankers, journalists, and hotel keepers, two iron men, 2 liquor dealers, 2 lumbermen, and 2 brokers. There is also an insurance operator, a druggist, a retired merchant, a tanner, an auctioneer, a carter, a sign painter, a grocer, and one each of several other lines of business.

The make up of the New-York delegation, as seen by an analysis by occupations, is decidedly various. The City sends 4 lawyers out of 21 members. Of the rest 3 are clerks, 2 are hotel-keepers, 2 are liquor-dealers, there are 2 real estate dealers, an auctioneer, a physician, a manufacturer of soda water apparatus, a carter, an editor, an agent, and a sign painter. Kings County sends 5 merchants, one of them retired; a cooper, a builder, and two lawyers. One member in the list does not give his occupation, and one is frank enough to say he has none.

JUDGE SHERMAN'S FUNERAL.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 4.—The funeral services of the late Judge Sherman were conducted at the family residence, at 11 A. M. to-day, by Bishop Bedell, of the Episcopal Church, assisted by Rev. Francis A. Horton, of the Case-Avenue Presbyterian Church. Mr. Horton is the spiritual adviser of the late Judge's family. He made a few appropriate and feeling remarks. Several other prominent clergymen of the city were in attendance. This afternoon the remains were placed in the family vault at Lakeview Cemetery, only the relatives following the body to its final resting-place. The following persons acted as pall-bearers: Judge B. Hurlburt, Judge George Willey, Hon. J. M. Hoyt, J. W. Allen, Hon. F. J. Dickman, Judge Welker, and Col. Charles Whittlesey. A large number of the most prominent people in town were present at the services. Gen W. T. Sherman and wife, Secretary John Sherman and wife, Senator Cameron and wife, Mrs. Col. Moulton, of Cincinnati; Mrs. Reese, of Lancaster, and General and Mrs. Miles were present among the mourners. John Sherman, Jr., son of the deceased Judge, could not arrive from New-Mexico. The Sherman party included the General and the Secretary. Gen. Miles and Senator Cameron will start this evening by a special car for Washington.

RIVAL MERCHANTS IN COURT.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

VINCENNES, Ind., Jan. 4.—The shooting affair between rival merchants, noted in these dispatches as occurring Sunday last, was disposed of in the Police Court to-day, the participants being fined about $50 in each case. Owing to the prominence of the men, and the interest manifested by the public, the cases will probably appear in future in the Circuit Court.

BURNING OF A POST OFFICE.

THE CHICAGO BUILDING AGAIN DESTROYED.

ALL THE VALUABLE MAILS SAVED—GEN. SHERIDAN'S HEAD-QUARTERS BURNED OUT—NARROW ESCAPES FROM DEATH—THE LOSSES AND INSURANCE—NEW QUARTERS FOR THE CHICAGO POST OFFICE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—The Chicago Post Office seems fated to be pursued by fire wherever it may go. Twice before destroyed—in the great fires of 1871 and 1874—it has once more been moved to seek a new location through the medium of a fiery visitation. This afternoon, between 3 and 4 o'clock, flames burst out in the boiler-room, which was located near the centre of the building. There was some delay in transmitting the alarm to head-quarters, and consequently before the engines had reached the spot the fire had gained such headway that it could not be checked by any agency at hand. Reaching the grand staircase and elevators, with wonderful rapidity the flames mounted in a moment to the upper stories, and began their work of destruction in good earnest. The Post Office officials commenced the removal of mails at once, and by the time they were finally driven from the building by the increasing conflagration, they had succeeded in placing all the letter mail in wagons and transporting it to a place of safety. Only a portion of the newspaper mail, which was in the basement, was destroyed, and this they were compelled to abandon. In the money-order and registry departments all the packages were placed in the vaults, and as these were not subjected to any unusual degree of heat, owing to the fact that water was constantly thrown upon them, there can have been no great loss sustained. The fury of the flames at the outset was expended on the south, or Adams-street, side of the building and the upper stories of the north end, although before the fire was got under control the edifice was a complete ruin, nothing to speak of being left except the walls.

The occupants of the building, aside from that portion devoted to postal arrangements, were the Chicago and Alton Railway Company, their general offices being on the first floor on Adams-street, while above them were the military head-quarters of the division of the Missouri, Gen. Sheridan commanding, and on the third and fourth floors the law offices of Isham & Lincoln, and Judge R. Lawrence. A portion of the fifth story was occupied by Gen. Sheridan's Quartermaster's Department. The fire having cut off all chance to escape from the upper stories, four of the Quartermaster's clerks, who were at work, were forced to take refuge in the north end of the building, and were finally saved, but not until the flames had destroyed a portion of the Mansard story immediately above them, and the fire was rapidly working toward them from below, by means of a rope which the firemen succeeded in throwing over the roof. By this they descended the five stories and were caught by the firemen on the side-walk. They were nearly frozen, having been exposed a long time to the biting atmosphere while standing on the window ledge awaiting deliverance. The temperature was several degrees below zero. The Alton Railroad Company were fortunate in removing their records, and will lose no time, it is said, in supply on furniture. Gen. Sheridan's head-quarters had to be abandoned before the contents could be saved, and the result is a large number of valuable papers were destroyed while the Government sustains a further heavy loss on furniture. Gen. Sheridan and several of the officers individually lose valuable articles which can never be replaced.

In the office of Isham & Lincoln was a law library considered to be one of the most complete in the United States. Scarcely a book was saved. The intense cold, which interfered materially with the working of the engines, and rendered it almost impossible for the firemen to remain long at their posts without danger of freezing, together with the height of the building, made it almost impossible to control the flames, or stay their progress. Consequently, the efforts of the department were chiefly directed to save the walls, and in this they succeeded. By 10 o'clock this evening the flames had been so far extinguished as to render their spread to adjoining buildings impossible, and at this writing the fire is practically over.

The edifice destroyed, which was at the corner of Adams and Dearborn streets, and immediately across the street from the new Custom-house, was built by L. B. Honore with $400,000 loaned by the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, and $150,000 of his own capital. Failing to meet his obligations, and the loan and interest having reached $540,000, the company finally foreclosed and took possession. They expended $50,000 a year ago in fitting up that portion not occupied by the Post Office, and three or four months ago Gen. Sheridan and other occupants took possession. The insurance company have policies to the amount of $225,000 on the building, in various Eastern and English companies, and this is the extent of the insurance. It is estimated that the loss to the Post Office Department will reach $15,000, while that of the military head-quarters is put at the same figures. The Alton Railroad Company lose $3,000, and the legal firms about $15,000. As soon as it became apparent that the building would be consumed, the Postmaster, Mr. Palmer, at once negotiated for and secured the Singer building, which has just been finished on the site of the one burned a year ago. This is at the corner of State and Washington streets. The Government pays, it is reported, $60,000 a year for this edifice for a term of two years. It is thought that by that time the Custom-house will be completed.

OTHER LOSSES BY FIRE.

A BARN AND LIVE STOCK BURNED—OTHER FIRES THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 4.—A fire last night in Westfield Society, Middletown, burned a barn belonging to Mr. Geary, and 20 tons of hay, eight cows, three horses, and three goats were consumed.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 4.—The stable of Abraham Hopper, in River-street, near Main-street, was burned at 7 o'clock this evening, with four horses. The fire was of incendiary origin. The loss is $1,500; not insured.

The Academy of the Holy Angels, (Roman Catholic,) at Buffalo, N. Y., was destroyed by a fire yesterday afternoon, supposed to have been caused by a defective flue in the steam generator. The children were removed in safety, and the Mother Superior, who was confined to her room, was removed to Dr. Fierce's Hotel, adjoining. The loss on the building is $60,000, and on furniture, $5,000; insured for $25,000, as follows: Unios, of Buffalo, $2,000; German, of Buffalo, $5,000; Glenn's Falls, $5,000; North-western National, $5,000; Williamsburg City, $5,000; Standard, $5,000. The property was incumbered by mortgages to the extent of the insurance, which was held by the Erie County Savings Bank.

A fire at Hingham, Mass., Friday night, destroyed the public library, consisting of 5,000 volumes. The Post Office occupied a part of the first floor, and letters, stamps, and other contents were burned. The building was erected and presented to the town about 10 years ago by the late Albert Fearing, and cost about $15,000. He also provided for a trust fund of $10,000 for the proper maintenance and care of the library, to which he contributed a large number of valuable books. The Hingham Mutual had $5,000 insurance on the building, and the North British and Mercantile, $7,500 on the building and books. The Home Insurance Company of New-York had $3,000 on the books and $1,000 on the fixtures. The fire was caused by a defective flue.

A fire on Friday night destroyed the Rankin House, the largest hotel in the City of Columbus, Ga., and a skating rink and 12 stores beneath it. The building was valued at $70,000, and insured for $32,000. Most of the stocks in the stores were saved, and the insurance on them will cover any loss. At the same time a fire a few blocks above destroyed the stores of Pollard & Harris, Frank Perry, and the Wheeler and Wilson Sewing-machine Agency; loss, $17,300; covered by insurance. Both steam engines became disabled during the fire, and only two hand engines were available. Two steam engines came from Macon in response to a telegram. All but $1,800 of the insurance was in Northern and English companies. For hours it was thought that the whole town was in danger. The thermometer indicates 18° above zero.

A fire occurred at 7:25 last evening on the third floor of the four-story brick building, No. 32 Old-slip, occupied by Lovejoy & Co., shipping agents; loss, $500. The second floor is occupied by West & Hughes, who furnish watchmen along the river front; loss, $100. The first floor is occupied by Robert W. Proctor, stove-dealer; loss, $900. The building was damaged to the amount of $1,000.

A fire yesterday in Huntington, West Va., destroyed five houses, including the principal hotel. The fire originated in the Third-Avenue Hotel at 5 A. M. The mercury being at 12° below zero caused delay in the firemen getting the engine to work. The loss is $12,300; insurance small.

At 6:45 last evening a fire occurred in the fancy goods store of Edward K. Langfield, No. 17 Eighth-avenue, caused by the explosion of the gas meter. Although the fire was quickly extinguished, the loss on the stock and building is estimated at $2,500.

John Taylor's and James Frick's dwellings, with the contents, were destroyed by fire, at Pittston, Penn., Monday night. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective flue. Loss over $5,000. There is a small insurance on both houses.

Charles Longley, of Nicholasville, Ky., attempted to light a fire from a coal-oil lamp, when the lamp exploded, fatally burning Longley and one child and severely injuring another child. The house caught fire and was entirely destroyed.

A fire broke out in the Centennial Block, in South Meridian-street, Indianapolis, yesterday, in a room occupied by a man named Marks as a rag depot. The damage amounts to $5,000, and is covered by insurance.

Fire broke out on Friday morning at Brushton, N. Y., which at one time threatened the whole town, but was subdued after destroying five buildings owned by E. C. Brush. Loss about $7,500; insurance, $3,000.

S. E. Hughes & Co.'s flouring mill, at Hamilton, Ohio, was partially burned yesterday morning. The loss, estimated at $18,000, is covered by insurance.

The distillery and the flouring mill at St. Paris, Ohio, owned by Levi Runkle, were burned on Friday night. Loss, $16,000; insured for $13,700.

George W. Duncan's flour mill, with its contents, was destroyed by fire this morning. Loss $12,000; insurance, $5,000.

CONGRATULATING A RELEASED PRISONER.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—The Paine Memorial Hall was filled last evening at a public reception given to E. H. Heywood, who was sentenced to three years' imprisonment in Dedham Jail for circulating through the mails an alleged obscene book, entitled Cupid's Yokes, and pardoned by President Hayes after being imprisoned six months. Speeches, severely denouncing Anthony J. Comstock, were made by Rev. J. M. L. Babcock, Horace Seaver, Mrs. Laura Kendrick, and E. H. Heywood, of Boston; D. M. Bennett and A. L. Rawson, of New-York. Resolutions, congratulating Heywood on his release and thanking those who had been active in procuring it, were adopted.

SINGULAR CAUSE OF DETENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—The Red Star Line steamer Nederland, hence for Antwerp, is detained by low tide at Cherry Island Flats, in the Delaware River, near Edgemoor, and opposite Wilmington. The north-west wind now prevailing has blown the water seaward, and at high tide yesterday the water was two feet lower than it usually is at low tide. There is no probability of there being sufficient water to allow her to proceed until the wind subsides, which will allow the river to flow to its usual level. The American Line steamer Illinois, hence for Liverpool, is also detained at Dan Baker's Shoal, 20 miles lower down the river.

MISSOURI'S SUSPENDED BANK.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 4.—Leverett Bell, the City Counselor, entered a suit in the Circuit Court this morning against James H. Britton, President of the suspended Bank of the State of Missouri, and his bondsmen, Barton Bates, James B. Eads, John Jackson, and Charles S. Watson, to recover the balance of the city's funds deposited in that bank. The sum in the bank at the time of its suspension was about $270,000, but the dividends since paid have reduced the amount to about $175,000, for which sum judgment is asked.

THE STEWART LITIGATION.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Judge Westbrook, in the Stewart case, on motion of Ira Shafer, has issued an order as follows: "It is ordered that said Ira Shafer be, and he is hereby, substituted as attorney for the said plaintiff Alexander Stewart, in the place and stead of S. F. Kneeland, his former attorney. On like motion and opposition, it is hereby ordered that all the papers used on this motion, together with the opinion of the court, be remitted to the General Term of the first department for such action thereon as the General Term may see fit to take."

CONVICTS AGAIN CITIZENS.

ALBANY, Jan. 4.—The Governor has restored to citizenship the following persons: William A. Hays, convicted of subornation of perjury in Livingston County, and sentenced to Auburn for six years; Patrick Gannon, convicted of attempted burglary in New-York, and sentenced to Sing Sing for two years and six months; John McCain, convicted of grand larceny in Montgomery County, and sentenced to Dannemora for three years and three months. George Hopkins, convicted in Geneva of burglary and larceny, and sentenced to Auburn for three years.

DOES NOT WANT THE OFFICE.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—The Journal understands that Hon. Edward L. Pierce, who was nominated by the President as Assistant United States Treasurer in this city, has written a letter declining the position. The Journal says the responsibilities are so inadequately recompensed, and the bond demanded is so large, that it is not at all astonishing that Mr. Pierce seeks to avoid official duties which render him liable for any errors or malfeasance of those engaged in the bureau.

DISCOURAGEMENT FOR MOONSHINERS.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 4.—A squad of 50 revenue officers, under Capt. Burnside, has returned from a descent upon the moonshiners in the border counties of Kentucky and Tennessee. The men report the destruction of over 50 distilleries and the capture of a large number of distillers. It is thought the business is nearly broken up in that region.

SEVEN HUNDRED MINERS STRIKING.

POTTSVILLE, Penn., Jan. 4.—Seven hundred men and boys employed at the Brookside Colliery refused to go to work to-day, demanding two months' back pay, which they claim is due them. The colliery, which is the largest in this region, operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, has been idle since yesterday.

HELD FOR SHOOTING HIS BROTHER.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—In the Municipal Court this morning Stephen A. Skinner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who shot his brother, G. W. Skinner, in George Wright's store last night, was arraigned, and held in $5,000 for examination a week hence.

AN UNWELCOME DOSE.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 4.—At an entertainment on New-Year's night, at the City Hall, Barnesville, Ohio, called the "Feast of Mondamen," about 150 persons were taken violently ill, some miscreant having mixed croton-oil with the food.

MAIL-POUCH STOLEN.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 4.—On Friday night at 12 o'clock a mail-pouch, made up for Chicago, and containing about 200 letters, was stolen from a transfer wagon in this city, while the mail messenger was temporarily absent.

TO FILL A DEAD CONGRESSMAN'S PLACE.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 4.—The Governor today issued a writ for an election to be held on Jan. 23, in the First Congressional District, to elect a successor to Hon. B. B. Douglass, deceased.

HONORS TO CONTROLLER KNOX.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 4.—Hon. John Jay Knox, Controller of the Currency, was given a banquet at the Queen City Club-house last night by the bankers of this city.

NOT TO BE INDICTED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—The Grand Jury, after considering the charges of embezzlement against Henry Greenbaum, late President of the German Savings Bank, to-day refused to bring an indictment against him.

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

EUROPE'S MANY PROBLEMS.

THE AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN'S PLANS AND MOVEMENTS—GERMAN CATHOLICS AND THE STATE—THE ASSEMBLY OF BULGARIAN NOTABLES—THE GREEK FRONTIER.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Viceroy of India telegraphs, under date of Dec. 31, details of the Ameer's withdrawal from Kabul. The Ameer held a durbar Dec. 10, when it was resolved that after the fall of Ali-Musjid and Peiwar no further reliance could be placed on his troops or resistance offered. The Ameer therefore concluded to seek Russian protection, and place his case before a European congress, leaving Yakoob Khan, his son, in charge. Yakoob was released the same day, and an oath was administered that he should do as the Ameer directed. The Ameer left Kabul Dec. 13. His authority had almost disappeared.

A dispatch from the Viceroy, dated Jan. 3, says a Kabulese chief has written to Gen. Roberts offering his services. He says the Ameer has gone to St. Petersburg.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—The Tagblatt announces that the free-trade members of the Reichstag intend making a demonstration against Prince Bismarck's fiscal policy.

A great meeting of German Catholics is impending at Fulda to consider the situation between Church and State.

SOPHIA, Jan. 4.—The Assembly of Bulgarian Nobles, which will assemble at Tirnova, Jan. 18, and elect a Prince, will consist of three classes. The first will comprise the Presidents of Superior and Inferior Administrations, Municipal and Judicial Councils, of all the Bulgarian communes, and will number 124 representatives. The second class will be composed of 120 members elected by the people, each representing 10,000 inhabitants. The third class will consist of nine Bulgarian Bishops, one Greek Bishop, one Mufti, and one Grand Rabbi. In addition to these 256, Prince Dondoukoff-Korsakoff will nominate 30, selecting, it is believed, a dozen Turks, so that the Turkish element will be proportionately represented.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 4.—The Commissioners to arrange the delimitation of the Greek frontier will assemble at Arda. The proposal to sit in Athens was abandoned. Vahan Effendi has declined the appointment of Commissioner.

SUSPENSION OF THE CORNISH BANK.

A RUN SAID TO BE THE CAUSE—FAILURE OF SEVERAL PRIVATE FIRMS FEARED.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A correspondent telegraphs from Truro, Cornwall, as follows: "Great consternation was manifested here this morning in consequence of a notice posted on the door of the Cornish Bank announcing that it was closed. Unfavorable reports had been in circulation for a few days as to its stability, but the general feeling was of confidence, although there was a slight run on the bank. It is hoped that the suspension will be only temporary, but nothing definite can be known for a few days. The bank did a very large business in mining and other commercial enterprises."

The Cornish Bank belongs to Tweedie, Williams, & Co. It was established about 110 years ago. The bank has branches at Falmouth, Penryn, and Redruth. Sir Frederick Williams, member of Parliament for Truro, who died recently, held one-third of the concern, and his widow is his sole Executor. The bank had an authorized issue of £49,000. A dispatch from Plymouth, to the Pall Mall Gazette, says: "The stoppage of the Cornish Bank has caused a panic to rage among the traders of West Cornwall. The immediate cause of the suspension is a run on the bank during the last fortnight, resulting from rumors that the late Sir Frederick Williams was largely indebted to the bank, and that a large portion of its capital was locked up in mines and in advances on tin, neither of which was immediately realizable. The further stoppage of Cornish mines is inevitable, and the failure of many private firms must follow."

This afternoon's Echo states that the deposits in the Cornish Bank amount to £500,000.

ENGLISH TRADE AND COMMERCE.

TONE OF THE MINCING-LANE AND FINANCIAL MARKETS—EMPLOYES DEMANDING MORE WORK.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—In Mincing-lane more inquiry prevails for coffee at the recent decline in prices; common kinds, which suffered the greatest fall, are firmer. The sugar market does not show a favorable change; French refined sold at a further decline. At to-day's public sales, comprising a heavy supply, crystallized Demerara went at 6 pence to 1 shilling per hundredweight decline. The yield of beet will probably be equal to that of the season of 1877–8, which was the largest in any previous season. Several cargoes of rice have sold, including new crop, for Spring shipment, at moderate rates. Black and white pepper have been in partial demand at the recent low quotations. Saltpetre was dull, and prices nominally as before reported.

The Economist quotes bank bills, 60 days to 3 months, at 4¼ to 4⅜ per cent. discount, and 3 months' trade bills at 4½ to 5 per cent. It says: "This has been another broken week, but prices for the new account have been very firm. There has been less threatening political news and the sharp rise in Consols was partially due to that circumstance. Gas property has improved. Perhaps the brightest spot in the weekly record is the rapid recovery in bank shares, a movement which is partly reflected in the provinces, and certainly the dividend announcements have, in most instances, given satisfaction. Nearly all United States shares and bonds are higher, the resumption of specie payments and a satisfactory report of the Erie Railway being the chief reasons for the improvements."

The Times, in its financial article, says: "Although the available supply of bar silver will probably, in a day or two, be supplemented by an amount brought by the Pacific steamer just announced, none could be had to-day, (Friday,) and even had there been a demand sufficiently urgent to necessitate the payment of higher rates, it is doubtful whether any amounts would have been forthcoming. The demand from the quarter at present is exceedingly limited, and as the inquiry on Austrian account seems now to have practically ceased, the presence of anything more than a mere nominal amount on the market would only be prejudicial to the present price."

There are indications of an intention on the part of the employers in the west of Scotland to enforce a return to the aggregate of 54 hours as the weekly quota of labor. One or two large establishments have already posted notices to that effect. The men have, as yet, taken no action on the subject, but will hold a meeting for that purpose next week.

R. Hudson & Company, seed-crushers of Leeds and Hull, have failed. Their liabilities are £105,000.

TOPICS OF INTEREST ABROAD.

NO RECEPTION AT CORK TO GRANT—THE PULLMAN CAR COMPANY DEFAULTER—EXECUTION OF MONCASI.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—At a meeting of the Town Council of Cork yesterday, after several bitter speeches by Catholic members, a motion that the letter of the United States Consul at Queenstown, announcing Gen. Grant's coming, be simply marked "read," was carried without a dissentient vote. A previous motion to give Gen. Grant a proper reception was ignored.

A dispatch from Lisbon, Jan. 3, (having been delayed in transmission,) announces that Pullman's agent has identified Angell, who will be taken to Philadelphia by the American Police on board the American bark Shooting Star, now at Lisbon.

Another death has occurred among the seamen who were wounded by the explosion of the 38-ton gun on board the man-of-war Thunderer. The other sufferers by the disaster are doing well.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The Dix-neuvieme Siecle says that the Minister of Foreign Affairs will propose to the Cabinet to denounce the treaties of commerce with England and Belgium.

MADRID, Jan. 4.—Juan Moncasi, who attempted to assassinate the King of Spain in the streets of Madrid on the 25th of October last, was executed at 8:55 o'clock this morning. At midnight the prisoner made a will, leaving his property to his wife. At 5 o'clock he attended mass. At 8 o'clock he was led from the prison and conducted to a carriage, in which he was conveyed to the scaffold, which he mounted without support, listening meanwhile to the admonitions of the priests. Two battalions of troops were drawn up around the scaffold. An immense number of spectators were present.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—To-day the commission for the general revision of the Customs tariff met, for the first time, under the Presidency of Herr Von Vahnbuhler. It is supposed that the labors of the commission will not be matured before the second half of the session of the Reichstag, so that the discussion on the subject will only begin after Easter.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 4.—The military court-martial held at Kieff to try charges of malpractice against certain officers in connection with army supplies during the late war with Turkey, has sentenced a Captain to dismissal from the service, and a Captain attached to the staff and two Lieutenants to two months' imprisonment in a fortress. Prince Urusoff, the instigator of these malpractices, was fined 50 rubles.

A "TWEED RING" IN NEW-JERSEY.

ONE OF THE DISHONEST OFFICIALS TURNS AGAINST HIS CONFEDERATES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Jan. 4.—County Prosecutor Harris has discomfited the indicted Warren County officials by putting Dr. Mattison upon the stand. Dr. Mattison has always been looked upon as the chief of the Ring, and it has been asserted that his share of the thefts amounted to $50,000. He was the first man tried, and was soon convicted. William H. Morrow, of Newark, who is counsel for the accused officers, in the trial of Charles S. Strader, ex-Director of the Board of Freeholders, yesterday made every effort to throw on Dr. Mattison the guilt of enlarging vouchers, and again collecting the amounts of several paid vouchers for 1876 by altering the date to 1877 and getting the money from the County Collector. The latter has kept very quiet on the subject. But this afternoon, when he was called into court, he showed how keenly he felt the matter. When the Prosecutor asked the court to have Dr. Mattison brought up, Strader and his counsel looked thunderstruck.

Dr. Mattison said that in the Spring of 1877 he was elected Clerk of the Board of Freeholders, and had charge of the papers. Strader visited him often, and the two men used to go over the paid vouchers, select such as could be altered so easily that a second payment was certain under the loose and criminal management of County Collector Cummins, alter the amounts or the dates, whichever was most convenient, present the bill a second time, either at its original amount or enlarged, and get the money. A favorite trick was to add $100 to a bill. The voucher in the first indictment against Mattison was raised from $39 62 to $139 62.

Public opinion, which was slightly in favor of Strader, has gone against him, and the people look for a full exposure of the thieves through Mattison. Mattison is vindictive, and says he is going to tell all. The to stations, where it is being well cared for. It is impossible to tell when the Central Road will be open between this city and Buffalo. No attempt will be made to open it until the storm ceases. The storm to-night is raging more furiously than ever. The snow is very fine, and a fierce wind drifts it as fast as it falls. The thermometer at this point was at zero Friday morning. To-day it has stood at 15° above.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

YONKERS, Jan. 4.—Persons were crossing the Hudson River at this point on foot to-day. An ice bridge has not been formed here before since 1857. Opposite Tarrytown, under the sheltering lee of the hills, the river is frozen, and the ice is five inches thick.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 4.—The storm at this point still continues, although it has somewhat abated. The velocity of the wind is 27 miles an hour, and it is snowing lightly. Railroad communication is entirely suspended, with the exception of the Canada Southern Railroad, over which three trains have arrived and two departed.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 4.—The weather in this city and vicinity is still very cold, the thermometer ranging from zero to 11° below. The railroad blockade continues, and all west-bound trains on the Canada Southern were canceled to-day. The Grand Trunk trains are reported six hours late, and the Michigan Central and Great Western are all behind time. Only one Eastern mail has reached here since Thursday.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 4.—The thermometer this morning was down to 5° above zero. The weather moderated during the day, but this evening the temperature is again falling. Reports from along the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, west of Charlottesville, indicate a range of from 2° to 12° below zero. The express train due here this morning was behind time five hours. The Northern mail, due at 1:35 A. M., was delayed twenty hours. Reports from other points in the western portion of the State show similar effects of the cold snap. The river from this city to its mouth is blocked with ice, and navigation is completely suspended. The canal is also blocked with ice along its whole length. The Tredegar iron-works, flouring mills, and other industries dependent upon water supply have been forced to suspend operations.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—It has been drizzling all day, with some sleet.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 4.—A foot of snow has fallen, and it is now freezing. There is running ice in Red River.

NEWPORT, Ark., Jan. 4.—The White River is frozen over. It is snowing.

HELENA, Ark., Jan. 4.—It is snowing and sleeting here. The river is full of running ice.

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 4.—The weather last night was the coldest for years. The river is full of ice, and navigation is seriously interrupted. The steamer Norfolk, of the Clyde Line, due from Philadelphia last night, has not yet arrived.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Jan. 4.—The gale has subsided, but the weather is still cold and the wind westerly. The steamer Jesse Hoyt, of the New-Jersey Southern Railroad, worked her way slowly through the ice at the Horse-shoe about 10 o'clock this morning and went toward New York, closely followed by the Herald news-yacht. The ice-field extends more than a mile north of point of Sandy Hook. The German bark Olbers, which arrived off the Hook Saturday, waiting for orders, is anchored some distance from the shore, surrounded by ice and frozen fast. Three schooners and two sloops are still fast in the ice. The Black Nun buoy, No. 5½, which was off point of Hook, was adrift this morning. A large Southern steamer and two schooners lay anchored off Long Branch this morning. Their hulls were completely covered with ice. They had evidently been there all night. The steamer came to anchor and steamed south about 9 A. M. One of the schooners went north, and the other, which lay there all through the gale, was still at anchor at sunset, evidently because her sails are so full of ice that they could not be raised.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 4.—The steamer Old Colony was delayed at Newport by the storm yesterday, and left at 10 A. M. to-day for New-York.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Jan. 4.—A large new barn, belonging to Andrew T. Berthoff, at Howells, built to replace one lately burned, was blown down last night by a gale of wind. Two horses and five head of cattle were found dead in the wreck, and 10 cows which were injured had to be killed.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—The streets of this city are almost blocked to-day with the heavy fall of snow yesterday and last night.

VESSELS DISABLED OR WRECKED.

A STEAMER ASHORE ON LONG ISLAND—OTHER DISASTERS.

SAYVILLE, Long Island, Jan. 4.—The steamship Vindicator, Capt. Rogers, is ashore about 20 miles east of Fire Island Light. She was bound from Fall River to Philadelphia with an assorted cargo. No lives were lost.

YAPHANK, Long Island, Jan. 4.—The steamer Vindicator, before reported ashore, came on the outer bar last night about three-quarters of a mile west of the South Point Light Life-saving Station, two miles west of Mastic, Long Island. It is said the cause of her coming on the bar was in consequence of the floating ice preventing the use of her helm. Two sailors, fearing the vessel was going to pieces, jumped overboard and swam ashore, where they were taken charge by the crew of Life-saving Station No. 17. The remainder of the crew was safely landed this afternoon, in a boat in charge of the station hands. Unless the wind should change to the south-east the propeller will in all probability go to pieces on the morning. No part of the cargo has been discharged. It is said she is aground on the stern.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Signal Corps station at Cape Henry reports as follows: "Large brigantine, apparently heavy laden, is lying within 300 yards of the beach, about five miles north of Cape Henry. Supposed to be ashore, but it is impossible to tell at present. She is broadside to the beach, with very heavy sea and heavy west wind."

The Signal Corps station at Chatham, Mass., reports as follows: "The schooner Nellie, of Machias, Me., about 175 tons, loaded with lumber, bound for New-York, is ashore on Common Flat. She parted her chains off Cross Rip, Mass. The vessel is a total wreck. The crew were brought ashore on the ice by N. F. Harding and others from Chatham. One man has his feet frozen."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 4.—The schooner Bessie E. Dickenson, Capt. Standish, from Bath, Me., for Fernandina, with ice, went ashore on Pelican Banks, Fernandina Harbor, on the night of Dec. 30, and is now with a pilot aboard. The tugs Gladiator and Annie Wood made unsuccessful attempts to pull her off, the latter disabling herself by pulling out her stern-post. The cargo was thrown overboard. Afterward, high tide puts the schooner further on the banks, but she lies in an easy position, and is not yet leaking.

SARNIA, Ontario, Jan. 4.—An ice-shove occurred in the St. Clair River to-day, and the ice, coming in contact with the steamer J. C. Clark, sunk her.

THE COLD SNAP ABATING.

A CONSIDERABLE CHANGE IN THE TEMPERATURE—EFFECTS OF THE COLD AND WIND—DELAYS IN THE MAILS.

The rapidity with which the weather has changed since Thursday last from moderate weather to Arctic frigidity, and then regained its starting-point, is a feat for which the Clerk of the Weather, who sits in the Equitable tower, is vainly searching his log for a parallel. When THE TIMES went to press yesterday morning there were indications that the thermometer might show even colder weather by the hour that the City begins to grow active. The early risers probably did not appreciate the difference that a few hours had wrought in the temperature. The thermometer had risen a degree in every hour, but what the air lost in frigidity it gained in humidity, and driven on the wings of a half hurricane, it found its way through wraps and furs, and was quite as successful in chilling bones and reddening cheeks and noses as on the day before. Certainly, early wayfarers who passed such windy corners as surround the City Hall found their feelings a standing protest against any rise in the temperature alleged by the thermometer. What intensified the disagreeable characteristics of the blast was a fine snow which sifted from the house-tops, and was driven into the faces of men with a stinging shrewdness that would have made ordinary hail-stones preferable. The light snow had been permitted to lie upon the avenues which sleighers most frequent and there was enough of it to keep the runners off the stones in most places, but very few persons were enthusiastic enough to practice the pastime in the face of such piercing wind. Even the thick, smooth ice on the Park ponds was feeble in attractiveness when compared with the comfort of a cosy fireside. In ordinary weather the ponds would have been covered with skaters, but the thousands that a still-day or two before have daily represented by hundreds, most of whom, after laboring manfully with the "long roll," concluded that it was not practicable in such a wind. They missed, too, the encouragement of the gazing multitudes that haunt the banks in skating time.

It was along the river fronts that the effects of the cold and of the wind were most noticeable. A high westerly wind is always the cause of low tides along the river. The tides were lower than watermen can remember. A lighter got stuck in the ice off Liberty-street, and was fast frozen in in very brief time. Several tugs were hard and fast. The tugs that were first could make no impression on the imprisoning ice. A third one, better shod for ice-breaking, succeeded in delivering her after half an hour's hard work. The steamer New-Haven, propeller Erastus Corning, in endeavoring to reach her berth in Dey-street, was also frozen in, and only succeeded in getting to her moorings after several tugs had pounded up the ice around her. The hands of a lighter which got frozen in off Chambers-street walked over the ice a quarter of a mile to the dock. One of the hands of another lighter, which lay in the pasch off Cortlandt-street, walked over the ice nearly half a mile to his craft. He carried a pole as a life-preserver, but had no occasion to use it, although in some places he was forced to leap rifts of considerable width. With the ebb tide most of the North River ice was carried into the Bay. There it became separated, and did not impede navigation.

The New-York Central Railroad has been the principal sufferer among the carrying companies. They have not had a train through from Buffalo since Thursday last, and have ceased to dispatch trains or to guarantee speedy passage further than Syracuse. The country between Syracuse and Buffalo was where the snow storm spent its violence. Trains were dispatched yesterday to and from Syracuse as usual, but all were delayed from one to three hours. Many friends of people expected here from Western cities by the detained trains have been calling daily at the Grand Central Depot, and were not given any comfort until yesterday, and not a great deal then. The snow was yesterday still falling heavily over the most obstructed area, and as fast as the tracks were dug out they drifted full again. The Erie Railway got one train through from Buffalo yesterday, although it reached Jersey City six hours late. Another train due at 6 P. M. last night had not arrived at midnight. The Pennsylvania Rail road ran all its trains on schedule time, executing the hither-bound Pittsburg express, which was delayed three hours by the snow-drifts in the Allegheny Mountains. The trains to and from Boston were generally late from a quarter to half an hour. That, however, was attributed to the difficulty of keeping up storm in the gale that was blowing, and not to snow on the tracks.

A dispatch received yesterday from Syracuse by Superintendent Jackson, of the Railway Mail Service, announced that the mail-train which had left the Grand Central Depot at 8 o'clock Friday morning had not reached that city until 6 o'clock yesterday morning, over six hours late. It was blockaded at various places after it had left Albany. The train which left the Grand Central Depot at 7:30 Friday night, and that which left at 8:30 arrived at Syracuse about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, a little behind time. In the vicinity of Batavia, N. Y., and to the eastward and west ward of that place, the snow is so deep that no trains have arrived there from Friday afternoon until 2 P. M. yesterday. The train due at Syracuse at 10:30 A. M. yesterday did not arrive at the Grand Central Depot. It was "discontinued" at Albany, and its mails and passengers were transferred to other trains which arrived here on time. The Pennsylvania Railroad mail train from Pittsburg, due at Jersey City at 10:30 yesterday morning, did not arrive until 2:55 P. M.; the Atlantic mail, due at 6:01 A. M., arrived at 9:01 A. M.; and the Washington mail, due at 6:30 A. M., arrived two hours later. The far-Western mails which were due in this City, via Pittsburg, at 10:05 Friday night, failed to arrive when due, and a dispatch was received yesterday by Superintendent Jackson informing him that they had not reached Pittsburg. A dispatch from Baltimore states that the Baltimore and Ohio and its branches are free from snow and ice.

The steam-ships Anchoria and Alsatia, of the Anchor Line, which were advertised to sail yesterday, have been seriously delayed in taking in their cargoes, even it has been almost impossible to get the barges which contained the freight alongside, owing to the large quantities of ice which surround the piers and bulkheads on the east side of the North River, and they will be unable to sail until some time this week. The Alsatia is having a new intermediate shaft put in, to replace the the one cracked during her past voyage. The only steam-ship which arrived and passed Quarantine yesterday was the Gate City, of the ocean line from Savannah. She had extremely cold weather during the latter part of her passage, and the westerly winds caused her to list over to starboard so frequently that when she arrived her port side was considerably higher out of water than the other. Owing to the ice she had some difficulty in getting near enough to her pier to run the gang-plank up to the deck. The steam-ship Zanzibar, which is to take the place of the State of Louisiana, and which farr ved down the Bay on Friday, came up to the State Line pier yesterday. She also had considerable difficulty in getting close enough to the pier to have the gang-plank secured, on account of the ice. Her starboard anchor was lost at Sandy Hook during the gale on Friday. Capt. Fox reports that his passage from Liverpool had been very stormy, and that for 14 days he had gales from the west-north-west, with heavy head seas, and sails were lost and split. The passage occupied 21 days. No sailing-vessels have made their appearance since Thursday, having probably been blown off the coast on Friday, and at present writing day no incoming vessel was in sight from the Highlands. The European steam-ships at present overdue are the Suevia, from Hamburg, and the Abyssinia, from Liverpool. There is little anxiety felt about their safety, however, as they have been undoubtedly kept back by the heavy westerly gales.

Officer Hughes, of the Twenty-third Precinct, yesterday found the dead body of an unknown man, who had been frozen to death during the preceding night, in a vacant lot between Eighty-eighth and Eighty-ninth streets and First and Second avenues. Deceased was apparently about 60 years of age, had very white hair, smooth face, and had on dark pantaloons, vest, and sack coat, white shirt, woolen stockings, and gaiters.

Johann Williamson, of No. 130 Clinton-place, not being able to take care of her infant child, Johanna, aged 14 days, yesterday morning started with it to the Catholic Foundling Asylum, and on the way thither found that the baby was dead, having perished from the cold.

Margaret Caughlin, aged 80, of No. 312 East Forty-seventh-street, was found dead in her shanty yesterday morning having been frozen to death during the preceding night.

Ann Kenny, aged 4 months, was frozen to death yesterday at the residence of her parents, No. 380 Hicks-street, Brooklyn. The child was put to bed in a garret, and kicked the clothes off while it slept.

Early yesterday morning Christopher Schott, son of a Jersey City Heights news-dealer, started on his rounds to deliver his papers. At 9 o'clock his dead body lay on the stoop of Dr. Duffee's residence, corner of Bergen-avenue and Church-street. He had been subject to fits, and the supposition is that he fell in one of these and was frozen to death while he lay unconscious. His brother Philip, also a newsboy, fell from a Bergen car a few weeks ago, and was killed.

Jacob Van Heusen, aged 62 years, went out last night to dig a grave in Greenbush, N. Y., and was found this morning in the cemetery frozen to death.

The reports at the Signal Service Bureau show that the rise in temperature has not been confined to New-York. The 4 P. M. observations showed a change of only within 24 hours at Albany, although the change here was 7°. In Cincinnati and Cleveland it was 8° and 7° respectively. All those points showed a rising barometer, also accompanied by clear weather and a 30-mile north-west wind. The lowest barometer and severest storm were then at Portland, Me., which is believed to be the centre of the storm. The signal reports differ from the railway weather reports as to Rochester and Syracuse, the former reporting light snows and the latter a heavy snow-storm and low barometer. The storm, however, appeared to be stationary in that locality. At Boston, a low barometer and cloudy weather indicated that the Maine storm was moving in that direction. At Breckenridge, Minn., whence came the first reports of the cold wave, the thermometer again registered 50°, and the signal-service officer reporting cold wave is there gathering to visit this city in due course.

The following record will show the changes in the temperature yesterday, in comparison with the corresponding date of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy:

	1878.	1879.		1878.	1879.
3 A. M.	18°	8°	3:30 P. M.	42°	28°
6 A. M.	22°	10°	6 P. M.	41°	26°
9 A. M.	32°	17°	10 P. M.	32°	25°
12 M.	39°	27°	12 M.	30°	24°

Average temperature yesterday.....29½°
Average temperature for corresponding date last year.....32½°

	1877.	1878.
Weekly average	29 4-7°	22 5-7°

There was no service in the Jewish Temple Beth El yesterday in consequence of the damage done by the storm.

THE FERRIES OBSTRUCTED.

DELAYS ON THE NORTH AND EAST RIVERS CAUSED BY FLOATING ICE AND LOW TIDES.

The delays and annoyances to ferry travel, both on the North and East Rivers, were very much the same in kind, though somewhat mitigated in degree, as those recorded in THE TIMES yesterday. The same belt of ice lined the New-York shore of the North River all the way up from the Battery, extending, in most places, half way across the river, and rendering it extremely difficult for the boats to make their accustomed landings. On the North River ferries the boats were kept running all day, although at somewhat extended intervals, with the exception of those on the Erie Railway Ferry, from the foot of Twenty-third-street, which stopped running at 9 o'clock A. M. At all the other ferries there was more or less delay in landing passengers and teams on the New-York side, although the ferry officials claimed that they were, in the main, able to run a boat out of the slip as often as once in 20 to 30 minutes, instead of 10 and 15 minutes, as usual. The trouble was caused by floating ice, which came down the Hudson River, and was blown over on the New-York shore by the heavy north-west wind, where it remained, the tide not being strong enough to carry it off. Another serious delay, in some instances, was occasioned by the extreme lowness of the tide, and the inability, in many cases, of the teams to draw the heavily-loaded trucks up the steeply-inclined bridges from the ferry-boat to the street. The low tide was caused by the strong north-west wind, which blew the water out of the harbor, so that there was really no flood-tide, followed by the usual ebb, and this had a further tendency to aggravate the ice trouble by causing it to pack more closely and freeze more quickly than it otherwise would have done. This state of affairs existed more particularly at Desbrosses-Street Ferry. At the Pavonia Ferry, foot of Chambers-street the headway of 15 minutes was, for the most part, extended to 30 minutes, and in some instances longer. The ferry-boat Pavonia came in with the buckets of her paddle wheels smashed by coming in contact with the ice, and had to be laid up for repairs. One of the employes of the company said that the ice had not been worse in 20 years than it was yesterday, and that some of the boats had been two hours in effecting a landing. At 4 o'clock P. M. the Delaware, which is one of the strongest boats owned by the company, came across from Jersey City with a load of passengers from an incoming train, but she stuck fast eight or ten feet from the bridge, and had to back out, and make three attempts before she could crush through the ice sufficiently to make the landing. At the Hoboken Ferry, foot of Barclay-street, about the same state of affairs existed, and the weakest of the boats, notably the Hackensack and the Weehawken, experienced considerable difficulty in effecting a landing, while the best time made by any of them was 30 minutes, instead of 15 minutes, their usual ranging time. The Hackensack, which came in as 4:15 P. M., had been two hours making the trip from Hoboken, and the Weehawken and Secaucus, which came in at about the same time, had consumed 40 minutes each in trying to force their way through the stubborn ice-bank before they could get near enough to the bridge to land their passengers. At the foot of Cortlandt-street, and also at the foot of Liberty-street, there was some delay in landing, but the boats were kept running at intervals, for the most part of the day, of 30 minutes instead of 15 minutes, as usual. At the States Island ferries there was not very much delay, and the boats were run with tolerable regularity throughout the day. The track followed by the regular ferry-boats to Stapleton was nearly free from ice. At the North Shore, however, there was some floating ice, which rendered navigation in the Kills somewhat dangerous, and in consequence of which the North Shore Line, to West Brighton, &c., omitted their usual 7 o'clock trip.

So far as the East River ferries were concerned, those in charge of the Union Ferry Company, which include Hamilton, South, Wall, Fulton, and Catherine Ferries, fared better than they did on Friday, and the delay was nearly so frequent to the difficulty of keeping up storm in the gale that was blowing, and not to snow on the tracks.

AMATEUR ATHLETIC GAMES.

BRILLIANT ENDING OF THE NEW-YORK CLUB'S WINTER MEETING.

A SERIES OF MAGNIFICENT CONTESTS—WALKING, RUNNING, BICYCLE, AND HURDLE RACING—THE FAMOUS SCOTCH-AMERICAN TEAM BEATEN—A LARGE ATTENDANCE—UNLIMITED ENTHUSIASM.

Between 6,000 and 7,000 persons crowded into Gilmore's Garden last evening to witness the concluding sports of the second annual Winter meeting of the New-York Athletic Club. It was as much as one's clothing was worth to pass through the mob that blockaded the entrance seeking to purchase tickets. The lines of waiting men a few minutes before 8 o'clock extended almost around the block. When the games began, every seat was filled, and many stood in the aisles and within the track. A fair proportion of the spectators was composed of the gentler sex. The management was excellent. An efficient substitute had been provided for the muffled-roland man of the previous evening, and the winners and time at the conclusion of each event were called out so distinctly that everybody heard. The contests were among the finest of the kind ever witnessed in this City and the enthusiasm was continuous and tremendous.

The first event was the final heat of the 75-yards run, contested in trial heats on the previous evening. George E. Payne, of the Astoria Athletic Club, won in 0:8. A. Noel, of the Short Hills Athletic Club, being second. Next on the programme were two trial heats of a 2-mile bicycle race. Three out of five entries started in the first heat, and one of these gave up after a few laps. The race between the two others was quite exciting for a while, each contestant alternately spurting and passing the other amid the cheers of the crowd. Finally, R. Van Nest, who was a small thin fellow, fairly gave in to the weight and muscle of his competitor, William E. Pitman, of Boston, and the latter crossed the line an easy winner in 10:58. In the second heat there were four starters. A long lead was taken by W. Addison, of Ravenswood, who seemed to have everything his own way until, when nearly half the race had been accomplished, he fell from his vehicle, and lost so much ground that he was unable to recover it, though encouraged by the sympathetic cheers of the crowd. Meantime, the contest between the three others developed a number of exciting races, often neck and neck, but William M. Wright, of this City, finally got the lead and kept it to the end. Time, 11:54. Joseph Lafon, of the Mystic Boat Club, was a good second.

A trial pull between Companies B and K of the Seventh Regiment, winners of trial pulls of the previous evening, followed. A tremendous yell arose as both companies dropped on their backs and began digging with their feet in the dirt at the flash of the signal pistol. For a few moments neither was able to obtain an advantage. Then Company B made a desperate heave on the rope and gained an inch, and as the Captain of Company K slipped and rolled out of his hole, they gave a quick series of short pulls, landing him and his men across the line in 1:46, amid tremendous yells, cheers, whistles, and cat-calls. The final heat of the 440 yards run was then contested. All six started. W. R. Hewitt, of the American Athletic Club, took the lead, and kept it to the home stretch, when L. E. Myers, of the Knickerbocker Yacht Club, closed rapidly upon him, and a magnificent race took place. Both men fell exhausted over the winning-line. It looked like a dead heat, but Hewitt was declared the winner in 0:56 2-5. An "international tug of war" between an Irish team from Greenpoint and an American team of lightermen from the same place was quickly disposed of. The Irishmen pulled in the Americans hand over hand, amid wild cheering, in 0:35¼.

The final heat of the mile walk of the previous evening was next on the programme. The principal struggle lay between William O'Keefe, of the Yorkville Athletic Club, and James H. Gifford, of this City. They went at a terrific pace that left all the others far behind. Now one would have the advantage, and now the other. The spectators rose to their feet and shook the rafters with their cheers. O'Keefe crossed the line first in 8:14 3-5. The crowd gave him three cheers when this time was announced. A 220-yards hurdle race over 10 hurdles, 2 feet 6 inches high each, came next. Only two started out of the four entries. It was a close contest, both of the men being in the air nearly all the time together, but Arthur W. Anderson, of the New-York Athletic Club, got in ahead in 0:35 2-5. William H. Douglas, of this City, was a good second. Then there was another tug of war, this time between Companies B and C of the Seventh Regiment. Company C's men were too heavy for their competitors, and pulled them along with every jerk, landing them over the line in 45½0. This was followed by a similar contest between the American lightermen's team, of Greenpoint, and an Irish team from this City. The latter were tremendously big men, and made even shorter work of the lightermen than the other Irish team had done. They finished them up in 0:23¾. The next event was a 2-mile walk, with 18 starters. It was a splendid contest throughout. William O'Keefe, of the Yorkville Athletic Club again proved the winner in 17:02½. Frank Lane, of this City was a good second, and H. Fredericks, of the Windsor Athletic Club, third. The last named was handicapped 1 minute and 50 seconds, and the winner 40 seconds. Loud calls were made for O'Keefe, but he refused to come forward, and the crowd was quieted only after great difficulty. Then "Greek met Greek" and the tug of war came in earnest. The Irish team, of New-York, and the Irish team of Greenpoint took hold of opposite ends of the rope, and it required 15 minutes—the limit allowed—to decide between them. The New-Yorkers got a little advantage at the start, but the Greenpointers were tough, and when the others had exhausted themselves they took their turn. Inch by inch they pulled back the rope and their competitors with it until the red mark was over on their side of the line. Then the New-Yorkers made a desperate effort, but the Greenpointers refused to budge. When the pistol proclaimed time up these positions had not changed, and the Greenpointers were consequently awarded the victory. It was a magnificent struggle and the crowd went wild over it. One of the defeated team slung the rope about in good-natured disgust, which prompted Mr. Herman Gelriche, who was acting as one of the officers of the games, to rush upon him and kick him savagely. This was the only untoward incident of the evening. Mr. Gelriche was roundly hissed.

A half-mile run with 26 entries was next in order. M. Ellis, Jr., of the Scottish-American Athletic Club jumped such a lead at the start, that although T. K. Hastings, of this City, made a gallant struggle on the home-stretch, he was unable to catch him. Louis Curtis, Jr., of Brooklyn, was third. The time was 2:12½. The final tug of war between Companies K and C of the Seventh Regiment then took place. It was won by Company C in 2:20½. A handsome pair of colors was presented to the winning team. The next event was the deciding heat of the 2-mile bicycle race. It proved a splendid contest. Joseph Lafon, of the Mystic Boat Club, went to the front and kept the lead until near the close. Meantime, an exciting struggle for second place took place between William B. Putman, of Boston, and William M. Wright of New-York. The latter secured it after a number of attempts, and then went for Lafon. Another beautiful contest was developed, ending in Wright's victory. The time was 9:54. Lafon fell from his vehicle exhausted at the close. The excitement was of the wildest description, and the winner was rewarded with three cheers.

The concluding event was a tug of war—the final trial of the contest of the previous evening—between the Scottish-American team and the team of the Empire City Gymnasium. The former had never before been beaten, and they looked like winners in their pretty uniforms, displaying magnificently-developed muscles. The Empire City men were knotty fellows, apparently working men, and were simply stripped to their shirts and pantaloons. The struggle was the finest that ever took place. At the flash of the pistol the Scots went to work immediately with every muscle of their bodies and all the skill for which they have won a reputation, but they did not budge their opponents an inch. Then the Empire City men pulled for all they were worth, and succeeded in dragging their opponents a foot toward the line. The cheers, yells, whistles, and cat-calls that arose from the assemblage at this were simply deafening. The triumph of the Scotchmen had been regarded as a foregone conclusion, and the delight of the crowd at this indication that the contest was not to be altogether one-sided was indescribable. Men lost their heads and jumped around like lunatics, all of the time shouting themselves hoarse at one team or the other. Until the end of the contest the din had no cessation nor the excitement any abatement. The mortified Scotchmen rallied and made a supreme effort, but they lost another inch in doing so. Full fathomed pull in quick succession; the bunched muscles on the arms, backs, and legs of the Scotchmen swelled and writhed, and their powerful bodies swayed from side to side under an almost constant strain that ranged almost enough to part the thick rope, but the others were the steadier and decided not an inch's breadth. On the contrary, they proved quick to take advantage of every relaxation of their opponents, and added inch after inch to their advantage, until they had a clear span of four or five feet. Then they just anchored themselves and held on. The Scotchmen got tired at length, and began sensing the Empire City men, but they stopped on being promptly kissed. The 10 minutes were fast slipping away. Bracing themselves, the Scotchmen partly arose, and pulled until it would seem that something must break. But to no avail. The pistol-shot was the signal for the Empire City men the victory, and a shout arose that shook the building.

The second money in the international tug of war will be given to the Howard Mission, neither of the defeated teams being entitled to it.

TRANSPORTATION IN BOND.

A CIRCULAR FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Secretary of the Treasury has issued the following circular to Collectors of Customs and others:

Section 390, Revised Statutes, is as follows, viz.: "Any merchandise duly entered for warehousing may be withdrawn under bond without payment of the duties from a bonded warehouse in any collection district and be transported to a bonded warehouse in any other collection district and rewarehoused thereat, and any such merchandise may be so transported to its destination, wholly by land or wholly by water, or partly by land and partly by water, over such routes as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and as the designation of routes for the purpose indicated is only made on the approval of bonds of common carriers it follows that bonded common carriers can only transport such goods.

Article 620 of the Customs regulations of 1874 is as follows, viz.: "The transportation of dutiable merchandise in bond from one port to another port or place in the United States may be made either by vessels registered or enrolled and licensed for the carrying trade, by common carriers designated for this purpose by the Secretary of the Treasury, by duly constituted bonded lines and routes." Customs officers are hereby instructed that the phrase in the foregoing article "by duly constituted bonded lines and routes" shall be deemed by the department to apply to all lines of transportation engaged in conveying merchandise in bond from place to place. To avoid possible inconvenience to shippers, which might result from a sudden termination of a long establi-hed practice, and to afford opportunity for the bonding of routes, notice is hereby given that from and after Feb. 1, 1879, no deliveries of goods in bond to vessels of any description which are not covered by bonds of common carriers, will be permitted.

OPINIONS ABOUT YELLOW FEVER.

THE COMMISSION LISTENING TO THE THEORIES AND EXPERIENCES OF PHYSICIANS.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—Dr. A. W. Smythe, formerly House Surgeon of Charity Hospital, and a prominent practicing physician, was examined by the Yellow Fever Commission yesterday. He testified that he believed that the yellow fever, wherever it existed, originated there. He thought it originated in Grenada and Holly Springs, and would have originated there even if all outside communication had been avoided. He believed heat to be the main factor of fever, but not that a bad sanitary condition superinduced the fever, as this was not confirmed by any evidence. The crops were better during epidemics and vegetation was more luxurious. He did not believe in the germ theory; he believed yellow fever was not transmitted from one person to another. He believed that a rigid, quarantine against yellow fever would secure to the importation or local origin, and was in favor of a uniform and national system of quarantine. He did not think there was any evidence that fever poison could be transmitted in goods or clothing. He thought there was more liability of secondary attacks of yellow fever than of small-pox. He knew several cases of reoccurrence, but thought one attack generally immunitive of the disease.

Dr. Austin, a member of the Board of Health gave his experiences and quoted authorities in favor of his opinion that the fever was imported.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4, 1879.

Subscriptions to the 4 per cent. bonds to-day amounted to $2,697,150.

The business interview of the Colorado Utes with Secretary Schurz and Commissioner Hayt did not take place to-day, but they paid the department officers a brief visit.

Postmaster-General Key has accepted an invitation to attend the dedication of the new Capitol at Albany, and will leave Washington for that purpose tomorrow night.

The Secretary of the Interior, in reply to a letter addressed to him by Representative Patterson, expresses the opinion that the State of Colorado may obtain the lands granted by what is known as the "Agricultural College act" without further legislation on the subject by Congress, by showing a compliance with the terms of the granting acts.

The Springer committee met to-day, and resumed the examination of the large number of books procured from the State Department. G. Wiley Wells was recalled and examined in support of his charges of gross irregularities and neglect in the Consular books and records during Mr. Seward's administration. Mr. Coffee, one of the Consular clerks, was also further examined, and showed several apparent discrepancies in the accounts of the Consulate.

The records of the District Commissioner's office relative to the "10-year District of Columbia bonds," now being redeemed, have been found to be all right, and the $10,000 in bonds heretofore mentioned as lacking the seal of the Corporation of Washington, as required by the act creating their issue, and being committed by the Commissioners and redeemed by Treasurer Gilfillan. Duplicates of bonds Nos. 93 and 103 of the above class have been presented for redemption, calling for $1,000 each. These bonds they were found to have been regularly printed, but not signed, as required by law, and were consequently destroyed.

ARMY AND NAVY INTELLIGENCE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Board on Army Equipment, in session in Washington, invites brief communications from persons in the military service regarding any improvements that can be made in the general equipment of troops, which have been suggested by observation and experience, and requests inventors and manufacturers to send to the board samples, accompanied by drawings and specifications, of any improvements made in the equipment of troops, keeping in view the lessening of weight to be carried by the soldier, increasing his efficiency, and at the same time preserving and increasing the durability of the articles to be used.

Commander R. S. Phythian is detached from special duty connected with the national school-ship at New-York, on Jan. 15, and granted six months' leave. Leave of absence for one year, with permission to go beyond the sea, is granted Capt. S. P. Jocelyn, Twenty-first Infantry. The United States ship Alert sailed to-day from Yokohama, Japan, for San Francisco, and will bring home the men on the Asiatic station, whose terms of enlistment have expired.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 4.—Charles Keeler, hatter, has made an assignment to Gilbert G. Cooper. There are 50 creditors unsecured. The debts are small—about $6,000.

HALIFAX, Jan. 4.—Carvell Brothers, general merchants at Charlottetown, have failed. Their liabilities are stated to be $100,000. A writ of attachment has been issued against Alfred W. Moren, shipping merchant, of Liverpool, Nova Scotia.

ST. JOHN, New-Brunswick, Jan. 4.—S. R. Foster & Sons, tack manufacturers, have suspended. Their liabilities are stated to be $46,000, and their assets $65,000. A writ of attachment was issued against D. L. Hutchinson, jeweler. Gregory Brothers, grocers, at St. Stephen, have made an assignment.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Jan. 4.—The report telegraphed from here on Jan. 3 that M. Wolfe & Co., druggists, had made an assignment was erroneous. The firm is transacting business as usual.

BADLY SHAKEN UP.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 4.—Near Paris, Tenn., this forenoon, a broken rail on the Louisville and Great Southern Railroad overturned a sleeping car on a northward-bound passenger train, but, fortunately, no one was killed, although the passengers, including Dr. Dixon, of New-Albany, and Senator Harris, of Tennessee, were badly shaken up.

ALLENTOWN, Penn., Jan. 4.—A passenger train on the Perkiomen Road was run into by a freight train this morning at Zionsville Station. Several of the passengers were injured, but none of them fatally.

DELAYED HIS DEPARTURE TOO LONG.

LONDON, Ontario, Jan. 4.—Major Seeley, a wealthy American, who has spent the past year at the Huffman House, Dorchester, near this city, with his wife and family, has been arrested for betraying the daughter of the proprietor, Miss Addie Huffman, who a short time ago became a mother. At the time of his arrest, Seeley was preparing to start for Colorado.

INDICTED FOR FELONY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—Mr. E. W. Casey, Inspector of Sewers, who was recently dismissed from office on account of alleged implication in frauds committed by contractors for cleaning sewers, was arrested this evening, four indictments for felony having been found against him by the Grand Jury.

MOVEMENT OF GOLD AND SILVER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—The treasure shipment by the steamer City of Peking to-day was as follows: Silver bars, 16,883; trade dollars, 11,508; Mexican dollars, 86,047; gold coin, $1,443. Among the importations by the steamer Belgic, which arrived here from Hong Kong on the 2d inst., were 100,000 trade dollars, being part of $400,000 reported as having been purchased for the United States at Hong Kong. They will be shipped by rail to New-York to-morrow.

AMATEUR PEDESTRIANS FEEDING.

FIRST ANNUAL DINNER OF THE WESTCHESTER WALKING CLUB AT THE WESTMINSTER.

The members of the Westchester Walking Club proved themselves fully as well able to do justice to a dinner of many courses as to a walk of many miles, last evening, on the occasion of their first annual dinner, which was given at the Westminster Hotel. Although at times certain members of the club have absented themselves from the walks, none were absent from the dinner, and the 25 active and 5 honorary members were all to be seen around the festive board. The President was resplendent with a new crimson necktie, and each member wore in the buttonhole of his coat the bit of crimson ribbon that distinguishes alike members of the Westchester Walking Club and of the Legion of Honor. At each plate was a tastefully designed menu, printed in crimson and gold, and a printed list of the toasts, which were as follows: "Our Walking Club," "Walking Ancient and Modern," "Our Guests—Will. In," "Walking as a Fine Art," "Walking as a Means of Enjoyment," "Walking as a Means of Physical Culture," "Walking as a Counter-Irritant," "Walking from a Legal Stand-point," "Walking Spanish," and "Walking as a Nuisance." After an address of welcome by President Haipin, the history of the club, its object and aims, were set forth in fitting terms by Lawrence D. Kiernan. Hosea B. Perkins, who is an honorary member of the club, responded happily to the toast of "Our Guests," and "Walking, Ancient and Modern," was historically illustrated from the time of the first recorded instance of walking to and from the earth down to the present date. After thoroughly enjoying and appreciating the frequent happy hits made in the addresses, the members passed an hour in recalling the many pleasant days spent together on their 13 walks, taken between Sept. 15 and Dec. 1. It was unanimously voted to maintain the club as a permanent organization, to begin a series of long walks as early in the Spring as the weather and state of the roads will permit, and to give a dinner annually. It has also been decided to limit the membership of the club to its present number.

BASE-BALL ON THE ICE.

A spirited base-ball match was had on the ice at Prospect Park Lake yesterday afternoon. Although the two nines—or rather the two tens, for an extra short-stop is required when playing upon the ice—were hastily gathered for the occasion, a number of semi-professional players were among them, and the half-dozen shivering spectators witnessed a very fair game of five innings, that resulted in a score of 11 for the Freeze Outs to 8 for the Blue Noses. The players were all on skates, and lively work was required to catch the ball and wield the bat with numbed fingers and while running or standing upon the slippery surface of the ice. The bases were marked with red paint, and the catcher and pitcher found small patches of wind-blown snow almost indispensable for the successful performance of their parts. A lucky hit

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE BENEDICTION.

From the French of François Coppée.

It was in eighteen hundred—yes—and nine,
That we took Saragossa. What a day
Of untold horrors! I was Sergeant then.
The city carried, we laid siege to houses,
All shut us close, and with a treacherous look
Raining down shoton upon us from the windows.
"'Tis the priests' doing!" was the word passed round;
So that although since daybreak under arms
Our eyes with powder smarting, and our mouths
Bitter with kissing cartridge-ends—piff! paff!
Rattled the musketry with ready aim,
If shovel hat and long black cloak were seen
Flying in the distance. Up a narrow street
My company worked on. I kept an eye
On every house-top right and left, and saw
From many a roof flames suddenly burst forth
Coloring the sky, as from the chimney-tops
Among the forges. Low our fallows stooped,
Entering the low-pitched dens. When they came out,
With bayonets dripping red, their bloody fingers
Signed crosses on the wall; for we were bound
In such a dangerous defile not to leave
Foes lurking in our rear. Then was no drum-beat,
No ordered march. Our officers looked grave;
The rank and file uneasy, jogging elbows
As do recruits when flinching.

All at once,
Rounding a corner, we are hailed in French
With cries for help. A dozen pick we join
Our hard-pressed comrades. They were grenadiers,
A gallant company, but beaten back
Ingloriously from the raised and flag-paved square
Fronting a convent. Twenty stalwart monks
Defended it—black demons with shaved crowns,
The cross in white embroider'd on their frocks,
Barefoot, their sleeves tucked up, their only weapons
Enormous crucifixes, so well brandished,
Our men went down before them. By platoons
Firing, we swept the place; in fact, we slaughtered
This terrible group of heroes, no more soul
Being in us than in executioners.

The foul deed done—deliberately done—
And the thin smoke rolling away, we noted
Under the saddled mass of the dead
Rivulets of blood run trickling down the steps;
While in the background solemnly the church
Loomed up, its doors wide open. We went in.
It was a desert. Lighted tapers starred
The inner gloom with points of gold. The incense
Gave out its perfume. At the upper end,
Turned to the altar as though unconcerned
In the fierce battle that had raged, a priest,
White-haired and tall of stature, to a close
Was bringing tranquilly the mass. So stamped
Upon my memory is that thrilling scene,
That, as I speak, it comes before me now—
The convent built in old time by the Moors;
The huge brown corpses of the monks; the sun
Making the red blood on the pavement steam;
And there, framed in by the low porch, the priest;
And there the altar brilliant as a shrine;
And here ourselves, all halting, hesitating,
Almost afraid.

I, certes, in those days
Was a confirmed blasphemer. 'Tis on record
That once, by way of sacrilegious joke,
A chapel being sacked, I lit my pipe
At a wax candle burning on the altar.
This time, however, I was awed—so blanched
Was that old man!

"Shoot him!" our Captain cried.
Not a soul budged. The priest beyond all doubt
Heard; but as though he heard not. Turning round,
He faced us, with the elevated host,
Having that period of the service reached
When on the faithful benediction falls.
His lifted arms seemed as the spread of wings;
And as he raised the pyx, and in the air
With it described the Cross, each man of us
Fell back, save three and more we were trembling
Than if before him the devout were ranged.
But when, intoned with clear and mellow voice,
The words came to us,

Vos benedicat

Deus Omnipotens!

The Captain's order
Rang out again and sharply, "Shoot him down,
Or I shall swear!" Then one of ours, a bastard,
Leveled his gun, and fired. Upsetting, down
The priest changed color, though with steadfast look
Set upwards, and indomitably stern.
Pater et Filius!

Came the words. What frenzy,
What maddening thirst for blood, sent from our ranks
Another shot, I know not; but 'twas done.

The monk, with one hand on the altar's ledge
Held himself up; and, strenuous to complete
His benediction, in the other raised
The consecrated host. For the third time
Tracing in air the symbol of forgiveness,
With eyes closed, and in tones exceeding low,
But in the general hush distinctly heard,
Et Sanctus Spiritus!

He said; and, ending
His service, fell down dead.

The golden pyx
Rolled bounding on the floor. Then, as we stood,
Even the old troopers, with our muskets grounded,
And choking horror in our hearts, at sight
Of such a shameless murder and at sight
Of such a martyr, with a chuckling laugh,
Amen!

Drawled out a drummer-boy.

—Macmillan's Magazine.

HER CHILD'S CRY.

The story I have to tell is so very slight, the incidents are so very homely, and the people whom it concerns are so ordinary, that more than once I have taken up a pen to begin it and put down the pen again beside the virgin page. If I attempt a mere narration of fact, without adding color or emotion, the interest of a reader is likely soon to flag, and he may probably resent finding in a publication where he expects subjective fiction in narratives, a simple and literal account of things, people, and events such as he is accustomed to meet in the columns of a newspaper. As I have determined to go on, I hope I over-estimate the danger. And now for what I have to tell:

I live in the S. W. district of London, and when I take the train for town Loughborough Junction is the most convenient station. One dull, heavy day in the October of last year I booked at Loughborough for Ludgate Hill, and took my seat in a third-class carriage of a South-western train. It was neither for economy nor for "the pride that apes humility" that I traveled third class; but my business obliges me to spend most of my time alone, and when I have an opportunity of getting among people, it is good for my business that I should see and hear as many of my fellow-creatures as possible. Hence I prefer the frequently-changing crowd of a third-class carriage to the thinly-masked solitude of a higher class.

On this occasion the carriage in which I found myself had only shoulder-high compartment partitions, so that one could see from end to end. There were in all seven or eight persons present, and I was in the last compartment but one, with my back to the engine, and in the right-hand corner as I sat.

For a few minutes I engaged myself in observing the five or six people scattered up and down the major portion in front of me. Then looking over my shoulder I found that the compartment nearest to the engine contained only a woman with a young baby in her arms. She was sitting with her back to mine. Owing to the violence of the wrench I had to give my neck in order to see her, my glance was brief; but while it lasted I caught sight of an expression such as I had never before seen on a human face, an expression which so affected my curiosity and wonder that after allowing a little time to elapse, and just as we reached Walworth road, I shifted myself to the other end of the seat on which I sat, and, throwing my arm carelessly over the shoulder-high partition, looked long at the pair. In the sense that a surprising revelation may fascinate any one, I was fascinated.

There was no need to fear my long stare might disturb the woman. I knew by the way the woman held the baby that it was asleep. I could not see the face of the child. The mother held it close to her bosom and bent her own head low over it. Although I could hear no word of hers, even when the train stopped, her lips moved slowly, paused awhile, and then went over again the very same phrases. At length I learned the unspoken words of the passion-weary lips:

"My darling! My baby son! My own! My own!"

Mother's ordinary words, but to what an unutterable accompaniment of pose and look!

Without being deformed or hideous, she was without exception the ugliest woman I ever saw. There was nothing loathsome, repulsive, or malignant in her face, but it was completely ugly. The skin was dark and coarse in texture. The forehead was ragged at the temples, the hair at the right-hand side of the parting grew an inch lower down than at the other, and the upper portion of the forehead projected at the line of the hair. The nose was thin at the point, upturned, spicy where it met the face, sharply sunken where it joined the forehead at the bridge, and small for the other features. The cheeks were heavy and livid, differing in color from the rest of the face only by having a few blotches. The mouth was large, with prominent thick lips that never closed neatly and that always remained heavily apart and leaning outward when motionless. The chin was long and feeble. I did not see the eyes; they never for one moment were removed from the sleeping infant.

"My darling! My baby son! My own! My own!"

Did ever any other heart yearn so overwhelmingly over any other being? Was this a new manner, a higher, more intense form of maternal love? And had all else of that kind which I had seen been only the prelude to this imperial theme of passion?

Although the chin was weak, the expression of the whole face indicated strength, but strength irregular and of uncertain action. The eyes might hold the key to the whole face.

"My darling! My baby son! My own! My own!"

These words, beyond all doubt, were the clue to her whole nature. That child, beyond all doubt, was the scene of her present life. She was as unconscious of the presence of any strangers as though she sat alone with her child under a palm-tree in the basis of an ocean of sand.

"Ludgate Hill! Ludgate Hill!"

The train stopped and I got up. She, too, rose with a shudder.

"My darling! My baby son! My own! My own!"

I left the carriage, and in doing so noticed that she had some difficulty in opening the door. I turned the handle for her, and assisted her to alight. She looked up:—

"Thank you, Sir."

Deep-set blue-gray eyes with strange red points of fire in them, like sparks of glowing charcoal seen through damp glass.

Her left hand and arm swathed the baby to her bosom. The hand lay visible and bare; on the third finger was a wedding-ring.

Who had wooed and won this woman whose sheer uncomeliness would be enough to shame all tender words, turn awry all tender glances? And how was it that she, whose appearance scouted the thought that any man could seek love of her for her appearance had nevertheless reached the crown of woman's dreams, motherhood, and yet had room for nothing in her heart but the one cry:

"My darling! My own!"

She was not a widow. The child could have been no more than a few months old, and she wore no widow's weeds. And yet he whose coming with words of endearment must have been an apocalypse of delight had already faded into nothing, passed out of her heart, leaving no trace of his image behind, not even in the face of the child, for her eyes did not seek behind the baby for his likeness. It was only,

"My own! My own!"

I confess that all the day I was haunted by the face of this woman. I could not get it out of my mind. When I read, it came between my eyes and the page. In the street I found myself looking for it among the crowd. I kept saying to myself the words indicated by the lips but never breathed by the voice.

I was detained in town until late hour. In the evening I met a friend, Robert William Baird, of Brixton. I invited him to supper, and we turned into a restaurant in the Strand.

After supper we lit cigars. I thought I noticed a look of painful preoccupation on his face. "Has anything unpleasant happened?" I asked; "you seem out of sorts."

He shook himself, smiled, and roused up. "Oh, dear, no! Nothing the matter. I did not know I was looking blue. To tell you the truth, I was thinking of a very unpleasant scene I witnessed to-day. You know Langton, the solicitor."

"No."

"Michael Seymour Langton, you know I"

"His name, no more."

"A good fellow. A great friend of mine; you must know him some day. Well, I looked in at his office to-day. He's always up to his eyes in work; but unless he has a client with him, he's always glad to see a friend. One of those free-and-easy, good-hearted fellows, who, without making you feel a bit uncomfortable, will tell you to be off the moment he wants you to go, so that you need never be afraid of doing him grievous bodily harm by staying a while if he'll let you."

"Well!"

"Exactly. But I can't help telling you about him, he's such a capital fellow. You and he shall dine with me next Sunday. Eh!"

"All right as far as I'm concerned; but about the incident or scene!"

"Quite so. 'Sit down,' he said, 'sit down, old man.' Then looking at his watch, he said, 'If you've got five or ten minutes to spare, I'll show you the most perfect development of the genus scoundrel that I ever met.'

"I had the five minutes to spare, and moreover I always am open to make a sacrifice, if by so doing I can get a glimpse at anything superlatively good or bad; my liking for you, to illustrate what I say, arises from your superlative badness."

"All right, Baird; but for goodness sake go on," said I—a little petulantly, I fear, for I was not in a very jocular humor, and the exuberant garrulity of the good little doctor jarred against my nerves.

"My dear fellow, you know my motto, 'slow and sure.' You can never get the real flavor out of a story or port by gulping it down. Raise it curiously, and you fill your nostrils with delight from your forehead to your feet with delight, especially in the case of port—when it's good."

I expostulated only by a sigh. I knew him thoroughly. Had I expostulated in words, he would have broken out into further digression.

"Well," he resumed, after a few solemn puffs at his cigar, "I waited. 'Now,' said Langton. A knock sounded at the door, and a man entered. At first I thought Langton had made a false diagnosis of his visitor, for anything less scoundrelly than the appearance of the man I never saw. He was of the medium height, well made, handsome, with light blue eyes, straight nose, straight mouth, clear complexion, and a most winning and insinuating smile. He appeared to be about thirty-eight years of age. His mustache and whiskers were brown, and the well-shaved chin was very firm and clean in outline. Upon the whole an exceedingly proper man, and one, I thought, likely to be very popular among the ladies; in no way like you, my dear fellow."

"Well, he came into the room with a bow and a smile, holding his hat across his waistcoat in a most genteel, humble, and conciliatory manner—thus. For a moment he seemed in doubt as to whether he and Langton were to shake hands or not, and, to tell you the truth, I thought it both rude and painful for Langton to thrust his hands so emphatically into his trousers pockets and straddle over the hearth-rug as he did.

"'Mr. Langton,' said the stranger, in a very soft and winning voice, 'I have come, as you know, on my wife's and my own business. You remember me? I am Antony Ryland.'

"'Be assured I remember you,' answered Langton in a most impolite tone, and with a most scandalously unprofessional emphasis on the word you. Why, that much impolite emphasis on a pronoun in the second person would ruin a first-class medical practice. I tell you. We have strychnine and prussic acid in the pharmacopœia, but impolite emphasis is a thing unknown to the faculty," said Baird, drawing down his waistcoat slowly with his left hand, and solemnly raising his glass with his right, keeping his cigar between the fingers of his left hand the while, and looking into my face with malicious deliberateness.

"For goodness sake go on, Baird, and drop your hideous attempts at humor!"

"Impetuous youth," he apostrophized me, "of forty! As we not only had good things with something useless or stupid, to wit, whisky with water, laudanum with aqua, life with sleeping—"

"Health with medicine, and hope with Baird," I cried. "But do go on."

He paused a moment, then spilled a few drops from his glass, held it out from him, and said in a tone of suppressed enthusiasm, "I pour and drink to Walter Melton's precocious smartness. Bless the antique boy!"

"Waiter: two more."

"And to his noble hospitality," cried the little man with a mischievous twinkle, as he emptied his glass.

"Well," resumed Baird with a sigh, as though the duty of narration pressed heavily upon him, "Langton increased the base of the isosceles triangle his legs made with hearth-rug and said, 'You have come for the purpose of meeting your wife, and trying to induce her to make over on you money which otherwise will go to that child. I not that so?'

"I thought Langton's manner simply brutal.

"'Sir,' said Ryland, glancing from Langton to me, 'we are not alone.' He did not show the least sign of haste or temper, but smiled as gently as though I were his sweetheart, and he were asking me to withdraw in order that papa and he might talk over the business aspect of his successful love-suit.

"I rose to go, but Langton turned sharply upon me and said, 'Neither I nor my client has sought this interview, neither I nor my client desires secrecy. If it does not answer the purpose of this man that you should be present he can go. Desire, Baird, that you remain.'

"'By George, Melton, but I thought there would be bloodshed. Langton's voice was full of threat and command; sit down I must and did.

"At that moment the door opened and a woman carrying a baby in her arms came in. Indeed, she was one of the plainest women I ever saw. She wore a hideous cold green plaid shawl and an old yellow straw bonnet trimmed with faded violet ribbons.

"Eh?"

"Cold green plaid shawl, old yellow straw bonnet with faded blue or violet ribbons. Why did you stop me?"

"Was her complexion bad and her nose sunken much below the forehead at the bridge?"

"Yes; at least, I think so. Give me a moment. It was."

"And she held the child to her bosom as though it were part of her own body that felt cold and needed all the heat of her arms and her bosom?"

"All fond mothers hold their babies so. Do you know her?"

"Was the hair on her forehead irregular? Did it grow lower, much lower, at one side than at the other?"

"Yes, it did. Did you ever meet her?"

"She was in the carriage I came by to-day. Go on."

"When the woman saw Ryland she shuddered and drew the child closer to her. I was watching every movement and look most closely. Langton went to her, spoke to her, and taking her by the hand led her to a seat with as much gallantry and deference as though she were the finest woman and the first lady in London. Ryland stood in the middle of the room with one hand on the back of a chair, and with that still holding his hat in front of his waistcoat. He bowed and smiled faintly as she crossed the room; beyond that, he did not move. After the first look she never glanced toward him again during the whole interview.

"After a few words by Langton in a low voice to the woman, to which she made no reply, he sat down at his writing-table and spoke out.

"'Mrs. Ryland, of the money you inherited from your great-uncle from Jamaica, four months after your marriage, you have already assigned away to that man Ryland, or about two thousand five hundred pounds, on the condition that he was to keep away from you forever. This money having been left to your private use in such a manner that he could have no claim whatever on a penny of it, although he is your—husband,—you, against my advice, made over to him the moiety of that fortune. He has been gambling again, and it is all gone—'

"'Operating on the Stock Exchange,' put in Ryland in a soft voice, as though more desirous to keep statements accurate than to shield or excuse himself.

"'One-half of your fortune has been gambled away, and this—man now wishes to have the opportunity of dissipating—'

"'Of operating with—' broke in Ryland.

"'Of dissipating more of it. Your decision—a decision which has my full concurrence—is that you retain the money for yourself and your child, and that if he give any further trouble, you seek a divorce on the ground of cruelty.'

"'But I shall get back all I have lost if I can command only another thousand. Only a thousand. There will still be some left for her and the baby, and I shall win all back.'

"'Not with my approval one penny,' said Langton, hotly.

"'But I have a right—I am her husband.'

"We won't discuss law with you. Mrs. Ryland declines to give you the money. The law is open to all. You can appeal to it if you please. That is your answer. You can leave now.'

"'But I too want to secure something for our son,' said Ryland. His face was now deadly pale, and I saw his fingers tighten and whiten on the brim of his hat until the brim was crushed flat against the seat. The pleasant smiles were all gone now, and a deadly sinister leer contorted his handsome features, while his eyes were glassy and cold, and his lips fell back from his white teeth like a coward's at bay.

"'Out at once!' cried Langton, springing to his feet angrily, and I do believe he would have used violence had not Ryland hastily withdrawn, closing the door very softly after himself.

"There was a long silence. Langton remained standing by his table, the woman sat bending over her child and holding it against her with both her arms and both her thin hands, the fingers outspread that the protecting and cherishing hand might touch the most of the loved surface.

"After a while Langton went across the room and stood over her like a sentinel lion. Then he said in a low, kind voice that made me think more of him than ever I had thought before, 'Did the little fellow feel the cold?'

"'I tried not to let him,' she answered, looking up for a moment. 'I am always afraid to leave him behind, my baby son. I am afraid he,' looking fearfully at the door, 'might come and steal him away from me. My own! my own!'

"She bent and absolutely gloated over the little pale sleeper, until a queer kind of dead pain came into my heart.

"'There is no fear of his doing that,' said Langton. 'It is the child's money he wants, and not the boy himself.'

"She rose to go. Langton conducted her to the door as though he were the first gentleman in England, she the finest woman in London, the first lady in the land. 'Good day,' said he. 'Good day,' said she, and she was gone.

"Langton came back and sat looking gloomily into the fire. 'What a scoundrel!' he cried; 'what an arrant scoundrel! what an unapproachable scoundrel!' He drove his heel into the coal, and repeated the words.

"'Tell me about it,' said I.

"'Easily enough,' he answered. 'He was a clerk in a stock-broker's office two years ago, and, she earning just enough to live on, became umbrella manufactory. Her people had been comfortable once, but lost all they had at her father's death; and two years ago, as far as she knew, she was the only survivor of her family. She was then about nine and twenty years of age, and very plain-looking, so that I dare say she had no hope of ever marrying. She lodged in some place off Somerford-street, Blackfriars Bridge, and her nearest friend was her landlady, to whom she paid three and sixpence a week for her attic. Two years ago this Ryland came to lodge in the same house. He was "the gentleman" of the place, and rented two rooms on the first floor; dingy and dismal as the street was, the rooms were, and owing to the locality, cheap. From the very first he began paying attentions to this woman, and in the end he made downright love to her.'

"'You may fancy how this poor creature, no longer young, who had never been anything but ugly, felt flattered by the honorable approaches of "the gentleman who lived in the first floor."' Well, to cut it short, in a few months they were married; she, in the full belief that he loved her for some subtle charm of mind which he told her he had discovered—he was too consummate a liar to say he loved her for her looks; and he in the full consciousness that she had been left, a year before, about five thousand pounds by a great-uncle who died after coming home from Jamaica, and of whom she had heard little or nothing all her life. The money had been devised to her heirs and his heirs absolutely, and had been advertised. Thus he got scent of it and hunted her down.

"'Sharp as he was, he counted without the law. He thought that things were still, with regard to married women's property, as they had been long ago, when the husband could say to the wife, "What's yours is mine; what's mine is my own." He showed his hand too soon. After a week he grew careless of her. This nearly broke her heart. In a month he told her about the legacy, and steps were taken to realize. Seeing how the thing was now, the landlady penetrated the whole design. The good woman's husband brought Mrs. Ryland privately to me. When he found this out, he turned from indifference to threats, and from threats to the most atrocious and inhuman cruelty. To sum up, we proved the will, got the money, and I invested it in stock. By this time I found out that he owed large sums of money; he had been speculating through another, and had got heavily let in. He continued his bad treatment of her, and at last, just when her baby was about to be born, we gave him two thousand five hundred pounds to take himself off and leave her in peace. All I could do would not induce her to have a legal separation. She would not think of taking a step might in some way, goodness knew how, injure the future status of her unborn child. I may tell you that for a whole month I resisted giving him the money unless I obtained from him something more binding than a written undertaking not to go near her or molest her in any way. She would not hear of law. I had to hold out any longer would be to imperil her life. Of course, the undertaking given by him has no more legal value than the ashes in that grate. Her whole soul, her whole nature now seems centred in that child. When she had made up her mind that no man would ever woo her he came. He was by no means a station at the time, handsome, as you saw; accomplished, as I know, and fascinating as you may have guessed. He became her sweetheart, and she knelt down and worshiped him. He became her husband, and spurned her as she knelt. He told her he thought less of her than of the lowest of her sex, and she drove him from her in a rage mixed of inhuman abuse and violence; one only dream of life gone forever into the world, a vile waste of dead hopes that festered in a sickly sun. She would have worked for him, given him her heart's blood; but he told her he did not want her presence, and that he loathed the very street she lived in. He derided her folly for ever supposing that any man could be as he could dream of enduring the presence of such a frightful caricature of nature as she. He heaped every insult and contumely upon her, but he did not break her down; for, Baird, she knew she was soon to be a mother. He might leave her, and did leave her, but the baby came; in the Winter of her life, in her worse than widowhood, the baby boy came. She had given money to the husband to go away, but the baby had come instead, and lay in her arms all day and all night, sweet for her kisses, sweet for all her love, the companion of her worse than widowhood, the unconscious confidant of all her sorrows, the antidote which, when pressed against her bosom, healed her of her memories.'

"'Get me back my child, or kill me—here.'

"I sprang up and turned round. The woman was standing in the doorway. Both her arms were stretched out toward Langton. Her eyes were staring and fixed, addressed to him mechanically, but not looking at him. She was rigid as a statue, and at each corner of her mouth appeared foam. Langton had turned round, but did not approach her. We were both petrified with fear and surprise.

"'Get me back my child, or kill me—here,' she repeated in the same tone as before, a tone that made us shudder. There was no passion in it, anger, no entreaty, no command. It seemed as though her heart had died and her lips were mechanically repeating its dying wish without owning any human sympathy for the dead heart.

"Still she stood rigid in the doorway. Langton looked at me in consternation, and whispered, 'The case is now one for you. Go to her and speak to her.'

"I approached her and took one of the outstretched hands. It was damp and cold. As I led her into the room I slipped my finger on her wrist and looked into her eyes. The pulse was low and weak; I had expected to find it high and strong. The semi-transparent, ruby-colored flaws in the eyes had dilated and gathered deeper fire; the expression was one of intense subjective occupation. Perhaps I may better convey my meaning by saying that it seemed as if she were dealing rather with the formula for an idea than with the idea itself. A cold thought came to me, and I said to myself, 'A shock has numbed the perceptive power of the faculty, but has left uninjured the power of pain. She has the sickening sense of want and the formula for her loss, but she does not acutely appreciate her loss as one who contrasts bitterly the memory of possession past with the realization of present dereliction. She has no well-defined notion of what her child or death is, but she knows she wants either; that less than either will not quiet the unusual clamorings in her heart.'

"Death or her child, it was all one to her; the peace that was gone with her baby, or the peace that was to come—in the grave. A bad case,' I thought to myself; 'the child and the image of the child are gone; this always means insanity. This woman will be numbed as she is now, until either the child is returned to her arms or the image to her mind.'

"'How did this happen?' I asked of her in as gentle a voice as I could.

"'He waited for me outside. He took the child from me—I did not let it go until it cried—until it cried—until I knew he hurt it. Well, it cried, and I let it go. There were people around, and I thought a woman to get one back from a child. But he said he was my husband, and that the child was his. The policeman asked me was he my husband, and was the child his? and I answered, Yes. The policeman shook his head and walked away. Then he got into a cab and drove away—do you understand? what I say? He got into a cab and drove away with my child in his arms—you find it hard to understand? I don't, for I felt him do it. I felt it here in my breast, where my child used to lie asleep—I felt the child drawn out of my breast—and—Sir, while he drove away, as there's a God above me, my child cried—as he drove away—drove away. You find it hard to understand, Sir; but my child cried as he drove away—drove away.'

"I dropped her hand, and, having left her, whispered to Langton, 'Is there any means of compelling that scoundrel to give up the child at once?'

"He shook his head and muttered a malediction.

"'Then,' said I, 'you had better send her home in charge of some one.'

"'You don't think she'll do violence upon herself?' he whispered.

"'No. But some one should always be with her until the crisis arrives.'

"'What do you expect to follow the crisis?'

"'She will either be cured or grow violent.'

"'My dear Baird, I can't leave here just now. Would you see her home, tell her landlady to get some one to look after her, see her own doctor, and ask them to send all bills to me?'

"I had nothing very particular on hand, so I did as he requested. We got a sober, honest, elderly woman to look after her. I found out her doctor, and we had a chat about her; he promised to take particular care of her, and to let me know from time to time how the case went on. As soon as I had made all as comfortable as I could, I came back to town and called upon Langton, knowing he would like to hear how I had got on.

"When I arrived at Langton's outer office the clerk beckoned to me, and said, 'Our client's husband is inside again.'

"Without stopping to knock, I turned the handle and went in. Ryland's back was toward me, and Langton, as formerly, stood on the hearth-rug. This time, however, there was no fire. He stood upright, with his feet close together. He was deadly pale, and, I could see at a glance, in a deadly rage. Ryland was speaking as I entered; he bowed with great politeness to me, paused, and then resumed:

"'As I was saying, Mr. Langton, the boy is now in perfect safety, quite as safe if he were with his mother, and I am come to say that I am prepared to answer for his safety until the money—twelve hundred pounds—is paid over to me.'

"'So,' said Langton, with a great effort to control his rage, 'you propose charging an additional two hundred pounds upon the estate for the success of your last infamous trick, you sorry swindler!'

"'As a lawyer, you ought to know that your language is illegal and—'

"'Take an action; do,' cried Langton, now losing all power over his anger. 'Take an action, and go into any court you please, and I pledge you my word as a man and a lawyer that I shall cast, and throughout the whole of England not a jury but would lynch you, and not a Judge on the Bench but would applaud them; and by heaven! if you don't get out of this instantly, I'll not leave the job for Judge or jury, but do it with my own hands.'

"He seemed about to spring on the man. Ryland slipped his hand behind him, backed toward the door, and said, 'Don't come near me, Mr. Langton. Well knowing the violence of your temper, I was compelled to be a little un-English, and come—armed.'

"'Un-English!' shouted Langton, striding over to him. 'There's nothing human, not to say English, in your corrupt carcase. Get out, man, or they will be hanging you for killing me, or putting up a statue to me for having killed you. Get out! They pay for killing venomous reptiles in India—why not in England too? Get out, man, I say, or I shall be claiming blood-money before night.'

"With the revolver held across his waistcoat, and pointed at nothing in particular, Ryland backed out of the door, and was gone."

So far as there was anything of moment connected with this affair, I heard nothing more from Baird that night.

I did not see Baird again till the week after Christmas. He then continued the history as follows:

"For some weeks after those scenes in Langton's office they heard no more of Ryland. During that time his unhappy wife continued in the same mental lethargy, repeatedly asking for her baby, but betraying no emotion and giving no sign of violence. I looked in at her lodgings about twice a week. Her doctor, Dr. Sherwood Freeman, and I quite agreed as to the case.

"There was little or no hope of a mental rally until either the child was restored or her mind received the shock which should counteract the one occasioned by its loss. In the meantime Langton had, as soon as possible, instituted legal proceedings against Ryland. I don't know what the nature of those proceedings was, but he held out slight hope of speedy relief; the case, it seems, was one full of difficulties, and the block in the courts filled him with despair.

"In about six weeks from the day I was in Langton's office, Ryland wrote to say the child was ill, and that he would deliver it up on condition of getting a thousand pounds.

"'Ah!' said Langton to me the evening he got the letter, 'so the threats of law have already beaten him down two hundred. The illness is a lie to force us to terms. I shall not answer that letter.'

"Well, Melton, as you may guess, I was by this time greatly interested in the cases, legal and medical. In a week I called again upon Langton, and to my astonishment found Mrs. Ryland there.

"The explanation was very simple. The child had really been ill of scarlet fever, all possible care had been taken of it, but, nevertheless, it had died, and was to be buried that day; and Langton and the vacant-eyed woman were setting off now to the cemetery.

"Ryland would not allow the mother to approach her dying child, but when it was dead he seemed to think he might run some ugly risk if he did not allow the mother's attendance at the interment, and Langton and she were now going. I examined her closely, but could observe no change; the chancery, her reason were frozen up, and the precisely the same condition as on the day of her bereavement.

"'May I go?' I asked.

"'Certainly,' said he; and in a little while the three of us got into a cab and drove to the cemetery Ryland had named.

"The same unbroken shadow of mental gloom hung over the unhappy woman. During the whole drive she never spoke a word. Her eyes were cast down most of the time. On the few occasions when she lifted them they sought Langton's face, but there was no question, no excitement in them. It was plain from their appearance that reason was an exile, but the land reason had left behind remained still unoccupied by anything save the spirit of the void.

"When we got inside the gates of the cemetery, we ascertained that the body of the child had not yet arrived.

"Langton turned to me and asked, 'What do you think will be the result of to-day?'

"'I think,' I answered, 'that it will bring about the crisis, followed by perfect sanity or violent insanity; but there is no telling which.'

"After awhile a mourning coach drove in. I will not drag you through all the small events of the interment. It will be sufficient for you to know that the father of the child was not present, and that during the whole time it occupied she never altered in the least.

"I felt greatly disappointed. I had been quite confident of the lifting or development of the affection now paralyzing her brain.

"When it was all over, we returned to the cab as sober as could be. I had been greatly deceived, and I could see that Langton's last hope was gone.

"When we had got about half way back she suddenly looked up into Langton's face, and said:

"'We have left something behind us.'

"Langton and I looked round the cab. The three umbrellas were all right.

"'No,' answered Langton; 'I don't think we have left anything behind.'

"'In the cemetery?' she asked.

"'No,' I said. 'No.'

"'We have,' she said. 'I know it, I feel it. As he drove away, I heard my child cry. Ah, gentlemen, let us go back and take my child up out of the wet grave. If you give him to me and let me hold him against my breast he will get warm. Ah, gentlemen! let us go back for my darling! My baby son! My own! My own!'

"She threw her arms out toward us with the anguish of a mother's broken heart on her face, and the knowledge of her childless fate in her eyes. Then all at once her body began swaying slightly, and with a low moan she buried her face in her hands and burst into tears.

"She had lost her child, but had regained his image, and her brain was healed. She had lost her child and regained his image, and her heart was broken. The mad live long and howl about our paths; the broken-hearted creep quietly into the shadows and silently die their own graves, and in a little while crawl into the earth with gentle sighs and gentler smiles.

"There is now no heat in her poor breast to warm her poor babe. She has been dead a week.

"Four days ago I saw Ryland buying gloves—dark-green gloves, a very quiet color—in the Strand. I asked a policeman to get me back my child. But he said he was my husband, and that the child was his. The policeman asked me was he my husband, and was the child his? and I answered, Yes. The policeman shook his head and walked away. Then he got into a cab and drove away—do you understand what I say? He got into a cab and drove away with my child in his arms—you find it hard to understand? I don't, for I felt him do it. I felt it here in my breast, where my child used to lie asleep—I felt the child drawn out of my breast—and—Sir, while he drove away, as there's a God above me, my child cried—as he drove away—drove away. You find it hard to understand, Sir; but my child cried as he drove away—drove away.'

"I dropped her hand, and, having left her, whispered to Langton, 'Is there any means of compelling that scoundrel to give up the child at once?'

"He shook his head and muttered a malediction.

"'Then,' said I, 'you had better send her home in charge of some one.'

"'You don't think she'll do violence upon herself?' he whispered.

"'No. But some one should always be with her until the crisis arrives.'

"'What do you expect to follow the crisis?'

"'She will either be cured or grow violent.'

"'My dear Baird, I can't leave here just now. Would you see her home, tell her landlady to get some one to look after her, see her own doctor, and ask them to send all bills to me?'

"I had nothing very particular on hand, so I did as he requested. We got a sober, honest, elderly woman to look after her. I found out her doctor, and we had a chat about her; he promised to take particular care of her, and to let me know from time to time how the case went on. As soon as I had made all as comfortable as I could, I came back to town and called upon Langton, knowing he would like to hear how I had got on.

"When I arrived at Langton's outer office the clerk beckoned to me, and said, 'Our client's husband is inside again.'

"Without stopping to knock, I turned the handle and went in. Ryland's back was toward me, and Langton, as formerly, stood on the hearth-rug. This time, however, there was no fire. He stood upright, with his feet close together. He was deadly pale, and, I could see at a glance, in a deadly rage. Ryland was speaking as I entered; he bowed with great politeness to me, paused, and then resumed:

"'As I was saying, Mr. Langton, the boy is now in perfect safety, quite as safe if he were with his mother, and I am come to say that I am prepared to answer for his safety until the money—twelve hundred pounds—is paid over to me.'

"'So,' said Langton, with a great effort to control his rage, 'you propose charging an additional two hundred pounds upon the estate for the success of your last infamous trick, you sorry swindler!'

"'As a lawyer, you ought to know that your language is illegal and—'

"'Take an action; do,' cried Langton, now losing all power over his anger. 'Take an action, and go into any court you please, and I pledge you my word as a man and a lawyer that I shall cast, and throughout the whole of England not a jury but would lynch you, and not a Judge on the Bench but would applaud them; and by heaven! if you don't get out of this instantly, I'll not leave the job for Judge or jury, but do it with my own hands.'

"He seemed about to spring on the man. Ryland slipped his hand behind him, backed toward the door, and said, 'Don't come near me, Mr. Langton. Well knowing the violence of your temper, I was compelled to be a little un-English, and come—armed.'

"'Un-English!' shouted Langton, striding over to him. 'There's nothing human, not to say English, in your corrupt carcase. Get out, man, or they will be hanging you for killing me, or putting up a statue to me for having killed you. Get out! They pay for killing venomous reptiles in India—why not in England too? Get out, man, I say, or I shall be claiming blood-money before night.'

"With the revolver held across his waistcoat, and pointed at nothing in particular, Ryland backed out of the door, and was gone."

So far as there was anything of moment connected with this affair, I heard nothing more from Baird that night.

I did not see Baird again till the week after Christmas. He then continued the history as follows:

"For some weeks after those scenes in Langton's office they heard no more of Ryland. During that time his unhappy wife continued in the same mental lethargy, repeatedly asking for her baby, but betraying no emotion and giving no sign of violence. I looked in at her lodgings about twice a week. Her doctor, Dr. Sherwood Freeman, and I quite agreed as to the case.

"There was little or no hope of a mental rally until either the child was restored or her mind received the shock which should counteract the one occasioned by its loss. In the meantime Langton had, as soon as possible, instituted legal proceedings against Ryland. I don't know what the nature of those proceedings was, but he held out slight hope of speedy relief; the case, it seems, was one full of difficulties, and the block in the courts filled him with despair.

"In about six weeks from the day I was in Langton's office, Ryland wrote to say the child was ill, and that he would deliver it up on condition of getting a thousand pounds.

"'Ah!' said Langton to me the evening he got the letter, 'so the threats of law have already beaten him down two hundred. The illness is a lie to force us to terms. I shall not answer that letter.'

"Well, Melton, as you may guess, I was by this time greatly interested in the cases, legal and medical. In a week I called again upon Langton, and to my astonishment found Mrs. Ryland there.

"The explanation was very simple. The child had really been ill of scarlet fever, all possible care had been taken of it, but, nevertheless, it had died, and was to be buried that day; and Langton and the vacant-eyed woman were setting off now to the cemetery.

"Ryland would not allow the mother to approach her dying child, but when it was dead he seemed to think he might run some ugly risk if he did not allow the mother's attendance at the interment, and Langton and she were now going. I examined her closely, but could observe no change; the chancery, her reason were frozen up, and the precisely the same condition as on the day of her bereavement.

"'May I go?' I asked.

"'Certainly,' said he; and in a little while the three of us got into a cab and drove to the cemetery Ryland had named.

"The same unbroken shadow of mental gloom hung over the unhappy woman. During the whole drive she never spoke a word. Her eyes were cast down most of the time. On the few occasions when she lifted them they sought Langton's face, but there was no question, no excitement in them. It was plain from their appearance that reason was an exile, but the land reason had left behind remained still unoccupied by anything save the spirit of the void.

"When we got inside the gates of the cemetery, we ascertained that the body of the child had not yet arrived.

"Langton turned to me and asked, 'What do you think will be the result of to-day?'

"'I think,' I answered, 'that it will bring about the crisis, followed by perfect sanity or violent insanity; but there is no telling which.'

"After awhile a mourning coach drove in. I will not drag you through all the small events of the interment. It will be sufficient for you to know that the father of the child was not present, and that during the whole time it occupied she never altered in the least.

"I felt greatly disappointed. I had been quite confident of the lifting or development of the affection now paralyzing her brain.

"When it was all over, we returned to the cab as sober as could be. I had been greatly deceived, and I could see that Langton's last hope was gone.

"When we had got about half way back she suddenly looked up into Langton's face, and said:

"'We have left something behind us.'

"Langton and I looked round the cab. The three umbrellas were all right.

"'No,' answered Langton; 'I don't think we have left anything behind.'

"'In the cemetery?' she asked.

"'No,' I said. 'No.'

"'We have,' she said. 'I know it, I feel it. As he drove away, I heard my child cry. Ah, gentlemen, let us go back and take my child up out of the wet grave. If you give him to me and let me hold him against my breast he will get warm. Ah, gentlemen! let us go back for my darling! My baby son! My own! My own mortuary inscriptions, as meaning "months." The instrument corresponds most closely with the description of the "tempium" which was compiled by Ostfried Müller from Martianus Capella, Varro, Cicero, and Servius.—The Athenæum.

"NO MORE SEA."

Aye, artists come to paint it; and writers, to put in a book,
How grand in storm, and fair in calm, the old North Sea can look.

I've wondered to hear them talking, how to mimic in music or song,
The voice that thrills the brooding air with its thunder low and long;

Since never aught but itself, I wot, could sound like its angry roar,
When its breakers rise to the east winds' call, to crash on the rocky shore.

But rough or smooth, in shade or shine, the face of the mighty main
Can speak of little else to me, but memory, fear, or pain.

Father and husband, and bold bright boy, it has taken them one by one;
I shall lie alone in the churchyard there, when my weary days are done.

God never sent me a maiden bairn, to stay by me to the last,
So I sit by the restless tides alone, by the grave of all my past;

By the waves so strong and pitiless, that have drowned life's joy for me,
And think of "the land where all shall meet, the land where is no more sea."

Yet I cannot rest in meadow or fell, of the quiet inland lanes,
Where the great trees spread their rustling arms over the smiling plains.

I can't draw breath in the country, all shadowed, and green, and dumb,
The want of the sea is at my heart, I hear it calling, "Come."

I hearken, and rise, and follow; perhaps my men down there,
Where the bright shells gleam, and the fishes dart 'mid sea-weeds' tangles fair,

Will find me best, if still on earth, when the Angel's trump is blown,
On the sand reach, or the tall cliff side, ere we pass to the great White Throne.

So Summer and Winter, all alone, by the breaker's lip I wait,
Till I see the red light flush the clouds, as He opens the golden gate;

And though at the sound of the rising waves, I oft times tremble and weep,
When the air is void of their glorious voice, I can neither rest or sleep!

And strangest of all the promises, writ in the Book to me,
Is how on the shores of Paradise, "there shall be no more sea."
—All the Year Round.

THOMAS HOLCROFT.—In 1784 Colman produced at the Haymarket a musical romance of his entitled "The Noble Peasant." It may be regarded as the first of a species of composition which was very popular for a time—romantic drama interspersed with songs. It was very well received. But Holcroft's first real success, produced in the same year, was a translation of Beaumarchais' famous "Mariage de Figaro," over which Paris was then going mad. How he obtained the work is a good anecdote of his energy and ingenuity. The comedy was not printed, and all attempts to obtain a copy from the French manager were in vain; indeed so jealously was it guarded that any attempt at taking notes in the theatre would have been interfered with by the Police. The only alternative that remained was to commit it to memory. For this purpose he and a friend went to the performance on Friday night for a week or 10 days; each night when they returned home they both wrote down as much as they could remember, compared notes, corrected mistakes after their next visit, and so proceeded until they were in possession of the entire play. A few weeks afterward "Figaro" was acted at Covent Garden under the title of "The Follies of a Day." It had a long run, and the translator received £600 from the theatre, besides a handsome sum from the publishers. "Seduction," produced in 1787, was his next dramatic work. Two years later he did a translation of the King of Prussia's works in 13 volumes, for which he was paid £1,200, and an abridgment of Lavater's Essays on Physiognomy. Then followed a piece translated from the German, entitled "The German Hotel," and "The School of Arrogance," 1791, founded upon "Le Glorieux" of Destouches, one of his best works. This was followed by the most successful of all his pieces, "The Road to Ruin," and the only one by which he is now remembered. It brought him in £900, besides £400 for the copyright. Although the characters are conventional—the angry but doting father, the spendthrift, but good-hearted, son, the vulgar, illiterate sporting man, the villainous money-scrivener, the amorous widow, the bread-and-butter Miss-in-her-teens, a toned-down, modernized Miss Hoyden—yet they are drawn cleverly and naturally. The plot is skillfully arranged, if we except the forced incident of the will falling into wrong hands through the similarity of the names Silky and Sulky, which is very poor, and the dialogue, without any pretensions to brilliancy, is smart and unaffected. The action is also full of life and bustle, and never flags for an instant. Yet how much of its success was owing to the admirable artists who interpreted it! The mercurial Lewis, who could be the very soul of vulgarity and yet never coarse; the Goldfinch, Munden, who looked the character of Old Dornton so naturally, that it was said that when he was told his banking-house had failed, a miser would have placed his whole store of gold in his hands with perfect confidence; Quick was the Silky, Mrs. Mattocks the Widow Warren. A few years ago this comedy was revived and fairly played by Vandenhoff, and ran for some time.—Temple Bar.

LOST LITERATURE.—A fire accidentally breaking out (1752) in the chambers of Hon. Charles Yorke, in Lincoln's Inn, robbed the world of an invaluable collection of manuscripts and pamphlets which had been gathered together with immense pains by Lord Chancellor Somers; and Davies' Notes on Cicero's De Officiis perished by a similar calamity in the Strand, about the middle of the eighteenth century. The destruction of Lord Mansfield's library in 1780 involved also the loss of untold manuscript treasures, and Anglo-Saxon literature has been maimed for all time by the fire which ravaged the Cottonian Library in October, 1731. Scholars will curse forever the conflagration of Moscow, for there, among other literary treasures, were consumed the manuscript collections of one of the greatest of Aristotelian commentators, Joh. Gottl Buhle. Reams of Oldys' inestimable antiquarian collections have been wantonly destroyed, and the place where eight octavo volumes of Anthony Collins' manuscript treatises are lurking is still a secret. But perhaps the most vexatious and mysterious destruction which more literature has suffered occurred in the fourteenth century. On the 4th of July, B. C. 44, Cicero had written and dedicated to his friend Atticus a treatise, in two books, on glory—De Gloria. This treatise was once in the possession of Petrarch, and had been bequeathed to him by Raimondo Soranzo. He lent the manuscript to an old friend, who was anxious to peruse it. This friend, however, omitted to return it, and after repeated evasions confessed that, being hard pressed for a sum of money, he had pawned the sacred deposit. For some inexplicable reason he refused to say where he had pawned it, and dying not long afterward, the secret perished with him, and the manuscript has never been heard of from that day to this. Paulus Manutius asserted some years afterward that Petrus Aleyonius had stolen it, and, after transcribing some of the best passages from it into a treatise of his own "on Exile," had afterward made away with the manuscript, that his base plagiarism might not be detected. What a woeful catalogue might be made of the literary treasures which have perished at sea! A whole ship-load of classical manuscripts went down when Guarino Veronese was on his return from Constantinople, in the early part of the fifteenth century, and though Guarino survived his freight, his grief for the loss of it is said to have turned his hair white in a few hours. The magnificent collections of Vincentio Pinelli afford another melancholy item in these marine calamities. At his death in 1600, his library was packed, filling three ships, to be transferred to Naples. One of these ships, however, fell into the hands of some pirates, who boarded it and flung most of the books and manuscripts into the sea, among them some very valuable antiquarian treatises; the rest of them were scattered up and down the neighboring shore and used, says Thuanus, who tells the tale, either for stuffing up the holes in boats, or to patch up broken windows. Had it not been for another casualty at sea, Europe might long ago have been in possession of writings which would probably have anticipated by 180 years the researches of modern Chinese scholars. In 1650 a Dutch merchant, named Budde, having made his fortune, resolved to devote the rest of his life to studying Chinese, and, being still a young man, sailed to China for the purpose of intimately acquainting himself with the details of Chinese government, as well as its history and literature. He was so fortunate as to have passed himself off for a Chinese, was raised to the dignity of a mandarin, and was thus enabled to master every detail of the difficult task he had undertaken. He had embodied the labor of 30 years in a prodigious mass of manuscripts, and on his return to Europe he was shipwrecked, and all his cherished treasures went to the bottom of the sea.

"Ibi omnis Effusus labor."

FRACASTOR, one of the most eminent scholars of the sixteenth century, had written in Latin an elaborate history of Venice, which all who saw the manuscript praised in the highest terms. But the unfortunate author got up in the paroxysm of a fever, and committed the manuscript to the flames, and thus deprived scholars of a work "which need have feared no comparison with that of Livy." Longolius' conduct was still more extraordinary, especially as he could plead no such delirium as an excuse. He became so infatuated with the style of Cicero that he not only determined to imitate his composition for the rest of his days, but to destroy everything he had written before he became acquainted with the writings of the great Roman stylist. Accordingly he destroyed not only a valuable commentary on Pliny, but a considerable mass of manuscript matter as well; and as he died shortly after his injudicious act, he left scarcely anything behind him.—Temple Bar.

RELIGION OF THE OLD EGYPTIANS.—The honor due to parents sprang naturally from the belief in God as "our Father which art in Heaven." We constantly find inscriptions on the tombs such as the following: "I honored my father and my mother; I loved my brothers. I taught little children. I took care of orphans as though they had been my own children." In letters of excellent advice addressed by an old man of 110 years of age to a young friend—which form the most ancient book in the world, dating 3,000 B. C.—he says: "The obedience of a docile son is a blessing. God loves obedience. Disobedience is hated by God. The obedience of a son maketh glad the heart of his father. * * * A son teachable in God's service will be happy in consequence of his obedience, he will grow to be old, he will find favor." This is the earliest appearance of the "first commandment with promise," (Eph. vi.: 2,) the obedience to God and man which was the "essence of Hebraism." The moral code of the Egyptians was exceedingly elaborate. It consisted of 42 commandments or heads under which all sins might be classed. This code was the ideal placed before men on earth; it was the standard of perfection according to which they would be judged in heaven. Some of them are of local interest only, but most belong to the eternal laws of right and wrong written on the tables of the heart. Men were taught from childhood, as children are nowadays taught their catechism, that they must appear in the presence of the Divine Judge, and say: "I have not privily done evil to my neighbors. I have not afflicted any, nor caused any to weep. I have not told lies. I have not done any wicked thing. I have not done what is hateful to the gods. I have not calumniated the slave to his master. I have not been idle. I have not stolen. I have not committed adultery. I have not committed murder." And so on. But their commandments were positive as well as negative. On the tombs we find the common formula: "I have given bread to the hungry, water to the thirsty, clothes to the naked, shelter to the stranger." In the lamentations at funerals, the mourners see the deceased entering the presence of the Divine Judge, and they thus sing the words: "There is no fault in him. No accuser riseth up against him. In the truth he liveth, with the truth he nourisheth himself. The gods are satisfied with all that he hath done. * * * He succored the afflicted, he gave bread to the hungry, drink to the thirsty, clothes to the naked, he sheltered the outcast, his doors were open to the stranger, he was a father to the fatherless." This was the principle of the final judgment announced by the Son of Man, to whom "all judgment is committed," some 4,000 years afterward, among the hills of Palestine. This tenderness for suffering humanity is characteristic of the nation. Gratefully does a man acknowledge the care of the Greek: (4000 B. C.:) "Wandering I wandered and was hungry, bread was set before me: I fled from the land naked, there was given me fine linen." It is a glory to a man that "the poor shall make their moan at the door of his tomb." An inscription on a tomb at Beni-Hassan, written about 2,500 B. C., says: "I am one who oppressed any widow. No prisoner languished in my days. No one died of hunger. When there were years of famine I had my fields plowed. I gave food to the inhabitants, so that there was no hungry person. I gave the widow equal portions with the married. I did not prefer the rich to the poor." On a wall of the Temple of Karnak there is sculptured the earliest known extraditionary treaty. It is between Rameses II. and a Khetan Prince. The last clause provides that political fugitives are to be sent back, with the following humane provision for their personal safety: "Whoever shall be delivered up, himself, his wives, his children, let him by no means be smitten to the death; moreover, let him not suffer in the eyes, in the mouth, in the feet; moreover, let not any crime be set up against him." This treaty was engraven for the Khetan Prince on a silver tablet. In a volume of maxims we read: "Mistreat not a fatherless child, set your wife first in your protector, maltreat her not. Save not thine own life at the cost of another." On the tomb of a man at El-Kalb (4000 B. C.) it is recorded that he "never left home with anger in his heart."—The Fortnightly Review.

THE VENETIANS.—In the narrow streets you meet women as beautiful as any of those whose eyes smile down on you from the walls of the Academia. They have still the golden-red Venetian hair, which the painters of old delighted in so much, as did the women themselves; and when the sun shines on the multitudinous plaits which they sometimes wind round and round, it gives a color of more supreme and living beauty than words can describe or pigments portray. Sometimes the women set an aureole of silver pins about their heads; and sometimes they take out all beauty and color by the abominable powder which makes decent citizenesses look like so many Mesdames Pas Grandechoses, and Mme. Pas Grandechose herself more revolting than need be. As they come clattering along the stone pavements, dragging their heatless slippers at every step, you are almost sure to have some harmonies of color that no one but themselves could combine. They are fond of saffron-colored gowns, and of reds and blues and greens, which the sea air fades into mellow, changeful tints; they wear old-fashioned, three-cornered shawls of fine patterns and bold colors—though the Austrian flowered shawl, which once made the delight of artists, is now very rarely seen—and their whole appearance is picturesque and delightful. Also, by far away the most beautiful women that I have seen in Italy, save the Caprese and the Ischians, and those about the Gulfs of Naples and Salerno. The men, too, are fine and lissome; and the children look out with their large eyes from under their surly, tangled locks, like so many cherubs fitted with half naked little bodies, or amorini put into dirty jackets—and singularly apt at thieving. Groups on groups of big-eyed beauty and unconscious grace are to be seen gathered around the cisterns in the campi—open thrice a day for all to draw water who will. The women carry their red brass pots sinuously over their shoulders like an Arab shadoof, and the walk of these bare-footed creatures is superb, like the walk of those silent, swift, and stealthy Neapolitan contadine who are at your back whispering in your ear "Datemeni un soldo—per carità" before you know of their approach. Here in Venice, too, beggars ply their trade when the Guardie are not looking, and the old men and boys who hook your gondola to the steps are only beggars in the disguise of usefulness. In the Piazza they are thieves as well as beggars, and should you lay anything belonging to you out of your hand, and for a moment forget to watch it, you will find that it has vanished into space when you look for it again, and that some one has made himself richer by your loss. If you go in the evening to eat ices at Florian's, watching Young Italy in his amusement and listening to the band in the midst, take care of the spoons. Beautiful, soft-voiced, regardless thieves abound. They come creeping up to you with their bright eyes and winsome faces, made up into so much fictitious woe; pointing to their red ripe mouths to tell you that they are hungry; offering you matches for sale, or asking you for the end of your ices, your spoons, your sugar, your bibite, your anything when you will. But be very and watchful. Hold on to the spoons while you do so; and take care of your pockets, your umbrella, your handkerchief—anything, in short, which they can thieve. For what they can steal they will.—Belgravia.

THE CRACK JOURNALIST.—The crack journalist ought to be "good all round." He may have to write at the shortest notice on any one of the widest possible range of subjects. He must have any amount of information at his finger-ends, for hunting a fact through books of reference not only wastes valuable time, but throws you out of the easy swing of composition. He need not have strongly-pronounced convictions—in fact, he had better go about his work with a thoroughly judicial temperament—but he should be a master of the close and lucid reasoning that leads smoothly up to a seemingly sound conclusion. He ought to have "the sort of pettifogging intimacy with dates, names, and trifling matters of facts" that Sir Arthur Wardour so strongly objected to in the Antiquary. He should have a sense of humor, grim or playful, that will come at call, even if he has taken up the pen with an effort or is laboring against the grain. It is all the better, of course, if he has these brilliant gifts of epigram and stinging satire that belonged to the late Mr. Albany Fonblanque; with a knack of memory for appropriate anecdotes, and the art of adapting them to point his arguments. Happy illustration is, of course, eminently useful, though he should be able to resist the journalist temptation of dragging stock metaphors in by the head and shoulders, and then riding them to death. We should be glad to know, for example, how often the loathsome diagnosis of the complicated diseases of the Sick Man of the East has been laboriously worked out during the last few years in all its sickening staleness of detail; and to know that it is said to have been the first to suggest it, will have to answer for that crime to history as for many others. Of course, the model leader-writer should have an iron physique, or at least a constitution that will always respond to his calls on it, although the spirit may be fretting the body to decay. He has to turn the night into day, to sun and breakfast at abnormal hours, and prolong the dull strain on his brain-power when nature has long been craving for repose. The willing horse is too often spurred to a break-down, and then the difficulty is to replace him. For it is one or two of its best men that make the backbone of a journal. They are but vaguely appreciated by the public while they are alive, although the average subscribers may begin to be dimly conscious of a loss—say within a month or a couple of months of their departure.—Blackwood's Magazine.

PHŒNICIAN ART.—Strictly speaking, Phœnicia had no art of its own; its designs were borrowed from Egypt and Assyria, and its artists went to school on the banks of the Nile and the Euphrates. The Phœnician combined and improved upon his models; the impulse, the origination came from abroad; the modification and elaboration were his own. He entered into other men's labors, and made the most of his heritage. The Sphinx of Egypt became Asiatic, and its new form was transplanted to Nineveh on the one side and to Greece on the other. The rosettes and other patterns of the Babylonian cylinders were introduced into the handiwork of Phœnicia, and so passed on to the West, while the hero of the ancient Chaldean epic became first the Tyrian Melkarth, and then the Herakles of Hellas. It is possible, no doubt, that with all this borrowing there was still something that was original in Phœnician work; such at any rate seems to be the case with certain forms given to the vases; but at present we have no means of determining how far this originality may have extended. In Assyria, indeed, Phœnician art exercised a great influence in the eighth and seventh centuries B. C.; but it had itself previously drawn its first inspiration from the empire of the Tigris, and did but give back the perfect blossom to those from whom it had received the seed. The workmanship of the ivories and bronze bowls found at Nineveh by Mr. Layard is thoroughly Phœnician; but it cannot be separated from that of the purely Assyrian pavements and wall-slabs on which the palaces were adorned. The Phœnician art, in fact, traces of which we find from Assyria to Italy, though based on both Egyptian and Assyrian models, owed far more to Assyria than it did to Egypt. In art, as in mythology and religion, Phœnicia was but a carrier and intermediary between East and West, and just as the Greek of your hand, and for a moment forget to watch it, you will find that it has vanished into space when you look for it again, and that some one has made himself richer by your loss. If you go in the evening to eat ices at Florian's, watching Young Italy in his amusement and listening to the band in the midst, take care of the spoons. Beautiful, soft-voiced, regardless thieves abound. They come creeping up to you with their bright eyes and winsome faces, made up into so much fictitious woe; pointing to their red ripe mouths to tell you that they are hungry; offering you matches for sale, or asking you for the end of your ices, your spoons, your sugar, your bibite, your anything when you will. But be very and watchful. Hold on to the spoons while you do so; and take care of your pockets, your umbrella, your handkerchief—anything, in short, which they can thieve. For what they can steal they will.—Belgravia.

THE CRACK JOURNALIST.—The crack journalist ought to be "good all round." He may have to write at the shortest notice on any one of the widest possible range of subjects. He must have any amount of information at his finger-ends, for hunting a fact through books of reference not only wastes valuable time, but throws you out of the easy swing of composition. He need not have strongly-pronounced convictions—in fact, he had better go about his work with a thoroughly judicial temperament—but he should be a master of the close and lucid reasoning that leads smoothly up to a seemingly sound conclusion. He ought to have "the sort of pettifogging intimacy with dates, names, and trifling matters of facts" that Sir Arthur Wardour so strongly objected to in the Antiquary. He should have a sense of humor, grim or playful, that will come at call, even if he has taken up the pen with an effort or is laboring against the grain. It is all the better, of course, if he has these brilliant gifts of epigram and stinging satire that belonged to the late Mr. Albany Fonblanque; with a knack of memory for appropriate anecdotes, and the art of adapting them to point his arguments. Happy illustration is, of course, eminently useful, though he should be able to resist the journalist temptation of dragging stock metaphors in by the head and shoulders, and then riding them to death. We should be glad to know, for example, how often the loathsome diagnosis of the complicated diseases of the Sick Man of the East has been laboriously worked out during the last few years in all its sickening staleness of detail; and to know that it is said to have been the first to suggest it, will have to answer for that crime to history as for many others. Of course, the model leader-writer should have an iron physique, or at least a constitution that will always respond to his calls on it, although the spirit may be fretting the body to decay. He has to turn the night into day, to sun and breakfast at abnormal hours, and prolong the dull strain on his brain-power when nature has long been craving for repose. The willing horse is too often spurred to a break-down, and then the difficulty is to replace him. For it is one or two of its best men that make the backbone of a journal. They are but vaguely appreciated by the public while they are alive, although the average subscribers may begin to be dimly conscious of a loss—say within a month or a couple of months of their departure.—Blackwood's Magazine.

PHŒNICIAN ART.—Strictly speaking, Phœnicia had no art of its own; its designs were borrowed from Egypt and Assyria, and its artists went to school on the banks of the Nile and the Euphrates. The Phœnician combined and improved upon his models; the impulse, the origination came from abroad; the modification and elaboration were his own. He entered into other men's labors, and made the most of his heritage. The Sphinx of Egypt became Asiatic, and its new form was transplanted to Nineveh on the one side and to Greece on the other. The rosettes and other patterns of the Babylonian cylinders were introduced into the handiwork of Phœnicia, and so passed on to the West, while the hero of the ancient Chaldean epic became first the Tyrian Melkarth, and then the Herakles of Hellas. It is possible, no doubt, that with all this borrowing there was still something that was original in Phœnician work; such at any rate seems to be the case with certain forms given to the vases; but at present we have no means of determining how far this originality may have extended. In Assyria, indeed, Phœnician art exercised a great influence in the eighth and seventh centuries B. C.; but it had itself previously drawn its first inspiration from the empire of the Tigris, and did but give back the perfect blossom to those from whom it had received the seed. The workmanship of the ivories and bronze bowls found at Nineveh by Mr. Layard is thoroughly Phœnician; but it cannot be separated from that of the purely Assyrian pavements and wall-slabs on which the palaces were adorned. The Phœnician art, in fact, traces of which we find from Assyria to Italy, though based on both Egyptian and Assyrian models, owed far more to Assyria than it did to Egypt. In art, as in mythology and religion, Phœnicia was but a carrier and intermediary between East and West, and just as the Greek

AUDITING ACCOUNTS.—A friend of mine, who held a high civil appointment in India, in the palmy days of John Company, told me that, on his promotion to a higher post, he found that the officer next in authority to himself, and who held a duplicate key of the Treasury, my friend holding another, was a man of extravagant habits, and had the reputation of living in a style not warranted by his income. Nevertheless, on every occasion on which the contents of the treasure-chest were examined they were found to total accurately with the books. My friend, therefore, instead of immediately on his accession to office challenging his colleague to the investigation of the accounts, and a comparison of the actual sum in hand with the balance exhibited by the books, appointed a day a month thence for the task. The day arrived, the books were examined, the treasure counted, and all was found to be in order. My friend then said to his colleague that it was scarcely worth while for the custody of the funds of the company to be divided, and therefore in future he would keep both the keys. Whether the keyless functionary remonstrated on this unusual proceeding I know not, but his chief adhered to his resolution, and in a few weeks afterward the affairs of his subordinate collapsed. He had on previous occasions borrowed from the native merchants, on the eve of the examination of the chest, to make up the deficiency, and repaid them when all was pronounced to be correct; but, being unable in this last instance to reimburse the amount advanced, his creditors became urgent and a crash was the result. My friend cited an instance of falsification of accounts effected by an official whose wont it was to bring forward an amount differing in one figure from the total of the preceding page, that page, of course, having been correctly added up. By doing this in a few out of many columns of figures he was enabled to bring out a balance corresponding with the amount in hand.—The University Magazine.

LADY WORTLEY MONTAGU.—During Lady Mary's youth the tone of society was very little more regulated by female taste than is the bar of a modern public house. All women, it has been said, hate Pope, who, more than any other man, uttered the true sentiment of his mind. Some keen observers have thought his judgment sound; but, whatever we may think of its merits, his manner of expressing it is certainly not flattering, and is singularly coarse. The coolness with which he asserts, in an epistle to a lady, that "most women have no characters at all," is one obvious instance. The amazing brutality of his lampoons upon Lady Mary herself is only an excessive application of his ordinary method. Now Pope, whatever his faults, was one of those morbidly sensitive beings who, under other conditions would probably have been unusually appreciative of the charms of woman's society. But he was simply reflecting, with added sharpness of his own, the ordinary tone of that kind of beastly society in which he, like the other wits of his day, passed so much of his time. Their drinking in taverns and coffee-houses expanded their girth, as Thackeray has remarked, and certainly encouraged a style of talk now banished from drawing-rooms. The drama of Wycherley and Congreve is only endurable as corresponding to a social state in which the contemporary man about town was flourishing and supreme. Plays and novels were long intended to meet the taste of the animal known as a rake, and not, as now, compelled to satisfy a feminine sense of refinement. Even the Spectator and its like, though meant to supply reading for ladies, addressed women with a tone of condescension showing sufficiently how little importance could be attached to their feelings. Under such circumstances the most masculine women were likely to have the most social success. Lady Mary, made one toast of the Kit-cat Club at the age of 9, and naturally endowed with masculine sense, seems to have been thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the society round her. She is a thorough type of the woman of the world. She had a vigor of character which raised her to social leadership, combined with a shrewd vein of cynical common sense which inclined her to use her power even if she despised her subjects. She sees the realities around her with perfect freedom from illusion, and calmly determines to get the greatest amount of happiness attainable. Her letters have not the charm of a playful or imaginative nature; they possess those of the sense of Mme. De Sévigné; and indeed she professes her hearty contempt for the endless "tittle-tattle" of that idol of most good letter-writers. On the other hand, her honesty, directness, and hatred of humbug have the same kind of charm which one might discover in the conversation of some of Thackeray's worldly old ladies, Miss Crawley or Lady Kew.—The Saturday Review.

GERMAN SUPERSTITIONS.—The directions prescribed as preventives against all sorts of witchcraft vary in different parts of Germany, and are generally limited to certain provinces. Thus, in Silesia, people carefully avoid swallowing a cat's hair or a fragment of thread, as this imprudence would certainly cause consumption. In the Tyrol, eating a sparrow is believed to bring about St. Vitus' dance; and in Hesse, spitting into the fire will make the culprit's mouth sore, a belief which is probably a remnant of the time when fire was considered sacred. In Saxony, nobody ventures to wipe their fingers on the tablecloth, lest their hands become covered with warts. Throughout Germany, brooms play a large part in the tragi-comedy of popular medicine, since they are the witches' favorite means of conveyance to their nightly feast at the Blocksberg. In Westphalia—that lumber-room of superstition—and Saxony, those unfortunate mortals who happen to have been beaten with a broomstick, firmly believe themselves doomed to die of consumption; and small children who have been chastised by means of a hazel or willow rod, are supposed either to be crippled or stunted in their growth. Another strange notion prevailing throughout Germany is that no one should boast of good health, at least not without spreading out the fore and middle fingers of both hands, and saying the word Unberufen or Unbeschrien, which means unbewitched. Many of these preventives are closely connected with Church holidays and other religious concerns. Thus, bathing in the open air on Good Friday or at Easter is supposed to keep the Silesians well and healthy the whole year, and in Saxony, the common preservative against ague is to eat nine different kinds of green vegetables mixed together on Maundy-Thursday. In many parts of the German Empire it is a custom to take a cold bath on Christmas night, for during the following Twelfth night the water is believed to possess magic powers. In Brandenburg, the old believers in these wonderful doctrines say that every illness becomes contagious to those who hear the sick person complaining about the disease; wherefore the individual thus addressed will most ungraciously retort:

"Bear thy pains alone,
Or bewail them to a stone."

Three crosses painted over the house-door keep diseases and all other domestic disasters off the homes of true believers; for which the initials K., (Kaspar,) M., (Melchior,) and B. (Balthasar,) or even the pentalpha. (commonly called wizard-foot,) may be substituted. This pentalpha consists of two triangles, united in a manner to form a five-pointed star. It is strange to observe how, in the above-mentioned customs, Christian and heathenish elements are commingled.—Chambers's Journal.

MIGRATION OF CENTRES OF INDUSTRIAL ENERGY.—Now there is a law of nature which mathematicians call "the law of least effort," by which is meant that when anything is to be done nature takes the easiest way of doing it. A stone falls; it does not spend itself in vain, lawless, angular movements, but goes straight to the earth to which it is attracted. Water descends a hill by an apparently devious channel, but at each twist the course taken is that which was the easiest at that point. There is the same economy of labor in the growth of plants and the organization of animals, and Mr. Darwin has attributed much of the development and the disappearance of species to their comparative economical advantages and disadvantages.

Man follows, or at all events tries to follow, this law in the satisfaction of his own wants; and when his movements are free as within the limits of the same political society, the conformity of his action to this principle may be closely traced. It is in this way, by a process of selection of which the individuals engaged in it are themselves often unconscious, that industries shift to those spots where they are pursued under conditions admitting the greatest return for the least expenditure of labor. The course of manufactures in England cannot help running, along the lines of least resistance. This is a primary law of the internal movement of a free society conceived as an economic machine, and the discovery of the last eighty or a hundred years, that we could harness the power of steam and make it our slave, has been the means of affording the most signal illustration of this law. Cheapness is the easy and simple test of efficiency of labor, and the competition of the products of the steam-driven factory has put other manufacturers out of the market. This is true not merely of making things, but of carrying them, and whether by land or by sea. The more efficient driver is the more efficient mode of accomplishing what we desire. This is a process we may contemplate with almost unmixed satisfaction. If an industry shifts from one spot to another, it is because it can be more effectively pursued in the latter, i. e., because it produces commodities more cheaply. The nation is benefited by the transfer. There may be a temporary inconvenience suffered in the spot left, and even a diminution of population there, yet the whole population of the nation is sure to increase because the means of supplying the wants of the masses are made easier. Thus we see that some counties in which certain small manufactures formerly flourished, have become almost purely agricultural, and their population shows a tendency to diminish; but there is far more than compensating growth elsewhere, and the means of the workman rise with every discovery of a cheaper way of supplying his wants.—The Fortnightly Review.

A MANAGER'S FIRE-WORKS.—A good story is told of Elliston's management at Worcester. For his benefit he had announced a grand display of fire-works! No greater proof of the gullibility of the British public could be adduced than their swallowing such an announcement. The theatre was so small that such an exhibition was practically impossible. A little before the night Elliston called upon the landlord of the property, and, in the course of conversation, hinted at the danger of such a display, as though the idea had just struck him. The landlord took alarm, and, as Elliston had anticipated, forbade it. Nevertheless, the announcements remained on the walls, and on the night the theatre was crowded. The performance proceeded without any notice being taken by the management of the fire-works, until murmurs swelled into clamor and loud cries. Then, with his usual haughty air, Elliston came forward and bowed. He had made, he said, the most elaborate preparation for a magnificent pyrotechnic display; he had left nothing undone, but at the last moment came the terrible reflection, would it not be dangerous? Would there not be collected within the walls of the theatre a number of lovely young tender girls, of respectable matrons, to do him honor? What if the house should catch fire—the panic, the struggle for life—ah, he shuddered at the thought! Then, too, he thought of the property of that worthiest of men, the landlord—he rushed to consult him—and he now called upon him—there he was seated in the stage-box—to publicly state, for the satisfaction of the distinguished audience he saw before him, that he had forbidden the performance from considerations of safety. The landlord, a very nervous man, shrank to the back of his box, scared by every eye in the house being fixed upon him; but the audience, thankful for the terrible danger they had escaped, burst into thunders of applause.—Belgravia.

DUPLEX, A BARBARISM.—We are in danger of a new barbarism. The phrase "to duplex" an electric cable seems coming rapidly into use, —in the sense of to make it capable of doing double the work that it did before. But if that be the meaning, why not use the word "double" itself? "Duplex" means properly "twofold," and to propose "to twofold" anything is even less barbarous than to propose to "duplex" it, because it does not naturalize in English a genuinely Latin term. Perhaps it would be said that the word "double" would be misunderstood, and imply adding another cable of equal size. Well, then, a mistake might just as well be made with the Latin word, and can only be avoided in either the one case or the other, by explanations. Or why not say "to duplify," from the analogy of "simplify?" In any case, "to duplex" is etymological vandalism. Why are such liberties taken with Latin, and never with any living language? Who would venture to speak of "to marshal" an platonic cable? If "to duplex" is right, why not "to simplex" also? Why not say that Mr. Carlyle has "simplexed" his style, or the West End milliners have "simplexed" their fashions?—The Spectator.

IN MOGADOR.—Oh, for an artist's pencil and colors to depict the gorgeous costumes of the town Moors, the quaint wild garb of their country cousins; the gauzy cream-tinted haiks from Morocco, the rich silken caftans of purple, or crimson, or yellow, or green, or azure, or pink, sweetly half-veiled by a fold or two of snowy gauze thrown over them; the bright red fez caps, and voluminous snowy turbans of the patriarchal looking old man; the broad silken sashes from Fez, heavy and stiff with rich embroidery of gold, the great curved daggers in their richly-chased silver or brass sheaths, suspended amid the folds of the haik by thick woolen cords of gay colors; the handsome brown faces, the flashing black eyes, the wonderful white teeth, the sinewy brown bare legs, the brand-new yellow slippers of the merry Moors of Mogador! And the negroes, or, as old Fuller would quaintly have called them, "the images of God cut in ebony," how their honest black features glistened, and how their bright teeth grinned beneath turban or fez or gaudy handkerchief of many colors. The negro servant of one of the European residents, a good-humored giant of nearly seven feet, whom his master is wont to describe as "his nigger and a half," came stalking down among the little shops and stalls with a daunting bandanna round his head, a purple jacket, a most gorgeous sash, a pair of green baggy breeches, a glittering silver-sheathed dagger, and a most imposing haik thrown in toge-like folds over all. Negro women, unveiled, white-clad, adorned as to their shiny black arms with rude heavy bracelets of silver or brass, sat at street-corners with baskets of sweet cakes and little loaves for sale. Veiled Moorish women, perchance showing just one bright black eye to tantalize the beholder, glided along like substantial ghosts in the white raiment which enveloped them from their heads down to the little feet shod with red or yellow slippers embroidered with gold thread or bright-colored silks. Women leading tiny toddlers of children, little bright-eyed boys with crowns shaven all but one queer little tufted ridge in the middle, deftly curled this morning by mamma's loving fingers; foreheads adorned with quaint frontlets, from which hung curious ornaments of gold and coral and silver, spells against the evil eye, talismans, and what not.—London Society.

BACKGAMMON.—Clearly our English backgammon and the more complicated French tric-trac are descended from the Roman game of the "twelve lines," (duodecim scripta,) which was played throughout the Empire. This is the game which Ovid says has lines as many as the gliding year has months, and he means it where he gives the lover insidnous counsel, when his mistress casts the ivory numbers from her hand, let him give himself bad throws and play them ill. Among the Christian antiquities in Rome is a marble slab, on which a backgammon-table is cut, with a Greek cross in the middle, and a Greek inscription that Jesus Christ gives victory and help to dicers if they write his name when they throw the dice—Amen. Carelessly scratched as it is, by some stone-cutter whose faith went beyond his trictrac, it shows that the board was like ours even to the division in the middle, which makes the two groups of six points on each side. From ancient Rome, too, we inherit the habit of making the backgammon-board with a draught-board on the reverse side, at any rate the commentators so interpret Martial's epigram on the tabula lusoria:

"Hic mihi bis seno numeratur tessera puncto
Calculus hic gemino discolor hoste perit."

"Here, twice the die is counted to the point of six, Here, 'twixt twin foes of other hue, the draughts-man dies."

The very mode of playing the men in classic backgammon may be made from a fifth century A. D. epigram, commemorating a remarkable hit, in which the Emperor Zeno got his men so blocked, that having the ill-luck to throw 2, 5, 6, (they used three dice, as indeed we continued to do in the Middle Ages,) the only moves open obliged him to leave eight blots. This historic problem, and other matters of curious antiquarian interest, have been worked out by M. Becq de Fouquières, in his Jeux des Anciens, with a skill that would have rejoiced the hearts of those eminent amateurs, the old Count de Trictrac and the venerable Abbé du Cornet, to whose teaching history records that Miss Becky Sharp ascribed the proficiency at backgammon which made her society so agreeable to Sir Pitt at Queen's Crawley.—Macmillan's Magazine.

VOITURE.—Voiture, according to Voltaire, was the first man in France to whom the title of bel esprit was given, and yet his reputation was that of the shallowest letter-writer and concocter of poor sonnets that could be conceived. It raised him, however, to the Rambouillet circle, and thence to the important post of "Introducer of Ambassadors to Monsieur." What passed in him for wit, said the Duc de Montausier, was simply impertinence. Of course, however, through the exalted atmosphere of the tri-colored saloons of Rambouillet flashed the fires of jealousies and hatreds, upon purely reciprocal principles, and this may have been one of them. Tellemant des Réaux thought Voiture "really amusing when he was not in love." Still, that he could be insolent when provoked is indubitable. Somebody asked him whether he was not a lawyer, apologizing for the question by explaining that wager depended upon the answer. "Bet that you are a fool, Sir," he replied, "and you will never lose your money." He it was, too, who once stationed two tame bears as sentinels at the door of Mme. la Marquise's private room, and who woke up the Comte de Guiche at 2 in the morning with "M. le Comte, some time ago you asked me if I was married. I have decided to tell you the truth—I am married." It is shocking to think that such poor jokes passed for wit in that ethereal sphere.—The Athenæum.

CARBON PENCILS.—Among the manifold functions which the elementary substance carbon performs in organic nature, not the least important is that by which it becomes the great source of artificial illumination, whether derived from oils, coal-gas, or from coke rendered incandescent by the action of powerful electric currents. Since the time when Davy first produced the voltaic arc between two points of wood charcoal, through which was transmitted the current from the great battery of 2,000 plates belonging to the Royal Institution, many experiments have been made to determine the best kinds of carbon for developing the electric light. The carbon which, until recently, was most commonly employed for this purpose, is obtained from the sides of gas retorts, where it accumulates in the form of coke during the destructive distillation of coal. The shells of coke from the retort are sawn up into pencils from one quarter to half an inch square, and from six to nine inches in length. Although very good results are obtained from carbon of this kind, it is a difficult material to work on account of its hardness, and it sometimes contains impurities which interfere with its conductivity. It is also liable to fracture when suddenly heated by the transmission of powerful electric currents. The defects have led to the introduction in electric lighting of artificial carbon, composed of powdered coke and l

AMERICA'S FEW VESSELS.

THE CARRYING TRADE AND FOREIGN SHIPS.

WHY WE HAVE NO SHIPS—MR. JOHN ROACH'S OPINION—A LONG TALK WITH THE VETERAN SHIP-BUILDER—THE NAVIGATION LAWS DISCUSSED.

"The depressed condition of our carrying trade undoubtedly forms one of the vital questions of the time," said Mr. John Roach, the veteran ship builder and owner, to a TIMES reporter yesterday. "How to remedy that ill condition is a problem of far greater importance than is generally recognized. Its solution involves not only millions of dollars, but the growth and prosperity of this country, and must directly affect many thousands of working men in 20 branches of labor. It is not strange, therefore, that the attention of our legislators should be directed to the matter, but it is strange to me that they do not go deep into it, and strike the real cause of the depression. The fact that presents itself to every man interested in his country is that the carrying trade has grown to vast dimensions, and largely through the extended and constantly extending business of American merchants. But while we have immense quantities of freight to carry, very little of it is carried in our own ships. We pay enormous amounts of money to foreign ship-owners for the transporting of our merchandise. This is taking, and for many years past has been taking, all that money from our own country and placing it, with all its advantages, in the hands of our commercial rivals. Having this condition of affairs thrust upon his attention, the statesman asks at once why our merchants do not buy ships for themselves, and stop paying their money out of the country. As a student of our maritime history, he knows that formerly at least two-thirds of the carrying was done in American ships, by American merchants, who thus retained the profits of the business at home. He knows that while the business was so done, we were represented in all parts of the world by our own merchants. Scarcely a large mercantile house was there in New-York, Boston, or Philadelphia that was not represented in the countries where their ships traded. These representatives were the best kind of consuls, for they were in all the foreign ports, looking closely after the interests of our own products and watching for the best chances to secure return cargoes. What brought about so great a change that to-day we are dependent almost entirely upon foreign carriers? The suggestion is made that the trouble lies in our navigation laws. Repeal the navigation laws and all will be changed, say many people who are, perhaps, honest in their views. It is the burden of their cry, at least, that such repeal is all that is requisite to restore us to our old position on the ocean. It is a catching thing to say, Make the law read so that the American can go and buy where he can buy the cheapest.

"Let us see," continued Mr. Roach, warming to the subject, "whether the navigation laws so much talked about have caused the depression in the carrying trade, and what they actually have done for our shipping interests. To do this justly we must go back to their passage, and briefly review our maritime progress under them. These laws, as you know, are nearly as old as the Constitution of the United States. In 1782, after the long and bloody war by which we had obtained the right to govern ourselves, our whole territory nearly was a wilderness; we had a bankrupt Treasury, and no credit abroad. Our money was known as the Continental money, and became so little esteemed financially that from it grew the epithet applied to everything peculiarly worthless, "not worth a Continental." Steam was not known to us, our roads were pathways through the forests, and the principal means of transportation was ships. The wise men of that day lay came together to devise laws by which the new nation might start into life. Among their acts were the navigation laws, which prohibited ships not the product of our own labor and soil from carrying the American flag, and provided that our ships should be manned by at least two-thirds of our own citizens. Under this declaration we started out to become a commercial nation, to build our own ships, to rely upon ourselves. The ship-builders of that day had nothing but the forests before them, and much of the capital required to pay for the labor of construction was in the form of a bushel of corn or bag of flour. There was not even a manufactory that could make the auger, the saw, the square, or any one of the tools needed for the builder's work. That was a poor beginning, assuredly. Yet, under those laws we made such progress in placing ships upon the ocean that the mother country grew jealous, and the war of 1.12 was nothing but a war of jealousy upon the commercial growth of a young country. The prophetic wisdom of the men who framed the navigation laws was proved during that war. For in the short space of time between the passage of the law in 1789 and the war, had educated men, both as builders and seamen, to the extent that we were able to more than hold our own on the ocean. Where would we have been then had we been dependent, as we are now, upon a foreign power for our ships? The result of that war through our ability to build and man our own ships, I regard as one of the proudest events in our history.

"After 1814 we were again poor, but had some experience as shipbuilders, seamen, and merchants. We made such a strides between 1814 and 1825 that there was hardly a port of the world where the American flag was not found, and it was generally conceded that American ships were the best and manned than any others afloat. Up to this time had not the navigation laws served the country well? And who was it then that could wish for their repeal?

"From 1825 to 1833 we sold to foreign nations over $25,000,000 worth of ships, and brought the gold to our own country. From 1833 to 1837, by the superior skill of our ship-builders, and by which our Republic became the second greatest carrying nation of the world, and stood abreast even with Great Britain. As early as 1840 our clipper ships were monopolizing the trade, and the mail service with Europe was principally done in American bottoms. That was progress in 50 years, with a beginning so poor as disclosed above. While the wooden ship was the ship of the day, the abundance of timber in this country enabled the American builder to undersell his English competitor. The latter had to transport his timber 3,000 miles before he could place it in the hands of his workmen. When England saw that she would not, for this reason, longer build our own ships, and that the prospect was blank, she then repealed her navigation laws. And as long as we could build ships more cheaply we were rapidly gaining on her in the carrying trade. For the nation that can build and man ships most cheaply is certain to become the great carrying nation of the world. Finding that her business in wooden ships was gone, the statesmen of England turned their attention to a new material. It was necessary that something be done to retain their supremacy on the ocean. This necessity led to the development of their iron interests, and the use of iron in ships—a use that was to cause a revolution in the carrying trade, at this period of the year of the rebellion, began. How this brought to England the opportunity to supplant us as a common carrier, and reduced our maritime position to its lowest grade, is important as bearing directly on the present depression.

"When the rebellion began we had an immense coast line to protect, and a small Navy to protect it. For its own preservation the Government purchased nearly two-thirds of the whole tonnage of our merchant marine, and converted it into war ships and transports for the purposes of war. This brought the capitalists that had been interested in the carrying trade back into the hands of the ship-owners. The great demand for capital, which arose as a consequence of the war, and the general extension of manufacture and business, held these owners to put their money into new channels of trade. Thus both merchants and ship-owners withdrew from the ocean, and their partners and representatives came home from foreign ports. Between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000 of money were so withdrawn from the shipping interest. Meanwhile, England was making steady advances in the construction of iron ships, and was adding to her commercial supremacy other. With her ever-cherished desire to monopolize the carrying industry of the world, she saw that the occasion had come to distance her only formidable rival, and eagerly seized the opportunity to take possession of the trade that had hitherto been ours.

"Up to this time the only ship known in this country was the wooden ship, and little progress had been made in its building for some years. Now came the revolution, with regard to the ship. The side-wheel steamer gave place to the screw, the wooden ship to the iron, the ordinary engine to the compound. In that day, with the motive power that existed, the celebrated ship Scotia, could consume 110 tons of coal a day, and the Collins' ships consumed 100 tons a day, while the large amount of space required for the machinery and coal left little room for freight—say, only 700 or 800 tons of cargo. Ships of the same size to-day, with the effective power, taking up much less room, will carry three times the amount of cargo, with one-half the amount of coal. Every ton of coal saved is, of course, a ton of freight gained, aside from the cost of the coal. During our rebellion, then, while we were engaged in the struggle for the nation's life, and while all our mechanical facilities were employed to sustain the Government, England got the carrying trade into her hands, besides having the advantage of all the improvements in ships. These improvements were far advanced when the war ceased.

"When the old American merchants who had been ship-owners turned their attention again to the shipping interests, and examined to see what could be done to re-establish American carriers on the seas, it was found that the great revolution on the ocean was similar to that on the land. The railroads had disposed of the turnpike and mule-teams, and the enormous amount of concentrated capital required to establish our railroads had largely absorbed the capital of the country. England had availed herself of the opportunity to establish large steam-ship lines, which acquired likewise an enormous amount of concentrated capital. The manner in which the carrying trade was formerly performed had been supplanted thus by iron steam ships, and to compete with the great lines already formed, many millions of dollars of capital were demanded. In fact, moreover, there was then no room for more ships. There were already more ships on the North Atlantic than were required, and England has as full possession of it as we have of one or two of our lakes. Besides, we found that we had not the facilities in our Navy to construct the iron ship. Not a ship-yard in the United States could at that time build an iron vessel for the thing like the price our merchants could afford to pay. Consider this fact as an illustration of the necessarily high cost of ship-building. During the war there was a local tax upon the construction of an engine for a ship equal to 3 per cent. upon its cost, which was paid to the Government as a war tax. On the other material and labor there were similar taxes, so that it is plain why we ceased to build ships then. For monetary reasons, too, it was impossible for our merchants to establish a ship line in competition with European owners. Suppose it cost $5,000,000 to equip a line of steamers to ply between New-York and Liverpool. Few our merchants would have been under the necessity of exchanging some $10,000,000 of their greenbacks for the required $5,000,000 in gold, as the premium was then certainly as high as that. The American merchant who had faith in his country felt assured that his $10,000,000 in greenbacks would at no distant day be made worth their face value in gold, and he was not foolish enough to give his money away for half that value so long as he could invest it in Government bonds. There was no chance for fair competition. Even after buying a ship, the high price of American labor, of produce, and of all necessary equipment, made it impossible for him to run it.

"For all these things the navigation laws were in nowise responsible. The pressure that was brought to bear upon Congress to repeal the navigation laws, and brought in the name of American merchants, was consequently a libel upon those merchants, who never wanted to buy ships on any such conditions as were set forth. This pressure came from the English interest, and its object was to cripple us in the future. By securing the bulk of the carrying trade England made herself the workshop of the world, and all merchants were dependent upon her for their carrying tools. Is it not a shame that the whole world should depend upon one nation? if for any reason that nation should suddenly refuse to carry our products, what position would this country be placed in? Not to know how vital this power and profit of her position to leave room for rivalry, so far as she could prevent it. She knew also that we had the same facilities in herself for building ships, and even superior facilities in the abundance of wood, of which an iron ship is so largely composed. Iron and coal were as readily placed in our yards. Other than fair efforts were necessary, therefore, to prevent us from again competing with her on the seas.

"It is now thought or professed by many persons that the navigation laws are responsible for what I have shown to be independent of them in regard to the depression of our shipping interests. Let these persons consider further the fact that in 1863-4-5, and up to the present, the difference between the cost of ships here and on the other side the water was regulated by the premium on gold as fixed by the mercury in the gauge is by the change of temperature.

"There are four classes of ships now engaged in the carrying trade of the world. The wooden sailing-ship is built to-day for less than before the war. It can be built here 25 per cent. cheaper than in England. The iron sailing-ship can be built here as cheaply as in England. The steam freighting ship, without accommodations for passengers, with slow speed, can be built at a difference of not more than 5 per cent. The fast passenger steam-ship, fitted up with all the appointments of a great hotel, embracing the productions of 20 different branches of business and mechanism—when it comes to putting in the furniture, carpets, cutlery, &c., articles upon nearly all of which Government places a tax—these we cannot build as cheaply as the English free trader. But if you repeal the navigation laws, and let the foreign steam-ships come in duty free, surely you might as well abolish the revenue on all these articles and give our builders an equal chance. To let these vessels in free would also afford a fine opportunity for smuggling.

"The advocates of repeal will answer that they will let American builders have the raw material free of tax. To show the folly of this argument, take a ton of pig-iron worth $16. That we can have free. But this pig-iron has to be worked up to the value of $280 a ton before it can be put into a steamer engine. What would the getting of the raw material at a dollar or two less a ton amount to in proportion to the value when worked up? Take cutlery. Suppose the Government should remove the duty on all cutlery, allowing the English cutlery to come into this market free, on the ground that our manufacturers got their raw material free. The same reasoning will apply to all other articles. We cannot make cutlery as cheaply as they can in England, and, of course, the raw material discount would go for nothing in a product which has yielded 95 per cent. to labor.

"We hear frequently of the great monopoly that the ship-builders of this country have, because foreign ships are not allowed an American register. Now," said Mr. Roach, smiling, "from Philadelphia to the breakwater on the Delaware is 100 miles, with the mountains behind teeming with coal and forests of wood, with superior advantages to any country in the world for the construction of iron ships. For we have forests growing, and mines of iron bank, as England has not. Of this 100 miles of water-front, less than one mile is occupied. There cannot be much monopoly while there are the other 99 miles for anybody who chooses to occupy them. I freely say that this is a larger question than one of individuals. If the carrying trade could be recovered to this country by the wiping out of this mile of shipyards, why, then, there existence. Let it not be so well considered, however, whether the navigation laws are what stand in the way. Hasty legislation will never build up the interests of this or any country.

"England has invested in ships, ship-yards, rolling mills, and other facilities connected with ship-building, over $2,000,000,000. Let any statesman consider whether she would be the owner of such a Navy if she had been obliged to purchase her ships from other nations instead of developing her own resources and supporting her own working men through their construction. The great benefits of ship-building to the mechanical arts of the country are also very not generally appreciated. The coal and iron in the mine and the wood of the forest are all God gives us toward building a ship. The miner begins with his work, the woodman with his axe, and the operations beginnings the work is carried on. Ninety-five per cent. of the whole cost of the ship is paid to labor, divided between the railroads and 20 branches of mechanism. Nine per cent. of $2,000,000,000 is an important item to the Englishman or American.

"Our own people are now again ambitious to get on the ocean. To occupy our former position and control our proper proportion of the carrying trade, we want to expend at least $100,000,000. Shall we send that vast amount of money out of the country, when we possess greater advantages of building than our rivals, and while thousands of working men are suffering for want of work? Or shall we inquire how we may remedy the difficulty without sending the money to other lands, and robbing our laborers of their just wages? Are the persons who seek the repeal of the navigation laws honest in motive, and do they understand the subject? Why do not these persons tell Congress that if half a dozen gentlemen here incorporate themselves into a steam-ship company, the tax upon their property is the same as upon a house and lot—3 per cent.—and that if their ships were tied to the dock the taxes would be the same; while in England the ship is taxed 1 per cent. on the net earnings, against 3 per cent. here on the whole value? Why not advocate that the American ships be allowed, the same as those of England, to take their stores out of bond? Why not ask for a repeal of the law that keeps hundreds of capitalists from taking shares in a ship, the law making the owner of one-eighth of an interest responsible for the whole of any loss that may occur, whereas the English shareholder is accountable only for his own shares? There are many other obstructions like these, which are not looked after at all.

"It is not the difference in cost between ships here and in England that keeps us from becoming the owners of ships. It is because our Government has never pursued a policy which will give us use for ships. The introduction of the iron and the telegraph wrought a revolution in the carrying trade. England at once took hold of these agencies and converted them to her own use on the sea, while we used them only on the land. Rapid mail communication has always stimulated trade. There is no part of the civilized world in which England could hope to build up trade where she has not encouraged her merchants to establish rapid mail communication, through steam-ships of a superior class. To stimulate ship-building, she gave up the Government ship-yards, and had private corporations build her ships. Thus by strict attention to the principle of furthering her commercial interests, she has built up a trade with fast steamers until she has been able to reduce her mail contracts to a small amount. With regard to our foreign trade we have entirely neglected that. The time has now come when we demand a foreign market for our productions to an extent that would have seemed incredible a score of years ago. Shall we continue to depend on England to carry our exports, or shall we build ships for carrying steam-ships, send our merchandise, breadstuffs, and manufactures to all parts of the world in American bottoms, and thus keep our gold at home, and furnish employment and subsistence to our own people? That is, in my opinion, a vital question of the day."

TWO BURGLARS ARRESTED.

Between 8 and 9 o'clock on Friday night, burglars were discovered in the premises No. 112 Chambers-street, occupied by Rutter & Barton, dealers in fire-arms. Officer Alberts, of the Fifth Precinct, arrested a young man named James Walsh just as he was making his escape from the coal-hole in the sidewalk. Capt. Aiken, hearing of the matter, hurried to the scene with two officers, and, going down into the cellar, found a young fellow concealed in a corner. On being taken to the station-house, the latter gave his name as William Lyon. The burglars had three india-rubber bags filled with pistols ready to take away. Walsh and Lyon were brought before Justice Otterburg yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, and were each held in $2,000 bail.

A NEW TEACHERS' SOCIETY.

The New-York Education Society, which was organized in 1875 as a club for teachers in public, private, and parochial schools, held its first public meeting last evening, at the apartments of Mrs. Anna Randall-Diehl, No. 35 Union-square. The meeting was devoted to a discussion of the question as to the relative merits of school journals, and the practicability of religious instruction being combined with general teaching. The meetings of the society are held on the evening of the first Saturday in every month. The Catholic interest predominates in the new society, but teachers of every denomination are admissible to membership.

THE EXCISE LAW EVADED.

COMMISSIONERS HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

THEIR CONDUCT DESCRIBED AS WILLFUL DISREGARD OF LAW OR GROSS NEGLIGENCE—THAT HOTEL LICENSE TO BYRNE & WHITE—JUSTICE KILBRETH'S DECISION.

Excise Commissioners Richard J. Morrison and Philip Merkle were complained of by the Society for the Prevention of Crime for having illegally granted Hotel-keeper's license to Edward F. Byrne and Edward White on April 16, 1878, authorizing them to sell liquors at No. 19 West Houston-street. Police Justice Kilbreth, before whom the complaint was made, read his decision at the Essex Market Court yesterday. The accused Commissioners, their counsel, J. K. Whitney, and ex-Excise Commissioner Morton were present. That the accused officials were not oversanguine as to the result was apparent from the fact that they came fully prepared to furnish bonds. The facts of the case as disclosed by the decision of the Justice are as follows:

"It was conceded upon the examination or established by competent, uncontradicted testimony that Byrne and White have for nearly three years past occupied the first floor of No. 19 West Houston-street as a hotel since 6 in September, 1877, they filed with the Board of Excise an application to sell liquors as hotel-keepers, which, having already on two occasions—the latter one on late as Feb. 20, 1878—been reported upon unfavorably by two inspectors of the board, was on April 16, 1878, for the third time referred to another inspector, and on his favorable report the license was issued on the following day. Now at the time the license was granted 19 similar licenses to keepers of hotels within two or three blocks of the premises, and 998 similar licenses to keepers of hotels in the City, had been issued, and were in force; that the Commissioners had no information, and made no effort to obtain any, that a hotel was required for the actual accommodation of travelers in the place; that the applicants occupied only the controlled only the first floor, used as a bar-room, and the rear part of the second floor recently acquired, the basement being a restaurant kept by one Cuzin, a no licensed to sell ale and beer, and the remainder of the premises being used as work-shops; that apart from the bar-room there were no accommodations for travelers except three beds and bedding, a washstand, a table, with a dozen plates, and a cooking stove, with one or two pots for cooking purposes, all originally contained in one room, which was afterward subdivided upon the suggestion of one of the Commissioners, and each bed placed in a separate room, 5 by 7 feet in dimensions; that the rooms or rooms mentioned had never been used by the applicants or by any person with their knowledge or consent for sleeping or any purposes except for storage; that there was no communication by gas or gas-jet between the bar-room and these bedrooms except by passing out upon and over the sidewalk and the same as to the restaurant kept by Cuzin in the basement; that there were no servants or employes except Byrne, who usually came at 7 o'clock in the morning and left when his employers were ready to let him go; that there was a hotel sign, a book called a register, but containing no entries, and a copy of laws in the rooms; that the Police Captain of the precinct in which the premises are situated protested in person to one of the Commissioners against granting the license, for the reason that the applicants kept the place as a resort for thieves and prostitutes, the substance of which protest was, before the license issued, brought to the notice of the other Commissioner, and was the subject of mutual comment; that gave no further attention to this protest; that they neither possessed nor sought any information, so far as appears, as to the good moral character of White; that the only information they possessed favorable to the moral character of Byrne was derived exclusively from a few persons who were solicitous for the granting of the license, and were, with one exception, so far as appears, personally unknown to the Commissioners, and had the most limited means of knowledge of Byrne's character, his place of business, or his associates; that this person thus relied on was one of the applicant's bondsmen, and had been active in securing similar licenses for six or seven other persons from the same Commissioners within a short time; that Byrne was at the same time under three indictments for selling liquor without a license, upon all of which conviction subsequently ensued.

"Testimony was also given by the complainant, an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, and so known to the Commissioners, that he protested to them against granting the license, and filed his written protest with their Chief Clerk. This is denied by both of the Commissioners, who further say that they have been unable by searching to find such protest on the files of the office. The Chief Clerk as a witness, did not deny the fact of such filing. The Commissioners presented a copy of a resolution which, they forwarded to the Board of Police, asking a report upon the character of all places in the City where strong liquor and beer is usually sold, and which was returned to them by the Board of Police, with the suggestion that the Board of Excise had inspectors of their own to furnish such reports. The Commissioners have answered that since the resolution was forwarded some three weeks before the license was granted, and the protest of the Police Captain gave to the Commissioners the desired information in particulars in this place. Further evidence was offered to show that the charges made by the Captain against the character of the place were not true, and that in making them he was influenced by feelings of hostility and unfriendliness toward Byrne. The latter testifies, however, that the Captain, previous to any trouble between them, gave notice of his purpose to prevent him from obtaining a license, and after making due allowance for the charges and the counter-charges and for knowledge of the several witnesses, I feel constrained to acquiesce in the propriety of the protest.

"Commissioner Merkle states that he regarded 998 hotels as a very small number for the City of New-York, and for that reason did not make any inquiries as to the necessity for a hotel at the place. Commissioner Morrison states that on the occasion of a personal inspection which he made of the premises—a very hasty and superficial one—he told Byrne that, 'for the sake of decency and appearances' sake, he should place his room in a better condition,' and did quite afterward inquire whether his suggestion had been complied with; that Byrne afterward came to the office and said he hoped he had complied with the law, and was ready for inspection, and that he [Morrison] therefore sent another inspector, who reported favorably.

"It is clear beyond all reasonable doubt that the applicants did not propose to keep a hotel in the legal intendment of the term. The place kept by them is not the kind of hotel contemplated by the statute. To call it so would be a perversion of terms. It is a pretence and a sham, of which some suspicion was evidently entertained by one of the Commissioners. Assuredly such license should not have been granted under the law as it now exists, and the responsibility for the manifest violation or evasion of the law must rest entirely with the Commissioners. It cannot regard their action in any light than the result of a willful and intentional disregard of the provisions of the statute or of gross negligence. The evidence forces me to the conclusion that there is probable cause to believe the accused guilty of the offense charged. I therefore direct that they each enter into a recognizance with surety in the sum of $1,000 to answer to any indictment of the Grand Jury."

Mr. Michael P. Breslin, of No. 114 East Seventieth-street, immediately furnished the necessary bail, after which the accused Commissioners left the court-room together. Mr. Morrison, when spoken to by a TIMES reporter, expressed the opinion that the Grand Jury would not indict them on the charge submitted. He was perfectly satisfied that he and his colleague had not exceeded their duty or violated the law in granting the license.

THE STABBING OF JOHN M'KNIGHT.

Sergt. Russell and Officer Hickey, both of the Twenty-eighth Precinct, were examined before Justice Kasmire, at the Fifty-seventh-Street Police Court, yesterday, in the case of the stabbing of John McKnight by John Clifford, in Fifty-fifth-street, on the morning of New Year's Day, and the subsequent shooting of Clifford by Officer Hickey while the latter was attempting to arrest him. Both the wounded men are at Roosevelt Hospital, and McKnight is believed to be critically ill. Clifford's life is still in danger. The evidence of the officers corroborated the facts in the case as already published in THE TIMES, and the hearing was adjourned to await the result of the wounded men. Thus by strict attention to the principle of furthering her commercial interests, she has built up a trade with fast steamers until she has been able to reduce her mail contracts to a small amount. With regard to our foreign trade we have entirely neglected that. The time has now come when we demand a foreign market for our productions to an extent that would have seemed incredible a score of years ago. Shall we continue to depend on England to carry our exports, or shall we build ships for carrying steam-ships, send our merchandise, breadstuffs, and manufactures to all parts of the world in American bottoms, and thus keep our gold at home, and furnish employment and subsistence to our own people? That is, in my opinion, a vital question of the day."

TWO BURGLARS ARRESTED.

Between 8 and 9 o'clock on Friday night, burglars were discovered in the premises No. 112 Chambers-street, occupied by Rutter & Barton, dealers in fire-arms. Officer Alberts, of the Fifth Precinct, arrested a young man named James Walsh just as he was making his escape from the coal-hole in the sidewalk. Capt. Aiken, hearing of the matter, hurried to the scene with two officers, and, going down into the cellar, found a young fellow concealed in a corner. On being taken to the station-house, the latter gave his name as William Lyon. The burglars had three india-rubber bags filled with pistols ready to take away. Walsh and Lyon were brought before Justice Otterburg yesterday, in the Tombs Police Court, and were each held in $2,000 bail.

A NEW TEACHERS' SOCIETY.

The New-York Education Society, which was organized in 1875 as a club for teachers in public, private, and parochial schools, held its first public meeting last evening, at the apartments of Mrs. Anna Randall-Diehl, No. 35 Union-square. The meeting was devoted to a discussion of the question as to the relative merits of school journals, and the practicability of religious instruction being combined with general teaching. The meetings of the society are held on the evening of the first Saturday in every month. The Catholic interest predominates in the new society, but teachers of every denomination are admissible to membership.

City. Mrs. Thompson subsequently adopted her from that institution. Last Summer Lena was away from her guardian, and stated that Mrs. Thompson's cruelty had driven her away. This fact coming to the notice of the Guardian Society, they had Lena Miller taken before Judge Knapp on habeas corpus, and asked that she be remanded to their custody. The society set up, in addition to the charges of cruelty, that Mrs. Thompson is not a woman of such moral character that she ought so be permitted to act as guardian over the child. During Judge Knapp's investigations it became known that Mrs. Thompson had, after taking the child, induced the Orphans' Court to grant her letters of guardianship over her ward. Application was made for the vacation of the letters. Judge Knapp has not yet rendered his decision.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The Italian Mint has just produced a new 5-franc piece with the head of King Humbert.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies has passed a bill for the amelioration of the Roman Campagna.

A London paper relates how Major Whyte-Melville's father, "by a strange coincidence, met his death in the same way" as his son. The fact is that Mr. Whyte-Melville, the father, is still alive.

The armor plates for the huge Italian man-of-war Duilio are supplied by the iron-works at Le Creusot, France. There are 60 plates, weighing 30 tons each, besides about 800 of interior sheathing, exclusive of a deck-covering three inches thick.

An enterprising youth in Germany has discovered a novel mode of swindling. He was about to marry a worthy young lady at Baden, and her father having full confidence in his proposed son-in-law, imprudently paid over to him the dower of 120,000 francs on the day before the ceremony was to take place. The youth made off with the money, but was arrested at Strasburg, and will doubtless lose wife as well as fortune.

An idea of the value of ground for building in Paris may be formed from some recent sales of plots left clear by the removal of houses for extending the new Boulevard St. Germain: Three hundred and four square metres at the Carrefour de l'Odeon, put up at 300 francs per metre, sold for 420 francs; another lot of 567 metres, offered at 250 francs, brought 350 francs the metre; and a piece of 304 square metres, at the angle of the Rue du Bac and the Boulevard St. Germain, put up at 500 francs per metre, was sold for 750 francs. A square metre is about 10¾ square feet, and the last-named price is nearly equivalent to $14 per square foot.

Says Galignani's Messenger: "An American journalist, Mr. Mandl, recently asked permission from the Prefect of Police at Berlin, M. De Madai, to give a series of lectures on emigration, more particularly with the intention of pointing out the advantages which the United States possess as an outlet where the overcrowded inhabitants of European nations might find free scope, and where honest industry would be amply rewarded. Although he gave a pledge that political and Socialistic topics would be rigorously excluded from his course of lectures, yet permission for the latter was refused him; not so much because the glimpses of Western life might prove so attractive that the laboring population would be tempted to leave Germany, but because fears were entertained that the more wealthy classes might also be induced to quit it, influenced by visions of greater freedom and more fertile sources of profit for the capitalist."

TEN MILLIONS OF BONDS CALLED IN.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Acting Secretary of the Treasury this afternoon issued the seventy-seventh call for the redemption of 5-20 bonds of 1865, consols of 1867. The call is for $10,000,000, of which $6,000,000 are coupon and $4,000,000 registered bonds. The principal and interest will be paid at the Treasury on and after April 4, and the interest will cease on that day. Following are descriptions of the coupon bonds, dated July 1, 1867:

$50, No. 5,001 to No. 10,000, both inclusive.
$100, No. 5,001 to No. 10,000, both inclusive.
$500, No. 6,001 to No. 11,000, both inclusive.
$1,000, No. 6,001 to No. 12,000, both inclusive.

Registered bonds, "redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after the 1st day July, 1872," as follows:

$50, No. 183 to No. 400, both inclusive.
$100, No. 1,501 to No. 2,800, both inclusive.
$500, No. 1,951 to No. 2,000, both inclusive.
$1,0 0, No. 3,701 to No. 7,0 0, both inclusive.
$5,000, No. 1,151 to No. 2,000, both inclusive.
$10,000, No. 1,001 to No. 2,000, both inclusive.

THE TREASURER'S WEEKLY REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The Treasury now holds $348,988,000 in United States bonds to secure bank circulation, and $13,637,300 in United States bonds to secure public deposits; United States bonds deposited on account of subscription to the 4 per cent. loan, in addition to coin deposit, $4,732,700; United States bonds deposited for circulation for the week ending to-day, $622,650; United States bonds held for circulation withdrawn during the week ending to-day, $527,650. National bank circulation outstanding—Currency notes, $322,379,699: gold notes, $1,488,920. The internal revenue receipts for the week were $453,832 23, and the Customs receipts $372,398 94. The receipts of national bank notes for redemption for the week ending to-day, as compared with the corresponding period last year, are as follows:

	1878.	1879.
New-York	$876,000	$262,000
Boston	1,530,000	1,238,000
Philadelphia	185,000	50,000
Miscellaneous	749,000	426,000
Total	$3,142,000	$1,976,000

Receipts to-day, $267,000.

IN ARREARS FOR ALIMONY.

Mrs. Anna Marsh obtained, some years since, a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, William G. Marsh, and he was directed to pay her $10 a week alimony. The defendant was forbidden to marry during her lifetime. He paid the alimony for a time, and then ceased further payments. Yesterday morning a motion was made before Judge Donohue, in Supreme Court, chambers, for an attachment against Mr. Marsh for contempt of court in not paying the alimony. Mrs. Marsh's counsel showed that the arrears amounted to $500, and that Mr. Marsh told the plaintiff that no one could compel him to pay a cent. It was also stated that the defendant had, since the decree was declared against him, remarried in New-Jersey. Mr. Marsh's counsel contended that the defendant had a perfect right to remarry in the State of New-Jersey, but was, however, unable to pay the alimony, and this proceeding on the part of his former wife was prompted by vindictive feelings, owing to his second marriage. The plaintiff's counsel urged that after final decree the defendant could not be attached for non-payment of alimony or for contempt, and that the plaintiff's only remedy was by execution against the defendant's property. The court reserved its decision.

KINGS COUNTY SURROGATE'S COURT.

The following is a record of the business transacted in the Kings County Surrogate's Court, before Hon. Abram H. Dailey, Surrogate, during the past week:

Wills Proved—Thomas Garrison, of the town of Flatlands; Timothy Nostrand, of the town of New-Utrecht; Jane Fagan, Gilbert S. Davis, John E. H. Hanber, Samuel M. Pook, Caroline Bandal, Caroline Aubmitted. He was perfectly satisfied that he and his colleague had not exceeded their duty or violated the law in granting the license.

Letters of administration were granted on the estates of the following named deceased persons, viz: Ambrose Platt, of the town of New-Utrecht; Thomas Garrison, of the town of Flatlands; Mary P. Ely, Henry G. Ely, Alice Rogers, Adelbert Minderman, formerly Ada held Hoops Jesse Hochstuhl, Edgar O. Lowe, Joseph C. Morris, Mary Dohling, and Mary A. Dutton, all of the City of Brooklyn.

MASONIC ELECTIONS.

The following are the officers elected in Republic Lodge, No. 690, F. and A. M., for 1879: G. B. Stinson, W. M.; J. M. Amory, S. W.; G. E. Payne, J. W.; B. Brown, Treasurer; J. W. Stopford, Secretary; T. F. Secor, Trustee; J. S. Fawand, Jr., Marshal; Rev. N. W. Conkling, Chaplain; W. H. Chamberith, S. D.; W. D. Garrison, J. D.; E. G. Goss, S. M. of C.; W. A. Gunnison, J. M. of C.; G. D. Megan and H. Freech, Stewards; R. Clarke, organist; and William Smith, Tiler.

Pacific Lodge, No. 233, F. and A. M., has elected the following officers for 1879: William A. Mercer, M.; Horace Forbush, S. W.; Henry Schmidt, J. W.; Robert Betty, Treasurer; James Hyde, Secretary; R. W. Isaac Teichman, Chaplain; Andrew P. Heyman, Marshal; Ephraim Jacobs, S. D.; Ferdinand J. Lechner, J. D.; R. W. Isaac B. Conover, S. M. C.; W. John Fullman, J. M. C.; Joseph Nordenshild and William B. Farley, Stewards; Richard Horner, organist; Cornelius Torrey, Tiler; W. Charles B. Cornell, R. W. Isaac B. Conover, and Robert Ellis, Trustees.

A CARD FROM ANNA DICKINSON.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

So many people want to know what Anna Dickinson purposes doing, and so many unauthorized and contradictory reports have been put in circulation, that I must beg space in your paper to give a general answer, and to do it over my own name.

That I have not been at work for the last year is solely in consequence of ill health. I propose, in answer to almost innumerable requests, to talk about the platform and the stage from the platform, and later in the season to do what I can upon the stage in a new piece of my own writing, and in an engagement already made. May I add that I hope my old friends will be half as glad to see me as I shall be to meet them, and that I wish one and all a happy New Year. ANNA E. DICKINSON.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Jan. 2, 1879.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—Benjamin Green was arrested to-day for forging the name of Lieut. Webster, of the regular Army, for a pay account of $300, which he endeavored to get cashed by Paymaster Dewey of this city.

CRITICISING UNION PACIFIC.

ITS SHORTCOMINGS AND ITS GOOD WORK POINTED OUT.

REPORT OF THE GOVERNMENT BOARD OF DIRECTORS—A HIGH STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE SET UP—A POLICY FOR THE PRESENT AND NOT FOR THE FUTURE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Charles Francis Adams, Jr., Daniel Chadwick, George B. Smyth, Ralph P. Buckland, and Charles C. Hosmer, the Government Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad, commenced their report to the Secretary of the Interior by remarking that they were all appointed, with the exception of Mr. Chadwick, within the present year, had no previous knowledge of the affairs of the corporation, and only general information as to its relations with the Government, and that under these circumstances it was fortunate that soon afterward two laws were enacted by Congress which greatly simplified their work. By one of these acts, they continue, the annual payments, allowances, &c., to be made to the Government by the Union Pacific were fixed, while by the other a new bureau was established, in connection with the Department of the Interior, for auditing the accounts of that company, among others. These two measures of legislation effectually relieved the present Government Directors from further considering many subjects which had engaged the attention of their predecessors. For the immediate time being, and, at least pending the action of the courts in cases arising out of the operation of the acts referred to, and which are now, it is understood, ready for decision, the financial relations of the Government and the Union Pacific must be considered as definitely settled. This subject, therefore, calls for no further discussion.

As respects, also, the condition of the company's finances, its resources, and the disposition made of them, the Government has its own auditor, and is in immediate possession of all the facts and statistics which it would be in the power of Government Directors to furnish. Neither have the present Directors thought it incumbent upon them to further investigate questions of the past connected with the construction of the Union Pacific Road or its earlier operations. They have deemed, on the contrary, that they would best subserve the purpose of their appointment by strictly confining their attentions to questions of the present, giving the department such information as they might be able to procure relating to the existing condition of the property and the policy now pursued by the direction in the management of the company's affairs.

The usual yearly inspection of the road was made in September and October last. All of the members of the board took part in it with the exception of Mr. Chadwick, who was prevented from so doing by business engagements. He therefore does not join in that portion of the report derived from personal observation of the property or its management on the spot. Both locally on the line and in the general offices of the corporation at New-York and Boston, every facility has been afforded the Directors toward obtaining whatever information they may have desired. No disposition to withhold or conceal has at any time been apparent; on the contrary, from the beginning the fullest investigation seemed rather to be courted. While more than once the feeling has been openly expressed that justice has not been done either to the actions or intentions of those now responsible for the management of the company's affairs, a public inquiry, at once impartial and intelligent, could result, it was claimed, only to its advantage. So far as the inquiries of the present Government Directors have gone, they relate, of a general character, and have related solely to the two subjects already referred to—the material condition of the property and the business policy of those managing it. In respect to these, the inquiry has necessarily been full and especial. The conclusions arrived at, so far as they go, are in many respects quite different from what the Directors anticipated when the inquiry was begun. Such as they are, however, they are herein embodied.

A HIGH STANDARD NECESSARY.

In passing upon the material condition of the Union Pacific Road, the first point to be determined, the Directors say, is the standard by which it shall be judged—whether by that in use on the Eastern trunk lines or by that in use on the best roads of the Mississippi Valley. As a less severe standard is what is usually applied to the newer roads west of the Missouri. In view of the facts connected with its organization and construction, it seems manifestly that the Union Pacific should be judged by the most severe standards known among the railroads of the country. No good reason is apparent why it should not be held strictly to this test, or why its owners and officers should object to it. As is matter of common knowledge, the road was practically built out of the public money, and the stock which now represents its ownership represents little besides the enterprise and energy which the original projectors put into their undertaking. The corporation, on the other hand, received from the Government an indorsement of unprecedented liberality. The road was designed to be a great national monument of munificent public liberality and of private enterprise. Under these circumstances, those representing the Government in the conduct of its affairs would clearly not be justified if they failed to apply to it the most any standards short of the highest known to the railroad system of the country. Especially would this be so, when, as in this case, the road as a commercial enterpr

JAN 1879

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Eleventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Eighth Page—7th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Eleventh Page—5th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Eighth Page—7th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
CITY ITEMS—Seventh Page—6th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Eleventh Page—6th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Eleventh Page—6th col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Eleventh Page—4 col.
COUNTRY HOUSES TO LET—Eleventh Page—6th col
DANCING—Eleventh Page—7th col.
DEATHS—Seventh Page—6th col.
DIVIDENDS—Eleventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
DRY GOODS—Eleventh Page—1st col.
ELECTIONS—Eleventh Page—4th col.
EUROPEAN—Eleventh Page—6th col.
FINANCIAL—Eleventh Page—3d col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Eleventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Eighth Page—7th col.
HOUSES &ROOMS WANTED—Eleventh Page—6th col
ICE-CREAM—Eleventh Page—6th col.
INSTRUCTION—Eleventh Page—7th col.
INSURANCE—Eleventh Page—2d col.
MARRIAGES—Seventh Page—6th col.
MILLINERY—Eleventh Page—1st col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Eighth Page—7th col.
MUSICAL—Eleventh Page—7th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Seventh Page—7th col.
PERSONAL—Eleventh Page—2d col.
PROPOSALS—Eleventh Page—4th col.
RAILROADS—Eleventh Page——1st and 2d cols.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Seventh Page—7th col.
SAVINGS BANKS—Eleventh Page—4th col.
SHIPPING—Eleventh Page—2d col.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Eighth Page—7th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
STATIONERY—Eighth Page—7th col.
STEAM-BOATS—Eleventh Page—2d col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Eleventh Page—6th col.
TEACHERS—Eleventh Page—7th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Eleventh Page—2d col.

The New-York Times.

TRIPLE SHEET.

NEW-YORK, SUNDAY, JAN. 5, 1879.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

THE DAILY TIMES, per annum, including the Sunday Edition.....$12 00
THE DAILY TIMES, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition..... 10 00
THE SUNDAY EDITION, per annum..... 2 00
THE SEMI-WEEKLY TIMES, per annum..... 2 50
THE WEEKLY TIMES, per annum..... 1 00

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TIMES.

THE TIMES Up-town Office—No. 1,253 Broadway.
Paris Office of THE TIMES—No. 39 Rue de Lafayette.
THE TIMES is on sale in London at No. 449 Strand, W. C., from Henry F. Gillig & Co., and at Mr. Stevens', No. 4 Trafalgar-square.

This morning THE DAILY TIMES consists of TWELVE PAGES. Every news-dealer is bound to deliver the paper in its complete form, and any failure to do so should be reported at the publication office.

The Signal Service Bureau reports indicate for this region, to-day, south-west winds, slightly warmer and partly cloudy weather, and rising barometer.

THE NEW REGIME IN CITY AFFAIRS.

It would be absurd to expect that the mere entrance of Mr. EDWARD COOPER into the Mayor's office should be followed by an immediate improvement in City administration. Mayor COOPER will, for a longer or shorter period, be compelled to work with the same instruments as his predecessor, and, albeit his ideal of public duty is very much higher than was that of Mayor ELY, it will take time to introduce either new methods or new men into the conduct of local affairs. One of the first things he will be expected to do will be to see that the salary-list of the City Government is materially reduced, and that the people get a more appreciable return for the money they pay into the Treasury. His ability to reduce expenses will depend altogether on the Legislature, by which three-fourths of the salary-list of the City has been fixed beyond the power of interference by local authority, and from which alone can come the mandate for its readjustment. The ability to see that the City gets a dollar's worth of work for every dollar expended will be the result of experience and of the selection of improved instrumentalities for the performance of administrative functions. How much remains to be done in this direction may be inferred from some recent investigations into the kind of work done by the Park Department, from the known extravagance and incapacity of the Police Board, and from the evidences of slovenliness and waste which can be found in every branch of the City Government.

That the new Mayor's administration can be signalized by any great reduction of taxation is not to be expected, nor, as we take it, to be greatly desired. Money that can be saved by the abolition of semi-sinecure positions, and by the reduction of the extravagant salaries paid to mere political appointees like the Commissioner of Jurors and the crowd of hangers-on in the courts and public offices, can be profitably employed for the improvement of our neglected streets and the prosecution of other works necessary to keep the City well forward in the march of improvement. But it will be the duty of the new Mayor to arrest the steady growth of the City debt, and to insist that most of the public improvements which are now paid for by the issue of bonds should be paid out of taxation. During the last two years there has been issued five millions of new bonds, and the issue of another million is now being disputed before the courts. At least one-half of that amount ought to have been charged to current expenses. In spite of Controller KELLY's false pretenses, to the contrary, the bonded debt of the City has been increased by the addition of the six millions referred to. For, while property-owners assessed for local improvements and the general body of tax-payers have contributed seven millions and three-quarters in 1877 and 1878 to the redemption of the City debt, that debt shows for the same period a net reduction of but one million and three-quarters. The rest of the reduction for which the Controller claims credit is due solely to the City revenues which are pledged to the support of the sinking fund. To put the statement in another form, the City, during Controller KELLY's administration, has had the benefit of less than one-half of the amount supplied by City rents and fees and by taxes and assessments for the redemption of its debt. The commonest dictates of prudence demand that the aggregate debt of $140,000,000 should be reduced at least 5 per cent. per annum.

It may be necessary to add that the pretense that taxation has been reduced during the Kelly régime is as baseless as the pretense of debt reduction. The gross amount of the tax levy of 1876 was $34,964,295; that of 1879 is $30,007,098, showing an apparent saving of $4,957,297. But in 1876 there was levid for State taxes and for the interest on and redemption of the City debt, $18,800,690, while in 1879 the same items account for only $13,705,661, being a reduction on expenditures beyond the control of the local authorities of $5,095,029. As a minute examination of other items would show, the City expenses proper are not only quite as great as they were two years ago, but have decidedly increased. A comparison with 1874 would be still more unfavorable to the administration which it will be the duty of Mayor COOPER to reform. There will be no such rapid decline in the City quota of State taxes during the next two years as there has been in the past, and the redemption of the City debt ought to be accelerated, not retarded. The City can afford to pay an annual rate of 2½ per cent. on the assessed valuation of its taxable property, but it cannot afford to have the money expended without having either permanent public improvements or a diminished burden of debt to show in return. "Reform" is not a convertible term with niggardliness or false economy. It means better pavements, cleaner streets, a more perfect water-supply, new lines of communication to meet the wants of growing trade and population; better-managed public institutions, better-kept public parks, a more efficient Police force, more room in the public schools, less political favoritism in the courts, and less jobbery everywhere. It is a great work which Mayor COOPER is expected to do, and if he shows the necessary vigor and resolution, the people will grudge him neither the time nor the money which will be required to accomplish it.

SHORTCOMINGS OF RAPID TRANSIT.

The need of rapid transit in this City was so urgent and the difficulty and delay encountered in the effort to obtain it were so vexatious, that it was finally accepted with inadequate provision for the exercise of control over the companies, in the interest of the public. Although there could be no doubt of the financial success of any plan that should meet the want that had long been felt, every scheme that was offered was in the nature of an experiment. It was necessary to invent an altogether new method of transportation, with no opportunity for a thorough test until it should be put into final operation, and it was assumed that the undertaking had peculiar risks, and was entitled to special encouragement and exceptionally liberal treatment. The assumption was not well founded, for while it was patent that a successful plan must prove extremely profitable, it was desirable to put a check upon crude experiments and hold any undertaking of the kind under the closest obligation to use every means to serve the public need in the best manner. The use of some of the most important thoroughfares in the City was to be granted to the new railroads, with the certainty that they would be disfigured and a chance that unforeseen annoyances and inconveniences would be produced. It was desirable that these drawbacks should be kept at a minimum, and it was hardly safe to leave it to the discretion of the corporations to take only such means as they might see fit for obviating them. Neither was it wise to leave them to make whatever extravagant profits they might be able to extract from the public with the least possible outlay for its accommodation, while the Municipality received no direct compensation for franchises that might prove of enormous value. We are beginning already to reap the fruits of the "liberal" policy pursued toward these corporations in the consequences of their neglect to consider the rights and just expectations of the people.

The outcry of a long-suffering community against the street cars was not wholly due to an impatience with their slowness and a desire to secure rapidity of transit, but there was a demand quite as loud and earnest for comfort and convenience, and that, too, without an increase of cost, unless such an increase was necessary to attain the result. On the East Side road especially, very little is done for the comfort of the passengers, and during the hours when the fares are what they ought to be there is an amount of misery little, if any, less than that of the surface roads in former years. At this season the stations are cheerless and uncomfortable, the platforms are bleak and unsheltered, the cars are intended merely for the purpose of carrying as many people as can get into them, regardless of any of the sensibilities of the human frame. We were promised heat, and the cars are heated on Col. Sellers' plan, which assumed that the appearance of heat alone was necessary to induce a sensation of warmth. There are plethoric and clumsy-looking pipes under the seats, but the only comfort to be derived from them is such as an imaginative person may be able to extract from a contemplation of cold iron. By restricting five-cent fares to two hours in the morning and two hours at night, the company succeeds in concentrating the bulk of the day's travel into two narrow channels, which are choked so as to destroy all comfort and interfere seriously even with the main object of getting speedily up or down town. One has frequently to wait while two or three crowded trains pass without stopping at all, and when at last one comes to a halt, there is a rush and a scramble, and any self-respecting person finds himself, after he has been hustled inside, compelled to stand as a target for surrounding elbows, with nothing to hold himself by when the train jerks around a curve.

This is certainly not what was bargained for, but the public has left itself, or been left by those intrusted with its interests, comparatively helpless in the matter. Doubtless, one road is insufficient for the morning and evening travel of the East Side, but far more could be done for its accommodation if the company did not set upon the familiar theory that the public grants privileges in order that it may be plucked and put off with the shabbiest treatment that it will bear. If the fare on the elevated roads was five cents at all hours, there is no manner of doubt that the corporations would make liberal dividends, and it is not at all certain that they would not increase their receipts, for they are now driving back to the horse cars large numbers who would greatly prefer their accommodations, if they were what they ought to be. An important incidental effect of such reduction would be to distribute the travel of the early forenoon and late afternoon over nearly twice the time it now occupies, and greatly relieve the present crowding. Besides, with a careful system of signals and lookouts, where trains have no occasion to be moving in opposite directions on the same track, there is no reason why a considerably larger number of cars should not be run with safety. The drawback of danger to life and limb at present is chiefly at the stations, where crowds are compelled to accumulate on platforms which have no protecting barrier to prevent persons from being pushed upon the track or thrown to the street below. This absence of railings and gates on the platforms is among the numerous defects of rapid transit in its present condition, and there seems to be no power but that of public opinion and the reserved right of further legislation to compel the companies to a decent performance of duty.

WOMEN AUTHORS.

Many women, when they find themselves in distress from narrow means, look to newspapers, magazines, and other literary channels with a vague idea that writing is an easy, if not fascinating, way of supporting one's self. The isolated cases in which women have pushed their way through obstacles to practical success are in their minds, and it is not easy to persuade them that they have not an equally strong call to the same kind of work. CHARLOTTE BRONTE finally succeeded in persuading a London publisher to print her powerful fiction, Jane Eyre; but her success was owing quite as much to the conviction that she had put her soul into her book as to anything else. She could not take a refusal and go back to Haworth a contented woman. She had a mission, and could not go home until it was fulfilled.

The same is true of Mrs. STOWE. She wrote Uncle Tom's Cabin in installments, sent from her home, in Brunswick, Me., to a Washington newspaper, under such a spell of conviction that, "in the midst of heavy domestic cares, with a young infant, with a party of pupils in her family to whom she was imparting daily lessons with her own children, and with untrained servants requiring constant supervision," "the story was so much more intense a reality to her than any other weekly thing, that the weekly installment never failed." She has been known to say that she did not make the story, that the story made itself, and that she could not stop it till it was done. Works produced under such circumstances, whether written by men or women, make their way to the public because a human heart beats all the way through them; but, though JOHNSON wrote Rasselas in a week to defray the expenses of his mother's funeral, and made a book which has become a classic, the instances are rare in which any authors have done their best under severe pecuniary pressure. It will generally be found that any successful poem or story, any work which depends upon the union of culture and inspiration, is the fruit of long, patient, many-sided preparation; and this shows that no woman, without the training which teaches one how to say something, and without the personal experience which gives one something to say, can expect to do anything creditable to herself when she seeks literature as a help to support in severe stress of poverty. The late discussion of the rewards of authorship in the Atlantic shows that even famous authors have not become rich by the earnings of their books. Mrs. DENISON made more money out of her lucky hit, That Husband of Mine, than Mr. EMERSON, Mr. LONGFELLOW, or Mr. BRYANT ever made out of any single book they have written, though the one is the writer of trashy stories and each of the others has reached the front rank in American literature. Mrs. STOWE made money through Uncle Tom's Cabin, but the fortune coined out of the sales of that book is probably greater than she has made out of all her other writings put together. The history of nearly every successful book is that the writer had something to say, and wrote from the heart, in hot, burning words which met a crisis in affairs or awakened the deep, restless passions of humanity.

There are two among many similar instances which may be mentioned as illustrations of the passion for literature which clearly indicated that one should follow the occupation of a writer. One is a living author in New-England, and the other is the late Mrs. ANNA JAMESON. The author of Under the Lilacs had an exceptional training. Her father is the living Socrates of New-England, and her mother was the sister of the late SAMUEL J. MAY, and this modest woman had a passion from her very girlhood for dramatic or fictitious narrative. She could as easily stop writing as eating, though she never lisped in numbers; and yet, the head of the chief belles-lettres publishing house of Boston is said to have returned her earliest manuscripts, the famous Little Women stories, with the sincere and kindly assurance that she had no qualities to make a successful writer, and ought not, for her own sake, to persist in that direction. She was not thus to be extinguished, and another publisher thought he detected the leader of a new school of fiction in her manuscripts, and has since found that he was not mistaken. Far back in her childhood she had unconsciously trained herself for authorship under the guidance of her very remarkable parents, and every eye moistens at the knowledge of what this noble and gifted woman has done for them in the decline of their lives. Genius and duty have gone hand in hand in all her labors. It is not often that the story of success in literary effort is more nobly pathetic. But in a widely different line of effort, Mrs. JAMESON had a similar career. The daughter of an Irish painter, a wild, romantic, enthusiastic girl, the random and sentimental jottings in her diary were published with success, and made her famous almost without effort. She was never a novelist, but always a graceful and charming writer on society and life, and art. Her unfortunate marriage at length resulted in throwing her upon her pen as the sole means of her support, and then came the added duty of supporting her parents and sisters, so that writing became to her the only way by which she could carry the burdens of love. The author of Sacred and Legendary Art found herself a writer for daily bread at the same time that she was one of the most welcome ladies in English society, the companion of Lady BYRON, the intimate friend of HARRIET MARTINEAU, the KEMBLES, and the BROWNINGS. Sad as her life was on the side of her affections, this woman grew in beauty and ripeness under the steady pressure of writing to meet her constant necessities, and her best achievement in literature, the studies in sacred art, was conceived and completed under this pressure.

These examples show how women have succeeded as writers who are born for that vocation and find their way to it by natural gravitation, but they give no encouragement to the venturesome ones who try to become authors because they can do nothing else. We should not dare to think of the amount of manuscript rejected by magazines which is now pigeon-holed in many a private desk in all parts of the country—the result of the idea that anybody can write, whether bred to it or not, or the effort of worthy but mistaken women to earn a pittance by writing miserable stories, and more miserable poems. It would be enough to keep all the presses of the country running day and night for a year to come if it were to see the light. It is something the public ought to be thankful for that editors are firm enough to hold us back from this literary deluge. There is a serious side to this matter, the terrible disappointment of those who have mistaken their ability to write and are in the depths of poverty. The editorial heart is touched where the better judgment says no, and the persistence of many women is in inverse ratio to their ability to write what the public will read. To argue a woman out of the mistake of attempting authorship is often like commanding the sun to stand still upon Gibeon. It is doubtful whether JOSHUA did it outside of what is called poetical license, and it is doubtful whether any pseudo-literary woman was ever quite convinced that she had nothing to say. We do not wish to debar the gentler sex from the field of authorship; far from it. Women can never do the largest or highest work in literature because they are not fitted for it, and men cannot do the choice and precious work that belongs almost exclusively to woman; but it is best for the public, best for the parties themselves, that ten thousand excellent and needy women shall not seek to make a living by what they write when they have nothing to say. We should like to say to these fair ones: "Please don't write anything; do something; make a place for yourself with your hands; don't inflict your thoughts upon other people; don't wait until you are in Dr. ARNOLD's condition when he said 'I must write a pamphlet or I shall burst'." It is from the class who do not listen to advice that we get the fearful mediocrity of our light literature.

CITY REAL ESTATE.

In 1873 the assessed value of City real estate was $836,691,980. It would be a very low estimate to assume that one-half of this property was then mortgaged to the extent of 50 per cent. of its assessed valuation, which represented about 60 per cent. of its then estimated value. We may safely assume that at the breaking out of the panic in September, 1873, there existed an aggregate mortgage indebtedness of over $200,000,000 on New-York City real estate. In case of old mortgages, dating back to flush times prior to 1873, the owners of the fee with few exceptions have long since been wiped out, and the property has, for the most part, passed into the hands of the mortgagees. The constant succession of foreclosure sales, daily chronicled during the last five years, have pretty thoroughly weeded out weak holders of choice property. Real estate now advertised under Supreme Court foreclosure sales consists chiefly of second or third class property or West Side lots. Great bargains have been made during the last eighteen months by those who watch foreclosure sales as well as those who buy at private sale. This has been more especially the case with choice up-town vacant lots suitable for immediate improvement, which cannot to-day be bought at prices current one year ago.

Of the total mortgage indebtedness now existing in this City, at least five-sixths is based on present market values, old loans having been paid off and new ones made, or measures having been adopted to reduce the amount of loans so as to very greatly increase the margin of security. While it would be difficult to make an exact estimate of the mortgage indebtedness liquidated by payment, foreclosure sales, or otherwise during the past five years, we think it safe to assume that the existing mortgage indebtedness on City real estate is 50 per cent. less than it was in 1873, or about $100,000,000. The assessed valuation of real estate is 1878 was $900,855,700. A shrinkage of from 40 to 50 per cent. since 1873 has made these valuations correspond very closely with the market value of the property, though in not a few cases they are greater than the property could be sold for either at public or private sale. We believe that at least one-third of the property which was mortgaged in 1873 is to-day free from indebtedness. As a rule, new mortgage loans—and the present mortgage indebtedness is chiefly of this description—represent 50 per cent. of the actual market value of the property. If we are correct in our premises, real estate is not only lower, but in a more healthy condition, and more firmly held, than at any period for fifteen years past. It will thus be seen that, aside from the natural growth of the City, the general improvement in business, resumption, improved terminal facilities, new steam-ship lines, and the impetus to building which has been given by the accomplishment of rapid transit, other substantial reasons warrant a better feeling among real estate owners.

Real property is probably lower to-day than it will be again during the next ten or fifteen years. It is very firmly held, and except in the case of weak holders, not pressed for sale at current rates. Speculative builders are again in the market as buyers. In this City, after periods of prolonged depression, the resumption of building, and more especially the appearance of the speculative builder, have always been indicative of a revival in real estate interests. The whole area from Sixty-fifth to Eighty-sixth-street, between First and Fifth avenues, is being rapidly covered with bricks and mortar, and presents even at this season of the year—in midwinter—a scene of great activity. Capitalists are buying lots in this district from weak holders at from 40 to 50 per cent. less than they cost six years ago, the owners having in the meantime lost interest and paid taxes. In most cases these buyers sell immediately, at a considerable advance, to speculative builders, making a building loan, which is paid in installments as the building progresses. The VANDERBILT family, heretofore shy of City real estate, purchased during December one million and thirty-five thousand dollars of Fifth-avenue real estate, above Fiftieth-street—all of which, with the exception of two houses, is unimproved. Many builders, contemplating extensive improvements, are now negotiating for lots, and several transactions have recently been affected. Formerly, speculators in lots seldom contemplated the improvement of property which became the subject of their manipulations. They forestalled the legitimate market, bought in anticipation of a coming demand, and merely held on in expectation of a large increase. Now, with rare exceptions, all speculative purchases of vacant lots are made in connection with contemplated building enterprises. These enterprises have greatly increased during the past year. The value of new buildings erected in this City in 1877 was $13,000,000; in 1878 it is estimated at $20,000,000, an increase of over 50 per cent. in twelve months.

From present indications the building movement for the present year will be greater than at any time during the past ten years. There is likely to be on the 1st of May next an important increase in the well-to-do population of the Nineteenth Ward. Small first-class brown-stone houses in fashionable localities will, owing to rapid transit, be in great demand. Many who since the panic have lived in hotels and boarding-houses, are preparing to go to housekeeping in the up-town region. It is thought that numbers of New-York business men who, with their families, fled to Brooklyn, Staten Island, and New-Jersey, in order to avoid the horrors of two hours of City car travel every week day of their lives, will again return to the City, now that they can, by rapid transit, reach cheap homes up town in twenty-five minutes from City Hall Park. Renewed activity in City real estate means a renewal of confidence in all that pertains to the commercial and financial prosperity of the City. Those who are first to comprehend the present opportunities, and to put their long idle means into employment, will hold the best chances for the future. This early action, however, requires sagacity and courage, which the majority do not possess.

LOSERS AND FINDERS.

The frequent announcements of losses of valuable parcels, ranging from $200,000 packets of money and securities down to porte-monnaies, watches, and jewelry, may well awaken increased interest among the more alert and sharp-sighted of City pedestrians in knowing whatever has been adjudged about the rights and duties of finders. For a majority of lost things there are finders. What are their obligations and claims?

Suppose one comes upon a lost article—a wallet on the sidewalk, a stray cow or horse, a bundle of goods fallen from a passing wagon—he is not bound to pick it up, or to say or do anything about it. There is a story of an Irishman who was cheated by means of a counterfeit five-dollar bill. Next day he espied a genuine five-dollar bill lying in the path. He gave it a wide berth. "Bad luck to ye! I lost five dollars by a brother o' yours yesterday." Patrick was acting strictly in the exercise of his constitutional rights. One who meets with what another has lost is not under any duty to meddle with it; he may leave it alone if he likes. But, if he chooses to take it in charge, he takes it subject to the duty of making all reasonable effort, under the circumstances, to restore it to the owner. A thing that is lost continues the property of its owner notwithstanding. If the finder takes it up meaning to keep it, when by marks on it or other circumstances he could, if he would try, restore it to the owner, he is guilty of stealing. And if he meant well when he took the article, but afterward changed his mind, and neglected to seek the owner, he is liable to an action by the owner whenever his having appropriated the thing is discovered. But, if the true owner never appears, the thing belongs to the finder. Therefore, the case which has gone the rounds recently of a factory girl in a paper-mill, who found two $50 bills in the rags she was assorting, was doubtless correctly decided. The proprietor of the mills claimed the notes because they were found in his rags; and when the girl refused to surrender them, he complained of her for stealing. But the Judge decided in her favor. A similar case is formally reported in the latest volume of Rhode Island Court Reports. A man bought a second-hand safe on speculation; it was such a rackety old thing that he offered to sell it to the blacksmith of the place for ten dollars, but the latter declined. Then he engaged the blacksmith to put the safe in repair and keep it for him till he should find a buyer. In tinkering the safe, the blacksmith found a parcel of $165 tucked away by some mistake or oversight in a crevice in the sheet-iron lining. When he returned the safe he kept the money, and the safe-owner sued him for it. In both these cases the courts decided that the money belonged to the original owner, and the finder had a right to keep it until that owner appeared and claimed it. The purchaser of the rags or of the safe did not get any title to the money in them, because neither buyer nor seller knew it was there nor intended a sale of parcels of money. Having no title, he could not take the money from the finder. Lost things belong to the person that finds them as against every one but the owner. There has been a case differently decided, where a lady, while shopping, laid her porte-monnaie on the counter, meaning to take it up again as soon as she had priced some goods; but meantime some one "found" it. The lady had departed without reclaiming it, and the proprietor of the store demanded it, while the finder resisted his claim. But the court, after looking at the case with a magnifying-glass, decided in favor of the shopkeeper. For this porte-monnaie was not lost; it was deposited in an ill-chosen, insecure place; the lady did not drop it by accident, but intentionally left it where she thought it would be safe—in a place which was in law in the charge and care of the shopkeeper. He was held entitled to claim it as a depositary.

Suppose a reward is offered. The courts have in several cases decided that an advertisement offering a reward is a valid and binding promise, and can be enforced by one who complies with its conditions. It is a general offer to pay for a certain service, and if a person accepts the offer and renders the service before the offer has been withdrawn, there is a complete contract. But he must have known of the offer: one who finds the lost thing without knowing a reward has been offered has no legal claim. In a case in Connecticut, a man lost a horse, and advertised a reward of $20. Some one found the horse, and brought him home to the owner without having heard of the reward, and the owner gave him $2 for his trouble. Afterward the finder saw the advertisement, and was naturally displeased. He sued for the other $18, but the court decided against him. Unless the finder is influenced by the offer to undertake the search, there is no ground for saying that the loser is under any agreement to pay. Therefore, if a bank clerk should drop a money parcel, and some one following soon after should pick it up and keep it till a reward was offered, and then return it and demand the reward, it is probable he could not sustain his demand at law. He could not claim it for finding and saving the parcel, for these things were done before he knew of the offer—in fact, before it was made. He could not claim it for returning the parcel to the bank, for this was only his legal duty, and would not form a consideration for a promise to pay $5,000. The offer of a reward would be, in strict law, available only to persons who saw it, and were induced by it to go out and search, upon the risk of losing all their labor if they did not find the parcel.

BROTHER LINKHAW'S SINGING.

When "The State versus Linkhaw" was called, the Commonwealth of North Carolina appeared as the plaintiff, and an earnest Methodist brother of Robeson County responded as the defendant. The latter had not broken any of the Ten Commandments, nor had he violated any written law of the land. His moral character was above suspicion, his piety was unquestioned, and it was conceded even by his persecutors that he was a law-abiding citizen, a member of the church in good standing, and a man of exemplary deportment. Yet he was indicted by the Grand Jury of Robeson County, found guilty of a misdemeanor by twelve of his peers, and the Supreme Court of North Carolina was called upon to determine whether the majesty of the law demanded that he should suffer punishment. It appears that Brother LINKHAW took a leading part in the congregational singing in the church of which he was a member, and that while he labored with fervor to produce harmony in the rendering of the hymns, he contrived, unfortunately, (but unintentionally, all do him the justice to say,) to create a great deal of discord in the congregation. In fact, it was his fervid singing that finally brought him to grief, as it had previously been a cause of grief to many of the brethren and sisters. The truth is that shortly after Brother LINKHAW had been received into good fellowship and the communion of the church, and as soon as his voice was heard in tuneful praise, it became painfully evident to many that his part in the service of song was not calculated to give unmixed pleasure to the devout of the congregation, nor to promote the good ends of divine worship which all had at heart. Gentle hints of this unwelcome truth were first thrown out, and when no notice was taken of these, it became necessary to bring the delicate matter openly to the attention of the brother in fault. As this did not have the desired effect, the members first expostulated and afterward reasoned with him, then tried to move him by prayer, and finally appealed to him as a man and a Christian to have a little consideration for the feelings of the congregation and some respect for the sacred cause of religion. When all these efforts had failed to have any perceptible effect in abating the hymnal fervor of the determined brother, the congregation with one accord voted that his singing was a nuisance which the church would not and could not tolerate, and resolved that, unless a compliance with their demands was promised, the circumstances would justify a resort to extreme measures. To all of which Brother LINKHAW calmly but firmly replied that "he would worship his GOD, and that, as a part of his worship, it was his duty to sing." No course was now left to the society but to appeal to the law. Accordingly, legal proceedings were begun, and the misguided brother, whose only sin was his excess of ardor, was indicted and brought to trial, charged with misdemeanor in disturbing the peace of the congregation.

What were the specific criticisms on Brother LINKHAW's vocal performances, whether it was that his tuning-fork was wont to deceive his ear in the pitch, or he invariably struck the wrong key, or was never in time; whether it was that he persisted in rendering the psalms in long metre while the rest of the congregation labored to give them in short, or that the nasal was so dominant in his tones as to mar the general effect of the singing—these are critical matters, in which the musical public will be interested, but which unfortunately do not appear in the official report of the case. It is clear, however, that in the opinion of the majority the singing complained of was decidedly more fervid than was called for by even the strictest requirements of divine worship and that there was altogether too much of it. The complaint of the church, so far as it appears in evidence, though sweeping, was general. It was charged that Brother LINKHAW was wont to sing in such a way as to disturb the whole congregation and to make the sacred services ludicrous; that at the end of every verse of the hymn, his voice was heard loud and long after all the others had ceased; that the annoyance was great and grievous; that the effect of it was "to make one part of the congregation laugh and the other mad;" and that "the irreligious and frivolous enjoyed it as fun, while the serious and devout were moved with righteous indignation." It was also in evidence that the Pastor often became so disturbed that he lost control of his temper, refused to sing the hymn, and shut up his book in disgust; that the Presiding Elder could not be induced to preach in the church unless Brother LINKHAW would covenant to absent himself from the services or to refrain from taking any part in the singing; and that on one occasion the Senior Deacon, observing the profound solemnity which pervaded the congregation in consequence of the sermon just closed, and fearing that this effect would be lost in ridicule when Brother LINKHAW should open his mouth to start the singing, was obliged to hasten to the latter's pew and beseech him, "for heaven's sake, to keep quiet."

At the trial in the lower court the State did not attempt to show any intention on the part of the defendant to disturb the congregation. On the contrary, it was admitted that he had been conscientiously taking part in the religious exercises. The court was asked, but refused, to instruct the jury that the accused was not guilty unless he intended to create a disturbance. The question was, said the Judge, whether his singing had that effect, and whether he intended to do the singing. On this point there was no room for doubt. If the testimony of the Pastor, the Deacons, the leader of the prayer-meetings, and the whole roll of members had been impeached, there was one witness whose evidence alone would have convinced the jury and saved the State from defeat. Being asked to describe the peculiarities of the obnoxious singing, he responded with a hymn given with such perfect imitation of Brother LINKHAW's voice and fervid manner that it "produced a burst of prolonged and irresistible laughter, convulsing alike the spectators, the Bar, the jury, and the court." The devout defendant alone was unmoved to levity. This settled the matter and Brother LINKHAW, but only for the time being. The latter, as determined to assert his rights in law as he had been to exercise them in religion, appealed to the Supreme Court of the State, which reversed the judgment of the lower court, remarking that the defendant was "a proper subject for the discipline of his church, but not for the discipline of the courts." Thus in the end did Brother LINKHAW triumph over his enemies.

Some of the religious societies of Ohio appear to belong to the Church Militant. Within a few years, the greater part of the members of the Lutheran Church, at Somerset, becoming dissatisfied with the preacher, have withdrawn from it, while the remainder, as usual, cleaved for this reason all the more firmly to him. Each party maintained that it had sole right to the church, and, after much wrangling, the seceders assembled in force and carried the position by storm. The minority appealed to the authorities, who caused the ejection of the majority as intruders; but these remarshaled their strength last Sunday, again attacked the theological stronghold, and again winning a victory, held service unmolested. Particulars of the sieges are not given, nor have we any mention of the casualties. Whether the malcontents used any more offensive weapons than fists and main force, we do not know; but we are told that, now that belligerent demonstrations are over, the combatants on each side will have recourse to law. These clerical squabbles have grown to be so common in this country among various denominations that it would seem advisable to establish some ecclesiastical court by which they might be regulated. Such scenes are disgraceful; they bring discredit upon the professions of those assuming to take the Prince of Peace as their model, and the sooner they are discontinued the better for the cause of orthodoxy. Theological-physical assaults upon churches on Sundays with a view to establish the right of holding divine service are not calculated to bring churches into exalted esteem.

In consequence of the contraction in values which has been forced upon us since the year 1873, in our efforts to bring our paper currency up to a specie basis, we have been led to overlook the circumstance that a similar reduction in monetary values has been going on all over the world. It seems highly probable that, if this general downward tendency had not prevailed we should, to use a mercantile expression, have "struck hard pan" several years ago, and hence much of the suffering which we have been enduring has been due, not so much to local as to wide-spread causes. But if all of our troubles have not come from the evils arising out of an inflated currency, neither, on the contrary, have they been those which the Greenbackers, in their most comprehensive schemes, have claimed to be able to nullify. To the future student of present events, the efforts that both hard and soft money men have made to convince themselves and others that this slow sinking of values is something which was controlled by our national currency will seem instances of extreme shortsightedness. In all parts of the world, a gold dollar will to-day represent a greater amount of material or service than it did in 1870. It is not our purpose at this time to give the reasons for this change, but merely to instance one or two notable cases of a decline in worth in foreign articles lately imported into this country. Since the year 1870, we have imported from Manila about 145,000 bales of hemp per annum, this forming what would be the cargoes of about 30 ships each year. In 1870 the price of Manila hemp per pound was, in gold, 14 cents, while the present quotation would be 6 1-2 cents per pound; or, in other words, much the same price that it was in 1860. This rise and decline in price are in singular accord with the rise and fall in the premium on gold in this country; but it would, none the less, be hard to trace any direct connection between the two. Since 1870, there has each year come into this country from Calcutta about 45,000 bales of jute and some 200,000 bales of jute butts. The importations have been fairly uniform, so that the amount now used does not vary much from what was used nine years ago. But the gold prices of the articles have undergone a very considerable change. Jute sold in 1870 at about 6¼ cents per pound, while now 4¼ cents per pound would be a quotation on a level with the highest market price. Jute butts, which, in 1870, were easily disposed of at 4½ cents per pound, will not now bring over 2½ cents for the same quantity. If consolation for personal misery can be found in the sufferings of others, then our merchants, who have been obliged to witness the slow diminution of their calculated wealth, may gather some comfort from the knowledge that their experience has been shared by owners of property in every civilized country, and this, too, where currency complications were unknown.

One of the men whom the country newspapers are fond of naming wolves in sheep's clothing has recently appeared in several towns of interior Pennsylvania. He calls himself Rev. JOHN MAFFITT, and professes to be a Baptist preacher. He occupied a pulpit some months at Smithfield, where he excited suspicion of his piety by licentious conduct, by copious drinking, and by taking letters from the Post Office addressed to GOODWIN TURNER. He explained the last peculiarity by saying that TURNER was an intimate friend of his, and would soon join him; but his licentiousness and intemperance seem to have been overlooked—perhaps on account of his profession. Not long after, he married a widow of property and good position, and went on a wedding tour to Baltimore, where he robbed her of $1,500 in cash, and deserted her. It was next discovered that he had a wife at Lo gwood, Mo., and that he had gone there from Baltimore. He was traced to St. Louis, then to different places in Tennessee and Georgia, having figured at Hall's Mills, in the latter State, as Rev. W. W. La Verne. He was on the point of marrying again at Cartersville, Ga., when an article in the Baptist Observer exposed him, and caused his flight. For the time his whereabouts is unknown. He is apparently 45, of medium height; has large nose, small mouth; blue mark under right eye, scar on left cheek, and is a ready speaker. Nearly all these rascally fictitious clergymen seem to have an uncontrollable passion for polygamy and other abuse of women; because, no doubt, these are, from fervid piety, easily imposed upon. The name of JOHN MAFFIT is unfortunate, having been made unpleasantly notorious, many years ago, in the person of Rev. JOHN NEWLAND MAFFIT, once Chaplain to Congress.

The English College of Arms was founded by RICHARD III. in 1483, who assigned it "a local habitation and a name" in a crowded district of London. In 1554 PHILIP and MARY reincorporated the body, and endowed it with a mansion on Bennett's Hill, a steep ascent from the Thames, within the precincts of Doctors Commons Here it has since remained, and Queen Victoria-street—a great thoroughfare which during the last few years has been cut upward from the Thames' Embankment—has brought it into great prominence. The officers of the college are the Earl Marshal, (the Duke of Norfolk,) in whom the office is hereditary, the Kings-at-Arms, the Heralds, and the Pursuivants. The patronage is vested in the Earl Marshal. The Kings-at-Arms are styled Garter, Norroi, and Clarencieux. Garter is the chief, and is always knighted. Norroi is nord-roi, that herald being supposed to be especially representative of the sovereign in the North of England, and there is said to have been a "Surroi" until EDWARD III. appointed his son, the Duke of Clarence, a Herald as Clarencieux Knight-at-Arms, substituting him for Surroi. Clarencieux's province is south of Trent, and he attends to the business of that division. Formerly the Heralds made periodical circuits, or "visitations," as they were called, through the country, when they investigated claims of pedigree, and settled disputes as to coats of arms. Their registered records are accepted as good legal evidence in courts of law, and in fact throw indirectly valuable light on many points, and have helped to clear up doubts as to rights of property, titles, &c. The Heralds are known as Somerset, York, Chester, Richmond, Windsor, and Lancaster. The Pursuivants are Rouge Croix, Blue Mantle, Rouge Dragon, and Portcullis. The Heralds are in usual course selected from them. The duties of the Herald's office are very light nowadays as compared with the past. In Ireland the functionary who answers to Garter in England is styled Ulster-King-at-Arms, and in Scotland, Lord Lyon King-at-Arms. The officers of the Herald's College receive their remuneration mainly from fees earned in assisting persons desirous of investigating claims of pedigree or to armorial bearings. The Earl Marsh

RECORD OF AMUSEMENTS.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC.

THE SYMPHONY SOCIETY CONCERT.

The third concert by Dr. Damrosch and the admirable orchestra of the Symphony Society was given last evening at Steinway Hall, the preceding public rehearsal having taken place on Thursday last. Dr. Damrosch is recognized among the lovers of music in New-York as a careful and thorough master of his art, and the weight of his name is never lent to any performance unworthy of an audience who expect an artistic rendering of good music well interpreted. The concerts of the Symphony Society, under his leadership, have thus far justified the high reputate of him and his orchestra, and last night's entertainment was in accord with the two that have preceded it. The programme was as follows:

Unfinished Symphony in B minor ..... Schubert
Allegro moderato. Andante con moto.
Air from "Xerxes" ..... Handel
Miss Anna Drasdil.
Concerto for piano-forte, with orchestra, op. 16.... Grieg
1. Allegro molto moderato. 2. Adagio.
3. Allegro moderato e marcat.—Presto.
Mr. Franz Rummel.
"La Captive," Réverie for contralto and orchestra ..... Berlioz
Miss Anna Drasdil.
Symphony in C. (No. 2.) ..... Schumann
Sostenuto assai. Allegro ma non troppo; Scherzo; Adagio espressivo. Allegro molto vivace.

The orchestra was particularly good in the Schubert symphony, and played it with a delicacy worthy of this lovely work, or fragment, as it may be more properly called. These two movements, which were composed in 1822, and which the celebrated composer and musician, Herbeck, of Vienna, brought to light in 1867, are thoroughly characteristic of Schubert, graceful and melodious throughout and beautifully instrumented. A startling statement contained in a pamphlet on the symphony, published at the hall says of the allegro: "The artless and charming theme is played with and brought back again and again, and interrupted by bursts of wild, savage modulation, through which its simple, familiar grace passes unscathed, like some pure, innocent Christian martyr through the fires of her heathen persecutors." The same authority says of the andante: "It is a miracle of wild, tender grace. We do not come on bold cliffs, craggy mountains, pathless forests; we are not deafened by roaring torrents and booming seas, nor frightened by thunder and lightning, nor blinded and oppressed by a dazzling, scorching sun; here all is peace, contentment, happiness; smooth pastrage, with sleek cattle quietly grazing;" &c. The audience quietly enjoyed the two movements, not withstanding this call on their imagination, and were entertained by one of the best performances of the work ever given in this City. The Schumann symphony was not so well rendered. There was a perceptible lack of finish in every movement, particularly noticeable in the scherzo, and, indeed, in every movement the perfection, which the orchestra is capable of was wanting. It was a good performance, but was not a great one. Miss Drasdil was in her best mood, and sang with expression. Her phenomenal voice has never appeared to better advantage, and, though her method is always a mystery, she is always enjoyable. In the Berlioz reverie, it seemed as if she had combined several separate voices, but they were all beautiful, sympathetic, and musical, and she well earned the applause she received. The air from Handel's "Xerxes" was her great success, and she responded to an enthusiastic encore with Hiller's hymn, in which she is particularly good. Mr. Franz Rummel confirmed the opinion previously expressed of his merits as a pianist. The Grieg concerto was exactly suited to his taste and powers, and he gave a wonderful performance of the work. He commanded throughout the attention of the audience, which contained many musicians and critical amateurs, and was recalled several times at the conclusion of the last movement. No such artistic and elegant piano-playing has been heard in New-York for a long time, and Mr. Rummel, who has come modestly before the public, has certainly established his reputation beyond question. He is a player of vigor and force, and was fortunate in having so good an orchestra to sustain him. The concerto was the principal performance of the concert, and was in accord with the highest musical feeling of the audience.

THE STRAKOSCH OPERA SEASON.

It will no doubt be gratifying to the musical public not to be obliged, in the season of opera which begins to-morrow night at Booth's, to accept precisely the same repertory as that which Mr. Maplesen presented at the Academy. The opening week of itself will be notable for the production of three works which Mr. Maplesen's company have not performed. These are "Aida," with which the season opens to-morrow evening; "Martha," which is set down for Thursday, and "Ballo in Maschera," the opera for Friday night. Mr. Strakosch's resources are especially adapted to the adequate representation of these works. With respect to the opening work, it has long ago been admitted that Miss Kellogg and Miss Cary are foremost representatives of the rôles of Aida and Amneris, and, as a matter of course, every lover of music will be glad to see them take once more the places on the lyric stage which they are so well capable of adorning. Miss Kellogg's popularity in this country is well understood, and for Miss Cary, she certainly stands in the front rank among the contralti of the world. Mr. Charles Adams, an American tenor of distinction, will make his appearance to-morrow evening as Radames, and Signor Pantaleoni, from La Scala, Milan, Mr. George Conly, and Mr. Gottschalk are also in the cast. The choral and orchestral effects will be on the finest scale, and, in brief, a good deal of reliance will be placed on the ensemble. "Lucia de Lammermoor" is the opera for Tuesday night, and the chief novelty connected with its production is the fact that Miss Maria Litta will make her first appearance here in the rôle of the heroine. "Faust" is the opera for Wednesday, "Martha" for Thursday, "Ballo in Maschera" for Friday and on Saturday there will be a grand Litta matinée. Mr. Strakosch proposes to make popular prices a feature of this series of operas.

MRS. SCOTT-SIDDONS' READINGS.

The fundamental principle of the art of elocution is the necessity of a close adherence to natural expression, although by natural expression is not meant colloquialism or common conversation. Nature makes itself felt in language only when men feel sincerely and deeply, when their words flow directly from the heart; to call everyday talk natural expression is to state an absurdity. It is, unfortunately, true that, in these times, actors pay little attention to the art of reading with proper emphasis and spirit; but we feel assured that this state of things will not long continue, for scholarship and the stage cannot be separated with impunity. It is not sufficient that the critic shall be a student; it is equally necessary that the actor shall be one. The best language, and the highest method of using it, should proceed from the stage—as, in fact, they do in the case of the French theatre. The recitals given lately by Prof. Richardson ought to have awakened our actors to a sense of their own deficiencies, for in him the drama found an interpreter whose scholarship was the keen outcome of sustained thought and investigation. The actor who is content to "speak his part," and more than satisfied if he can produce occasional theatrical effects, is by no means an artist. But if we must object to the man who speaks prose with little feeling or spirit, how greater must be our objection to him who speaks blank verse—as though blank verse could be intelligibly spoken.

Poetry, even when it approaches nearest to conversation, must be read. This truth is not seemingly understood by many readers, among whom must be classed Mrs. Scott-Siddons, whose recitals on Friday evening at Chickering Hall were devoid of natural expression and poetic inspiration. Mrs. Scott-Siddons is representative, and in criticising her an entire body of pretentious elocutionists is criticised. Her early faults have not disappeared with time and experience, and what may have seemed attractive in her years ago now borders upon the objectionable. The lady has a sweet and mellow voice, which she spoils by exaggerating its simplest tones. Her method is no method at all, since it is little else than a combination of artifice and self-consciousness. At times she is prettily arch, and occasionally her humor has a clear and hearty ring in it; moreover, she is not wanting either in spirit or enthusiasm, but both are mis-directed. As a whole, her work was amateurish and unsatisfactory, though pretentious, showing at rare intervals faint gleams of beauty, which contrasted strikingly with their almost grand absence. In the scenes selected by her from "As You Like It" she presented a weak and shallow conception of Rosalind, and seemed to have but the faintest ideas regarding Jaques and Orlando. Her reading of that lovely and pathetic ballad, "Curfew Must Not Ring To-night," which has frequently been rendered with fine dignity and pathos, was unfeeling and unpoetic, and gave no indication of real inspiration. In one or two pieces included in her long programme, Mrs. Scott-Siddons made a better impression. But altogether there was nothing in her work suggestive of original merit.

MR. MAPLESON'S ARTISTS IN BOSTON.

The Boston people went to hear Mr. Mapleson's artists in a calmly critical mood, and their criticism by and by melted into enthusiasm. The press of our New-England Athens is unanimous in praise of the ensemble with which Mr. Mapleson presents Italian opera, and has also strong commendation for the individual artists of his company. To Signor Campanini the chief praise is accorded. Diversity of opinion is permitted with respect to all the other singers, but Signor Campanini's supremacy is insisted on. His Edgardo, in "Lucia," which is, indeed, a most noble performance, is held to be the best within the memory of the most cultivated Bostonians. He is especially praised for the magnificent pitch of passion to which he carries the part, while his delivery of the music is pronounced practically faultless. He is awarded, without hesitation, the very foremost rank among the great artists of his time. Mme. Gerster also gets the highest commendation for both her Amina and Lucia, and Mlle. Minnie Hauk, and Signors Galassi and Foli are also remembered in the warmest way. Altogether, Mr. Mapleson's representations of opera are deemed the best which have been seen in Boston.

MUSICAL NOTES.

On Thursday evening the English Glee Club will have a concert at Chickering Hall. The club will have the assistance of Miss Beebe and Miss Finch.

The first of the four grand soirées of chamber music organized by the New-York Philharmonic Club will take place on Tuesday evening in Chickering Hall. Miss Anna Drasdil, Mrs. William G. Morgan, and other artists will appear.

The Philharmonic Society of New-York will have its third public rehearsal next Friday afternoon at the Academy of Music, and its third concert on the following evening. The soloists are Mrs. Anna Granger Dow and Mr. Franz Rummel.

The Nautilus Boat Club announces a grand operatic concert on Tuesday evening, in Steinway Hall, the proceeds of which are to go to the building fund for the new boat-house. The list of artists includes the names of Remenyi and De Murska.

There will be a strong reinforcement this evening at the concert in the Grand Opera-house. Mlle. De Murska and Mr. Levy will appear as heretofore, while Signor Ferranti, the baritone buffo, and Miss Henrietta Markstein, pianist, will also give their services. Gilmore's Band will fulfill the orchestral duties of the evening.

GENERAL MENTION.

Miss Emily Rigl will fill the part of the Countess in "Almost a Life" through the provinces.

A minstrel performance is now given regularly every evening in the pretty hall known as Thomas' Opera-house.

No change is yet announced at the Aquarium, where the miniature splendors of "Cinderella" are exhibited twice each day.

Rice's burlesque company will appear in "Evangeline" at the Lyceum Theatre to-morrow evening. Several novelties are in reserve.

The sketch called "The Mischievous Monkey," in which Tom Thumb and other phenomena appear, will be performed for one week more at Masonic Hall.

Mr. Herman Linde will make his promised appearance at Steinway Hall next Wednesday evening, as a recitationist. Following the method of another reader, he will recite from memory the tragedy of "Macbeth."

Mr. John E. Owens will shortly reappear before Metropolitan audiences in "Dot." Miss Minnie Palmer and Mr. C. W. Couldock will be among his support. The return of this comedian, of whom we see too little, will be heartily welcomed.

An entirely new programme of attractions will be presented by the able managers of the Theatre Comique this week. Messrs. Harrigan and Hart are now almost alone in the field of variety entertainments—a fact not without significance.

Mr. Stanley McKenna's comedy, "The Oddities," will be produced in this City shortly by the Criterion Comedy Company, which, under the management of Mr. F. F. Mackay, has been playing in some of the large provincial cities of the East.

The San Francisco Minstrels continue to attract a large share of popular favor; their entertainments have the merit of being at once brief and amusing. The absurd sketch called "Love's Endurance" is a bright addition to the programme.

At the Park Theatre, next Thursday evening, the burlesque of "Robinson Crusoe" will be produced by the Colville Folly Company. In the meantime, "The Babes in the Wood," with its considerable array of attraction, will be rightly performed.

Mr. Joseph Jefferson, whose engagement at the Fifth-Avenue Theatre is approaching its end, may still be seen as Rip Van Winkle, although the public would be happier to witness some of his less-known impersonations. The production of "Dr. Clyde" at this theatre is looked forward to with interest.

Whoever has read Bret Harte's brief, yet deeply pathetic story, "Miliss," will be curious to know how it appears in dramatic form. The play will be brought out to-morrow night at the Standard Theatre, with Miss Kate Mayhew as the wild and picturesque heroine—a character of striking and beautiful novelty.

To-morrow evening Murdock's now celebrated play "Davy Crockett" will be presented at Niblo's under favorable circumstances. The part of Davy will be played, as usual, by Mr. Frank Mayo, and Miss Josephine Laurens will be the Eleanor Vaughn. The management promise that the revival will be in every sense a worthy one.

Messrs. D'Ennery and Carman's pathetic and interesting play, "The Two Orphans," is classed among the series of the New-York Drama as the work of John Oxenford, who, it may be explained, arranged the French text for the English stage. Mr. Oxenford, were he living, would be the last one to lay claim to such a false honor.

The popularity of "The Banker's Daughter" at the Union Square Theatre is as steady as heretofore. The favorite character in the play seems to be Georgy Washington Phipps, an original creation, which, despite some exaggeration, belongs to comedy. The husband and wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Brown, divide attention about equally. Mr. Lingham has decidedly improved his part of the Count.

Those who find enjoyment in comparing actors may exercise their judgment upon Mr. Wallack and Mr. Coghlan, who fill the two leading parts in Mr. Paul Merritt's play, "At Last," the present attraction at Wallack's Theatre. More spontaneity in Mr. Coghlan and less self-consciousness in Mr. Wallack would greatly improve the action of these conscientious artists.

The production of "Les Fourchambault" at the Broadway Theatre on Monday, Jan. 13, will be an interesting event, for no play of recent days has been more talked or written about. Miss Alice Lingard will appear as Marie Letellier, originally played in Paris by Mlle. Croizette. The cast will include Mr. Lingard, Miss Dickie Lingard, Mr. O. H. Barr, and Mr. Joseph Wheelock. At the Broadway this week, "Uncle Dan'l" will be performed for the last times.

NO DANGER OF THE SPIRE FALLING.

Capt. Leary, of the Third Precinct, Brooklyn, reported to the Central Office yesterday that the spire of the South Congregational Church, at the corner of Court and President streets, was in a dangerous condition, and liable to topple over into the street. The report was forwarded to the Department of Fire and Buildings, and men were stationed on Court-street to warn pedestrians of the dangerous condition of the spire. The church is a large brick edifice, and the spire, springing out of the south-east corner, rises to a height of about 90 feet. In consequence of the report made by the Police, a meeting of the Trustees was held in the church building last evening. Mr. John F. Henry, President of the Board of Trustees, presided. Superintendent of Buildings Acker and Mr. Osborn, the builder of the church, stated that they were convinced, after making a careful examination of the building, that there was no danger of the spire falling. The report by the Police setting forth its dangerous condition was made, Mr. Osborn supposed, because a few of the stones with which the spire was covered had been blown off. The Trustees resolved that service would be held in the church this morning as usual.

FITZ JOHN PORTER'S TRIAL.

MR. MALTBY'S ARGUMENT.

REVIEWING THE CHARGES OF DISOBEDIENCE TO GEN. POPE'S ORDERS—HOOKER'S SITUATION NEAR MANASAS AUG. 27, 1862.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WEST POINT, Jan. 4.—In the Fitz John Porter case this morning Anson Maltby, of New-York, of counsel for the petitioner, resumed his address, having at yesterday's session finished his argument respecting the darkness of the night on Aug. 27, 1862, and the condition of the roads between Bristol Station and Warrenton Junction. The first specification of disobedience relates to a transaction on the night mentioned. Gen. Hooker had on that day a severe fight with Gen. Ewell's division, of Jackson's command, at Bristow, near Manassas, and was out of ammunition. The enemy retired along the railroad, having inflicted a loss of 300 in killed and wounded upon Hooker, but it was anticipated that the battle would be renewed in the morning, when, unsupported and short of ammunition, the position of Hooker's division would be critical. Accordingly, at 6:30 Gen. Pope sent an order to Gen. Porter to leave Warrenton Junction at 1 o'clock that night and push forward with his whole corps, or such part of it as he had with him, so as to be on the ground by daylight. He was also directed to send word to Banks to hurry forward and take his place at Warrenton, and to leave a regiment of infantry and two pieces there as a guard until Banks came up. Gen. Pope had received a report from Hooker at dark, urging him to send reinforcements, and, thinking it altogether likely that Jackson would mass his whole force in the morning to crush Hooker and turn our right at Bristow, ordered Porter to be on hand at the gleam of day. Porter asserts that the night was dark and rainy, the road full of wagons, and that it was impossible to move a large body of men along it. They had, he says, to light candles at the head of the column even at 3 o'clock, when they actually set out, in order to make their way. It is also claimed, and admitted by the Government, that a council of Porter's General officers, held about 10 o'clock, when it was sprinkling a little and the sky was overcast, decided that it was impracticable to start before 3. The evidence is very conflicting as to the darkness and rain, but it is agreed by the witnesses on both sides that there was no moon. Some claim that the stars were visible all night, others that it was extremely dark. The evidence is equally conflicting as to the number of the wagons. Col. Brinton, of the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry, arrived at Porter's head-quarters about midnight, and was asked to clear the road, but did not, it is alleged by Porter, succeed in effecting his purpose until the next morning. The Government urges in response that Porter should have started earlier, rather than later, knowing the peril to be imminent, and being under explicit orders to be on hand at daylight; that the rebel forces did not find it too dark to put many miles between themselves and Hooker, and that the road was an excellent one for nearly the whole 10 miles, and not at all so incumbered as to be impassable. Mr. Maltby passes over these issues rather lightly, and concludes that because Gen. Pope did not censure Gen. Porter on his arrival at Bristow at 10 o'clock in the morning, instead of daylight, he was, therefore, satisfied with his explanation.

At 3 A. M., on Aug. 29, Gen. Pope sent Porter an order to be at Centreville at dawn of day with his whole command, which he appears, from a private note to Burnside, to have received at 6; then came the joint order, written at 9:30, directing McDowell and Porter to move forward in the direction of Gainesville. He passes very lightly over the issues of veracity between McDowell and Porter as to the substance of that interview, rejects the evidence of Dr. Faxon and Corporal Thomas altogether, discusses the specification of misconduct in the face of the enemy very cursorily, and then makes a vigorous attack on the evidence of Capt. Douglass Pope and Orderly Duffy as to the route taken with, and the time of the delivery of, the famous 4:30 order, Aug. 29, which directs Porter to push forward into action at once on the enemy's right flank. It is impossible to attempt a more exhaustive summary of Mr. Maltby's argument, as it consists very largely of quotations from evidence reported very fully during the sessions of the commission at Governor's Island and West Point.

Of more interest are the undercurrents of this remarkable trial. When Major Asa Bird Gardner was appointed Recorder of the commission he shared the somewhat prevalent view that Gen. Pope's campaign was a series of hap-hazard movements, ending in disaster, and that Gen. Porter had been vicariously sacrificed. Had he continued in this view, the case would probably have been disposed of long since. But, unfortunately for Gen. Porter, on studying the campaign of August, 1862, carefully, Major Gardner arrived at the conclusion that the sentence of the court martial was substantially just and right, and that the purpose of Gen. Pope's campaign was defeated by a combination amounting almost to a conspiracy. To understand the reasons for this decided reversal of opinion it is necessary to recall the fact that Major Gardner was himself a McClellan man, and shared with his partisans a prejudice against Pope which nothing short of a thorough investigation could dissipate. Divested of verbiage, the facts are very brief. Pope took command of the several small independent corps covering Washington, commanded respectively by Banks, McDowell, and Sigel, on July 29, with instructions, while covering the national capital, to operate on the enemy's lines of communication to the west and north-west in such a manner as to compel Lee to divide his forces and enable the Army of the Potomac to withdraw from Harrison's Landing to Alexandria. On Aug. 16 an interrupted order from Gen. Lee apprised him that Gen. Lee had commenced a movement with his whole army, purposing to overwhelm his inadequate force before the Army of the Potomac could come to his assistance. Aug. 14 Gen. Jackson started from Gordonsville upon one of his bold and rapid advances, with the permission of Lee, but in opposition to the judgment of Longstreet, and on Aug. 20 had outflanked Pope, who, under imperative instructions, was holding the line of the Rappahannock. On Aug. 27, having abandoned the line of the Rappahannock, and been reinforced by Heintzelman's corps, a part of Burnside's, under Reno, and Reynolds' Pennsylvania Reserves, Pope began his movement against Jackson, the plan being to interpose a strong force between him and Lee at Thoroughfare Gap, and annihilate him before a junction could be effected. Porter was ordered to march to support with his whole corps, and Franklin with his. The slow movements of these two officers not only defeated the intention to bag Jackson, but enabled him to make the raid on Pope's base of supplies at Manassas mentioned in Porter's letter to Burnside. How narrowly McClellan and Franklin escaped a thorough investigation was not revealed to the public until Major Gardner offered in evidence the copies of Secretary Stanton's letter to Halleck, Halleck's reply, and Lincoln's order directing an investigation. The production of these materials for history placed Gen. Porter, on behalf of McClellan, on his feet, and has brought on a crisis that may possibly develop the whole story of the underlying political intrigue that enters into the case in some measure at present, as well as that of a disgraceful military intrigue in August, 1862, that resulted in the disaster of Pope and the reinstatement of McClellan. The Recorder is disposed to bring these facts to the surface, if one may judge from the new aspect the case has assumed, and the attempt to effect his purpose, proper as it is, will probably eventuate in another explosion.

COTTON SELLERS AND BUYERS AT ODDS.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 4.—The controversy between the cotton sellers and buyers as to the possession of sale samples has resulted in stopping sales. The sellers have resolved not to give up samples, and the buyers not to purchase without them. The August Reichhardt case endeavored to settle the difficulty, but without success.

BREAKING HIS LEG A SECOND TIME.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 4.—Hon. William P. Sheffield, lawyer and ex-Congressman, fell on the icy street between the Court-house and his home this afternoon, breaking the same leg which he broke in New-York 10 years ago, and for which he recovered heavy damages from that City.

A CANADIAN OFFICER'S POSITION.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—The Herald announces that Lieut.-Gov. Lacellier has been informed by the Federal Government that he will not be interfered with in his present position. This will probably end the controversy over his dismissal.

KILLING HIMSELF AND HIS WIFE.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 4.—In East Attleboro, Mass., this morning, Garding C. Tingley, a jeweler, while temporarily insane, cut his wife's throat from ear to ear, and then cut his own. The wife died at once, and the husband will probably die. The woman was about to become a mother. No one was present at the time but Mrs. Tingley's mother. Tingley threatened the lives of his wife and their two children, and his wife's mother went to give the alarm, but when officers arrived Mrs. Tingley was dead. Tingley has a twin brother in the lunatic asylum for an attempt at murder. Mrs. Tingley was about 30 years old, and her husband is of a like age.

THAT VALISE FULL OF BRICKS.

A MYSTERIOUS STRANGER AND A ROBBERY AT THE ALBEMARLE—THE BOGUS SUBSCRIPTION LIST FOUND AND NAMES OF CHARITABLE DONORS.

Detective Thomas Dusenbury, who was recently reappointed a member of the Police force, and was assigned to the Detective Squad at the Central Office, yesterday signalized his return by arresting James Levy, who is suspected of having robbed a lady at the Albemarle Hotel of jewelry valued at $400. The prisoner is also suspected of swindling a number of persons under the pretense of collecting subscriptions for St. John's Guild. The robbery at the Albemarle was committed on the 24th ult. At about 3 P. M. on that day a stranger, carrying a valise apparently well filled, called at the hotel, and asked for a room. He registered as "J. H. Florence, Philadelphia," was assigned to a room on the third floor of the hotel, and immediately went to the apartment. At about 8 o'clock in the evening he was seen by two ladies, who were passing through the corridor, standing in the doorway of his room, with his hat and coat off, and looking up and down the corridor. At 11 o'clock that night a lady, who occupied a room on the same floor, returned from the theatre with her husband, and discovered that during her absence the room had been visited by a thief, who had stolen from a bureau drawer a quantity of jewelry valued at $400. When the lady reported her loss at the office, Mr. Thomas W. Warner, the clerk, remembered the arrival of Mr. Florence, from Philadelphia, and suspected him of being the thief. On going to his room it was found that he had disappeared. Locked in the wardrobe was found the valise he had brought with him. The valise was forced open, and it was then discovered that its weighty contents consisted of a number of bricks and bottles, a piece of old carpet, and other worthless articles. The robbery was reported at the Central Office, and was given to Detective Dusenbury to investigate. The officer, on examining the valise found on it a label of the United States Mail and District Express Company. At the office of the company it was ascertained that the valise, with another similar package, had been received by an agent of the company from the Norwich boat, at Pier No. 40 North River, on the 20th ult., and had been delivered to a woman named Levy, at No. 98 Third-avenue. Dusenbury watched the building for several days and nights, and yesterday afternoon saw James Levy come out of the house. This man answered the description of the stranger at the hotel, and the officer at once arrested him and brought him to Police Head-quarters. He denied all knowledge of the robbery, and said he made his living by playing faro. On being searched at the Central Office the following subscription list was found on his person:

ST. JOHN'S GUILD, NEW-YORK, Dec. 20, 1878.

We, the undersigned, cheerfully donate the amount opposite our names in aid of destitute poor and those that are sick and in destitute circumstances. To such St. John's Guild desires to help.

WILLIAM H. GUION, Treasurer.

A. A. Low Bros.	$50. paid.	Lawson Brothers.	$20
Glen Cove Starch Manuf. Co.	50	Wheeler & Wilson Manuf. Co.	25
Welch, Holmes & Co.	25, paid.	T. J. Pope & Bro.,	25
Angell & Co.	20, paid.	Dodge & Allcock.	25, paid.
Frederick Buttersfield & Co.	25	R. Allen & Sons.	25
Hendricks, Hurtedon & Co.	10, paid.	Pupke & Reid.	25, paid.
Taorne, Watson & Co.	20, paid.	Cheney Bros.	10, paid.
		Willet & Co.	10, paid.
		Schieffelin Bros.	50
		Edward Hill.	20

The following forged authorization was also found in his possession:

ST. JOHN'S GUILD, No. 5 GREAT JONES-STREET, } NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878. }

The bearer, Mr. Ross, has authority to collect all donations toward the above society.

WILLIAM H. GUION, Treasurer.

These documents were on the official paper of the Guild, and when asked to account for their possession Levy said he had picked them up in the street yesterday. There is scarcely a doubt that Levy is the man who has been for some time past swindling down-town business men by pretending to collect subscriptions for St. John's Guild, and against whom the public was recently warned, through the columns of THE TIMES, by Mr. Guion, the Treasurer of the society.

After locking up his prisoner at the Central Office, Dusenbury returned to Mr. Levy's apartments, believing that he might be able to find some trace of the stolen jewelry. On entering the room he was surprised to find there the notorious thief John Mahoney, alias Mahoney, alias Florence, but better known to the Police as "Jack Sheppard," who was eating his supper. He was arrested a few days ago by Detectives Logan and King, but was discharged for lack of evidence on which to hold him. Sheppard did not recognize Dusenbury, who pretended that he had come there on the invitation of Levy to look at some "stuff" which he had for sale. Jack said that he knew Levy had a lot of nice "stuff," and mentioned several articles which were among the property stolen from the Albemarle Hotel, but he assured Mr. Dusenbury that Levy had sold them all. The officer then left, promising to call again. As there is no complaint against "Jack Sheppard," he was not molested. Levy has been fully identified by Mr. Warner, the clerk of the Albemarle, as the person who had a room at the hotel on the day of the robbery, under the name of Florence, and who left his heavy but valueless valise behind in his hurried departure. The prisoner will be arraigned at the Tombs Police Court to-day.

A FREE-THINKER'S DEATH.

HE LEAVES HIS BODY TO THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS—A SKETCH OF HIS CAREER.

Among the certificates of death received by Dr. John T. Nagle, Registrar of Records of the Health Department, yesterday, was that of Dr. A. Habel, a German physician well known among his fellow-countrymen, who died on New Year's Day at the Roosevelt Hospital from chronic Bright's disease of the kidneys and uremia. The certificate was sent to the Bureau of Vital Statistics by Prof. A. B. Sands, one of the Faculty of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, to which institution the deceased had bequeathed his body for the purpose of dissection and in the interest of humanity. The usual permit for the removal of the remains from the hospital to the dissecting-room of the college was issued by Dr. Nagle, on receiving from the representative of Dr. Sands the assurance that the terms of the statute covering such cases would be complied with, viz., that the remains would be decently interred when they were of no further use to students. Dr. Habel had only been an inmate of the hospital for a few days when death ensued. The will which Dr. Habel left commences as follows: "In the name of the Supreme Being, Humanity, before whom we all bow, amen!" and after disposing of his material property, he goes on to dispose of his body in the following terms: "Finally my life having been devoted to the interests of Humanity, I desire that my death my body may be devoted to the same end, and for this reason I desire and demand that my corpse shall be delivered to the dissecting-room of any of the colleges in the City of New-York which will accept of it, for the purposes of dissection, or to any other college elsewhere, if not accepted by any in this City." The testator bequeaths to the Museum of Natural History in the Central Park four boxes containing specimens of the fauna of South America, and to Prof. E. Haeckel, of Jena, a box of "valuable manuscripts."

In accordance with the terms of his will, Mr. H. W. Brown, his Executor, tendered the body of his friend to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, as stipulated, on behalf of the Faculty of the college. The remains were yesterday removed to the dissecting-room of the college.

Dr. Habel was a native of Austria, and about 60 years of age. He became involved in a political plot about 18 or 20 years ago, and was compelled to leave his native land. With one of his sons, he came to this country. After some months' stay here he went to South America, and while following his profession there he devoted a great deal of his time to the study of the flora and fauna of the country. He sent a large number of specimens to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, and several of his works on South America were published by the Institution. He subsequently settled in Providence, R. I., and there organized a hospital, of which he assumed charge, but his advanced opinions on religious and Socialistic matters resulted in his abandonment of that benevolent enterprise. He returned to this City and resumed the practice of his profession; but he allowed his practice to gradually slip away, and devoted himself almost entirely to writing long dissertations on Socialistic topics. He was eccentric in his habits and dress, and wore a long-tailed coat, invariably buttoned up close, and never cut his hair, allowing it to hang over his shoulders. One of his peculiar ideas was that the Christian names of persons should be designated simply by letters of the alphabet. As for instance, Smith, being the head of a family, should be known as "A" Smith; his eldest son was to be designated as "B," his second son as "C," and so on. He spent a great deal of time in making up a large quantity of paper in elucidating this theory. It is said that he had been divorced from his wife. One of his sons is living in Vienna, and the one who accompanied him to this country is a druggist at St. Louis. Dr. Habel was a prominent member of the New-York Liberal Club. When he was taken sick he sent his books and a large pile of manuscripts as a present to the Liberal Club, and they are now in the library of the club in Eighth-street. At that time he occupied apartments in the house of Mr. Rees, No. 232 Fifth-street. He refused the services of a doctor, and it was only at the urgent solicitation of his friends that he consented to become an inmate of Roosevelt Hospital. Yesterday, Mr. Brown, the Executor named in the will, took possession of the furniture and other effects of Habel, for disposal in accordance with his wishes.

A VILLAIN'S CONFESSIONS.

WESLEY W. BISHOP ON THE STAND.

CONTINUATION OF THE TRIAL OF KATE COBB IN NORWICH—BISHOP'S SHOCKING STORIES OF HIS RELATIONS WITH THE PRISONER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORWICH, Conn., Jan. 4.—One of the most shocking recitals of which imagination can conceive, was that which Wesley W. Bishop made to-day in the trial of Mrs. Cobb. The testimony was of a most revolting character, and on that account many of the women who had forced their way into court the day before were excluded. But quite as disgusting a thing to contemplate was the calm, imperturbability of the narrator. Although he was telling of his guilty intimacy with the woman, and describing his constant interchange of ideas relative to the wicked conspiracy he alleged to have existed between himself and Mrs. Cobb, his face and tone were devoid of any emotion or sentiment, either of reluctance, shame, or delicacy. He talked as freely as if he were explaining a commonplace transaction. Even when counsel, in putting questions to him, employed circumlocution to avoid offensive expressions, he would reply, not in the same terms, but in the broadest language. His manner was entirely free from any suggestion of melancholy or remorse, and the only times when he lost his stolidity was when the opposing counsel had an occasional clash of words, and then the witness' face, of a natural, but deadly, pallor, would light up as with a mirthful laugh, such as ran through the audience. Both to the State's Attorney and the counsel for defense, when they examined him, he directed his full, lifeless gaze without evasion. He spoke in so low a tone and there was so much rustling and coughing in the court-room that it was hard to hear him, but while Mr. Waller was examining the witness that gentleman would repeat the testimony in a loud tone, so that it could be distinctly heard. Mrs. Cobb sat with her veil down as usual, but during a momentary recess about the middle of the forenoon, just after revelations had been made of the most outrageous conduct on her part, she bent over and chatted very freely with her mother and brother. Except when she replied one day to a single confidential question from her counsel, and on another occasion whispered to her child, she has not talked at all in the court-room during the trial hitherto, and at neither of those times did she talk so long or so animatedly as to-day. The impression is quite general that her bearing is assumed, and no index of her real feeling. Certainly there are many circumstances to show that she is a person of more ready wit and force of character than Bishop.

Two witness were first called upon to state on what occasions he had taken Mrs. Cobb out to ride and the circumstances. Three rides were described and stated to be the only ones. They were in April and May; in each case the arrangement was made in the morning when Bishop called for his orders, and in every instance he picked her up in a different part of the city nearly a mile from her home. His buggy was obtained in a different place each time. Their third ride was not marked by any impure conduct. On these occasions Mr. Cobb was either away from home or blinded by a pretense that his wife had gone out to make friendly calls. She was set down at a different place each time not far from her door. These rides were always in the evening. On another occasion they had an assignation nearly two miles from home.

The State's Attorney relieved the horrors of this sickening narrative by changing off at this point to the inclosure of verses by Mrs. Cobb to the witness. Several more sets of verses were here introduced, first being shown to the witness for identification, and then read, with much elocutionary effect and a subdued satirical smile by the State's Attorney. The verses were all newspaper clippings, some of them touching the philosophy of life, others embodying amorous sentiments, and not a few containing allusions to purity and to heaven. None of them contained what could possibly be construed as an impure thought. However, the audience laughed so heartily that the Sheriff was obliged to call for order, and more than once a look of decidedly grim amusement passed over the faces of the attentive jurors. The next serious phase of the examination dealt with Bishop's visits to Cobb's house about the time of the death. Cobb died about Thursday noon, June 6. On Tuesday night Bishop and Mrs. Cobb had a long walk together, Wednesday Bishop stopped at the house twice, seeing Charlie for the first time, and merely passing the time of day with him, and the second time bringing the package of strychnine which Mrs. Cobb had asked for the day before. More inquiries were put here by the State concerning the illicit relations of the parties, the purchase of arsenic, and certain walks on Washington-street, and then a fresh lot of verses was sandwiched in. The four visits made at Cobb's house on Thursday were then detailed, the last one being at 9 A. M., when the witness exchanged a word or two with Charlie as to how the latter was; as he was going out Mrs. Cobb told him in a low tone, in the back hall, that Charlie would not last many days; he came at 10 o'clock, to deliver some goods; the third time was just before 12, and, though he came into the house, he did not go into the sitting-room, as he knew Lemuel Manning was there. Cobb was not there dead; he was, however, at the fourth visit, which was at about 2 P. M.; Bishop did not go into the room to see the body; he was not expecting the death that day; at the time of the third call Cobb had asked to have some potash sent up to the house, and this was the object of the fourth visit; this potash order would have lailed any immediate expectation had Bishop had any; he only saw Mrs. Cobb in the presence of other members of the family that afternoon; Friday morning when he called he was handed two Otis Library books, with a request to return them and make some inquiries about Charlie's ticket; the lid of one book was lifted a little to attract Bishop's attenton, as others were present and conversation was restrained; on getting away from the house he found that within the covers there was a note to him. It said:

"It is done. They are going to have an examination. The Lord only knows what the result will be. Here is the rest. Keep it till all is over."

With the note were two packages, one of arsenic and the other of strychnine, which he disposed of in a closet, with the note, when he got back to the store. The library books were returned as was desired. The only incident on Saturday's visit, which was not free from excitement, except for a moment, was a kiss in the pantry. During the next week he did not see Kate, but sent her several notes by different children, to which she at length replied, telling him not to write to her, but to destroy her, but to come himself under cover of darkness and leave his notes at a certain window in exchange for her notes deposited in the same place; there was other important correspondence prior to his arrest during the latter part of June and Sunday while in jail he received a note from Mrs. Cobb; it was an August afternoon; in his ration-pan or dish he found a little piece of brown tissue paper folded, the nature or object of which he did not at first understand; unfolding it, he found a note inclosed from Mrs. Cobb; he could not see to read it in his cell, and so waited to do so later. [Here the box bia of the prisoner was exhibited, being the brown wrapper, and the other two being thin, crumpled white wrapping-paper. One was covered with writing in a small hand, with a lead-pencil. It was barely legible. The other had a line or two at the top. They were shown the witness and identified.] The jailer took them away from him before he learned their contents.

Mr. Waller asked Bishop about the cause of his wife's death before a reply could be made, Mr. A. F. Park, oldest brother of the Chief-Justice, and the Clerk of the Superior Court, rose and objected as Bishop's counsel. He said that the answer would disturb the jury from the present case, and it might prejudice the approaching trial of Bishop himself. Those who knew the relationship between the objector and the Judge naturally expected that the latter would rule. A ruling was not necessary, however, as Bishop's counsel advised him not to reply, and he then declined to answer. Mr. Waller elicited a statement from the witness that he declined because he was so advised. A few minutes later, Mr. Park had occasion to object to Col. Wait's questions to the witness, whereupon the cross-examiner responded, with mock gravity and great courtesy, "Brother Park, be calm in your mind," and changed the form of his inquiry to avoid the objection. The cross-examination began after a short rec

'FRISCO FACTS AND GOSSIP.

HARD TIMES, MINING STOCKS, AND OTHER MATTERS.

ENFORCED CHRISTMAS ECONOMY — ADVICE FOR EASTERN SPECULATORS IN MINING STOCKS—THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION AND THE CHINESE QUESTION—A KISS FOR A POSITION AS TEACHER—SHAKING HANDS WITH THE SAMOANS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Tuesday, Dec. 24, 1878.

Christmas again—which comes but once a year, heaven be thanked, for it is a dreaded event, trying to the patience, ingenuity, and purse of the whole community. What shall I get for Jones' children, what shall I get for Mary; and paterfamilias and his helpmate consult over the dying embers of the grate, while the man takes the poker and draws little diagrams in the ashes, and after a long silence, borne patiently by the wife of his bosom, who relies on his good judgment and sense, he mildly remarks, "I dunno;" but rousing up and setting the poker down so emphatically that it capsizes and clatters on the ash-pan, ejaculates, "Not much, can't afford anything expensive this year—times too hard, can't afford it." And that seems to be the universal verdict—can't afford much this year, and so the female department of the house wander forth with attenuated pocket-books to find the most for the least amount of money.

The most tempting articles are displayed in the windows, but nobody but some uninitiated woman inquires the price, and gives a little scream when she hears it. Stocks are down, and that means dull trade in this town. It would have made thousands and thousands difference with the fancy-goods men had stocks kept up just one month longer. At the book stores the elegant annuals and beautifully bound standard works in handsome cases stand untouched, and the less expensive books alone sell.

In anticipation of the continuance of the flush times of three months ago—when all was lovely and Sierra Nevada was $250 per share—the credulous tradesmen ordered heavy stocks of rich and expensive goods, which are likely to remain on hand as dead stock until things boom again, which the sanguine element of the community confidently prophesy will be soon. If I had not seen the whole country floored and smashed so often, kilt entirely, and apparently gone to the bow-wows, and in six months everything again lovely and prosperous, I should say a resuscitation was one of the problems or conundrums; but it is not safe to prophesy anything in this country. There is just enough of the old never-say-die spirit left in the people to constitute a reacting element, and this community has more lives than a cat; just when you think it is time to think about burying it, up it gets, and is as lively as ever—a little singed, perhaps, and some hair gone, but it grows again soon, and you can't see where the last brick struck. It is never safe to get ready to die, for while you are ordering your funeral, especially if you have a lot of seemingly worthless old mining shares on hand which represent certificates of past blank foolishness, you pick up the paper some fine morning and read that they have struck it rich in the Woolly Horse or Dead Broke, and you find yourself on your pins again, and forthwith proceed to execute a pas de deux with the partner of your woes around the breakfast-table. You sell shares enough to pay the butcher and baker, and rush into speculation again with the same recklessness as before. We had a booming market for three or four months, and if everybody had sold out, the fortunes flying around loose would have paid the national debt; but somebody must be the last man, those who might have been the first out continued to hold for still higher prices, and when the collapse came cursed their own folly and stupidity, and said, only let us get another such a chance and we will profit by this experience; but they wont, they will do the same thing right over again. The ways of the stock market are as inscrutable as those of Providence. Take Sierra Nevada, for instance; it went to $250 a share on less prospect and less actual promise than to-day. The mine did not look as well as it does at this moment, and yet the price is but $48. The Bodie Mine is another illustration. It started at $1 a share, and ran up within a month to $50, then took a downward plunge, and is quoted to-day at $9, and is still as promising as ever, has paid dividends uninterruptedly, and will probably continue to do so for a long time to come. In this instance, however, public confidence was destroyed by the error of the management in paying too much dividend. The first month it declared a dividend of $3 per share, then one of $5, and then another of $3—in all $11 in one month—and carried over a surplus. The public said, what are those fellows up to; the gait is too fast; and the stock commenced falling. Then the management got mad, and said, well, if you don't like $11 we will reduce it to $1, and $1 it has been since, each dividend paid leaving a surplus to be carried over. If a dividend of say $2 per share had been announced and continued, as it could easily have been, the stock would probably have held up to $40 per share. Eastern investors would be foolish to sell at present prices, as they are certainly realizing a better interest on their money, even if they purchased at the highest prices, than they can get for it on bond and mortgage. There has been a "raid" on this stock for some unexplained reason. There certainly is not at the present moment any good and sufficient cause for its decline. It is not justified by the reports from the mine, which are favorable; it seems to be looking well, is not in debt, and has money in the treasury.

Apparently the only thing to give a mine a value is to levy assessments, and it is astonishing how meekly the public will walk up and pay; like the eels being skinned, they rather like it. This sort of Irish dividend is so generally the rule that when a dividend is finally earned and declared, the community take offense and knock the stock endwise. My advice to Eastern capitalists is not to buy unless they have fully made up their minds to hang on and believe nothing they hear. If it goes down, put it in the safe and forget it, and some day it will turn up jack, with a chance for a reasonable profit. Speculative stocks are not the ones to buy anyhow; better invest in those that are not on our boards at all—the go-slow-and-easys—those that pay only a moderate dividend and keep it up. For any stock that is on the board is likely any day to be raided on by the bears, and the question of its merits entirely disregarded, prices and merit having no connection. It is first too high, then too low, and for any one at such a distance, without any satisfactory explanation of the causes of such fluctuations, to attempt to reason out a theory, for it is simply offering themselves as candidates for the lunatic asylum. It is a waste of time and energy to try to find any good and sufficient reason for its violent fluctuations, there generally being none. As to purchasing, my advice is like that of Punch to the young man contemplating matrimony—Don't, but if you do, don't be frightened out of your money by the gambols of the menagerie. The bears can't afford to lie up and suck their paws all the time, and as their little profits lie in frightening the public by roaring and rattling their chains, they are bound to do it, and will continue the amusement to the end of their days.

In a previous letter I prophesied that the California and Consolidated Virginia would soon resume their dividends. In order that I might be borne out in the statement, the former mine has just declared a dividend of $1 per share, and will probably continue so to do for six months to come. Consolidated Virginia will also, in all probability, resume paying dividends in January or February at the latest. It is never likely to pay its old dividend of $2 per share, but $1 is a fair interest on the present price of the stock, i. e., $8, or 12½ per cent. per month. If there is any man among ye that paid a much higher price, let him strike off and charge to profit and loss or jollification and cigar account all he paid over $25, and congratulate himself on what a splendid investment and what a big interest he is getting on his money. It is like paying $10 for a pair of boots, and wearing them nearly out, and then getting them half-soled, and finding consolation in the splendid pair of boots you have for $2.

Advice being cheap, mine is: if you feel like putting a little money into our mines, to club together and purchase a small gold mine that has never been on our boards, incorporate under your own laws and manage it yourselves in your own fashion, and be content with a matter of 2 per cent. per month, which ought to satisfy any reasonable man on his investment. Take time to investigate before you buy, and when satisfied make your purchase. Manage your mine as you would any other business, with judgment and economy, and the chances are you will have a good and permanent thing. If you are not satisfied with that, and want to make money faster, buy Sierra Nevada at $250 for a rise, and find you "don't got 'em." What makes us old conservatives mad is to see you do this, and then go off into a blue streak of profanity whenever anybody says California mine to you. You might as well blank all of your railroad stocks just because you slipped up on a pool in Erie, and just remember that if we have any little tricks, the men that taught us were mostly imported originally from Wall and Broad streets. Ex-pupils they may have found us out, but as teachers they were "immense." Perhaps you don't like the boomerang principle of the thing!

THE CONVENTION.

We have a convention in session at Sacramento, called to re-form the Constitution—which thus far, although over a month in session, has accomplished little or nothing. Every delegate in it seems to be working to make himself popular with the masses, in view of political preferment hereafter. The popular theme is the Chinese question, and one, to read the proceedings, would judge that the convention was called in the interest entirely of Mr. Denis Kearney and his constituents. The platform laid down on the Chinese question reads, first, that no corporation shall be allowed to employ them; second, that they shall not be employed on public works; third, that they shall not be allowed to lease or own property in the State, or fish in its waters; fourth, that they shall not be allowed to come here or live here at all—a clear case of "skillet." The chances are, that the legislation on John will be of so extreme and sweeping a character as to be declared by higher authority as unconstitutional.

MORE LIGHT.

Hon. Milton S. Latham having become the owner of the right to use all the patents for electric light for the Pacific coast, is making arrangements for its introduction in our city at once. The consequence is that holders of gas stock are fool as happy as they were. The prospect of a relief from the extortions of this great monopoly naturally gives an additional inducement to mankind to remain a little longer on this sphere. If your correspondent is permitted to do so until he sees the millennium in good working order, he will be ready to hand in his chips, having spent the best years of his life in violent contention with gentlemen calling at the office with hieroglyphical calculations on the consumption of their odorific, vile compound, with no just connection between facts and figures. There is just one resource left for the gas company. Having watered its stock so often, it can, without inconsistency, convert itself into a water company when Mr. Latham lets his light so shine. The first occasion will be celebrated by your correspondent in a manner to probably render him insensible for the succeeding 24 hours, having retired from public life to test the efficacy of the wet-towel-on-the-head treatment.

SHOCKING.

We are at present in a high state of virtuous investigation of certain loose proceedings in our Public School Department, which has developed the shocking discovery that the questions and interrogatories to be propounded by the Board of Examiners to the school-marms and applicants for teacherships had been sold by parties in office at rates ranging all the way from a kiss to $200, the one representing the highest and the other the lowest variation of the market. You can take your choice, according to your sentimental or sordid estimate of values. It would naturally seem that the introduction of a kissing department at church fairs, and the low rate at which the luxury has been placed, 25 cents, with the flavor of the last fellow's bad cigar hanging around the young lady's lips, would have a tendency to "bear" the market, in which view of the case the $200 probably represented full value and the kiss the depreciation of the previously valued luxury.

Our Board of Education, being composed of men of staid and sober views, whose kissing days have passed, or, at least, satiety having dulled the edge of appreciation, have bottled all their virtuous indignation on that head, and pour forth their vials on the item of the $200. Whether in consequence of the easy market in the osculatory demonstration and the tight condition of the money question—abundance of the former and scarcity of the latter—in which, of course, there was not an impartial deal, have announced that they are going to dismiss every teacher and refuse certificates to all the ladies concerned, which is a ridiculous resolution in view of the fact that all favors and situations about our City Government are notoriously sold for coin, and a regular tariff exists. For the various offices about the City Hall, the price ranges about $200 for janitor, $150 for sweeper, &c. The school-marms are indignant and are cultivating their nails. Having business with a member of the board a day or two since, I met a young lady teacher just coming out of his office, and when the gentleman appeared there was a long scratch on one cheek and a visible puncture at the end of a very red nose—circumstantial evidence. If on a jury trying the case, I might have given considerable nose and scratch, but, knowing the gentleman well, should have ignored the idea of any ordinary effort succeeding in making an impression on his cheek.

SAMOAN MATTERS.

By the arrival of the schooner Ada May a few days since from Apia, Samoan or Navigators' group, we have late news from that remote quarter of the Pacific, made so famous by the events of the past three years.

It will be remembered that Col. A. B. Steinberger, who made a trip to the group under instructions of the State Department, and who accepted the office of Premier under King Malietoa and subsequently returned to the island and filled that office until, by the intrigues of the English missionaries and German merchants, was forcibly ejected from his position in their trade if Americans were suffered to get a foothold, backed by an English man-of-war, the Captain of which, making a catspaw of the American Consul—a disreputable old reprobate—seized Col. Steinberger by force, and took him on board his vessel, and kept him in irons for several days, and finally took him away and landed him in a destitute condition at the Fijis. The Consul, on some trifling pretense and excuse, seized Steinberger's effects and private papers, and also the yacht Peerless, intended for the use of the Samoan Government, and sold effects and vessel at public auction, the latter to a confederate for $2,000—a vessel that cost 10 times the money, and for which $10,000 had been offered. Steinberger had labored faithfully in the cause of the Samoans, and had given them a good Government, and one that should have been satisfactory to all law-abiding, moral citizens, and more especially the missionaries, inasmuch as it suppressed lawless violence, vice, and the demoralizing inculcation of a taste for intoxicating liquids. But the missionaries, especially the English, headed by Rev. Dr. Turner, who, by long residence had gained an influence over the natives, commenced a system of intrigue, and evinced a determination to undermine and destroy, not only Steinberger's Government, but Steinberger himself. It has been vaguely hinted that one clause in the law sadly interfered with the perquisites of the missionaries, inasmuch as it suppressed vice, whereas the little derelictions of the human race were condoned by a fine which went into the missionary pocket—fund, I mean—and, as may be imagined from the acute character of the denizens of that voluptuous climate, very considerably reduced the revenue; not that vice was so effectually suppressed perhaps, as from the fact that a more reasonable and more moral, but less mercenary, method of suppression was adopted. To the credit of the French Bishop be it said that he threw his influence and weight in favor of the new Government. Steinberger being deposed, the road seemed again open to German and missionary rule. The native Government, however, resolutely maintained its organization, although in a measure powerless to execute its laws, in consequence of the resistance of the turbulent element and the presence of German and English armed vessels, encouraging insubordination, the former of which taking advantage of the weakness of the natives, were constantly threatening bombardment to compel payment of claims of German citizens for alleged damages sustained from various imaginary causes, without shadow of equity or justice. It was only necessary for the Government to collect a few thousand dollars to have some German set up a claim, and forthwith the Captain of the German man-of-war pounced down upon it; and it became evident that as long as there was any prospect of collections there would be a corresponding extortion, so the Government suspended any collection of taxes and sat down to bide its time with that patience and dignity for which the natives are pre-eminent. The next step was to send the Chief Mammea to Washington to ask the protection of our Government. The result was a treaty of reciprocity and good feeling—a deal of hand-shaking and mutual congratulations on it, but very non-committal on our part. But it was a great improvement on the milk-and-water policy pursued under the administration of Mr. Fish, and the nation may thank Mr. Evarts for securing to it privileges of importance, immunity from import duties on merchandise, and, above all, the finest harbor of the group, which at no distant day will be of untold value to us. It was a long stride to a more hopeful policy of our Government, which has been too timid to take advantage of the offers that John Bull and the Germans gobble up without the merit of asking whether it is agreeable or not. The treaty should have been stronger, and protected these simple people from the aggressions of every little Jackanapes of a gun-boat that happens to come along.

As Col. Steinberger declined to return and resume his office, it was determined to select some competent person to go to the islands and represent the same. Accordingly, the selection fell on Major-Gen. Joseph J. Bartlett, whose war record and unexceptionable private character, coupled with abilities of a high order, rendered him eminently fitted for the position. He accepted the appointment, and, arriving here in May last, sailed for the islands. Meantime, Mammea, the Chief, having accepted the courtesy of a passage on the sloop-of-war John Adams—previously ordered to those waters—sailed from Panama the same month. A Commissioner, Mr. Goward, was also dispatched by the Government in the same vessel, to consummate and carry out some details of the treaty. The Adams and the vessel on which Gen. Bartlett sailed arrived at about the same time. The rumor of the treaty had preceded them, and the excitement among the natives and residents was great. Forthwith a grand meeting was called of all the population to hear the report of their Chief, Mammea, and the terms of the treaty. Mammea's account of the civility and kind treatment of our Government officials at Washington called forth enthusiastic cheers for Mr. Evarts from 10,000 stentorian pairs of native lungs, and his popularity in that distant part of the world emitches him to an exceeding prospect to appointment to any office in the gift of the Samoan Government, when the solid South and Democracy have elected the next President, who will kindly relieve him from his arduous duties, &c. When it came to reading the treaty there was great disappointment that it was of so mild a character. The natives fully expected a protectorate, and that in the American Government they had secured a big brother who would protect them—whereas, as one of them expressed it: "American Government very glad to shake hands with us; very glad we no charge 'em duties; shake hands again; very glad we give 'em fine harbor for coaling their ships; shake hands; very glad we have prospect of so much prosperity and good Government; another shake; hope everybody will let us alone; if they don't we will—we will—' expostulate'; let us shake; then we all shake hands again and say what good fellows we all are"—and that is just about the length of the treaty. For more than four years the contest was raging. During that four years envious and unfriendly nations were hoping for the overthrow of the greatest Republic the world ever knew; the lovers of liberty all over the earth were praying with bated breath for our success, and battle succeeded battle until every home was darkened with mourning and every fire-side had its vacant chair.

But finally the war ended. In a little more than four years the vast extent of hostile territory was traversed and subdued. An opposing army, composed of such fighting men as no nation but ours can furnish, was slain, captured, conquered. The autocratic idea of the Government was fully established in the remotest corners of the land, and the old flag of liberty waved in undisputed supremacy, no rebel banner flouting the air. The trials, the privations, the hardships, and the sufferings of those gloomy years, you do not wish me to dwell upon. You saw them, felt and suffered them, and you will never forget them. And you will not, amid the merry-making of this joyous occasion, forget the brave men who went forth with you, but have not returned, whose blood was shed in battle, who died in hospital, whose bones are bleaching in the soil you conquered.

Wisconsin has an empire of her own. Her situation between the largest lakes in the world, and the Father of Waters; her soil, her climate, and productions; her mines, pineries, agricultural fields; her growing towns; her peaceable, law-abiding, intelligent people, who has judges excelled by none, lawyers the peers of any, clergymen and authors whose works are read on both sides the Atlantic—but the plaudits of Wisconsin will forever rest upon her volunteer soldiery. Their deeds of the past will always be referred to in unbounded admiration of the Wisconsin regiments. They were not, perhaps, the most observant of rules and regulations, red tape, and discipline, when no enemy was near, but when the battle approached and the fight began they stood firm and steady, ready to endure any privation or face any danger.

But the disasters of war always survive the conflict of arms. In most countries the army is sent forth to suppress a rebellion, defeat a hostile nation, or conquer territory. When the army has completed its work, they retire to their quarters, and a few regiments are remanded quietly at home while the war was progressing, step to the front and "trample up the consequences." But to quote from the beautiful and admirable speech of President Lincoln at Gettysburg, "This is a government of the people, by the people, for the people."

When war endangered your Government you assumed the part of soldiers, and marched to suppress it. As soon as you had done that you laid aside your guns and muskets, and resumed the character of citizens, and had to take your share of responsibility in determining what should be the results of your victory, and how they should be guarded and secured.

Every long war is followed by financial depression, or, in plain Saxon, by hard times. The Revolutionary war left the country flooded with Continental money, so depreciated in value from the volume issued that a wheelbarrow would not buy a breakfast. Great Britain, the richest nation of the world, after her wars with Napoleon, remained under suspension of specie payments over 20 years, and finally abolished one of the pillars of her system, failed to pay, and returned to specie as a basis of business through trials, individual bankruptcies, riots, and starvation among the people. But with bull-dog tenacity she adhered to her purpose, as Grant did to his plan for taking Richmond, until she came to the shore, and has never since departed from the theory of hard money.

During our late war, the Government, expending sometimes millions a day, was compelled to borrow money on its bonds, and to issue what we call "greenbacks," to be used as currency. These greenbacks were in the nature of forced loans, because they were made by law a legal tender; and they were a useful instrumentality for the emergency of war. But for the time they were only but promises to pay money. And as long as the Government failed to pay the money the greenbacks called for they were broken promises. The Government was morally guiltless for not paying them so long as it was unable to do so, and no longer.

You saved the nation's life in your characters as soldiers; but now that you have resumed the character of citizens, you are as much bound as other citizens to stand up for the nation's honor. Indeed, you, above all other men, have a right to demand that a Government you have fought to preserve should not attempt to destroy itself. The age of depreciated money is past. The Government, and its corporations and citizens, have resumed specie payments to-day, and there is every reason to expect that the Government will be able to stand its ground in this great financial advance, notwithstanding the wiles of brokers, as you held yours amid the storm of war.

Another question of great importance to the welfare of the country is, what should be the policy of the nation toward the conquered South? To deal with this subject justly we must consider her condition before the war, and the change in that condition wrought by the war. Before the war a portion of the white men of the South were nabobs of the land. A portion of the whites, the "poor white trash," as they were called by the aristocracy, were even more despised than the slaves who were compelled to submit to the lash as often as the master ordered it. The great slaveholder was rich, proud, and arrogant. The slave was a chattel. The upheavals of an earthquake do not produce greater changes upon the earth's surface than the abolition of slavery produced in the condition of Southern society. Her slave had suddenly become the equal of his master. The master was not more enraged than the former slave was astonished at this. Rich men had been reduced to poverty, towns had been destroyed, houses burned, and fields laid waste. The desolating plowshare of sovereign wrath had left deep and lasting traces throughout the South. It is impossible to conceive of a more complete transformation of society. Again, in any statesmanlike view of human affairs, allowances must be made for the faults, follies, and foibles of men. These Southern white men were smarting under the humiliation of defeat; their pride had been humbled; their ambition destroyed. Well that it was so; but the fact is an element of proper judgment in their case. We cannot wonder that they did not at once enter into full sympathy with their conquerors, and surrender the opinions forced upon them by the habits of a lifetime. To judge these men justly we must put ourselves in their place.

Now, as long as the subject, "With charity for all" and with malice toward none," to quote again from Mr. Lincoln, what should be the treatment of the South? First, every Southern State should be allowed to resume its position fully as the States while the war was progressing, step to the front and "trample up the consequences." But to quote from the beautiful and admirable speech of President Lincoln at Gettysburg, "This is a government of the people, by the people, for the people."

When war endangered your Government you assumed the part of soldiers, and marched to suppress it. As soon as you had done that you laid aside your guns and muskets, and resumed the character of citizens, and had to take your share of responsibility in determining what should be the results of your victory, and how they should be guarded and secured.

Every long war is followed by financial depression, or, in plain Saxon, by hard times. The Revolutionary war left the country flooded with Continental money, so depreciated in value from the volume issued that a wheelbarrow would not buy a breakfast. Great Britain, the richest nation of the world, after her wars with Napoleon, remained under suspension of specie payments over 20 years, and finally abolished one of the pillars of her system, failed to pay, and returned to specie as a basis of business through trials, individual bankruptcies, riots, and starvation among the people. But with bull-dog tenacity she adhered to her purpose, as Grant did to his plan for taking Richmond, until she came to the shore, and has never since departed from the theory of hard money.

During our late war, the Government, expending sometimes millions a day, was compelled to borrow money on its bonds, and to issue what we call "greenbacks," to be used as currency. These greenbacks were in the nature of forced loans, because they were made by law a legal tender; and they were a useful instrumentality for the emergency of war. But for the time they were only but promises to pay money. And as long as the Government failed to pay the money the greenbacks called for they were broken promises. The Government was morally guiltless for not paying them so long as it was unable to do so, and no longer.

You saved the nation's life in your characters as soldiers; but now that you have resumed the character of citizens, you are as much bound as other citizens to stand up for the nation's honor. Indeed, you, above all other men, have a right to demand that a Government you have fought to preserve should not attempt to destroy itself. The age of depreciated money is past. The Government, and its corporations and citizens, have resumed specie payments to-day, and there is every reason to expect that the Government will be able to stand its ground in this great financial advance, notwithstanding the wiles of brokers, as you held yours amid the storm of war.

Another question of great importance to the welfare of the country is, what should be the policy of the nation toward the conquered South? To deal with this subject justly we must consider her condition before the war, and the change in that condition wrought by the war. Before the war a portion of the white men of the South were nabobs of the land. A portion of the whites, the "poor white trash," as they were called by the aristocracy, were even more despised than the slaves who were compelled to submit to the lash as often as the master ordered it. The great slaveholder was rich, proud, and arrogant. The slave was a chattel. The upheavals of an earthquake do not produce greater changes upon the earth's surface than the abolition of slavery produced in the condition of Southern society. Her slave had suddenly become the equal of his master. The master was not more enraged than the former slave was astonished at this. Rich men had been reduced to poverty, towns had been destroyed, houses burned, and fields laid waste. The desolating plowshare of sovereign wrath had left deep and lasting traces throughout the South. It is impossible to conceive of a more complete transformation of society. Again, in any statesmanlike view of human affairs, allowances must be made for the faults, follies, and foibles of men. These Southern white men were smarting under the humiliation of defeat; their pride had been humbled; their ambition destroyed. Well that it was so; but the fact is an element of proper judgment in their case. We cannot wonder that they did not at once enter into full sympathy with their conquerors, and surrender the opinions forced upon them by the habits of a lifetime. To judge these men justly we must put ourselves in their place.

Now, as long as the subject, "With charity for all" and with malice toward none," to quote again from Mr. Lincoln, what should be the treatment of the South? First, every Southern State should be allowed to resume its position fully as the States while the war was progressing. Second, the privileges which belong to States under the Constitution of this Union. I have always thought that the best way to have dealt with them on the termination of actual war would have been to put them under the Territorial Government until such times as the embers of strife should have died out, and until, coming to their sober senses, they would have sought a return to the Union. But that course was not taken. They were readmitted as States of the Union, and must now be protected in all their rights as States. But while this is the true course now to be pursued, and while they should receive aid in proportion as other States to improve their rivers and harbors and facilitate communication and commerce; on the other hand they should be held to their just obligations toward the colored race of the South, who are really wards of the nation. While they were in slavery they could rely upon the self-interest of their masters to furnish them with the necessaries of life, shelter, food, and raiment. In the enfranchised condition they are deprived of this; and for obvious reasons their former master is converted into their practical enemy. And the nation is in honor bound to exercise the utmost of its constitutional power to protect them in all the rights secured to them by the recent amendments to the Constitution.

* * * * *

In my opinion, there is no doubt of the power of Congress, and consequently no doubt of its duty, to pass such laws as will secure to the colored man all the rights intended to be conferred by these amendments. The war, when you disregard technicalities, was fought to abolish slavery. The result of the war was against slavery, and is embodied in the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments. Congress is clothed with power to legislate so as to carry the general principles embodied in these amendments into practical effect, and in this matter the duty of Congress is commensurate with its power.

For this you, soldiers of Wisconsin, faced the storm of lead. For this you, as citizens, may safely be called upon to join your efforts with those of other citizens pledged to the same end. To fight for a certain result, and then, returning to citizen life, to co-operate with those who wish to defeat this end would be a strange consummation. I do not remember that this is not a political meeting, and I am not making a political speech in favor of either or any political party. I have fully discussed the principles to which I suppose you are devoted, and to which, whichever party—be it Democratic or Republican—which might be most nearly to these principles, I assume your allegiance is due. The question of which party is most devoted to the principles for which you fought I do not discuss, as that would be political.

In conclusion, gentlemen, let me thank you for the invitation to be with you to-night. Let me congratulate you upon the imperishable glory of having been a Wisconsin soldier in the late war—and let me wish you, one and all, a happy New Year.

THE TIMES SPANISH-AMERICAN EDITION.

SECOND EDITION.

In accordance with the requests of several advertisers, another eight-page edition of THE TIMES printed in Spanish and specially prepared for circulation in Central and South America, Spain, Mexico, and the West Indies, will be issued shortly. Intending advertisers should have their notices prepared at once. The distribution of the edition will, as before, be intrusted to the United States Agency for Promoting Foreign Trade, No. 54 Broad-street.

The following firms have already secured space in the Spanish-American Edition, and those who have not yet sent in their names should lose no time in doing so, as the available advertising space in this edition has been nearly filled up.

IN NEW-YORK.

T. KINGSFORD & SON, starch.

FROTHINGHAM & BAYLIS, cotton duck.

WRIGHT, BLISS & FABYAN, cotton goods, commission.

HAGERTY BROS., druggists' glassware.

JAMES TALCOTT, hosiery and underwear, commission.

JOHN P. JUBE & CO., wheels, springs, and axles.

WHITALL, TATUM & CO., druggists' glassware and sundries.

C. POTTER, Jr., & CO., power printing-presses.

MILES BROS. & CO., brushes.

NEW-YORK AND NEW-JERSEY GLOBE GASLIGHT COMPANY, automatic gas apparatus.

HUMPHREY'S HOMEOPATHIC MEDICINE COMPANY.

THE J. M. BRUNSWICK & BALKE COMPANY, billiard-tables.

KARL F. WITTE, felt.

JOHNSON & WILSON, Portland cement.

EDWARD GODDARD, emery-wheels.

HARRIS FINISHING COMPANY, show-card mounting and picture frames.

R. FOULD, toys and fancy goods.

SPIES & KISSAM, guns, pistols, and ammunition, &c.

HENRY MAURER, fire-brick and clay retorts.

WINCHESTER REPEATING-ARMS CO., guns and pistols.

LAMSON & GOODNOW MANUFACTURING CO., cutlery.

JAMES L. LIBBY, linen and paper collars.

HARDING, COLBY & CO., cotton and woolen goods, commission.

G. L. DU LANEY & CO., Little Monitor Sewing-machine.

L. DECKER & CO., premium American billiard-tables.

BELCHER & BAGNALL, Bay State Iron-works.

SMITH & SAYRE Mfg. Co., gas machinery.

DANIEL LOMBARD, rice and coffee machinery.

W. E. JERVEY.

WALKER, HAMMOND & CO., blankets, cassimeres, and tweeds.

WILLIAM A. MILES & CO., brewers.

SHELDON & CO., anchor brand axles.

JAMES BRYAN, electric belts.

CASE, LELAND & CO., tweeds, cassimeres, bleached and brown cotton duck.

BARBOUR BROTHERS, flax threads.

PEERLESS WRINGING COMPANY, wringing machines.

PECK & SNYDER, sporting goods, tricks, and novelties.

J. H. DIGGLES, Ashland prints.

HENRY S. ALLEN, publisher of the only complete History of North and South America.

FROTHINGHAM & EMORY, sectional safes for tropical countries.

J. S. WARREN & CO., fine wall papers and interior decorations.

EAGLESON & DE VEAU, marble and floor tiling.

CHARLIER INSTITUTE.

WILLIAM BUTTERFIELD & CO., shoe machinery and shoe findings.

THOMAS R. MILLER, leather and shoe findings.

STEWART HARTSHORN, patent self-acting shade rollers.

COFFIN & HURLBURT, fur, wool, and straw hats.

JOHN N. STEARNS & CO., manufacturers of silk goods.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN, general educational agency.

DEXTER, LAMBERT & CO., silk manufacturers.

F. W. SANBORN, patent fire-extinguisher.

POMEROY & PLUMMER, cotton and woolen goods commission.

DUNBAR BOX AND LUMBER COMPANY, packing boxes, moldings, and lumber.

J. W. JARBOE & SON, sheet-iron works. Sugar-cooling iron cars a specialty.

BILLMEYER & SMALL COMPANY, manufacturers of narrow-gauge railway rolling-stock.

GARNER & CO., madder prints.

FRANK MILLER & SONS, blacking and harness oil.

J. TRAGESER, copper works.

CHRISTY, SHEPHERD & GARRETT, manufacturers of paper hangings.

DEVLIN & CO., clothiers.

THE INDIA-RUBBER COMB COMPANY.

IN BUFFALO, N. Y.

JOHN T. NOYE & SON, burr mill-stones and portable mills.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

CONTINENTAL WORKS, T. F. Rowland, Proprietor, complete gas-works, Dud's spherical elevator buckets, sugar machinery, and roofs.

IN GREENSPOINT.

UNION PORCELAIN WORKS, manufacturers of China table-ware and Porcelain trimmings.

IRON-CLAD MANUFACTURING COMPANY, metallic shingles and stamped ware.

IN JERSEY CITY.

P. LORILLARD & CO., tobacco manufacturers.

IN NEWARK, N. J.

L. LELONG & BROTHER, gold and silver refiners and assayers.

J. S. MUNDY, hoisting-engines.

PHINEAS JONES & CO., choice wheels for vehicles.

AUGUST BUERMANN, saddlery hardware, special for Mexico and South American trade.

M. STRAUS, patent and enameled leather.

MURPHY & CO., varnish makers.

EDGAR FARMER & CO., trunks and valises.

JOSEPH BALDWIN & CO., saddlery hardware.

CONDIT, HANSON & VAN WINKLE, electric machines and electro-platers' material.

E. KINGSLAND SARGEANT, steam-boiler detergent.

T. S. & J. W. HYATT, wire-bound school slates.

BLESS & DRAKE, smoothing and sad irons.

J. M. QUINBY & CO., carriage builders.

P. HAYDEN, saddlery hardware.

SAMUEL HALSEY & SON, superior patent and enameled oak-tanned leather.

CHARLES M. THEBERATH, saddlery hardware.

CYRUS CURRIER, machinist, iron and brass founder.

LOWERRE & TUCKER, flutting machines.

FISHER VARNISH COMPANY, fine coach and railway varnishes.

HUNTINGTON MACHINE WORKS, turbine, wheels and wood-working machinery.

C. S. OSBORNE & CO., fine saddle and harness tools.

OSCAR BARNETT, malleable and gray iron castings.

E. C. ROBERTSON, superior copal varnishes.

S. STONE & CO., engravers to calico printers.

JAMES R. SAYRE, Jr., & CO., manufacturers and shippers of building and fire brick.

WATTS, CAMPBELL & CO., steam engines and machinery.

IN PATERSON, N. J.

ROGERS LOCOMOTIVE AND MACHINE WORKS.

DANFORTH LOCOMOTIVE AND MACHINE COMPANY.

THE PASSAIC ROLLING MILL COMPANY.

WESTERN ENTERTAINMENT.

CHARADES IN CHICAGO.

HOW THE YOUNG GENTLEMEN OF THAT CITY AMUSE THEMSELVES, ACCORDING TO A VERACIOUS CHRONICLER.

From the Chicago Times, Jan. 2.

All persons interested in educational matters and in the provision of innocent and pleasing entertainments for the young, will be pleased to know that some young gentlemen on the West Side have lately organized a "Society for the Diffusion of Historical and Political Information by Means of Pantomimic and Other Dalliances." The constitution and by-laws, as well as the objects of the society, would have been embodied in the title had not the members concluded that something neat and terse would be more convenient and more taking with the public. The object of the society is to seize the idea of the Mardi Gras processions and apply it to purposes of instruction. It will seek to depict historical events and the great questions of the day by cartoons, pantomimes, tableaux, charades, or any other like manner as it is intended to make them rather enigmatic, so that the mental exercise of guessing what event or question is represented will fix that event or question in the memory, and to make the delineations humorous, so as to lend amusement. It is probable that in a short time every city in the United States will have one of these societies, and then history will be taught in tableaux, and political campaigns will be conducted in pantomime. It is a great scheme.

The first performance of this new West Side society occurred last night. To hire a hall has become vulgar, so the society engaged a vacant store, well out on West Madison-street, for the purpose. As the entertainment was an experiment, it was made strictly private. The Times was the only newspaper that was allowed to have a reporter there. Twenty-five or thirty young men, with high, intellectual foreheads and long hair, somewhat disheveled, and wide, turn-down collars, appeared before the platform, which had been endowed with a few of the accessories of a stage. The other members of the society were behind the curtain, getting ready to perform.

Mr. Amos Biggins, the President of the society, an intellectual giant who has written many articles for the magazines and reviews, all of which have yet to appear, called the society to order, and explained the nature and objects of the entertainment, and soared on the pinions of oratory as he described the beneficent reform this society was to inaugurate. In the absence of a bell he then rapped with his pen-knife on a beer-glass, and the curtain was hoisted, after some delay, by two little boys who did not pull in unison.

Presently a fat boy, bearing a placard marked "1870," appeared behind the footlights.

Mr. Salathiel Emmons remarked that it wasn't fair to go back so far as that; the members of the society hadn't had time to cram up on ancient history.

Mr. Jotham Stubbs asked why 1870 was fat.

Mr. Augustus Fitz Kataleptic replied, in his facetious way, that it was because 1870 ate.

Then the society began to tumble to the thing.

Mr. Philetus Finnegan said: "I knew'd 'twas the place to learn dates," and then they all begged Mr. Biggins to move on his show; they couldn't stand the fat and funny fellow any further.

The next scene represented three aged men, in blue swallow-tailed coats, with brass buttons, curiously examining a disk of silver, rather smaller than a dinner-plate. One of the three men said he never saw anything like that before. Another said he had worked in the Mint for 30 years and none was made during that time. The third said he used to buy things like that to make silver spoons of.

Nobody could quite make it out, and Mr. Biggins kindly explained that it represented three of the fathers examining one of their dollars which the song kindly made for them last year. The only young man present who was in the habit of reading the Tribune here, but the other members said "Hist! we want to hear what is said on the stage."

By a remarkable coincidence the coin and the three men moved off the stage together and were succeeded by an almond-eyed son of heaven, with a wash-tub. He merely looked up, and briefly inquired, "Wantee washee!"

Mr. Solomon Dobbins suggested that the sounds that emanated from that wash-tub might be regarded as chin-easy music, and not being thrown out of the window, he ventured to add that it was probably pitched on the key of C-lestial. He saw immediately that he made a mistake which it would be fatal to repeat.

"Wantee washee!" asked the Chinee again.

"That," said Mr. Biggins, "is the Chinese question. Now the Chinese must go and make room for the next figure."

A fine, healthy tobacco-plant was moved on to the stage in a pot, and at one fell swoop of a bread-knife it was cut off close to the ground.

The society looked on in astonishment. Nobody could guess it. Finally one member of the society, who ne'er wou'd tak' ping when he could get anything else, observed that that was a pretty fine cut.

Mr. Biggins said that was not the answer.

Mr. Augustus Fitz Kataleptic remarked that that reminded him of a once great New-York editor. He was called on to explain, and replied: "Why, don't you see Tru'low Weed?"

Mr. Biggins said something about the need of a Sergeant-at-Arms. As nobody guessed the meaning of the charade, he said it represented the Ohio election. When he was asked how he made that out, he said it was the destruction of the Green'backer.

After the tobacco had been removed, a parrot was placed in view of the audience. Attached to it was a card, on which was written: "To President Hayes, from his grateful admirers, Govs. Chamberlain and Packard."

Mr. Hannibal Simpkins asked if the parrot could talk, and Mr. Biggins said it couldn't speak a word. "Then," said Mr. Simpkins, "it is the President's Southern poll I see, and it is a failure." A round of applause greeted this bull's-eye hit, and the parrot moved on.

Next came a grand transformation scene. A gentleman appeared, at a table with a finely-roasted turkey before him. When he took up the knife and fork the roast turkey disappeared, and the man on one was seen strutting around. The man put out his hand to catch the turkey and it turned into a little yellow dog. He started to kick the dog and

JAN 1879

THE HOUSEHOLD.

FEATURES OF THE JANUARY MARKET

Snow and cold weather have had the effect to make prices higher for fresh green vegetables. In Washington Market, yesterday, cabbages were sold at 10 to 20 cents per head, according to size; spinach at 25 cents per half peck; cauliflower at 25 to 35 cents per head; squash at 15 to 40 cents each, according to size; Boston lettuce at 10 cents per head, and parsley at 5 cents per bunch. Hot-house radishes sell at 5 cents per bunch, and prices for potatoes, onions, turnips, and like staples are the same. Cranberries are higher, selling at 15 cents per quart, and apples, grapes, and pears are not dearer, but there is a tendency to an advance on the present rates. Choice butter is not plentiful; the prices for good to fancy are 30 to 38 cents per pound. Eggs from near-by points sell at 36 cents per dozen, and Western, Southern, and Canada eggs at 28 cents. Meat is abundant, and the demand being comparatively moderate, buyers have opportunities to make good bargains. The prices current in Washington Market, yesterday, were as follows: Beef.—Prime ribs, for roasting, per pound, 20 cents; chuck ribs, 12 to 14 cents; porter-house steaks, 26 cents; sirloin steaks, 20 to 22 cents; round steaks, 16 cents; stewing pieces, 8 to 10 cents; legs, 75 cents each, and shins, 50 cents; salted beef, 8 to 14 cents. Mutton—Legs, per pound, 16 to 18 cents; hind-quarters, 14 to 16 cents; forequarters, 8 to 10 cents; chops, 20 to 22 cents. Veal—Breasts and shoulders, per pound, 10 to 11 cents; cutlets, 25 cents; chops, 18 cents; common pieces, 8 cents. Pork—Loins and chops, per pound, 7 cents; shoulders, 6 cents; fresh hams, 9 cents; loins of fresh New-Jersey pigs, 8 to 10 cents; fresh sausages, 10 cents; smoked hams, 10 cents; smoked jowls, 10 cents; salted hams, 8 to 9 cents, and salted pork, 7 cents; lard, 9 to 10 cents. For inferior meat of all kinds prices are a little lower, and for very fancy qualities a little higher.

Quail are plentiful and cheap, selling at $1 per dozen; grouse sell at 90 cents to $1 per pair; partridges at $1 per pair; rabbits at 25 to 40 cents per pair, and hares at 50 cents per pair. Other varieties of game and poultry sell at the prices current last week, and there are no changes to be observed in the rates for other table supplies.

RECEIPTS FOR THE TABLE.

SPARKLING BROTH, OR BEAN SOUP.—Procure one quart of small black beans, or white ones will do, and soak them in boiling water over night. In the morning put the beans in six quarts of water in a large boiler, adding some beef or mutton or any kind of cold meats that you may have in the house, first cracking the bones and cutting off the fat from the meat. Put to it one large onion, some nutmeg, and whole peppers. Set it on the fire where it will simmer nine hours. Then strain it, rubbing all the mealy parts of the beans through the sieve. Wash the boiler and return the soup to it to heat up. When served, cut up half a lemon in very thin slices and lay in the bottom of the tureen, pouring the soup, boiling, over them. A wine-glass of claret is a great improvement.—AUNT ADDIE.

BAKED FISH.—Take any nice fish, boil it, remove the bones, and chop considerable parsley very fine, with one small onion. Have about as much bread crumbs as fish. Take a pudding-dish and butter it, then lay in a layer of bread crumbs, then a layer of fish, ending with the bread crumbs. Mix your parsley and onion with salt and pepper through your bread crumbs. Put lumps of butter over the top, a very slight grating of nutmeg, and cover over it all sweet cream, or very rich milk, till it rises nearly to the top. Bake in a quick oven till it has a nice, rich brown crust.—AUNT ADDIE.

CHICKEN SALAD (for 12 persons.)—Two chickens weighing six pounds, two bunches of celery. Boil the chickens in very little water; cut in large pieces; dry the celery without washing; take two yolks of hard-boiled eggs, the yolk of one raw egg, and mix them together with one teaspoonful of dry mustard; add slowly half of a large bottle of oil, the juice of one lemon, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, teaspoonful of salt, little red pepper; put in a cold place just before using; mix it through the chicken; also two hard-boiled eggs cut fine, one tablespoonful of capers, and six olives, cut fine; save little dressing for the top.—CLARA.

MOLASSES CAKE.—Two cups of New-Orleans molasses, one of butter, four eggs, half cup cold water, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of ginger, four cups of prepared flour; heat the molasses before mixing, and stir the butter in while hot; let it cool before you put the eggs in; this will make the cakes, as they should not be very thick; bake in one-half hour in quick oven.—M. A. M.

WATER POUND CAKE.—One pound of flour, one pound of sugar, one-half pound of butter, four eggs, and one cup of warm water. Use prepared flour, or put into the flour before sifting it two even teaspoonfuls of any good baking powder. The cup of water must be quite warm, but not really hot. Beat eggs separately.—AUNT ADDIE.

POVERTY CAKES.—One pint of milk, one teaspoonful of saleratus, two eggs. Make them just stiff enough with Indian meal to work into balls, and boil them in hot fat. To be split open and eaten with butter.

CUP CAKE.—One cup of white sugar, one-half cup of butter, two eggs, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful cream tartar, half teaspoonful soda, half cup of milk. Rub the butter and sugar together, and the eggs separately.

KING CAKE.—Three-quarters of a pound of butter, one and a quarter pounds of sugar, one nutmeg, six eggs, and cup milk; flour to make an ordinary batter.

SPONGE CAKE.—One coffee-cup sugar, one coffee-cup flour, four eggs, one lemon.

DOUGHNUTS.—Take one cup of powdered sugar, four eggs, one cup of sweet milk, one-fourth cup of butter, one nutmeg, four cups of prepared flour; mix as soft as tea biscuit; make them half the size you wish to fried; put in lard and in five minutes will cook them. This receipt will make four dozen.M. A. Mc.—

INFORMATION WANTED.

Receipts for oat-meal cakes and porridge.
Various ways of cooking tripe.
A receipt for seasoning sausage.
How to make apple tapioca pudding.
Receipts for Scotch short-bread and New Year's bun.
How to cook a sheep's head and trotters in the Scotch fashion.

THE TRAFFIC IN VOTES IN GEORGIA.

From the Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer, Jan. 2.

There were hundreds of votes to be disposed of yesterday at the county election. A black crowd surrounded the polls from early morn to dewy eve. In the slush and mud the suffrage slingers were hauled and pulled around, and their ballots were purchased at all the way from a nickel whisky, warranted to make a drunk come at 40 yards, to 75 cents. This was the highest quotation we heard of, and only one emancipated citizen boasted that he had secured that much. A gentleman who had been canvassing in the country for a week informs us that the prevailing price was 5 to 10 cents, but liquor of the meanest description was more potent than silver quarters. Of course there are colored people whom money cannot buy. Honest men around the polls were shameful, and farces on free elections. Livings must be hard to get when gentlemen and their friends are thus forced to scramble for place, and certainly not large salaries. Voters hung around and awaited the highest bidder. They held themselves at so low a figure that not much money was spent. Only Democrats were candidates, and votes were regarded as a very cheap commodity. Amid the wild confusion good humor prevailed, and there were only the minor quarrels incident to such elections. Many things most ludicrous occurred. No attempt was made to collect the poll-tax, and property-owners must pay for the dissolute children in defiance of those ignorant negroes who voted in plain violation of the laws of Georgia which provide, as a requisite for voting, the prepayment of taxes. One reason why crime diminishes is that the laws are not enforced. If they are not in small, how can it be expected that they will be in the great, instances, and how can the lawless pretend to respect statutes which they see palpably violated and not even an objection made?

DISSATISFIED WITH TEXAS.

From the Petersburg (Va.) Index-Appeal, Jan. 3.

Mr. Tobe Spencer, of Henry County, went to Texas to mend his fortunes a few weeks ago, but was soon satisfied that there was no prospect of employment there, and has returned to Danville. He found hundreds of men out of work, and the prospect so gloomy that he came home as fast as the cars would bring him. The emigration of young men from Virginia to other States ought to be checked by such frequent reports, like that of Mr. Spencer, of the difficulties and discouragements to be encountered in every new field of labor. The same amount of energy, hard work, and economy required to success in Texas or in the West would insure the same degree of prosperity in Virginia, amid infinitely superior conditions of society and public morals.

SEVEN CHILDREN LOST BY DIPHTHERIA.

From the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, Jan. 3.

A very sad case of affliction is that of the family of Mr. Charles Morse, of Plainfield, seven of his ten children having died of diphtheria within two weeks, their ages ranging from 1 to 13 years. They were obliged to bury them without any ceremony, except a prayer at the time the first two were buried. The disease is reported to have been taken from some clothes that were given to the children by a friend who recently lost two children by diphtheria.

A POOR WOMAN LEFT TO DIE.

From the St. Louis Republican, Jan. 2.

A poor woman was frozen to death nine miles southwest of Joplin, Mo., on Thursday. The woman, whose name the informant did not know, lived in a brush tent in the woods with her husband and one child, a little girl. On Thursday the weather was so cold that they could not endure it in their rude home, and the three started to the house of a neighbor, but the husband and child went ahead, and seeing the poor woman wading through the snow, hurried on. When they arrived at the house they waited some time, but she did not come, and the husband started back to look for her. Not finding her, he gave up the search, supposing that she had stopped at some house, unable to proceed further. No further search was instituted until the next day, which proved fruitless. In the afternoon a gentleman driving along the Seneca road saw a human form seated against a tree, and going to the body found it was frozen stiff. He notified the neighbors, who, going to the corpse, found it was that of the missing woman, who, overcome by cold the day before, had sat down alone in the woods to die.

HOW SILVER WAS DEMONETIZED.

EX-CONGRESSMAN PACKARD, OF INDIANA, EXPLAINS HOW THE BILL WAS PASSED —IT WAS NOT DONE IN A CORNER.

Hon. Jasper Packard, of Indiana, who was a member of Congress in 1873, when the bill demonetizing silver was passed, has written a letter to the Chicago Inter-Ocean, in reply to some strictures by the Tribune of that city, and giving a history of the act. He writes:

"On the 28th day of April, 1870, nearly three years before it became a law, this celebrated bill was introduced in the Senate by Mr. Sherman, when it was referred to the Finance Committee and ordered to be printed. This was in the second session of the Forty-first Congress. On the 19th day of December, 1870, after the vacation, and in the third session of the Forty-first Congress, Mr. Sherman reported the bill from the Finance Committee. On the 4th day of January, 1871, he gave notice that he would attempt to call it up next day. But it was not called up until the 9th. Then the Chief Clerk, as the Globe states, 'proceeded to read the bill,' but was interrupted by other business, 'before concluding,' after which 'the Chief Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.' Then the Senate proceeded to its consideration as in the Committee of the Whole, when it was discussed through 30 columns of the Globe. The next day the Senate resumed consideration of the bill, discussed it through 16 columns of the Globe, passed it, and reported it to the House, Jan. 11, 1871, on motion of Mr. Kelley, the Chairman, (observe that it was Judge Kelley, and not Hooper,) it was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, Jan. 13, Mr. Kelley moved that the bill be printed, which was ordered by the House. Feb. 24, Mr. Kelley reported it back with a substitute, which was ordered to be printed and recommitted to the committee. On the 9th day of March, which was in the first session of the Forty-second Congress, Mr. Kelley introduced the substitute bill, which was ordered to be printed and referred to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, then appointed. It did not come up again until the 10th day of January, 1872, in the second session of the Forty-second Congress, when it was reported from the committee by Mr. Kelley, 'with the recommendation that it do pass.' It was then discussed through 32 columns of the Record. On this occasion Mr. Kelley made a long and able speech in support of the measure. He gave the history of its inception, the various which required its adoption, how carefully the committee had gone over the ground, taking the opinion of experts in coinage, and 'thus enlightened,' said Mr. Kelley, 'the committee proceeded with great deliberation to go over the bill, not only section by section, but line by line and word for word.'

"I invite especial attention to the above remark of Judge Kelley, as to some further remarks of his, which I shall quote in another place in this article. I know that he is now an advocate of the remonetization of silver, even to the extent of free and unlimited coinage, and that he repeated this in the House of Representatives the Tribune fabrication that silver was demonetized surreptitiously. But I will put Judge Kelley of 1873 against Judge Kelley of 1878, and let the people decide. Or I will put Judge Kelley drunk to Philip sober,' and let himself decide.

"After some time in general discussion on the bill, it was ordered to be considered as in Committee of the Whole, during its reading section by section, in accordance with the rules of the House. The day expired with the discussion not completed, and it did not come up again, having been recommitted until Feb. 9. Then Mr. Hooper, which is the first time he appears in connection with it, reported it, in order to have it again printed and recommitted, which was ordered by the House. On the 13th of February Mr. Hooper offered to report it, and, after considerable discussion, a day was fixed for its consideration. On this occasion Mr. Kelley explained that on account of his constant labors on the Committee of Ways and Means he had 'requested' Mr. Hooper, the second of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, to act in his place, from which it will be seen that Mr. Hooper's connection with this measure was purely accidental, and not at all of his own seeking. 'The committee made some corrections' (of typographical errors,) 'and on the 14th of February Mr. Hooper moved that the bill be printed as corrected, which was ordered. On the 9th of April it came up for discussion, and was discussed through 40 columns of the Record, Mr. Kelley being its foremost advocate. The Tribune states in this connection that neither Mr. Hooper nor any one else 'lisped a word' about the effect of this bill on the silver dollar, and then asserts that it was 'smuggled' into this bill but the 'coadjutors' who demonetized silver. But let us hear what was said in the debate: First, let Mr. Hooper speak, that though dead, may vindicate himself against the aspersions of the Tribune. He mentioned each section of the bill by number, and explained each and every one. Speaking to section 14, he said: 'Section 14 declares what the gold coins shall be, and their respective weights.' In addition, it declares the gold dollar of 25 8-10 grains of standard gold to be the unit of value. Gold practically having been in this country for many years the standard or measure of value, as it is legally in Great Britain and most of the European countries, * * * the committee, after careful consideration, concluded that 25 8-10 grains of standard gold, constituting the gold dollar, should be the money unit or metallic representative of the dollar of account.'

"Judge Kelley said: 'It is impossible to retain the double standard. The value of gold and silver continually fluctuates, as has been manifest this year what will be the relative values of gold and silver next year. They were 15 to 1 a short time ago; they are 16 to 1 now. Hence, all experience has shown that you must make your gold and silver, which shall be a legal tender for all others, and then you may promote your domestic convenience by having a subsidiary coinage of silver which shall circulate in all parts of the country as legal tender for a limited amount, and be redeemable at its face value by your Government.'

"Mr. Stoughton, another member of the committee, said: 'Aside from the 83 gold piece, which is a departure from our antiquated ratio, and therefore objectionable, the only change in the present law is in more clearly specifying the gold dollar as the unit of value.'

"Mr. Potter, opposing the bill, said: 'Then in the next place the bill provides for the making of changes in the legal-tender coin of the country and for instituting as legal tender, coin of only one metal, instead, as heretofore, of two.'

"If the foregoing does not show the whole story of the change of the monetary unit from silver to gold, I cannot conceive how it could have been done. If that is keeping secret the change of the unit of value from the one metal to the other I cannot imagine any possible way of making it known.

"The measure was discussed on this day through 40 columns of the Record, and, on motion of Mr. Hooper, it was ordered to be considered under the five-minute rule in the House as in Committee of the Whole, which necessarily involved its reading section by section. The end was not yet reached when the House adjourned for the day. By this time everybody was tired of the bill, and on the 27th day of May Mr. Hooper presented an amendment in the nature of a substitute, making a few changes so as to render it acceptable to those who opposed any increase of salaries, and to those who did not favor the proposed manner of obtaining nickel for coinage, and in regard to the nickel coinage generally. Mr. Hooper patiently answered all the questions asked him concerning it, and then the bill was passed, only 13 voting in the negative. It then went to the Senate, passed that body in the third session of the Forty-second Congress, and became a law on the 12th day of February, 1873. It had a remarkably long road to travel, but got through at last. A word as to its title. The Tribune complains that there was no suggestion in the title that the bill had anything to do with the coinage, and then invents the following as its title: 'A bill for the better regulation of the Government Mints and for other purposes.' That is a pure fabrication. It was entitled, just as the law is, where it appears in the statutes, 'A supplemental act to the Statutes at Large,' A bill revising and amending the laws relative to the Mints, Assay Offices, and coinage of the United States,' plainly suggesting the very thing to which the Tribune says it made no reference.

"But, cornered completely on this bill, the Tribune tries to make a flank movement and loudly asserts 'Congress did not demonetize silver in the act of Feb. 12, 1873, and the evidence is had the Revision Committee to do it!' The real fraud was committed by them.' This is a worse blunder than the other. If the Tribune writer is not to be condemned for willful falsehood, he is to be pitied for dense ignorance. To prove the error of the Tribune statement, it need only ask a comparison of the fourteenth section of the Coinage act, as it appears in the seventeenth volume, page 434 of the United States Statutes at Large, with the same subject in the Revised Statutes of 1875. They will be found alike, word for word, showing that the Committees on the Revision of the Laws and the 'codifiers' only did their duty and stated the law exactly as they found it. They could not have done otherwise."

A NEW-YORKER LOSES $1,000.

From the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, Jan. 2.

David H. Holmes, of New-York, while passing through the city Tuesday night, stopped for a lunch at the Union Depot. Soon after reaching London he missed his pocket-book, containing a check for $1,000, about $150 in bills, and some valuable papers. He returned to the city and informed Officer McEwen of the loss. The opinion prevails that the wallet was lost and not stolen. During Tuesday a man found a roll of bills on the depot floor, near the west entrance, and soon afterward left on an Eastern train.

A FRANTIC LOUISIANA JOURNAL.

From the Shreveport (La.) Standard.

Information seems to point to the fact that a considerable number of arrests will be made in this and the immediately adjoining parishes. Indeed, there is no doubt that the hirelings of Devens will be along soon, and numbers of our citizens incontinently dragged away from their homes to answer fruitless charges preferred against them by an oppressive Administration. We want to put even with that crowd in the long run.

MILITARY GOSSIP.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES.

Battery C, artillery, Brooklyn, Major John Timmes commanding, will give its twentieth annual ball at Military Hall, Brooklyn, E. D., on Monday evening, Jan. 13.

Gen. Frederick Vilmar, commanding the Second Brigade, has issued orders directing his staff to conform in uniform and equipments to the requirements of the General Regulations.

The first annual meeting of the National Guard Association of this State is to be held at Albany on Thursday and Friday, Jan. 23 and 24. Ten-day encampments, matters of equipments, and rifle practice will comprise the topics of discussion.

The military friends of Gen. James Jourdan, acting commander of the Second Division, Brooklyn, presented to him a handsome gold watch and chain valued at $375, on New Year's Eve last. Capt. Baldwin, of the Thirteenth Regiment, made the presentation speech.

The Old Guard met on Thursday evening last and elected the following commissioned officers for the current year: Major, George W. McLean; Captains, Charles H. Todd and H. L. Earle; First Lieutenants, E. S. Sallin and James Hamsi; Second Lieutenants, L. C. Bruce and Walter K. Page.

The "Burgesses" Corps, Albany, is to give a ball next Tuesday evening, at which Major McLean and the officers of the Old Guard of this City have promised to be present, and the former in turn have decided to be present at the ball of the Old Guard, which is to take place at the Academy of Music on Jan. 23 next.

The Thirteenth Regiment, Brooklyn, Col. D. E. Austen commanding, is to give a concert at the Academy of Music in that city, on Thursday evening, Jan. 23. E. Marshal Peavey has been elected Second Lieutenant of Company A, a handsomely-mounted sword was presented to Lieut. J. Rotino, of Company A, by the members of that company, on New Year's Day.

Adjt. Gen. Franklin Townsend received leave of absence for two months, and sailed for Europe on Wednesday last. Gov. Robinson, in General Orders No. 22, has detailed Inspector-General John B. Woodward as Acting Adjutant-General in the interim. Gen. Townsend has been in poor health for some time, and, as a protracted visit to the South failed to give him relief, he has decided to try the effect of a foreign climate.

Battery K, Artillery, Major A. Hoelzle commanding, is under orders to parade, dismounted, in full uniform, with sabres, at Teutonia Assembly Rooms, No. 160 Third-avenue, on Wednesday, Jan. 22, at 9 P. M. The battery will drill in fatigue uniform at its armory on Thursdays, Jan. 9 and 30; Feb. 6, 20, and 27; March 13 and 27. Drills will be held by this command at the State Arsenal on Thursday evenings, Jan. 16, Feb. 13, March 6 and 20, April 3 and 10.

The athletic sports of the Twenty-third Regiment, Brooklyn, afforded amusement to 1,500 spectators last Tuesday evening. The programme, as previously published, was fully carried out, and there were many amusing incidents in connection with the entertainment which were of an informal character. The judges were Howard Crosby, Edward Raynor, and George Crosby, of the New-York Athletic Club. Capt. Scholtz, of this city, who did the "starter," awarded the prizes. Francis W. Stone has been elected Second Lieutenant of Company K, in this command.

In reviewing the proceedings of the Division Court-martial for the trial of delinquencies in the Third Regiment, Cavalry, Gen. Shaler says: "It appears from the original records that in a number of instances the court received from delinquents the amount of the fines imposed. This was entirely without authority of law, and all action by the court or any of its officers, having in view the enforcement of the penalties prior to the approval and publication of the proceedings by the officer ordering the court, and before the expiration of the time allowed for appeal, were illegal, and therefore null and void."

Capt. John A. Edwards, commanding Gatling Battery, Brooklyn, directs the command, in orders, to drill by platoons as follows: First platoon, Friday, Jan. 10, and Wednesday, Jan. 15; second platoon, Thursday, Jan. 16, and Wednesday, Jan. 22. Lieut. P. I. Hoffman will command the battery on Jan. 10 and 15. An election for Corporals will be held by this command to-morrow evening. A circular bearing the signatures of Gen. Ira L. Beebe, Major J. F. Simons, and others has been issued to veterans and ex-members of the Seventh, calling a meeting to be held at the armory of Gatling Battery, next Wednesday evening, for the purpose of organizing a veteran association.

Col. George A. Begy, commanding the Fifty-fourth Regiment, Rochester, has resigned. Probably the unfortunate circumstances culminating in his court-martial are the cause of his retirement. He has been a good officer, and his term of service expired long ago. Col. Begy joined the Fifty-fourth Regiment in 1861 as a member of the "Flour City Cadets," the title by which Company G was formerly known. The command has grown into large and non-commissioned officer successively, he accepted promotion as First Sergeant of the company, then Captain, and finally filled in turn the offices of Major, Lieutenant-Colonel, and Colonel. He had been in command of the regiment for four years, and was recognized as an efficient officer.

The several companies of the Eleventh Regiment are directed in orders by Col. Frederick Unbekant to drill in fatigue uniform, by wings, as follows: Companies D, C, B, K, and H, Tuesdays, Jan. 7 and 21, Feb. 4 and 18; Companies G, F, I, A, and E, Tuesdays, Jan. 14 and 28, Feb. 11 and 25. The officers and non-commissioned officers are under orders to assemble for instruction at the armory every Friday evening during the drill season. Sergt. and Drum-Major L. Sohr, late of the State Arsenal, leave, it is announced as a "deserter" by Col. Unbekant, and he has detailed Sergt. F. Schuman in his place.

Capt. Lentilhon, commanding Company K, Seventh Regiment, has issued orders announcing the following committees for the current year: Recruiting—Corp. Mortimer, P. F. MacDonald, and J. T. O. Rhinelander. Armory—James R. Beach, J. L. Hobson, and S. V. Stratton. Uniform—Lieut. Bacon and Sergts. Williams and Lane. Capt. Lentilhon congratulates his command, in orders, on its efficiency and drill, as well as for the earnest and successful efforts of its members in connection with the new armory fund, by which the company subscription has been increased to $10,472 89. Of this sum, $9,500 has been paid to the Trustees. The gain of the company for enlistment in 1878 was 15 men and filed and stipulation be given, the company will in that case be continued till judgment be entered in the action.

Wood et al. vs. Morrissey.—This motion is ordered to stand over, to enable the moving party to answer the allegation of defendant's affidavits so far as he may be advised, and also to bring before the court the pleadings in the action, the order of reference, and the Referee's report, the answering affidavits to be served on the attorney before the hearing, and the motion is set down for the third Monday of January, 1879.

Flynn vs. Hinze.—The undertaking was defective. I am not satisfied with the bona fides of the judgment and sale of the furniture thereunder. The injunction should be dissolved, with $10 costs of the motion.

By Judge Donohue.

Granted.—In the matter of Boyd; In the matter of Simms.

Fletcher vs. Reilly.—Motion denied, with $10 costs, to be paid by attorney.

James vs. Idaho Silver Mining Company.—Motion granted on defendant giving security to pay amount received and pay costs since default, including the costs in motion to appoint Receiver; otherwise, denied.

Messing vs. Strobel.—Motion granted as to Strobel on payment of costs of inquest, of the term, and $10 of the motion, defendant to give security to pay what may be recovered. As to Sheriff, opened, costs to abide event.

Sherman vs. Inman Steamship Company.—Motion denied. Memorandum.

Hofman vs. Connor.—Undertaking approved.

Hilard vs. Coles.—No notice of application to third party with papers.

Phelps vs. McEwen.—Order granted.

In the Matter of Robles.—Demurrer overruled and judgment for the respondent; writ dismissed and infant remanded.

Speers vs. Speers.—In this case it seems to me the attack of the defendant on her former attorney is a wanton one and wholly unsustained by the facts and as to the defense alleged by her, there seems a shade of guilt with all the sworn statements against her, specially pointing out facts, in face of her letters, is of no weight whatever. Motion denied, with costs.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Lawrence.

Gano, &c., vs. McCunn et al.—Opinion.
Patterson vs. McCunn.—Opinion.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART II.

By Judge Lawrence.

Lyons vs. Rosenthal et al.—Case and amendments as settled.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Freedman.

Woodward vs. Flynn.—Order denying motion.
The Franklin County Bank vs. Mathesch.—Order to pay money to plaintiff's attorney, &c.
Johnson et al. vs. Universal Life Insurance Company.—Order discontinuing action.
Mack vs. The Highland Chemical and Mining Company et al.—Ordered on special calendar for second Friday of January.
Thomaselli vs. Stevens.—Order denying motion for extra allowance.
Orders Granted.—Wohlsmuth vs. Peter et al.; Bateman et al. vs. Baldwin; In the matter of the inquisition, &c., of Ansoldson, &c.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge Van Hoesen.

Granted.—Boyman vs. The Pacific Railroad Company vs. Pierce et al.; Goldberg vs. White; In re Assignment of Burtnett to Wentworth; Granbery vs. Dickinson; Sommer vs. Leramiere; Hayes vs. Sapersky; Davis vs. Smith; Churchill vs. Smith; Kehoe vs. Riedlein; Grinnell vs. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; Schlesinger vs. Hull; Goldberg vs. White.
Judgment & Co. to Gaslight.—Bond, $100,000.
Perkins to Rogers.—Bond, $95,000.
Bellows to Westinghouse.—Bond, $3,000.
Bush to Bendel.—Bond, $2,500.

MARINE COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

By Judge McAdam.

Manhattan College vs. Goldthwaite.—Referee's report confirmed and defendant fined $185 for contempt, according to the opinion of the Referee. Defendant required to appear and examine his commissioner on the 20th day of January, at 10 A. M.
Judgments.—Scott vs. Pierce; Scott vs. Gaslight

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

SALES AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE—JAN. 4.

GOVERNMENT STOCKS—10:15 A. M.

U. S. 6s, Cur.
$10,000.....119½
U. S. 5s, 1867.
5,500...b.s. 99⅝

U. S. 5-20 C. '65.
10,000...b.s. 104¾

U. S. 4s R., 1907.
4,000...b.o. 99½

FIRST BOARD—10:30 A. M.

N. C. 6s, pr. t. 3d pd.
$700...am. 33½
La. 7s, con.
6,000...b.o. 68½
5,000...b.o. 69
Chi. & Alt. s. f.
20,000.....101⅛
N. J. C. conv. 6s.
7,000.....73⅛
N. J. C. Adjm't.
1,000.....b.o. 94
L. & W. B. con. 6s.
1,000.....36½
C. C. & I. 1st.
3,000.....112
N. W. C. C. G.
1,000.....103⅜
M. & St. P. c. & f.
5,000...b.o. 98⅜
N. J. C. conv. 6s.
10,000.....73½
10,000.....73⅝
10,000.....73⅝
18,000.....73⅞
L. & W. B. con. 6s.
1,000.....33½
L. & W. B. con. as.
15,000.....36½
N. W. C. C. G.
10,000...b3 103⅜
B., C. R. & N. 1st.
6,000...b.o. 89
2,000...b.o. 88⅜
5,000...b.o. 89½
48,000...b.o. 89½
M. & St. P., I. & M.
5,000.....45
Mil. & St. P. C. & M.
5,000.....107⅜
M. & St. P. c. & f.
7,000.....99½
1,000.....99⅝
1,000.....99¾
M. & St. P., I. & Der.
1,000.....100
5,000.....100¾
5, B. & N. Y. 1st.
3,000.....102½
M. & K. 7s, '77.
10,000.....98
M. & E. 1st con.
5,000.....88
5,000...b.o. 86½
Mor. & Es. 1st.
20,000beb3,117
M. & St. P. 7s, '83.
5,000.....93
D. & R. G. 1st.
9,000.....94
5,000...b.o. 94
400.....94½
1,000...b3. 94⅝
Erie 2d.
1,000.....108
Erie 4th.
1,000.....105
Long Dock.
1,000.....111
D. M. & T. 1st, 1906.
2,000.....112
D. & R. G. 7s con.
2,000.....113
N. Y. Elc. 1st.
$5,000...b.s. 103⅞
10,000.....103⅜
10,000.....103⅜

Mich. Central 7s.
$5,000...b.o. 104⅝
Can. So. 1st pf.
26,000.....76⅜
Ohio & Miss. 2d.
10,000.....120½
Harlem 1st 7s R.
10,000.....120½
Un. Pac. 1st.
4,000.....105⅜
Un. Pac. 1st.
4,000.....105⅜
Un. Pac. 7s. s. f.
2,000.....109
Un. Pac. s. f.
2,000.....107⅜
Pacific of Mo. 1st.
10,000.....106
2,000.....106⅜
Pacific of Mo. 2d.
12,000.....102
Erie 1st pf.
2,000...b.o. 95⅜
C. C. & I. C. 1st.
1,000.....75
C. C. & I. C. 2d.
2,000.....19
R., W. & O. con 1st.
10,000...b.o. 101
St. L. & I. M. 1st.
1,000.....110
St. L. & I. M. 2d pf.
1,000.....86
A. & T. H. inc.
5,000.....45
T. P. & W. 1st, W. D.
P. C. R.
4,000.....93
T. P. & W. 2d, x. op.
27,000.....80
T. P. & W. con. conv. op. coupon.
7,000.....65
Ft. W. & C. 2d, ex. c.
23,000.....79⅜
5,000.....79⅜
Quin. & Tol. 1st ex coup.
2,000.....80
N. J. C. & S. L. 1st.
2,000...b.o. 86½
St. L. K. C. & N. K. E. 1st.
1,000.....105⅝
Wells-Fargo Ex.
100.....97⅜
Delaware & Hud.
50.....b.o. 38⅜
Del. & Hud. Canal & Stock Tel.
100.....64
Western Union.
500...b.c. 93
Pacific Mail.
10.....b.c. 13⅛
Erie Railway.
200.....21⅛
1,000.....21⅜
2,600.....21¼
200.....21⅜
4300.....21⅛
200...b.s. 21⅜
200.....s3. 21⅜
100.....21⅜
100...b30. 21⅜
500...b3. 21⅜
100.....21⅜
100.....87⅛

Michigan Central.
300...b.o. 74½
L. S. & M. S.
300.....b.c. 68⅜
300.....s3. 68⅜
Ohio & Miss.
300.....b.c. 28
300.....s2. 67½
100.....68
C. & P. pf.
40.....86
700.....b.c. 86
Illinois Central.
50.....81
100.....b.o. 81¼
100...b.c. 81⅛
200.....81
Union Pacific.
100.....b.o. 86⅜
Chi. & N. W.
1800...b.c. 50¼
1900.....50⅜
2200.....50⅝
Chi. & N. W. pf.
300.....c. 77½
300.....77⅞
300.....77⅞
Central of N. J.
500...b.c. 34⅜
Del., L. & West.
500.....44
300.....43⅞
100.....b3 35⅜
Del. & Rar. Canal.
500...b.o. 75⅛
300.....s3. 75⅛
Central of N. J.
400.....b.c. 34⅜
400.....34⅞
300.....34⅜
Chi. & R. I.
28.....b.c. 120
25.....120½
200.....s. 119⅝
St. L., I. M. & S.
100.....b.o. 14
200.....14⅛
P. Ft. W. & C. pf.
50.....b.o. 91½
Wabash.
200...b.c. 21⅜
C., M. & St. P. pf.
1250.....b.c. 86
C., M. & St. P.
100...b.s. 75⅝
1100.....75⅝
Del., L. & West.
200...b.c. 44⅝
200.....44⅜
100.....b3. 44⅜
300.....44⅜
700.....44⅜
300.....44½

UNITED-STATES TREASURY.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 4, 1879.

Receipts.....$1,905,279 14
Payments.....1,065,849 28
Balance, coin.....114,435,531 80
Balance, notes.....43,139,192 35
United States notes redeemed.....17,000 00
Gold received for United States notes.....1,355,000 00

CLOSING QUOTATIONS—JAN. 4.

	Friday.	Saturday.
United States 4½s, 1891, coup.	105	105⅞
United States 5s, 1881, coup.	106⅞	106⅞
United States 5-20s, 1867, coup.	102¼	102⅜
Bills on London	⅜4 81½@⅜4 82	⅜4 81¾@⅜4 82
New-York Central	113¼	113¼
Rock Island	119½	119½
Pacific Mail	13½	13¼
Milwaukee and St. Paul	36⅛	34⅞
Milwaukee and St. Paul pref.	76⅛	75
Lake Shore	67¾	67¾
Chicago and North-western	49⅞	50⅜
Chicago and North-western pref.	77¼	76⅞
Western Union	95⅛	94⅝
Union Pacific	67	66⅜
Delaware, Lack. and Western	44⅞	43⅝
New-Jersey Central	34⅝	33⅜
Delaware and Hudson Canal	39¾	38¼
Morris and Essex	75⅞	75⅛
Panama	124¼	124¼
Erie	22¼	21⅜
Ohio and Mississippi	8⅛	7⅜
Harlem	141¼	141¼
Hannibal and St. Joseph	13⅞	13¼
Hannibal and St. Joseph preferred	34⅜	34⅛
Michigan Central	74⅜	74⅜
Illinois Central	80⅛	80¼
Wabash	21½	21¼

The extreme range of prices in stocks, and the number of shares sold, are as follows:

	Highest.	Lowest.	No. of Shares.
New-York Central	113¾	113¼	100
Harlem	141¼	141¼	100
Erie	22⅜	21⅜	25,180
Lake Shore	67¾	67⅜	13,810
Wabash	21¾	21½	700
North-western	50¾	50¼	20,900
North-western pref.	77⅜	76⅞	7,000
Rock Island	119¾	119¼	300
Milwaukee & St. Paul	36¼	34⅜	17,450
Mil. & St. Paul pref.	76⅛	74⅜	7,900
Pittsburg	86⅛	85¾	1,330
Del., Lack. & Western	45⅛	43½	33,030
New-Jersey Central	34⅞	33⅜	4,500
Delaware & Hudson Canal	39¾	38¼	600
Morris & Essex	76⅛	75⅛	2,550
Michigan Central	74¾	74⅜	2,600
Illinois Central	80⅜	80¼	900
Union Pacific	66¾	66⅜	425
C., C., C. & I.	36⅞	35⅜	2,800
Chic., Bur. & Quincy	111½	111½	350
C., C. & Ind. Central	6	5	2,750
Hannibal & St. Joseph	13¼	13¼	200
Hannibal & St. Joseph pf.	34¾	34⅜	900
Ohio & Mississippi	8	7⅜	900
Western Union	95¼	94½	7,410
A. & T. Telegraph	29¼	29	1,304
Pacific Mail	13⅜	13¼	800
St. L., K. C. & N.	7⅛	7	1,600

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A FRESH POEM.

NADESCHDA. A POEM IN NINE CANTOS. By JOHANN LUDWIG RUNEBERG. Translated from the Swedish by MARIE A. BROWN. Boston: MARIE A. BROWN. 1879.

It shows more independence than caution in the translator of this poem to have done all the work of translating, introducing, and publishing her book. If she is satisfactory in the first and third particular, the second can hardly add to the value of the volume. A preface of some length, and of the utmost clearness, is the least that might be expected when so unknown a writer as the Finlander Runeberg is put before an English-speaking audience. Minor poems by Runeberg have been published in English before this, but only during the past year, and in England. Lyrical songs, idyls, and epigrams by Runeberg were done into English by Eirikr Magnusson and F. H. Palmer, of Cambridge, and published last year by C. Kegan Paul & Co. They have not appeared in this country, nor are they likely to. A writer so little known ought to be properly introduced, but Marie A. Brown, although her metrical English will pass muster for a translation, makes strange havoc of English prose. Her introduction affords little light on the character and accomplishments of Runeberg; it does not even state that he no longer lives. The introduction to Magnusson's translations might have been liberally quoted with good results.

Nadeschda is a poem constructed on a plot taken, it would appear, as a whole or in parts, from the great reservoir of Russian or Servian folk traditions. It opens with the heroine as she appears in her unprotected state of serf, where her extraordinary beauty is only a curse to her. She wanders to the bank of a stream:

> "When she, o'er the sleeping rivulet
> Gently bending, saw reflected there,
> For sweet features in the Spring of youth,
> Tears, unbidden, welled up to her eyes;
> Grief awoke anew within her breast:
> 'Oh, Nadeschda flower!' murmured she;
> 'Poor, poor maiden, why adorn thyself,
> E'en without adornment rarely fair!
> Not for thine own pleasure wert thou born,
> For the happy choice of thine own heart,
> For a youth, ideal, is the love;
> For a master's whim thou growest up,
> As his drunken glances aim, perhaps,
> To enchant, to pall, and be disdained.'"

The castle, to the acres of which Nadeschda and her grandsire Miljutin are attached, is going to ruin, but news has come that the two young sons of the proprietor are expected. One is Dmitri, a Prince of a morose, gloomy disposition; the other Woldmar, of a nature as joyous as the other's is forbidding. Riding to the castle, Woldmar tries to win a smile to the envious face of his brother by promising him his wish—the body of any one of his serfs that he may choose. When Nadeschda appears, having decked herself in weeds to conceal her beauty, Dmitri asks for her. But Woldmar has also fallen in love with her. Springing from his horse, he makes her a free woman at once, and claims that, being no longer a serf, his brother cannot take her under the agreement. This scene is introduced by a symbolical event of the chase. The falcons of both brothers pursue one dove and fight for it; that of Woldmar is slain, and the dove, to escape Dmitri's hawk, finds refuge in Woldmar's bosom. This is essentially a Servian groundwork, and recalls the folk-songs and traditions of that race which have been collected much nearer the Balkans than the Baltic. This apostrophe of Nadeschda by the stream:

> "If he came, the handsome, stranger youth,
> If I saw his dark eyes flash again
> Just as I have seen him in my dreams,
> Then with flowers would I cover me,
> Brightly hide the serf-girl's sombre garb,
> And in hue like roses, animate,
> Welcome him with fragrance and with bloom.
> But oh, Saint George, he cometh not,
> Dream unreal is Nadeschda's love—"

This apostrophe is much the same as that which Owen Meredith has given in a most admirable translation, under the clumsy title of "Matrimonial Considerations," in his little book of Servian Songs. So also is the thought of making Nadeschda disfigure herself found in the same Servian pasmd.

> "Then by her own beauty agonized
> In the crystal depths she plunged her hand
> Blurring instantly the clearness there,
> Troubled was the lovely image now
> Changed, distorted, clouded, gloomy, wild;
> Shall the serf-girl, at her stire's command,
> If he will, appear before thy sight,
> Not a love-flame kindle in thy breast,
> But a chilled abhorrence, nothing more.'
> And she left the crystal spring's fair banks,
> Took a path that to the castle led,
> On the way arranging her attire,
> Not of flowers, but of sedges coarse,
> For her head a fantastical funeral wreath,
> Plucked a thistle-crown, and fastened it,
> As a breast-knot o'er her heaving heart,
> And of straw a girdle twisted up,
> Rudely fettering her graceful waist;
> So, to high-born Woldmar's castle grand
> Silently the serf-girl bent her steps."

The device has not succeeded, and both brothers are intent on possessing the beautiful serf-girl. Woldmar is the quickest, and has her carried off to be educated into a fitting wife. Dmitri broods over his claim, and from that time on only lives for revenge. A scene which occurs between the mother, Natalia Feodorowna, and this gloomy son is very striking. The mother is trying to find out why Dmitri is so unlike in behavior his warlike or ambitious forefathers. He tells what Woldmar has secretly done, namely, soiled the family honor by marrying a serf-girl. The mother vows vengeance on Woldmar; in Russia under Katharine II. to marry a serf is a crime which the crown will punish fearfully. Then Dmitri acknowledges that he only lives to supplant his brother with Nadeschda. The mother then orders the servants to cover with black all the busts of the ancestors of two such unworthy sons. Woldmar is denounced and sent to Siberia, and Nadeschda with her two children driven out of the castle, taking refuge with Miljutin. Dmitri prepares to seize his prey, but remorse stays him at the last moment. He flees the temptation and disappears forever. The longing of Dmitri for his brother's wife is like the spirited ballad translated by Owen Meredith under the title: "The Malady of Moïo."

The ninth canto ingeniously brings in the humiliation of the cruel Natalia Feodorowna just when the Empress Katharine is favoring her estate on the Volga with a visit. The Empress is surprised at the view from the drawing-room window:

> "Silence reigned, until the Empress, with emotion,
> Raised her hand and cried, enraptured:
> 'What a prospect, what a picture, bright and real.
> These magnificent old beeches
> 'Twixt the yellow, harvest-weighted banks, the river,
> In the distance hills and woodland!
> Surely happy people in these cots are dwelling
> That I see amid the foliage,
> Gay and brilliant in red, white, and blue, our colors,
> Almost crowding on each other.
> Thanks, Natalia Feodorowna, thou a mother
> To my children on the Volga!'
> Thus she spake, much gratified, and to the Princess
> Smilingly her hand extended."

But, unfortunately for the "mother to my children on the Volga," the Empress insists on looking nearer at this idyllic settlement with brilliant roofs. No excuse or objection of Natalia avails; go she will. When the courtiers reach the spot they find roofs of painted canvas and beyond them squalid hovels, where the emaciated serfs burrow like wild animals. After this terrible discovery the Empress, returning indignant to the castle, sees Nadeschda and her children in the attitude of supplicants. Granting them a hearing, the full wickedness of Natalia is revealed. Nadeschda offers to the Empress her two boys, whom her own poverty cannot support:

> "Touched by mother's woe, the gift, herself a mother,
> Was accepted by the monarch;
> But as she caressed the little boy's bright tresses
> She again addressed the giver:
> 'Catharine takes no present save when making
> Some return; so is her custom.
> Therefore name a just desire, my gentle daughter,
> That her debt may be requited.'
> In Nadeschda's happy eyes the tear-drops sparkled,
> And her soul's deepest yearning hymned:

Then she clasped her hands, before the stately Empress
Fell upon her knees, exclaiming:
'If a wish is then vouchsafed me, an entreaty,
Give, then, give, oh, dear Czarina!
To the stricken, lone one, soon worn out with weeping,
Give her back her children's father!'"

Nadeschda is a fine composition simply and naturally translated. The few slight blemishes of rhythm and grammar here and there can easily be removed. Runeberg made an excursion into a field which he admired greatly, when he turned to a Slavic subject. But his own country has also furnished him with ample materials. Although, by name, his family is Swedish, he was a Finn, and a most patriotic Finn. The Kalevala, therefore, that curious modern epic of Finland, has suggested more than one plot to him. After the writing of Nadeschda, he published a dramatic poem called King Fjalar, which recalls the German Song of Gudrun, and contains the same idea found in the Danish story of "Sigurd and his sister, also echoed faintly in the Nibelungenlied of South Germany, and recently revived in all its colors by the indefatigable "Master" Wagner as a plot for one of his tremendous operas. As Œdipus in the Greek tragedy marries his own mother, so the youth in the Kalevala, and in the Sigurd story, weds his own sister, having been separated from his family by a malign fate. From the translations by Magnusson we give a favorable specimen of Runeberg's epigrams; Magnusson reproduces the metre, but seldom the rhymes of the original.

> "Counsels three the mother gave her daughter:
> Not to sigh and not be discontented,
> And to kiss no young man whatsoever.
> Mother, if thy daughter trespass never—
> Trespass never 'gainst your last-named counsel—
> She will trespass 'gainst the first two, surely."

Runeberg is by no means a very original poet, but he is a great favorite among Swedish-speaking people, and has been translated into many other languages. He has some of Longfellow's sweetness and limpidness. He hits the popular taste like our own poet, and can well afford to smile at those who demand something more original and stirring. We trust that Marie A. Brown will attempt another of his longer poems, assisted by the experience gained from Nadeschda.

POPULARIZING SCIENCE.

THE POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY FOR 1879.

The fourteenth volume of the magazine conducted by E. L. and W. J. Youmans gives a guarantee of the success of its undertaking by increasing the number of its pages and improving the quality of its paper and type. The same system which has made the publication popular in fact as well as in name will be continued on a slightly larger scale. It will contain articles and abstracts of articles, original and selected, from leading scientific men of different nationalities; where they are needed, wood-cuts will be added to the text. Accounts of scientific discoveries and latest views concerning natural phenomena put forth by savants are promised, so that the reader may be sure of being even with the rapid march of events in the scientific world. The editors also state that attention will be given to those sciences which teach a better understanding of the nature of man, having to do with society and government, scientific education, and the conflicts arising from the progressive and aggressive march of scientific knowledge. It also concerns itself especially with the application of science to the practical arts, and seeks to prove a comprehensive and independent library of popular science, particularly suited to the wants of non-scientific persons.

The January number of The Popular Science Monthly, is an earnest of the proposed course. Prof Tyndall is about to publish a volume of Fragments of Science, and contributes the advanced sheets of his introductory chapter. It relates to an address by Dr. Virchow on "The Freedom of Science in the Modern State," in which the latter made implications against him. Prof. Tyndall does not agree to the charge that he has been rashly propagating unproved theories for established science, but points out how careful, on the contrary, he has been not to advance unsupported views. He applauds the ideas of Virchow as to the teaching of science in the schools. Prof. E. S. Morse has an illustrated paper on "Traces of an Early Race in Japan," in which he comes to the conclusion that certain prehistoric implements found in refuse heaps in Japan belong neither to the Japanese who came from the South, nor to bearded Ainos, who were in Japan when the Japanese arrived. Plain traces of cannibalism are found among these ancient and now vanished shell-fish eaters. Another illustrated paper, by W. E. Damon, relates to the devil-fish (octopus) and its cousins the cuttle and the squid. Victor Hugo, who was so much laughed at for his devil-fish when Les Travailleurs de la Mer was first published, is cited in his own words, with no more criticism than that his description is a little overdrawn and in one or two trifling particulars incorrect. George J. Romanes has a paper on "The Beginning of Nerves in the Animal Kingdom," where appropriate wood-cuts show the first traces of a nerve-system in animals of the lowest organization, belonging to the radiates.

Prof. Carl Vogt has a sharp word to say in "Pope and Anti-Pope" about the contest going on in Germany between the "Medical Pope," Virchow, and the "Zoological Pope," Haeckel, on the old Darwinian battle-field. Prof. Joseph Le Conte lends his brilliant pen to the subject of the scientific relation of sociology to biology, furnishing only an initial chapter in the present number. Prof. Carhart tries to imbue us with some faint conception of the distances of stars by a paper on "Astronomical Magnitudes and Distances," and with the title of "Black Diamonds," M. F. Maury introdnces an account of the coal-fields, coal-yield, and coal-use of the world, together with the earliest known application of coal by man. George Iles discusses the subject of "Heredity"; L. R. Curtiss, "Molecular Dynamics," and Maurice Girard, "Curarl, or Woorara Poison." A portrait of Gustav Wallis, traveler and botanist, is supplemented by a short biographical notice. He was born at Lüneberg, Prussia, in 1830, and died of his exertions in swamps and tropical forests at a hospital in Cuenca, Ecuador, in June of last year.

MISFORTUNES OF A CIRCUS.

From the Elmira Advertiser, Jan. 3.

Mr. Eugene Leach, of this city, who has been in the sawdust ring from boyhood, and is now one of the best tumblers in the business, left Elmira a few weeks ago to go with Murray's Circus to the Bermuda Islands. They sailed from New-York on the steamer Arcadia. The letter is to a friend in Elmira, and is quite a graphic description of their voyage. Considerable of the circus property was lost overboard, and several performing horses were lost. He writes:

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Dec. 18, 1878.

DEAR FRIEND: Having a little spare time, I write you again, giving you an idea of our passage from New-York to the Island. We sailed Sunday morning, Dec. 8, with a fair day and prospects for a pleasant voyage, but a wind and storm came upon us and lasted until our arrival here, in six days and over. We were obliged to throw overboard wagons, canvas poles, chains, and all things on the upper deck, and a good deal of provender and fodder for the stock, together with 11 horses that died from being knocked about. The coal, 1,300 tons, got shifted, and our prospects for foundering were flattering. Now, that it is all over, we can help laughing at the way some of the people had put on their life-preservers, and one of the musicians had on two. Mr. Murray is quite a loser, although insured. We opened Monday at this place to a good business; Tuesday it rained hard, but the circus was well attended for all that. We had only three ring horses left. The lady bareback rider, Linda Gral, who was at Barnum's, lost her horse, but she does two other acts, the "running globe" and the "black wire," besides an act of juggling. Every one speaks well of the performance, and we have a good one. We expect to go to St. Thomas, from there to the Barbadoes, then Demerara, S. A., then Para, in Brazil, which will be as far as we go.

MATERIALS AND TOILETS.

THE LATEST FASHIONS.

THE RAGE FOR GILDED ORNAMENTS—PLUSH AND SEAL-SKIN—THE NINICHE BONNET—VISITING, RECEPTION, AND DINNER DRESSES—HOW TO DRESS THE HAIR.

Gilded ornaments are all the rage. Gilded combs, and buckles for the shoes, are among these. Buckles of Rhine pebbles are used for the same purpose.

Many toilets are covered with beads and embroidery, all in bright colors. Materials are also used shot with metallic threads, and laces have gold and silver work intermixed. It is very difficult with these showy trimmings and materials to have a toilet which is in perfect taste, and not one over-trimmed. Lingères and modistes use a large number of fancy gilt, silver, steel, jet, stone, and crystal ornaments. Old embroideries are much sought after, and there is no doubt but that many of the new articles are now passed off as such, few persons knowing the difference. White satin-embroidered bridal dresses are de rigueur, and all colored satins are worked in elaborate designs.

Plush and seal-skin are the favorite trimmings for Winter walking suits; they are both comfortable and elegant. The trimmings thus made consist of plastrons, vests, collars, cuffs, revers, and bands. A Parisian suit, trimmed in this fashion, is of colored cloth. The skirt has no train. It is trimmed down the front with three bias plush bands terminating in large plaitings, each placed a small distance from the other. Down the back falls a tunique, bordered with a band of plush. It is slightly raised in a puffing, which is kept in place by two plush bands. The waist is cut in veston shape, and opens over a plush vest. The collar, revers, cuffs, and pockets are all of plush. The suit is trimmed with enameled buttons.

Diamond buttons, so called, are a novelty and very effective on evening dresses. Each button is composed of several crystal Rhine pebbles, cut and set like diamonds. They are made in several sizes.

The hair is now dressed low, in puffs and ringlets. The back is dressed in the same way, with the braid often forming an oval. The forehead is still covered by the Breton bandeau. This bandeau consists of short, natural waves, which fall over the forehead without having any "part." A net made of hair, in the same color as the natural hair, is placed over this to keep it in place.

Crochet mittens are worn over kid gloves for walking and visiting purposes; in the latter case the mittens must be taken off before the wearer enters the parlor.

Modistes use a great deal of seal color and light red, but these colors are always combined with others. The Niniche-shaped hat, which is very generally worn in Paris, can be made becomingly in any style of hat, as it is placed on in various ways. The newest method is to wear the bonnet placing the back part front; the cape, which is a little raised, sits very well upon the front of the head, with a bandeau or a drapery underneath. A pretty model for an evening bonnet is this style of ivory-white plush, with a panache of three ivory-white feathers placed in front of the crown and falling over the brim. The open space is filled in with a band of white satin and a handsome bow. The satin strings are drawn through a golden ring and fastened in the back on the lower part of the crown. A round lady in a gray felt capote. The brim is lined with currant-colored velvet, which forms the binding on the outside. Bands of the same goods are crossed on top of the crown and fastened by small buckles. On the side of the bonnet are two steel-gray feathers. The double strings are of currant-colored velvet and satin and steel-gray satin.

Dinner parties are now so frequent that it is necessary to devote some space to toilets suited to the occasion. Save at official dinners, where receptions are announced to take place afterward, low-neck dresses are not worn. The half low neck, with short sleeves, is adopted. These have transparent inserted puffings, and triple lace jabots for trimming. Garnet color, which is now so much worn in the evening, is used for a young lady's toilet very differently than when employed for an elderly person. The following descriptions of toilets will show the difference between the two styles. For the young lady's toilet the body of the dress is garnet faille, with a bright pink satin overdress, plaited in length-wise plaits. These are fastened up by small bands of ruchings made of pink satin bordered with garnet color. These ruchings become larger toward the lower part of the skirt, terminating in broad, loose plaits. The panier polonaise is of heavy garnet velvet. It is open in front, and trimmed with silver and gold and several shades of pink embroidery. The polonaise is also trimmed with this work.

The pink satin vest is embroidered in Louis XV. rococo shades. It has a very long basque, reaching nearly to the knees, and left open about this distance of four buttons from the lower part. The buttons are garnets mounted in silver filigree. Under the basque of the velvet habit are pink satin draperies forming the panier. From these draperies falls a garnet-colored train, which is plaited in hollow plaits. These are very deep and open in fan shape on the lower part of the skirt. The sides are trimmed up with three draperies placed each above the other, and forming a "quille" trimming, trimmed with chenille fringe in pink and garnet in several shades. The inside border of the vest is trimmed with a ruching of Brussels lace. The satin sleeves, which reach to the elbows, have garnet velvet revers, worked with silver. A fall of Brussels lace lies over the pale pink gloves. The hair is dressed in large ringlets, and adorned with ruby butterflies and birds.

A toilet suited to an elderly lady is a polonaise of fancy garnet velvet opening over a body of satin in the same shade. The apron is draped diagonally, fastened and raised in the centre and on the sides under bows. The dress is cut open in heart-shape over a fichu of white lace. The skirt has a long train.

A visiting and reception dress may be of slate-colored cachemire with "pekin velours" in the same color. The skirt has a train draped and fastened and raised in the faille and pekin alternating. The cachemire apron is draped in front and trimmed like the skirt. Down either side of the apron is a broad band of pekin, which covers the part where the puffed tunique is joined to the apron. This tunique is joined to the belt of the skirt, where it forms small pieces called pigeon's wings, which separate a little below where the draperies begin forming points, and the borders of which are trimmed with bands of pekin. In the centre is a ribbon bow. The right side of the tunique is broader, and falls lower on the skirt than the left. The waist is of cachemire and pekin. The cachemire part forms a basque in four points, two in front and two in the back. These points lie over a piece of pekin. The front of the waist forms a pekin plastron, the waist being fastened across by means of small tongues of the same goods. The plain cuffs on the sleeves are of pekin. The "mante visite" is of cachemire. The middle of the back forms a large V of pekin, which is taken over to the front to form a turned-down collar. On the lower part of the plastron is a ribbon bow. The front of the garment is cut like a paletot, open below. The paletot is trimmed with a band of pekin. The sleeves are cut like those of a visite, and have pekin cuffs. The gray felt hat, matching the suit, has a broad brim, fastened down on the sides by means of gray satin strings, which are tied in the back. On the left side is a bunch of plumes and flowers.

An elegant court toilet is made in a princess dress of blue velvet, cut square in the neck and closing on the left side of the waist. The fullness of the draperies is taken in the back and side seams. The lower part of the skirt and long train is trimmed with a full deep ruching of "pekin-satin" and velvet in the same shade. Down the front of the waist and skirt is a white lace plastron, which starts from the square opening. A deep lace to match forms the panier on the lower part of the hips, which is fastened down in the back under a pekin and velvet sash. To this sash is added in the back a shell-shaped lace trimming which extends from the left side, and is then taken across to the right without the ribbon, and is carried on to the end of the train. The sleeves are of plaited "pekin-velours" trimmed with lace on the shoulder and elbow. The elbow trimming is draped on the outside seam and fastened there by a jewel. On the inside of the sleeves and neck is a crêpe lace plaiting.

A ball dress may be of white faille and blue grenadine. The train skirt is covered up to about the middle with puffings and bordered with a narrow blue grenadine puffing. Down the side is a shell-shaped trimming of white faille, bordered with narrow plaiting. The front of the skirt is plaited and bordered with a plaited flounce, with heading. Above this is a deep blue grenadine scarf, crossed diagonally by a spray of variegated flowers. Down the back, falling over the puffing, is a similar spray. The waist is cut in a square low neck. It is plain to below the hips, where there is a trimming consisting of blue ruffles placed on the festoons, and forming the panier. The sleeves are finished with sprays of fine flowers taken across the top and sides of the arm. The hair is dressed pompadour in front, with a full bunch of flowers like those upon the skirt falling in a spray down the side. Down the back fall two long ringlets.

There are now made a great number of black satin underskirts. They are wadded and trimmed on the lower border with a scalloped satin flounce, embroidered with colored silks. The skirts are generally cut bias and placed upon a belt. They lace in the back, and the eyelets are placed upon a band which forms the centre of this part of the skirt. A great deal of underclothing is now trimmed with plaitings scalloped on the border of the same muslin. Chemises are trimmed with jabots of lace. Jabots are much used at present, and are considered necessary with the Louis XV. vest. These are not always made in the same style; they sometimes consist of a shell-shaped ruffle, sometimes of a plain, straight plaiting, and sometimes again of a torsade of mousseline de l'Inde, loosely draped. Another style consists of a "rabat de jupe," which is generally of mousseline de l'Inde or "gaze iris" trimmed at the ends with a ruffle of Bretonne lace with white satin loops intermixed. The collarette is made in large hollow plaits composed of the same lace.

White ribbon has again come in fashion, and all lingerie and parures are trimmed with it. This is very natural, as most of the articles trimmed are collars, jabots, and bows, which are worn over brochè materials, and do not look nearly as well with colored ribbons as with black and white. Another novelty is the black Paris gauze scarf, surrounded by black Bretonne lace. This style is particularly becoming to blondes.

BARKER, NOAH, OF CORINTH, ME.

The Augusta (Me.) Journal prints in its issue of the 2d inst. brief biographical sketches of the members of the new Legislature of the State. Third in the list of Senators appears the following:

Barker, Noah, Corinth, (Penobscot County;) Independent; no isms in religion, "do right and risk the consequences;" land surveyor and farmer, or "own my farm and farming tools;" married; age 71. Born in Exeter, then a plantation called "Blaisdelltown." Educated in the common schools and at Hampden and Foxcroft Academies, but mainly at the family fireside. For many years a member of the Superintending School Committee; Town Clerk; Selectman; County Commissioner, and State Land Agent. Member Maine House of Representatives in 1838, 1840, and 1856. Was a Democrat till the party leaders were for extending slavery into our free territories; then a Republican till a still worse bondage ensued. In regard to other events in his life—

WHAT DOES IT MATTER?

> "It matters little where I was born,
> Or if my parents were rich or poor;
> Whether they shrank at the cold world's scorn,
> Or walked in the pride of wealth secure;
> But whether I live an honest man,
> And hold my integrity firm in my clutch,
> I tell you, brother, plain as I can,
> It matters much!
>
> "It matters little how long I stay
> In a world of sorrow, sin, and care;
> Whether in youth I am called away,
> Or live till my bones and pate are bare;
> But whether I do the best I can
> To soften the weight of adversity's touch
> On the faded cheek of my fellow-man,
> It matters much!
>
> "It matters little where be my grave,
> Or on the land or on the sea;
> By purling brook or 'neath stormy wave,
> It matters little or naught to me;
> But whether the angel Death comes down
> And marks my brow with his loving touch,
> As one that shall wear the victor's crown,
> It matters much!"

EXPERIMENTS WITH ELECTRIC LIGHT.

From the Boston Advertiser, Jan. 3.

The Merrimack Manufacturing Company is experimenting with the electric light, and on Monday last introduced 16 of the Brush pattern into the basement of Mill No. 1, where 500 looms are run. They have put 12 of the lights into the weave-room, where 132 five-foot gas-burners have been used, and four into the mule-room, where 70 gas-burners have been used. These electric lights are fed by one machine, with a horse-power to drive it, and which, it is understood, cost about $2,000; each of the lanterns costing $65, and the consumption of carbon points is about 4 cents an hour. If the whole mill or four buildings, to which printworks were lighted, it would require not less than eight, and possibly twelve, machines, calling for about 20 horse-power each. The mill has, all told, 2,850 gas-burners, and the annual gas bill is within $5,000. The Merrimack Company's experiment was opened for public inspection yesterday, after 4 P. M., and was witnessed by about 125 gentlemen, representing other Lowell manufactories, and from Boston, Lawrence, and Northern points. The corporation employs 2,500 persons, weaving 825,000 yards of print cloths, and 15,000 yards of pique each week, running 3,857 looms. The print mills employ 500 hands. The electric light last evening was strong and steady; but the weavers complained that the present supply cast strong shadows in upon the harnesses, and contended that as many more lights would be needed, ranged so as to overcome this difficulty. Whether this increase would make the light too strong and render the operatives color-blind is a question. It was understood that if the mill were lighted with electricity the machines would be run 15 minutes before the operatives enter, so as to get the currents at work. Some thought that this would require a special motor for each electric machine; if not, the shafting would be the whirling which would make the 15 minutes' run of belts and shafting, with no product from the looms and mules, expensive.

EXTINCT GEYSERS IN NEBRASKA.

In a communication to the Omaha (Neb.) Republican, Prof. S. Aughey says: "Perhaps nothing in our geology is more novel and interesting than the extinct geysers and hot springs of our State. We associate the presence of such phenomena with the Yellowstone region. But there was a period which closed in geologically recent times, after having lasted for countless centuries, when geysers and hot springs were among the most common phenomena of the plains of Nebraska, Kansas, and Dakota. The marks of their former presence are found occasionally along the Niobrara, on the upper Loup, and especially along the valley of the Republican and its tributaries. In 1868 I found some extinct tubes of old geysers on the Bazile and between that stream and the south fork of the Niobrara. In the Summer of 1874, while examining a section of country between the Platte and Frenchman's Fork, I occasionally came across deposits of geyserite near and along the latter river. Afterward I observed it also between the Beaver and the Republican, and along the latter river to the west line of the State. I have recently had a conversation with Mr. Frank M. Dininny, of Tecumseh, who is well acquainted with the Republican region further east, and between it and the Solomon. He reports the presence of the mineral geyserite in countless places; also, of old funnel-tubes of geysers, some of which are exposed in excavations, and occasionally in well-shafts and borings."

TYPOGRAPHIC ECCENTRICITIES.

From the Springfield (Mass) Republican.

A great many columns have been written concerning typographic errors, and many of the instances sound so witty or so stupid that it seems as if they must be rather inventions than actual happenings. But we never saw one cited so unlikely that we couldn't remember its match. Once we wrote that it was "like evoking the shadow of a shade" for quote forgotten writers. The phrase appeared in print thus: "Like cooking the shadow of a shad." The printer had, in burlesquing the sentiment, actually preserved and intensified it in a most striking image of unsubstantiality. An author whom we had quoted the proverbial opinion of Rosalind: "Men have died and worms have eaten them—but not for love." The printer may have been a misogynist, as all events he substituted "woman" for "worms." There are Shakespeare emendations not much better than that, perhaps.

WANTED A SEPARATE MAINTENANCE.

From the Providence Journal, Jan. 1.

The other day a young man over whose head had passed 25 Summers, and who appeared to be slightly demented, entered the office of Police Clerk Horton, at the City Hall, and, selecting a comfortable chair, buried himself in its depths, and sat quietly for several moments in profound meditation; but wishing to divert the current of his meditations, the good-natured clerk awaited the unburdenment of the thoughts that burned within the soul of the mysterious visitor. Suddenly he arose, and in sepulchral tones shouted, "I wish you'd send a maintenance from my father; he don't feed and clothe me according to his means." A clever detective standing near, advised him to procure a divorce from his paternal ancestor, and, as if struck with the brightness of the idea, he seized his hat and departed.

PANIC AT A SUNDAY-SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

From the New-Haven Palladium, Jan. 3.

The children and friends of the First Baptist Church's mission school were thrown into a panic Wednesday evening, in the chapel at the corner of Pearl and Pleasant streets, during a Christmas-tree entertainment. A portion of the floor settled several inches, it just giving way. Just then some fool cried "Fire," and in a moment all were crazed by fear. Women fainted and screamed, and all who had any strength left rushed for windows and doors. At last the efforts of superintendent Bird and others convinced the crowd that there was no danger, and order was restored. There is no cellar under the building, and no one would have been hurt if the whole floor had come to the ground, which is very close to it.

GLEANINGS FROM THE MAILS.

A TALK WITH MISS FANNY DAVENPORT.

HOW THE MEMBERS OF HER FAMILY HAVE BEEN EDUCATED—HER IDEAS OF AMATEURS IN THE DRAMATIC PROFESSION.

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean, Jan. 2.

"And so you are going to Australia?" said a reporter for the Inter-Ocean to Miss Fanny Davenport, the actress, in the course of a little chat yesterday.

"I did mean to go, and was making negotiations," was the reply; "but my mother objected to the great distance and long separation, so I gave it up."

"Then you have made no engagements for the ensuing year?"

"Yes, I expect to go abroad in the Fall, and play for a time in London. I wish to go there particularly on account of my sister Florence, who will make her début in that city."

"You have already one sister on the operatic stage?"

"Yes, Blanche," and Miss Davenport handed as she spoke the picture of a charming young girl with a piquant face to her visitor, continuing, "she is singing in Italy, has made a splendid success, and is, of course, very enthusiastic. Florence, my baby, I call her, is only 16. She has a beautiful voice, and will give us a chance to be proud of her."

"Your family seems divided in the talents."

"Yes, I think Blanche and Florence inherit their musical talent from my father. He had a very fine voice, and came near going on the operatic stage. Indeed, he once sang in 'The Bohemian Girl.'"

"And the others?"

"Well, May sets, you know, and my little brother will be another George Fox. It was thought as a child that I had a very good voice. I remember Mme. Celeste telling me when I was about 12 years old that my voice had the same qualities as Titiens, but using it on the stage so much has impaired it for singing."

"Then you are all before the public?"

"Yes, beginning with my mother, though excepting my brother Edgar, who has no inclination for it."

"The experience and teaching of your parents must have been of great advantage!"

"You will think it strange, perhaps, but my father never taught us anything of acting."

"But you received training elsewhere?"

"No, none. My father used to say, 'You have talent; form your own conception of the character; work it out; don't be a parrot.' I remember when I made my début at 8 years of age as King Charles. It was at my father's benefit, and I begged him to help me, but he would not."

"You think this sort of self-training good?"

"Yes. I believe the best way for beginners, if they have the talent, is to join a good stock company and work up gradually; all the dramatic and elocutionary lessons in the world will not do as much. It is far better to climb up the ladder step by step than it is to be tied to it and have ladder and all raised. As to beauty, if an actor or actress has it, so much the better, if not, they must make their genius be in order to make the audience forget their lack of it."

"Janauschek is a notable instance of the latter?"

"Yes, and so is Irving, the English actor, and I think the greatest on the stage. He is like an ugly caricature of Booth, with little bits of twinkling eyes, dark skin, and one leg so much shorter than the other that he walks with a decided halt. I almost dreaded to see him as Hamlet, but, do you know, his acting was so wonderful that no one could think of his looks. Yes, I believe Irving and Marie Seebach to be the two greatest artists on the stage."

"What are you studying now, Miss Davenport?"

"'Cymbeline.' I prefer the legitimate drama, and mean to confine myself to it in the future as much as possible."

"And your new play, 'Olivia?'"

"I like, and am very curious to see how it will take here. You see, it is very English, and not the modern English that Dickens dramatized."

"By the way," continued Miss Davenport, "is it long since Clara Morris was here?"

"Her last season was in the Summer," replied the reporter.

"I would like to see her very much," continued the lady. "She is a charming companion, and always so bright. The last time I saw her was the first night of 'Olivia.' She was looking very ill, and came between the scenes to speak to me. I was sorry after to see those reports regarding her domestic unhappiness."

"Do you believe them?"

"I cannot; and I think even if such was the case, she is much too proud a woman to complain."

"Marriages in the profession are not often happy!"

"That idea," said Miss Davenport warmly, "is a very mistaken one. I know of no happier domestic lives than many I could name in our profession. Take Mr. and Mrs. Robson, for instance, Mr. and Mrs. McKay, and a host of others."

"And in regard to this question of stage morality?"

"I am sorry to say there are grounds for its questions in some instances, but there are many good and virtuous women in the profession. A woman has only to exact respect by her conduct and mode of life, and it will be paid her. The sweetest thing to me in this world is the homage paid to Fanny Davenport, her father's daughter, not Fanny Davenport, the actress."

HOW A WILD-CAT BANK WAS SAVED IN 1857.

From the Indianapolis News, Jan. 2.

"Yesterday," said a gentleman to a News reporter, "resumption began. By the way, we've learned something about money in this country during the past 20 years. I remember 1857 with its wild-cat banks and its generally crazy system of banking. Banks were established in out-of-way places, and bank paper was plenty. The late Andrew Wilson had a bank at Nashville, in the wilds of Brown County, more than 20 miles across hills and the nearest railway. One day in 1857 or 1858 Mr. Wilson casually learned that a large amount of his bills had been gobbled up in Cincinnati, and a carpet-bagger would swoop down on him in a few days for redemption. He tried to raise the money to get gold or silver, and he was in great trouble. The dreaded visitor appeared at the bank, and at the same time a happy thought came to the banker. Leaving the latter to entertain the stranger, he rushed out, went up a flight of back stairs into the office of the only notary in the town, and finding that functionary out he pocketed the notarial seal and walked off. He then boldly refused payment, and the stranger took the paper over to find a notary and make the proper protest. No seal, and with this important attachment to the needed legal red tape absent nothing could be done, as it would require at least a week to communicate with Indianapolis and replace the lost seal. So the carpet-bagger ambled off, and Mr. Wilson availed himself of the respite to put his affairs in order."

A BIT OF BUNGLING LEGISLATION IN GEORGIA.

From the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, Jan. 2.

In the public laws of the session of the Georgia General Assembly, recently ended, we find in the TAX act the following section:

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, That all taxes assessed under this act shall be collected in United States national bank currency, or gold and silver coin of the United States, and the value of the property taxed on the 1st day of April of each of said years 1879 and 1880, in such currency, shall be the basis of the taxes.

It will be noted that we are to pay our taxes "in United States national bank currency, or gold and silver coin of the United States," and the greenback is effectually demonetized for all tax-payinz purposes in the State of Georgia. Just as the Government had fondly hoped that the currency was on a level, and that it had gotten the greenback on a gold basis, along comes this body of Georgia Solons and knocks their calculations to the winds. The financial twist of Georgia politics has been a matter of dispute for some time, but is so no longer. The policy of the State, as settled in this act, is to foster the national banks and stand squarely up for hard money. Whether intended or not, our Legislature has put us upon record, and there is no escape from the position.

A MAN AND TEAM FALL THIRTY-FIVE FEET.

From the Troy Press, Jan. 3.

Yesterday morning as Nicholas Cullington, a Pittstown farmer, was driving into the Village of Lansingburg with a load of potatoes, and while coming down Oil-mill Hill, a short distance east of the railroad crossing, the strong pressure on the reins caused the right one to break. The horses thus partially freed from restraint, became unmanageable, and in the effort to check them, the pressure on the left rein drew the horses to the side of the road, and in an instant horses, wagon, and driver were precipitated down the embankment, which at that point is about 35 feet in height. The fall was a fearful one, and those who saw it expected that horses and driver were killed or badly mangled. Singularly, however, neither horses, wagon, nor Mr. Cullington were injured. The escape was a miraculous one, and certainly remarkable in every way. After some little delay, the horses and wagon were extricated, and Mr. Cullington came to this city and disposed of his load.

AN ENGINEER HE WILL AVOID.

From the Port Jervis Union, Jan. 3.

A few weeks ago Aaron Smith, of Middletown, was struck by an Erie train, just west of the village, and badly injured. He is recovering, however, and relates, as a strange coincidence, that Engineer John Rosencrance, of Port Jervis, who was running the engine which threw him from the track the last time, was running the engine which struck him eight years ago, by which he lost an arm. The Argus says Mr. Smith has resolved to give Mr. Rosencrance the whole track in the future.

FARMING AGAIN ATTRACTIVE.

From the St. Louis Republican, Jan. 2.

One good effect of the protracted depression of manufacturing industry and trade that prevails is the direction of attention to farming as a means of livelihood. Just after the war, when inflated prices painted pictures of fortunes in all kinds of city and town vocations; when banking, insurance, and the agency business were supposed to yield wealth almost without limit, and when it was believed that fortunes could be made by merely organizing some sort of stock company, and putting the shares on the market, there was a general flocking of young men from farms to cities and towns, to get rich without labor. But that delusion has ended in bitterness and disappointment to thousands all over the land, and proved that the gauge of living by the wits is one that very few can thrive at. We are beginning to realize that farming possesses one pre-eminent merit—it will yield a living if nothing more, and that is more than can be said of many city pursuits. It is generally esteemed a plodding, unromantic business; but this is offset by its exemption from the harassments and tragic features that too often mark the pain

DRY GOODS.

HEARN

723 & 725 BROADWAY, ABOVE NINTH ST.

We will offer on MONDAY

DRESS SILKS in fashionable colors and fine quality at NINETY CENTS.

LYONS SILK POPLINS at FIFTY CENTS.

DAMASSE SILKS of the finest quality at $1 25; reduced from $2 25.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS at a great reduction.

LADIES' and MISSES' CLOAKS and SUITS at HALF PRICE.

BARGAINS in

Dress Goods, Cloakings, Housekeeping Goods, Laces and Embroideries, Underwear, and Mourning Goods.

ENTIRE STOCK

CLOSING OUT

on account of REMOVAL

to

WEST 14TH-ST.,

between

5TH AND 6TH AVS.

ALL-WOOL UNDERWEAR,

BOYD & LIPPITT,

MANUFACTURERS,

Theatrical gymnasium, and rowing goods, in silk, worsted, and cotton.

NO. 69 THOMAS-ST.

MILLINERY.

MADAME TIERCE, NO. 30 WEST 18TH-ST., Branch of Auguste Petit, 7 Rue de la Paix, Paris, has received from him Toques, the most fashionable thing; will be worn this Winter for balls, dinners parties, &c.

RAILROADS.

METROPOLITAN ELEVATED RAILWAY.

Open from 5:30 A. M. to 12 P. M.

RECTOR-ST.—Nearest point for Wall-Street Ferry, and connects with cars for South Ferry.

CORTLANDT-ST.—Nearest point for Jersey City and Communipaw Ferries.

PARK-PLACE.—Nearest point for Post Office, City Hall, and Vesey-street Ferry to Hoboken.

CHAMBERS-ST.—Nearest point for Pavonia and Erie Railway Ferry.

FRANKLIN-ST.

GRAND-ST.—Nearest point for Desbrosses-Street Ferry to Jersey City, and connects with cars for Desbrosses and East Grand-Street Ferries.

BLEECKER-ST.—Connects with cars for East and West.

EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Christopher-Street Ferry to Hoboken, connecting with cars for Christopher and East Tenth Street Ferries.

FOURTEENTH-ST.—Nearest point to Union-Square, Wallack's, and Lyceum Theatres, Academy of Music, Irving and Tammany Halls, connecting with cars for East Twenty-third and Thirty-fourth Street Ferries.

TWENTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Booth's, St. James, and Park Theatres, Grand Opera-House, Gilmore's Garden, and Masonic Temple, and Twenty-third-Street Ferry to Jersey City.

THIRTY-THIRD-ST.—Nearest point to Standard, Broadway, and Fifth-Avenue Theatres, Aquarium, and San Francisco Minstrels, connecting with cars for Weehawken Ferry.

FORTY-SECOND-ST.—Connects with New-York Transfer Company's cabs, for Grand Central Depot.

FIFTIETH-ST.

FIFTY-EIGHTH-ST.—Nearest point for Central Park, connecting with cars of Second Line Railroad.

For up-town trains take east side stations.

For down-town trains take west side stations.

FARE 10 CENTS.

Except between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M., when the fare is 5 cents.

WM. R. GARRISON, President.

M. VAN BROCKLIN, Superintendent.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

GREAT TRUNK LINE AND UNITED STATES MAIL ROUTE.

On and after Dec. 16, 1878,

Trains leave New-York, via Desbrosses and Cortlandt Streets Ferries, as follows:

Express for Harrisburg, Pittsburg, the West and South, with Pullman Palace Cars attached, 9 A. M., 6 and 8:30 P. M.

For Williamsport, Lock Haven, Corry, and Erie at 8:30 P. M., connecting at Corry with Pittsburg, Petroleum Centre, and the Oil Regions, Williamsport, and Lock Haven, 9 A. M.

Baltimore, Washington, and the South, "Limited Washington Express" of Pullman Parlor Cars, except Sunday, 10 A. M.; arrive Washingt. 4:12 P. M. Regular at 4:30 and 10:30 A. M., and 10:30 P. M., Sunday 4:30 A. M. and 10 P. M. For Baltimore 4 P. M., except Sunday.

Express for Philadelphia, 4:30, 7:30, 8:20, 9, (10 limited,) 11 A. M., 1, 3:30, 4, 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Sunday 4:30 and 9 A. M., 5, 6, 7:30, 8:30, and 10 P. M. Emigrant and second class, 7:30 P. M.

Boats of "Brooklyn Annex" connect with all through trains at Jersey City, affording a speedy and direct transfer for Brooklyn travel.

Trains arrive: From Pittsburg, 6:50, 10:40 A. M., 10:10 P. M., daily; 9:40 A. M., 6:20 P. M., daily, except Monday. From Washington and Baltimore, 6:50 A. M., 2, 3:50, 4:45, 10 P. M., daily. Sunday, 6:50 A. M. and 10:10 P. M. From Philadelphia, 5:05, 6:50, 9:40, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 2, 3:50, 4:50, 6:20, 8:30, and 10:10 P. M. Sunday, 5:05, 6:50, 10:40, 11:30 A. M., 6:20, 10:10 P. M.

Ticket offices, No. 526 and No. 944 Broadway, No. 1 Astor House, and foot of Desbrosses and Cortlandt sts.; No. 4 Court-st., and Brooklyn Annex Depot, foot of Fulton-st., Brooklyn; Nos. 114, 116, and 118 Hudson-st., Hoboken; Depot, Jersey City; Emigrant Ticket Office, No. 8 Battery-place.

FRANK THOMSON, General Manager. L. P. FARMER, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK CENTRAL AND HUDSON RIVER RAILROAD.

—Commencing Dec. 30, 1878, through trains will leave Grand Central Depot:

8:00 A. M., Western and Northern Express. Drawing-room cars to Albany and Rochester, and from Albany to Montreal via barnatoga.

10:30 A. M., Special Chicago and Western Express, with Drawing-room cars to Canandaigua, Rochester, and Buffalo.

11:00 A. M., Express to Albany and Troy, with connections to Utica and Rutland.

4:00 P. M., Montreal Express, with through sleeping car via St. Albans.

6:00 P. M., St. Louis Express, daily, with sleeping cars for St. Louis, running through every day in the week; also, sleeping cars for Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Toledo, and Detroit, and for Montreal, excepting Sunday night, via Saratoga.

7:30 P. M., Fast Express for Rochester and Corning via Geneva. Sleeping cars to Geneva and Rochester.

8:30 P. M., Pacific Express, daily, with sleeping cars for Rochester, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit, and Chicago, and, excepting Saturday night, to Lowville and Watertown.

Tickets for sale at Nos. 252, 261, and 413 Broadway, and at Westcott Express Company's offices, Nos. 3 Park-place, 785 and 942 Broadway, New-York, and 333 Washington-st., Brooklyn.

C. B. MCEKER, General Passenger Agent.

THE ERIE RAILWAY

will hereafter be known by its new name,

THE NEW-YORK, LAKE ERIE AND WESTERN RAILROAD.

Arrangement of Through Trains, From Chambers-Street Depot, (Fer 23d st. see below.) Ferry foot of Duane-st., daily, except Sundays, Cincinnati and Chicago Day Express. Drawing-room coaches to Buffalo.

6 P. M., daily. Fast St. Louis Express, arriving at Buffalo 8 A. M., connecting with fast trains to the West and South-west. Pullman's best Drawing-room Sleeping Coaches to Buffalo.

7 P. M., daily. Pacific Express to the West. Sleeping Coaches through to Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Cincinnati, and Chicago without change. Hotel dining coaches to Chicago.

7 P. M., except Sundays, Western Emigrant train.

Above trains leave Twenty-third-Street Ferry at 8:45 A. M., 5:45 and 8:45 P. M.

For local trains see time-tables and cards in hotels and depots. JNO. N. ABBOTT, General Passenger Agent.

NEW-YORK, NEW-HAVEN AND HARTFORD RAILROAD.—Two Passenger Depots.

Grand Street Depot for Boston at 8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 1:3, 6, 10, 11:35 P. M. For Boston and Albany R. R., 8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3 P. M. For Springfield, 8:05, 11 A. M., 12 M., 3 P. M. For New-York and New-England R. R., 8:05 A. M., 12 M., 11:35 P. M. For Newport, 8:05 A. M., 12 P. M. For Sharon Line: Division, 8:05 A. M., 1, 3, 5:15, 10 P. M. For Boston and New-York Air Line R. R., 11 A. M., 3 P. M. For New-Haven and Northampton R. R., 8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Naugatuck R. R., 8:05 A. M., 1, 3, 4:40 P. M. For Housatonic R. R., 8:05 A. M., 3 P. M. For Danbury and Norwalk R. R., 8:05 A. M., 3, 4:40, 9 P. M. For New-Canaan R. R., 8:05 A. M., 1, 4:40 P. M. For local trains see time-tables.

WICKFORD RAILROAD ROUTE TO NEWPORT, R.I.—Passengers for this line take 8:05 A. M. and 12 P. M. express train from Grand Central Depot, arriving at 4:18 and 9 P. M. at Newport.

THEODORE WARNER, Superintendent.

RAILROADS.

LEHIGH VALLEY RAILROAD.

ARRANGEMENT PASSENGER TRAINS, JAN. 1, 1879.

Leave depots, foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses sts., at 6:30 P. M.—Night express daily for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre, Pittston, Scranton, Elmira, Ithaca, Auburn, Rochester, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and the West. Pullman sleeping coaches attached. General Eastern office, corner Church and Cortlandt sts.

CHARLES H. CUMMINGS, Agent.

ROBERT H. SAYRE, Superintendent and Engineer.

SHIPPING.

WHITE STAR LINE.

UNITED STATES AND ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

NOTICE.—The steamers of this line take the Lane Routes recommended by Lieut. Maury, U. S. N., on both the outward and the homeward passages.

GERMANIC, Capt. Kennett.....Sat., Jan. 11, 7 A. M.
ADRIATIC, Capt. Jennings, Thurs., Jan. 16, 11:30 A. M.
CELTIC, Capt. Gradel.....Thurs., Jan. 23, 6 A. M.

From White Star Dock, Pier No. 52 North River.

These steamers are uniform in size and unsurpassed in appointments. The saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms are amidships, where the noise and motion are least felt, affording a degree of comfort hitherto unattainable at sea.

Rates—Saloon, $80, $80, and $100, gold; return tickets on favorable terms; steerage, $28.

These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs.

For inspection of plans and other information, apply at the company's office, No. 37 Broadway, New-York, or No. 140 Walnut-st., Phila. R. J. CORTIS, Agent.

GUION LINE.

UNITED STATES MAIL STEAMERS.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

Leaving Pier 39 in the foot of King-st.

WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Jan. 14, 9:30 A. M.
NEVADA.....TUESDAY, Jan. 21, 12:30 P. M.
MONTANA.....TUESDAY, Jan. 28, 8 A. M.
WISCONSIN.....TUESDAY, Feb. 4, 3 P. M.
WYOMING.....TUESDAY, Feb. 18, 3 P. M.

These steamers are built of iron, in water-tight compartments, and are furnished with every requisite to make the passage across the Atlantic both safe and agreeable, having bath-rooms, smoking-room, music-room, piano, and library; also, surgeon, stewardess, and caterer on each steamer. The state-rooms are all on deck, thus insuring those greatest of all luxuries at sea, perfect ventilation and light.

CABIN PASSAGE, (according to state-room, $55, $65, and $75. INTERMEDIATE, $40. STEERAGE, $26.

OFFICES, NO. 29 BROADWAY.

WILLIAMS & GUION.

NORTH GERMAN LLOYD.

STEAM-SHIP LINE BETWEEN NEW-YORK, SOUTHAMPTON, AND BREMEN.

Company's new pier foot of 3d-st., Hoboken.

DONAU.....Sat. Jan. 11 | NECKAR.....Sat. Jan. 25
RHEIN.....Sat., Jan. 18 | WESER.....Sat. Feb. 1

RATES OF PASSAGE FROM NEW-YORK TO SOUTHAMPTON, HAVRE, OR BREMEN.

First cabin.....$100
Second cabin.....60
Steerage.....30

Return tickets at reduced rates. Prepaid Steerage certificates, $30. STEERAGE TICKETS TO ALL POINTS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND, $30.

OELRICHS & CO., No. 2 Bowling Green.

INMAN LINE ROYAL MAIL STEAMERS.

FOR QUEENSTOWN AND LIVERPOOL.

CITY OF NEW-YORK.....Thursday, Jan. 2, 8 A. M.
CITY OF BRUSSELS.....Saturday, Jan. 18, 2 P. M.
CITY OF CHESTER.....Saturday, Jan. 25, 7:30 A. M.

From Pier No. 37 North River, foot of Charlton-st.

CABIN, $60, $80, and $100, gold. Return tickets on favorable terms. STEERAGE, $28, currency. Drafts at lowest rates. Saloons, state-rooms, smoking and bath rooms amidships. These steamers carry neither cattle, sheep, nor pigs. JOHN G. DALE, Agent.

Nos. 32 and 33 Broadway, N. Y.
Philadelphia Office, No. 105 South 4th-st.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY

between New-York and Havre.

Company's Pier, (new,) No. 42 North River, foot of Morton-st.

LABRADOR, Sanglier.....Wednesday, Jan. 8, 5:30 A. M.
AMERIQUE, Delord.....Wednesday, Jan. 22, 5:30 A. M.
FRANCE, Trudelle.....Wednesday, Feb. 5, 3:30 P. M.

Steamers marked thus * do not carry steerage passengers.

Checks drawn on Credit Lyonnais of Paris in amounts to suit.

For freight and passage apply to LOUIS DE BEBIAN, Agent, No. 55 Broadway.

IMPERIAL GERMAN MAIL.

Hamburg American Packet Company's Line for PLYMOUTH, CHERBOURG, and HAMBURG.

SUEVIA.....Thurs., Jan. 9 | BERDER, Thurs., Jan. 23
FRISIA.....Thurs., Jan. 16 | GELLERT.....Jan. 30

Rates of Passage to Plymouth, London, Cherbourg, Hamburg, and all points in England: First Cabin, $100, gold; second cabin, $60, gold; Steerage, $30, currency.

KUNHARDT & CO., C. B. RICHARD & BOAS,
General Agents. General Passenger Agents,
No. 61 Broad-st., N. Y. No. 61 Broadway, N. Y.

UNITED STATES AND BRAZIL MAIL STEAM-SHIP LINE.

FOR ST. THOMAS, PARA, PERNAMBUCO, BAHIA, AND RIO DE JANEIRO.

Connecting at St. Thomas with German steamers for Porto Rico and Spanish Main. The new first-class iron steam-ship CITY OF PARA, Capt. Carswell, will sail for the above ports on Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 3 P. M.

Positively no freight received after 3d. Freight must be paid in advance. Freight at low rates taken for the above ports. Freight received at Roberts' Dock, Brooklyn. Insurance lower than by any other line. Shippers desiring insurance can effect same under our open policy. For freight engagements or passage, and for all other accommodations, apply to C. H. MALLORY & CO., Agents, Office, Pier No. 20 East River.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAM-SHIP COMPANY.

Pier foot Canal-st., North River.

For ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steam-ship CRESCENT CITY.....Friday, Jan. 10, noon

Connecting for Central and South America and Mexico.

For SAN FRANCISCO via ISTHMUS OF PANAMA:
Steamship COLON.....Monday, Jan. 20, noon

Connecting for South and Central America and Mexico.

From SAN FRANCISCO to HONOLULU, NEW-ZEALAND, and AUSTRALIA:
Steam-ship AUSTRALIA.....Monday, Jan. 20, noon

For freight or general information apply to Company's office, on the pier, foot of Canal-st., North River, and for passage at Company's Ticket Office, No. 257 Broadway.

SAVANNAH AND FLORIDA.

From Pier No. 43 North River, at 3 P. M.

GATE CITY, Capt. Daggett.....Wednesday, Jan. 8
CITY OF MACON, Capt. Kenny.....Saturday, Jan. 11

Connecting with the Central Railroad of Georgia, Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, Georgia and Florida Steamboat Company, and with the new and elegant iron steamer ST. JOHNS.

GEO. YONGE, Agent
Ocean S. S. Co. and
General Agent A. & G. R. R. Central R. R. of Ga.
No. 315 Broadway. No. 409 Broadway.

FLORIDA RAILROAD AND STEAM-SHIP LINE.

ONLY DIRECT LINE TO FLORIDA.
SAILING EVERY SATURDAY.
LOWEST RATES OF FREIGHT AND PASSAGE.

Steamer ASHLAND, Saturday, Jan. 4,
And every SATURDAY thereafter.

For Fernandina and Cedar Keys, from Pier No. 12 N. R., at 3 P. M. Only line issuing through tickets and bills lading to all points in Florida, and on Chattahoochie, Appalachicola, and Flint Rivers, and BRUNSWICK, GA. Freight 25 per cent. Bills lading signed on pier. For further information, through bills lading, and passage rates, apply to

L. E. ROBERTS,
No. 177 West-st., up stairs.

NEW-YORK AND HAVANA DIRECT MAIL LINE.

These first-class steam-ships sail regularly at 3 P. M. from Pier No. 13 North River, as follows:

Steamer SANTIAGO DE CUBA.....WED., Jan. 8
Steam-ship.....SATURDAY, Jan. 18

Accommodations unsurpassed. For freight or passage apply to WILLIAM P. CLYDE & CO., No. 6 Bowling Green. McKELLAR, LULING & CO., Agents in Havana.

NEW-YORK AND CUBA MAIL S. S. LINE FOR HAVANA DIRECT.

FROM PIER 17 EAST RIVER AT 3 P. M.

Magnificent accommodation for passengers.

S. S. NIAGARA.....Saturday, Jan. 11
S. S. SARATOGA.....Wednesday, Jan. 22

Tickets issued also for

VERA CRUZ AND WEST INDIA ISLANDS

in connection with French and English S. S. Lines from Havana. JAMES E. WALSH & CO. No. 113 Wall-st.

STEAM-BOATS.

$1 50 TO BOSTON VIA THE OLD, RELIABLE STONINGTON LINE.

CONNECTING WITH ALL POINTS EAST.

NOT A TRIP MISSED IN SEVEN CONSECUTIVE YEARS.

The elegant steamers STONINGTON and NARRAGANSETT leave Pier No. 33 North River, (foot of Jay-st.,) at 4:30 P. M. daily, (except Sunday.)

Special first-class limited ticket, good only on 2:45 A. M. train from Stonington, sold via this line from New-York to Boston for $1 50.

Tickets for sale at all principal ticket offices. Staterooms secured at offices of Westcott Express Company and at Nos. 263 and 397 Broadway, and at Metropolitan and Fifth-Avenue Hotel Ticket Offices.

PROVIDENCE LINE, FOR FREIGHT ONLY.

Steamers ELECTRA and GALATEA leave Pier No. 29 North River, (foot of Warren-st.,) daily, (except Sundays,) at 4 P. M. for Providence direct.

Freight via either line taken at lowest rates.

D. S. BABCOCK, President.

L. W. FILLING, G. P. Agent.

SUNDAY LINE FOR BOSTON.

Steamers of the Norwich Line will leave Pier No. 40 North River at 4:30 P. M., SUNDAY, for New-London, Boston, Worcester, &c.

FOR BRIDGEPORT AND ALL POINTS ON Housatonic and Naugatuck Railroad. Fare, $1. Steamer leave Catharine-slip daily, (Sundays excepted,) at 11:30 A. M.

FOR NEW-HAVEN, HARTFORD, AND THE NORTH.—Steamers leave Peck-slip for New-Haven at 5 and 11 P. M., connecting with road.

INSURANCE.

QUEEN

INSURANCE COMPANY

OF

LIVERPOOL AND LONDON.

Nos. 37 and 39 Wall-st.

Wm. H. Ross, Manager.

WATCHES, JEWELRY, &C.

MONEY.—DIAMONDS, WATCHES, JEWELRY, Silverware, &c., bought and sold back at a small advance. GEO. C. ALLEN, No. 1,190 Broadway, near 29th-st.

NO. 1,207 BROADWAY, OVER MERALD THEATRE.—Ladies' private office. Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry, &c., bought and sold. Branch No. 2,207 Broadway. LINDO BROS.

PERSONAL.

WANTED—INFORMATION OF MISS LIDA A. RANKIN, formerly of Delaware Station, Ind.; or Mrs. E. FOUKE, her sister. Address J. R. M. No. 303 East Broadway, New-York.

FINANCIAL.

VERMILYE & CO.,

BANKERS,

16 and 18 Nassau-st., New-York.

Dealers in United States Bonds, and Stocks of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn.

Buy and sell on Commission, for cash or on margin, all securities dealt in at the New-York Stock Exchange.

Interest allowed on deposits, subject to draft at sight.

JAMES A. TROWBRIDGE, DONALD MACKAY,
LATHAM A. FISH.

CITY BONDS AT PUBLIC AUCTION.

ON THE 15TH OF JANUARY 1879,
THE CITY OF KINGSTON, N. Y.,
Will sell at the City Hall, in Kingston, N. Y., at 12 o'clock M.,

$65,000 COUPON BONDS,

issued in pursuance of an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, chapter 35, passed Feb. 13, 1878.

The bonds bear interest at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually on the 15th of January and July in each year, and have 30 years to run, with the option of the City to pay them after 10 years. Five per cent. of the purchase money will be required to be paid on the day of sale, and the balance, with accrued interest, on or before the 28th day of February next—the cash payment of five per cent. to be forfeited on failure to complete purchase.

Further information can be had by addressing any of the Presidents of the several banks in Kingston, N. Y.

THOS. CORNELL, } Committee.
C. D. BROWN, }

VIRGINIA BONDHOLDERS.

Whose assent is not already given are invited to examine the PROPOSITION FOR PROPORTIONATE FUNDING INTO FOUR PER CENTS SECURED BY TAX-RECEIVABLE COUPONS AND A SINKING FUND. This proposition is believed to meet fully the requirements of the case, and has the approval of many leading members of the Legislature. The indications are that it will become a law, but a prompt co-operation by bondholders will secure its passage. Communications may be addressed direct, or through either of the following houses:

BANK OF NEW-YORK, N. WINSLOW, LANIER & CO.
R. A. CHAS. M. FIRY. THE FIRST NATIONAL
Pres. BANK, N. Y.
DREXEL, MORGAN & CO. HUGH McCULLOCH.
L. VON HOFFMANN & CO.

THE FUNDING ASSOCIATION, U. S. A., (LIMITED.)

Room No. 93 Drexel Building.

OFFICE OF THE CONTROLLER.

CITY OF ALLEGHENY, Nov. 27, 1878.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF ALLEGHENY 6 PER CENT. RAILROAD COMPROMISE BONDS.—In accordance with section third of an act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania approved April 10, 1862, entitled "An Act relative to the railroad indebtedness of the City of Allegheny," notice is hereby given that the said City of Allegheny is prepared to retire the following outstanding four per cent. railroad compromise bonds, viz: Numbers 17, 34, 42, 72, 73, 74, 75, 82, 84, and that the said outstanding bonds not surrendered within six weeks from the date of this advertisement will cease to draw interest thereon, and the holder or holders of such bond or bonds shall look only to the deposit in the Bank of Pittsburg for payment of the same. JAMES BROWN, Controller.

FOR SALE.

Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta 1st and 24 Mortgage Bonds.

Memphis and Charleston 1st and 24 Mortgage Bonds.

Southern Minnesota 1st Mortgage Bonds.

Galveston, Houston and Henderson 1st Mortgage Bonds.

Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio 1st Mortgage Bonds.

Greenville and Columbia Guaranteed Bonds.

Mobile and Ohio new 1st Mortgage Bonds.

St. Louis and Iron Mountain Consolidated Bonds.

St. Louis and San Francisco Bonds.

Kansas Pacific Bonds.

By ARENTS & YOUNG,
No. 9 New-st.

WANTED

The following Kentucky county bonds: Bourbon County, Fayette County, Clark County, Montgomery County, Bacon County.

Also, Second Mortgage bonds of the Kentucky Central Railroad. Address

RANDALL H. FOOTE, BANKER,
NO. 70 BROADWAY, N. Y.

CITY AND COUNTY BONDS.

We offer some choice bonds bearing 7 and 8 per cent., issued for municipal purposes. First-class securities for investment always in hand.

A. W. BEASLEY & CO.,
No. 12 Wall-st., N. Y.

JERSEY CITY BONDS, Due 1891, 1894, 1905.

BAYONNE CITY 6 per Cent. and 7 per Cent.

For sale by
JOHN LAMB,
No. 1 Exchange-place, Jersey City.

TODEALERS IN STOCKS.—THE OLD BANKing house of HOWES & COMPANY, No. 6 Wall-st., New-York, buys and sells, on reasonable margin all the stocks dealt in at the New-York Stock Exchange. When desired, will use discretion what to buy and sell, giving parties the benefit of 20 years' experience. Opportunities for profits constantly occur.

THE NEVADA BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO

Capital $10,000,000, gold. Reserve, $3,000,000, gold.
NEW-YORK AGENCY NO. 62 WALL-ST.
Buys and sells exchange and makes transfers.
Issues commercial and travelers' credits.
Executes orders for mining stocks at San Francisco.

INTEREST FOR DEPOSITS.

Persons desirous of obtaining interest for deposits and have their balances at all times subject to check on demand, can do so by depositing with the old banking house of HOWES & COMPANY, No. 6 Wall-st, New-York, which allows interest at 4 per cent.

AT REASONABLE RATES—MONEY ON LIFE and Endowment Insurance Policies and Mortgages; some thought; insurance of all kinds effected with best companies at lowest premiums.
J. J. HABRICH & CO., No. 185 Broadway; box 1,880.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,
NO. 59 WALL-ST.
ISSUE COMMERCIAL CREDITS, TRAVELERS' CREDITS, AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

KOUNTZE BROTHERS, BANKERS, No. 12 Wall-st., New-York, issue Letters of Credit or Circular Notes on the Union Bank of London for the use of travelers in all parts of the world.

DIVIDENDS.

FIFTY-THIRD DIVIDEND.

HANOVER

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

A semi-annual dividend of FIVE (5) PER CENT. is payable on demand at the office of the company, No. 120 Broadway. L. REMSEN LANE,
Vice-President and Secretary.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1879.

OFFICE OF WELLS, FARGO & CO.,
No. 65 BROADWAY, Dec. 16, 1878.

THE REGULAR SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND of FOUR PER CENT. has been declared by the Directors of this company, payable Jan. 15, 1879, at our office as above.

The transfer-books will close Jan. 4, at 3 P. M., and reopen Feb. 6. Assistant Secretary.

FOURTH NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THIRTIETH DIVIDEND.—THE DIRECTORS have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of Three per Cent., free of tax, out of the profits of last six months, payable Jan. 2, 1879. Transfer-books will close 21st instant P. M., until 2d January.

ANTHONY LANE, Cashier.

BROOKLYN TRUST COMPANY,
No. 177 MONTAGUE-ST., CORNER OF CLINTON.
BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 30, 1878.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of THREE PER CENT., payable Jan. 6, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed from Jan. 2 to the date of payment. WM. S. BUNKER, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE NEW CENTRAL COAL COMPANY OF MARYLAND, Nos. 6 and 6½ Trinity Building,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS company have this day declared a dividend of TWO DOLLARS per share, payable Jan. 22, 1879.

The transfer-books will be closed from the 17 and reopened Jan. 23. WM. S. JACQUES, Secretary.

MECHANICS' NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

DIVIDEND.—THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS have this day declared a dividend of Four per cent., free of tax, payable on and after 2d of January next. The transfer-book will be closed until that date.

WM. H. COX, Cashier.

OFFICE OF THE MERCANTILE FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 166 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of Five (5) per cent., payable on and after Jan. 6, 1879.

C. W. PARMELEE, Secretary.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE NATIONAL BANK OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, NEW-YORK, Dec. 21, 1878.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS HAVE THIS day declared a dividend of TWO PER CENT., free of tax, payable on and after Jan. 2 next, until which time the transfer-books will remain closed.

A. S. APGAR, Cashier.

NATIONAL BROADWAY BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 24, 1878.

FIFTY-EIGHTH DIVIDEND.—A SEMI-ANnual dividend of EIGHT PER CENT. on the capital stock, free of all taxes, will be paid on and after Jan. 2, proximo. J. L. EVERITT, Cashier.

OFFICE OF THE STAR FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY,
No. 141 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1879.

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THIS company have this day declared a semi-annual dividend of SIX (6) PER CENT., payable on demand.

JAMES M. HODGES, Secretary.

BOWERY NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 17, 1878.

A DIVIDEND OF SEVEN AND A HALF (7½) PER CENT. will be paid on JAN. 2, 1879.

A. HALSEY, Cashier.

PEOPLE'S NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 18, 1878.

THE DIRECTORS HAVE THIS DAY declared a dividend of Three (3) Per Cent., payable on and after Jan. 2, 1879.

JOHN PARKER, Cashier.

DIVIDENDS.

OFFICE

HOFFMAN FIRE INSURANCE COMP'Y,

No. 120 BROADWAY,

NEW-YORK, Jan. 3, 1879.

A DIVIDEND OF FIVE PER CENT. IS THIS DAY declared, payable on demand.

JOHN D. MACINTYRE, Secretary.

OFFICE RIDGEWOOD INSURANCE COMPANY,
BROOKLYN, Dec. 23, 1878.

DIVIDEND OF FIVE PER CENT. IS DE clared, payable Jan. 2, 1879, at the New-York office, No. 170 Broadway. WM. A. SCOTT, Secretary.

SAVINGS BANKS.

METROPOLITAN SAVINGS BANK,

Nos. 1 and 3 Third-av.

FIFTY-FIRST DIVIDEND.

NEW-YORK, Dec. 27, 1878.

INTEREST AT THE RATE OF FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $1,000 and under, and at the rate of Four per Cent. on amounts over $1,000, which have remained on deposit during the three or six months ending Jan. 1, 1879, will be paid according to the by-laws on Wednesday, Jan. 15.

DIVIDEND not withdrawn will be added to the deposits and draw interest from Jan. 1.

DEPOSITS made on or before the 10th of January will draw interest from Jan. 1.

ISAAC T. SMITH, President.

G. N. CONKLIN, Secretary.

61ST SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND.

East River Savings Institution,

No. 3 Chambers-st., New-York, Dec. 30, 1878.

Interest for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1878, at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum on sums of $3,000 and under, and at the rate of FOUR PER CENT. on the excess, has been declared, and will be payable after Jan. 10, 1879.

Bank open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

CHARLES A. WHITNEY, Secretary.

NORTH RIVER SAVINGS BANK,

CORNER 8TH-AV. and 34TH-ST.

DIVIDEND.—The Trustees have declared, out of the earnings of the past six months, a semi-annual dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on all sums of $5 and upward, payable on and after Jan. 13, 1879.

INTEREST NOT WITHDRAWN will be added to the principal and draw interest from Jan. 1.

DEPOSITS MADE on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1.

BANK OPEN daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.; also on Monday and Saturday evenings from 6 to 8 o'clock.

WILLIAM B. STAFFORD, President.

HENRY V. PARSELL, Secretary.

UNION DIME SAVINGS BANK,

Broadway, 9th-av., and 32d-st.

Interest on deposits, from $5 to $3,000, at the rate of (5) Five Per Cent. per annum; and on all sums exceeding $3,000, at the rate of (4) Four Per Cent. per annum on the excess, payable on and after Jan. 20, 1879.

Deposits on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1. Money deposited on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1. Bank open daily from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

C. D. HEATON, Secretary. JOHN CASTREE, President.

NEW-YORK SAVINGS BANK, 8TH-AV., CORNER OF 14TH-ST.—The semi-annual dividend at the rate of FIVE PER CENT. per annum was declared Jan. 1, 1879, on ALL SUMS from $5 to $5,000, interest commencing on the 1st of each month. Money deposited on or before Jan. 10 will draw interest from Jan. 1.

Assets.....$3,519,129 16
Surplus.....398,413 77

RICHARD H. BULL, President.

C. W. BRINCKERHOFF, Secretary.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITORS!

Read "The Safeguard and Savings Bank Reporter." The only paper published in the interest of depositors. Published every week in Jan. and July, semi-monthly balance of year. Send your name and address on postal card and sample copy will be sent free. or send subscription for one year: Terms $1. Address THE SAFEGUARD, 13 Spruce-st., New-York.

ELECTIONS.

OFFICE OF THE WABASH RAILWAY COMPANY,
TOLEDO, Ohio, Dec. 21, 1878.

NOTICE.—THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE stockholders of the Wabash Railway Company for the election of Directors and the transaction of other business, will be held at the office of the company, in Toledo, Ohio, on WEDNESDAY, the 19th day of February, 1879, at 10 o'clock A. M.

At this meeting will be submitted, as required by law, the execution of a mortgage by this company upon the Hannibal and Naples Railroad, to secure the bonds of this company to be issued in payment for said railroad in the sum of five hundred thousand dollars.

The transfer-books will be closed twenty (20) days prior to said meeting. W. B. CORNEAU, Secretary.

OFFICE METROPOLITAN GAS-LIGHT COMPANY,
BROADWAY, CORNER OF 46TH-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 19, 1878.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKholders of this company for the election of seven Directors to serve for the ensuing year, and for the transaction of other business, will be held at the company's office on MONDAY, Jan. 13, 1879. Polls open from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M. The stock transfer-books will close Saturday evening, Dec. 28, 1878, and reopen Tuesday morning, Jan. 14, 1879.

O. F. ZOLLIKOFFER, Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE BROADWAY INSURANCE COMPANY,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 3, 1879.

THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR DIRECTORS of this company will be held at the office of the company, No. 158 Broadway, on WEDNESDAY, 15th inst., between the hours of 12 M. and 1 P. M.

JOHN WRAY, Secretary.

MERCHANTS' NATIONAL BANK,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 7, 1878.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKholders of this bank for the election of seven Directors to serve the ensuing year, will be held at the banking-house, TUESDAY, JAN. 14, 1879.

Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M. By order of the Board. C. V. BANTA, Cashier.

DRY DOCK, EAST BROADWAY AND BATTERY RAILROAD COMPANY, OFFICE, No. 695 GRAND-ST.,
NEW-YORK, Jan. 3, 1879.

ELECTION.—THE ANNUAL ELECTION FOR Directors of this company, and for inspectors of next election, will be held at its office on Tuesday, Jan. 14 inst., from 12 M. to 1 P. M.

R. KELLY, Secretary.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKholders of the FAIRCHANCE IRON COMPANY, of Pennsylvania, for the election of Directors, will be held at the office of the company, Room No. 1 at No. 23 Nassau-st., in the City of New-

OUT WITH THE VOLUNTEERS

A NIGHT TOUR WITH THE LIFE-SAVERS.

PATROLLING THE EAST RIVER WITH "NAN THE NEWSBOY" AND HIS COMRADES—HOW THE SQUAD OPERATE—EFFORTS TO BE MADE TO SECURE PERMANENT LIFE-SAVING STATIONS FOR THE BOYS.

It was a bitterly cold night when a TIMES reporter, enveloped in great coat and mufflers, joined "Nan the Newsboy" and his comrades of the Volunteer Life-saving Association, on their night tour along the South-street river front. The reporter warmed himself before a blazing coal fire in Nan's Cherry-street home, while "Nan" stowed away a knuckle of ham and the greater part of a large loaf of bread. The room into which the visitor was seated was small and cozy. The walls were decorated with a few cheap prints, and pictures of members of the association cut from one of the illustrated papers, and put in wooden frames, together with descriptions of some of the deeds accomplished by the "boys." Soon the door opened, and "Ned" Kelly, somewhat younger in years and shorter in stature than "Nan," burst into the room. "Nan" gulped down a piece of bread, and starting up, fished out from a corner a brand-new waistcoat of linen, lined with ribs of cork, which he quickly fastened on Ned's body, and then buttoned over it a rubber coat. "These were all made a present to us," said Nan to the visitor, referring to the cork floats and rubber coats, and to the life-lines hanging on the wall near the mantle, one of which he took down as he spoke, and handed to Ned. "Gil" Long, the third of the volunteer squad of three, came in at this point, and was rapidly inclosed in a similar suit of cork and rubber. "Nan's" mother then fastened on her son's life-preserver and rubber overcoat, and then the three boys simultaneously fitted upon their shaggy heads knitted woolen night-caps that came well down over their ears, and then pulled over the caps their weather-beaten cloth hats. Nan next lit a cage lantern and a "bull's-eye," and then picking up a life-line and a folding life-saving ladder, cried out: "All right, I guess." The party ran along the snowy pavement to the Dover-street dock, where they were joined by two more volunteers not in uniform. It was 7 o'clock and bitter cold. Overhead the sky was crammed with countless stars, that shone with unusual brilliancy, and the moon threw a pale sheen over the tops of the buildings and tipped with silver the small cables of the bridge as they swung to and fro in the bleak wind, giving forth a weird, monotonous music. The masts of anchored vessels rose sharply against the sky, and across the fast-running river, along which the broken ice floated in the moonlight like mountains of cakes of silver, twinkled the clustered lights of the Brooklyn ferry-houses. Now and then knots of people who hurried along the street swinging their arms or rubbing their ears to keep up the circulation in their numbed limbs, stopped and gazed curiously at the inflated bodies of the life-savers, who are now familiar objects along the cold river front. The party started down toward the Battery, threading their way through the edge of the wharves, stooping every now and then to avoid the projecting prows of the vessels that threw their gaunt shadows across the snow, and frightening any number of river rats that started up across their path and disappeared in the deep heap of old iron or some underground nest. "After the river rats again," sang out sundry drivers, jokingly, as their street cars rumbled slowly along. "A splendid night for work," yelled back "Nan," in a good-humored way, "but I pity the man who tumbles in to-night. It will be rather a tough bath."

The party had by this time reached the vicinity of Peck-slip, when the volunteers were joined by a dark stretch of a lonesome-looking pier, and said, "There's where we fished out a young fellow on New Year's night." "Yes," said "Nan," inconically, "and he hit me in the nose when we got him on dry land; that's all the thanks we got." Near this spot a few nights before "Nan" rescued a sailor, and having seen him properly cared for in a neighboring house, ran home through the cold in his stocking-feet, being unable to put on his boots and socks after removing them on coming from the water, as the water froze, lining the interior with thin ice.

At Peck-slip the volunteers showed the manner in which the life-lines are employed. One rope being looped about their waist, they swung the end, upon which was hung a billet of oak, about their heads, and then let it sail gracefully through the air and splash into the water some distance from the wharf. "Nan" then grasped his life-saving ladder, and threw it into the air, and as its joints unfolded gave his arm a peculiar twist and the ladder fell into the water, reaching upon the wharf by its hooked end just as it sunk and began to go under the surface. After the line has been thrown out one of the volunteers, generally "Nan," steps down the ladder, and sinking into the water, with his cork-jacket and rubber coat he swims to the place where the drowning person is struggling, secures the life-rope about his chest, and then drags him back to the ladder, up which the man or woman is carefully hoisted until he or she is once more on dry land. He is then conducted to the nearest house, and revived through the agency of powerful hartshorn and vigorous rubbing, and then given a stiff horn of liquor. Together with some medicine given to "Nan" as a remedy calculated to prevent a cold from the shock of an unexpected ducking settling into the system. After the demonstration of their live-saving methods, the party pushed their way onward. After reaching many of the stations that those who were about Fulton Ferry, to the Battery, near which the wind began to whistle and howl dismally and fiercely. The party turned the sharp corner that leads to the Battery, and got suddenly right in the teeth of the gale. It was what mariners parlance would term "a gale as is a gale." It not only cut like a knife, but pierced through heavy Winter wraps as if they were but so much tissue-paper, and seemed to sink into the very bone. It benumbed the ears and brought the water streaming from the eyes of the invited guests of the journey, freezing stiff the pocket-handkerchiefs that were applied to the end of stopping the involuntary shedding of tears. The wind had blown the snow into great drifts on the asphalt pavement, and as the party turned the corner of the small frame building, every second step carried them deep into the cold and yielding surface of the snow. The boys began to sing as if thoroughly enjoying themselves when they reached the Battery, but the wind raged with unrestrained fury, howling like a hurricane, and dashing snow and icy spray into the averted faces of the party. The waves beat ceaselessly against the wall, which was covered with a fantastic icy coating, where the spray had frozen while the waves were yet receding from the bulwark of stone. It was a scene of lonesomeness, and all the party agreed with the remark that "Nan" made, when, holding the "bull's-eye" so that it lighted up the angry water, he shouted, "A man would likely be killed before he could be got out of that water." Then looking ahead he saw in the distance the dark outline of one of the iron fountains near Castle Garden. He quickened his steps on seeing it, and, while the guests stood shivering in the face of the driving wind, deliberately seized the iron cap, and chopping away some of the mass of ice that filled the bowl and hung in icicles over its brim, held it beneath the running water until it brimmed over, and then lifting it to his lips, drained it off in one draught, exclaiming, "That's good, I can tell you." "Gil" and "Ned" followed his example, while the guests, watching this spectacle of human beings drinking ice-water in a gale cold enough to give one a headache and almost congeal the blood in one's veins, began to comprehend how "Nan" could regard a plunge into the icy water of the river as "not so cold a job as some people thought." The volunteers went around Castle Garden on the stone pier, and then, singing as they walked, retraced their steps along the Battery to South-street again, and patrolled the river front to Grand-street, whence they returned to the Dover-street wharf, where they were dismissed for the night at 11 o'clock.

The patrolling of the above route, a task voluntarily undertaken, they will continue throughout the Winter, without the expectation of any pecuniary reward. Their only desire appears to be to secure the enlargement of their sphere of usefulness by the increase of the active membership of their association, and by the erection of stations on their route. Capt. Paul Boyton and others are deeply interested in the work the lads are accomplishing, and in an interview with the reporter subsequent to the trip above described, he explained his theory of how permanency could be affected through the association. He favors the construction of three small floating stations, about 10 by 17 feet in dimensions, which shall be fitted up with life-lines, a life-boat, a stretcher, and furnished with every description of restorative, including galvanic batteries. These stations, which would cost about $250 each, he would anchor at Piers Nos. 8, 28, and 50, those being the most dangerous points, in his estimation, on the East River front. Each station he would put in charge of one of the boys, with a corps of six assistants, who should divide into two companies of three each, who should separate and go in opposite directions, meeting patrolmen from other stations half way between the stations, thus covering the entire East River front. The Captain would have the stations made City property, and the boys regular employes of the City, under stated wages. He would also have established a series of prize moneys and medals, to reward the assistants who, in turn, should be promoted in consideration of efficiency and merit. The stations thus organized should be subjected to a weekly inspection by a City Inspector, who should report as to their condition and working order. The Captain visited the Stock Exchange on Saturday, and laid his plan before the members, who grew enthusiastic over it, and promised that if the Captain would vouch for the honesty of the lads they would start a subscription toward the erection of the stations, and on Monday the Captain will visit the Exchange to collect subscriptions, which will be deposited in a bank, under the Exchange's supervision as to its expenditure. Capt. Boyton intends to devote all his spare time, until his departure for Paris, in instructing the lads in improved life-saving methods, and in superintending the erection of the stations.

A YOUNG SAILOR.

John Kelly, a cabin-boy, 14 years of age, intelligent and bright-looking, was yesterday brought to the Tombs Police Court by Officer Hitchman, of the Eastern Steam-boat Squad. The officer stated that a citizen prevented the boy from jumping into the East River at Pier 12 on the previous evening. When asked for an explanation of his conduct, Kelly said that he was an orphan, without friends, and that he was staying at a sailors' boarding-house at No. 26 Coenties-slip, where he had been stopping for some time, waiting to get a ship. Justice Ottarbourg told the boy that if he failed to find a Captain who required his services, to return to him in a few days, and he would see that he got a ship. Kelly thanked the Justice, and then departed.

THE NEW-YORK ELEVATED ROAD.

COMPLAINTS OF ITS MISMANAGEMENT—THE GRIEVANCES OF INDIGNANT PASSENGERS—INSOLENT EMPLOYES.

"Built as cheaply as possible, equipped as poorly as possible, run as inconveniently as possible, and with an eye to the biggest profits possible—that's my idea of the East Side line of the New-York Elevated Railroad Company," said a gentleman yesterday who has traveled over the road almost daily since its opening. "And you will find everybody who travels on the road agreeing with me," he added. The "cold snap" which froze up the company's engines and water-tanks on Thursday night not only illustrated the miserable incompetency of the management of the road and seriously delayed travel all day Friday, but it also showed the lee-box character of the cars in the most emphatic manner. Not the slightest attempt is made to heat the cars, and, as the doors are kept open by the brakemen two-thirds of the time, the cold winds that whistle through them when a train is in motion cause the passenger to forget all the other annoyances of the ride, and he gets off at his destination with feet half frozen, to go home and prepare for the cold that is likely to follow. The cars are fitted with large pipes, running underneath the seats, originally placed there, it is said, for steam-heating purposes. A conductor on one of the trains told an inquiring passenger the other day that cold air was to be pumped into the pipes next Summer to keep the cars cool, and as they have never been used for any purpose, the inquirer believed the conductor's story. This nuisance of cold cars is so disagreeable and dangerous to health that many up-town people prefer to walk long distances in order to ride down town in the warm cars of the Metropolitan Road, rather than risk their health in the ice-cars on the East Side road. "Why," said an up-town resident yesterday, "even the street-cars are more comfortable than those on the East Side road, for they give us straw for our feet at least."

Another cause of complaint, and one that holds good in all kinds of weather, is the constant incivility and insulting conduct of a very large proportion of the trainmen employed by the company. This is most apparent between 5 and 7 o'clock in the afternoon, when the fare is 5 cents and the travel very heavy. Not enough trains are run to accommodate the crowds who go home between those hours, and every car is of course crowded full. The passengers are treated with the utmost bearishness by the brakemen and conductors as a rule, who push them about and hustle and yell at them as if they were cattle in a freight car. At every station a brakeman thrusts his head inside the car door and yells at the passengers to "Get up ahead, there!" "Move up, there! Lively, you!" and when his orders are not obeyed with the promptness he desires they are not unfrequently followed by a string of vile oaths yelled out at the top of his voice, which even the passengers does not resent. Now, if any gentleman is bold enough to remonstrate, the result is simply more and viler curses. "It is bad enough to have our wives and daughters driven about like cattle in these cars," said an old gentleman riding up town one afternoon, with a bag of old iron or some underground nest, "After the river rats again," sang out sundry drivers, jokingly, as their street cars rumbled slowly along. "A splendid night for work," yelled back "Nan," in a good-humored way, "but I pity the man who tumbles in to-night. It will be rather a tough bath."

The party had by this time reached the vicinity of Peck-slip, when the volunteers were joined by a dark stretch of a lonesome-looking pier, and said, "There's where we fished out a young fellow on New Year's night." "Yes," said "Nan," inconically, "and he hit me in the nose when we got him on dry land; that's all the thanks we got." Near this spot a few nights before "Nan" rescued a sailor, and having seen him properly cared for in a neighboring house, ran home through the cold in his stocking-feet, being unable to put on his boots and socks after removing them on coming from the water, as the water froze, lining the interior with thin ice.

At Peck-slip the volunteers showed the manner in which the life-lines are employed. One rope being looped about their waist, they swung the end, upon which was hung a billet of oak, about their heads, and then let it sail gracefully through the air and splash into the water some distance from the wharf. "Nan" then grasped his life-saving ladder, and threw it into the air, and as its joints unfolded gave his arm a peculiar twist and the ladder fell into the water, reaching upon the wharf by its hooked end just as it sunk and began to go under the surface. After the line has been thrown out one of the volunteers, generally "Nan," steps down the ladder, and sinking into the water, with his cork-jacket and rubber coat he swims to the place where the drowning person is struggling, secures the life-rope about his chest, and then drags him back to the ladder, up which the man or woman is carefully hoisted until he or she is once more on dry land. He is then conducted to the nearest house, and revived through the agency of powerful hartshorn and vigorous rubbing, and then given a stiff horn of liquor. Together with some medicine given to "Nan" as a remedy calculated to prevent a cold from the shock of an unexpected ducking settling into the system. After the demonstration of their live-saving methods, the party pushed their way onward. After reaching many of the stations that those who were about Fulton Ferry, to the Battery, near which the wind began to whistle and howl dismally and fiercely. The party turned the sharp corner that leads to the Battery, and got suddenly right in the teeth of the gale. It was what mariners parlance would term "a gale as is a gale." It not only cut like a knife, but pierced through heavy Winter wraps as if they were but so much tissue-paper, and seemed to sink into the very bone. It benumbed the ears and brought the water streaming from the eyes of the invited guests of the journey, freezing stiff the pocket-handkerchiefs that were applied to the end of stopping the involuntary shedding of tears. The wind had blown the snow into great drifts on the asphalt pavement, and as the party turned the corner of the small frame building, every second step carried them deep into the cold and yielding surface of the snow. The boys began to sing as if thoroughly enjoying themselves when they reached the Battery, but the wind raged with unrestrained fury, howling like a hurricane, and dashing snow and icy spray into the averted faces of the party. The waves beat ceaselessly against the wall, which was covered with a fantastic icy coating, where the spray had frozen while the waves were yet receding from the bulwark of stone. It was a scene of lonesomeness, and all the party agreed with the remark that "Nan" made, when, holding the "bull's-eye" so that it lighted up the angry water, he shouted, "A man would likely be killed before he could be got out of that water." Then looking ahead he saw in the distance the dark outline of one of the iron fountains near Castle Garden. He quickened his steps on seeing it, and, while the guests stood shivering in the face of the driving wind, deliberately seized the iron cap, and chopping away some of the mass of ice that filled the bowl and hung in icicles over its brim, held it beneath the running water until it brimmed over, and then lifting it to his lips, drained it off in one draught, exclaiming, "That's good, I can tell you." "Gil" and "Ned" followed his example, while the guests, watching this spectacle of human beings drinking ice-water in a gale cold enough to give one a headache and almost congeal the blood in one's veins, began to comprehend how "Nan" could regard a plunge into the icy water of the river as "not so cold a job as some people thought." The volunteers went around Castle Garden on the stone pier, and then, singing as they walked, retraced their steps along the Battery to South-street again, and patrolled the river front to Grand-street, whence they returned to the Dover-street wharf, where they were dismissed for the night at 11 o'clock.

The patrolling of the above route, a task voluntarily undertaken, they will continue throughout the Winter, without the expectation of any pecuniary reward. Their only desire appears to be to secure the enlargement of their sphere of usefulness by the increase of the active membership of their association, and by the erection of stations on their route. Capt. Paul Boyton and others are deeply interested in the work the lads are accomplishing, and in an interview with the reporter subsequent to the trip above described, he explained his theory of how permanency could be affected through the association. He favors the construction of three small floating stations, about 10 by 17 feet in dimensions, which shall be fitted up with life-lines, a life-boat, a stretcher, and furnished with every description of restorative, including galvanic batteries. These stations, which would cost about $250 each, he would anchor at Piers Nos. 8, 28, and 50, those being the most dangerous points, in his estimation, on the East River front. Each station he would put in charge of one of the boys, with a corps of six assistants, who should divide into two companies of three each, who should separate and go in opposite directions, meeting patrolmen from other stations half way between the stations, thus covering the entire East River front. The Captain would have the stations made City property, and the boys regular employes of the City, under stated wages. He would also have established a series of prize moneys and medals, to reward the assistants who, in turn, should be promoted in consideration of efficiency and merit. The stations thus organized should be subjected to a weekly inspection by a City Inspector, who should report as to their condition and working order. The Captain visited the Stock Exchange on Saturday, and laid his plan before the members, who grew enthusiastic over it, and promised that if the Captain would vouch for the honesty of the lads they would start a subscription toward the erection of the stations, and on Monday the Captain will visit the Exchange to collect subscriptions, which will be deposited in a bank, under the Exchange's supervision as to its expenditure. Capt. Boyton intends to devote all his spare time, until his departure for Paris, in instructing the lads in improved life-saving methods, and in superintending the erection of the stations.

A YOUNG SAILOR.

John Kelly, a cabin-boy, 14 years of age, intelligent and bright-looking, was yesterday brought to the Tombs Police Court by Officer Hitchman, of the Eastern Steam-boat Squad. The officer stated that a citizen prevented the boy from jumping into

CITY AND SUBURBAN NEWS.

NEW-YORK.

The arrests during the past week numbered 1,209.

The Postmaster-General will leave Washington for Albany to-night.

The ball of the "Old Guard" will take place at the Academy of Music on the 23d of January.

The Greece, for London, took out 224 head of live cattle, and the Spain, for Liverpool, 10 horses, yesterday.

The sales of real estate during 1878 in this City amounted to $64,119,187; in 1877 the sales were $71,469,285.

The bond of Henry M. Olmstead, Assignee of Olyphant & Co., was fixed at the sum of $100,000, yesterday, by Judge Van Hoesen.

Georgina Kemper, aged 72, of No. 1,537 Second-avenue, fell down stairs at her residence yesterday morning, and was severely injured.

George Morris and Cornelius McAuliff, who were charged with stealing a watch from John Edwards, were brought before Justice Flammer on the 3d inst., and honorably discharged.

Messrs. F. Alexandre & Sons have concluded a contract with Roach & Son for a large steamer, to run in their Havana line. Her dimensions will be as follows: 330 feet long, 38.6 beam, and 25 feet deep.

Mr. W. Milner Roberts has been appointed Chief Engineer of Public Works by the Brazilian Government, and with his family sailed for Rio Janeiro yesterday afternoon in the steam-ship City of Rio de Janeiro.

The Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents obtained yesterday, from Judge Donohue, an injunction restraining theatrical performances at Harlem Music Hall until the proprietors had paid the license-fee required by law.

There were reported at the Bureau of Vital Statistics during the past week, 555 deaths, 412 births, and 203 marriages, showing an increase of 53 deaths and 86 marriages, and a decrease of 78 births, as compared with the preceding week.

A caucus of the Tammany members of the Common Council, who are in a minority this year, was held yesterday. It was decided to support Mr. William R. Roberts for President of the board, and Mr. James Walsh for Sergeant-at-Arms.

Judge Van Hoesen, in the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, made an order referring the action of Annie Churchill against Walter S. Churchill for divorce, on the ground of adultery, to A. M. Patshaw. The parties were married in April, 1878.

The Twelfth Assembly District Republican Association adopted a resolution last evening recommending the repeal of article 14 of the constitution. The installation of the newly-elected officers was postponed until the next regular meeting, in February.

Postmaster James yesterday received a letter from the Secretary of Roosevelt Hospital, informing him, as Chairman of the New-York Post Office Mutual Aid Association, that sick members of that association will be admitted to the Roosevelt Hospital and treated free of charge.

The committee representing the first mortgage bondholders of the New-York and Oswego Midland Railroad met yesterday and unanimously approved the plan of reconstruction recently adopted by the committee representing the holders of Receivers' certificates. Five million dollars' worth of bonds were represented.

The agent of the General Transatlantic Steamship Line, in this City, has received a cable dispatch stating that the Hamburg-American Line steamer Deutschland has got aground at Havre, but now will be easily floated. The departure of the General Transatlantic Line steamer Amérique, for this port, was also delayed 12 hours.

Frederick Pfeiffer, a fireman in the employ of the New-York Elevated Railroad, while looking out of the window of the locomotive, was seriously injured by his head coming in contact with the iron bracing at the Second-street station, which the train was passing, at 12:45 P. M. yesterday. He was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital.

Schedules were filed showing the following statements in assignments in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday: William Roth to Philip Nesbit, liabilities, $13,874 61; nominal assets, $2,59 61. Charles Bellows to Sidney Wintringham, liabilities, $5,616; nominal assets, $325. Adolf Ash & Co. to Seldendorf to Henry E. Eisler, liabilities, $13 186; nominal assets, $9,147 85; real assets, $5,293 35.

The Collector has received from the Secretary of the Treasury a circular order calling attention to the fact that under section 3,000 of the Revised Statutes, bonded common carriers only have authority to transport dutiable merchandise in bond from one port to another port, or place in the United States, and requiring that this regulation shall be strictly carried out; but in order "to avoid possible inconvenience to shippers, which might result from a sudden change from long-established practice," and "to afford an opportunity for the bonding of routes," the order will not go into effect until Feb. 1.

To show that good cooking is economical cooking, whether the purse or the physical system be regarded, is the object of the New-York Cooking School, which, under the careful management of Miss Juliet Corson, has been successfully carried on for nearly two years. The aim has ever been to show how wholesome and nourishing as well as the most palatable dishes of fish, flesh, and fowl can be served up at the least possible expense. At the schoolhin East Seventeenth-street, to-morrow afternoon, Miss Corson will give her first lesson in children's cookery. The admission ticket is two, her pupils being girls belonging to Dr. Vincent's Church of the Covenant.

The musical services at St. Ignatius' Church this evening will be of more than usual interest. Being the eve of Epiphany, (or "old Christmas,") every effort will be made to usher in the festival with appropriate music. Special psalms will be chanted, and the choir will sing Dudley Buck's cantate in C. Dr. Walter's Evening Service in A, Dr. Elvey's anthem, "Arise, shine," grand magnificat by Emeric, with the proper antiphones. The soprano solos will be sung by Masters John Livingston Pierce, and Eugene Hilliard, and G. Ahlstrom. Thomas Dennison, Harry Hilliard, and McKnight are the tenors, and Messrs. James and Charles Hilliard the basses. Dr. William H. Walter is the choirmaster and organist.

BROOKLYN.

There is a balance in the City Treasury of $3,961,082 27.

Register Scott reports that during the past year the collections for arrears of taxes amounted to $2,290,081 71, which is an increase of $32,080 84 over 1877.

The Brooklyn Teachers' Association will give their second entertainment this season at Music Hall, junction of Fulton and Flatbush avenues, Wednesday evening next.

Richard Henry, an undertaker, doing business on Atlantic-avenue, was fined $10 yesterday by Justice Walsh for carrying to Calvary Cemetery in a coach the body of Florence Farrell, a child who died at No. 27 Nevins-street of scarlet fever. The complaint was made by the Board of Health.

The Captain of the schooner Kalmar, coming into this port, refused the services of Francis W. Bell, a regularly licensed pilot, to bring him through Hell Gate. Bell sued for half the regular pilotage fee, and the defense claimed that his services, not being required, were rejected. In the United States Court, yesterday, Judge Benedict decided in favor of the plaintiff, holding that the demand for half pilotage fee was in accordance with law, and should be paid.

The firm of which Mayor Howell is the head were the successful bidders for the iron work on the new jail wing. The bid put in by Howell, Saxton & Co. was for $45,000. There are said to be the lowest bids for the iron work, amounts to $45,000. When Supervisor-at-Large, Mayor Howell thought that $40,000 would be sufficient to cover the entire expense of constructing the wing to the jail. The wing for which contracts have been awarded by the Democratic majority in the Board of Supervisors will cost $245,000.

In the suit of George W. Davis against Anna Amelia Davis for divorce on the grounds of adultery, the Referee yesterday reported in favor of the plaintiff. The evidence showed that Davis was introduced to the defendant in 1869, she representing herself then as Miss Simonson. Four months later the plaintiff married the defendant. Subsequently he learned that she was the wife of a man named George S. Johnson, whom she sued for limited divorce after having contracted marriage with plaintiff. Being defeated in her suit against her first husband for divorce, she carried her case to the General Term, but the appellate court has not yet rendered any decision. Mr. Davis did not learn of his wife's relation to another man until several years after his marriage.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

The Post Office at Pelhamville, which was discontinued recently, was re-established on the 1st inst.

Samuel Pine, of Port Chester, has again been indicted, arrested, and bailed to answer for being an accessory before the fact to a burglary. The first indictment was quashed on technical grounds at the last Court of Sessions.

Justice Dykman, of the Supreme Court, yesterday denied a motion for a writ of mandamus to compel the White Plains Village Trustees to meet and transact business, because the real question at the dead-lock—a conflict over the village Presidency—is pending an appeal from the General Term to the Court of Appeals upon such a writ.

Owing to either the heedlessness or heartlessness of the officers who made the transfers, trouble arose on Friday from Tarrytown and Port Chester to the County Jail were quite badly frost-bitten en route. One poor fellow's hands were in a sad state at noon yesterday. All these cases of frost-bite were then awaiting the attention of the jail physician, whose practice is to come to the jail after he has been called several times. Jailer Duffy says that on Friday chickens were frozen dead in the jail-yard, which is well sheltered from the wind. On the same day a tramp came up from Mount Vernon with a magistrate's jail commitment in his pocket.

NEW-JERSEY.

Charles Keller, a Paterson hatter, has made an assignment.

The seventieth anniversary of the dedication of the Halsey-street M. E. Church will be celebrated to-day with appropriate exercises.

It was reported in Paterson yesterday that a colored woman, who had gone to Hackensack to attend a dance, had been frozen to death on the road while returning home yesterday morning.

City Counsel Young, of Newark, has submitted to the Common Council of that city an opinion in which he holds that Sheriff Van Rensselaer's election to the Shrievalty deprives him of his seat in the Council Chamber.

Among those who attended the fancy-dress ball as Heune's Hotel, Weehawken, Friday night, were Constable Heydock and Officer McGoey. While the ball was in progress, Mrs. Heune asserts, Heydock called for two cigars and asked treat for their price. When it was refused, he posted himself at one of the doors, and McGoey at the other, and loudly announced his intention of arresting the crowd. When Mrs. Heune remonstrated he assaulted her, and, drawing his revolver, compelled the leader of the orchestra to suspend the music.

Robert Brown, a colored man, was committed for trial in Jersey City yesterday on a charge of having assaulted his wife with a razor. He said that he had resolved to start the new year with a new set of domestic regulations and a big chicken. The regulations were for his wife to obey, and the chicken for her to cook palatably. When he reached home New Year's Day he "foun' de ole woman a-loafin' 'round de house," he said, "an' de chicken all raw; so I jus whipped out de razor to cut de fowl up for de brollin' pan, and she rushes out a sayin' I were a gwine to cut her throat." His ingenious plea didn't save him, and he went to jail.

The commission appointed for the purpose resumed their investigation yesterday as to the sanity of Mrs. Gruwé, who recently charged her husband, in Hoboken, with having conspired to place her in an insane asylum. Frederick Freiche, who accompanied her on her last trip from Germany, testified that she was known on the steamer as the crazy woman; after their arrival in Hoboken Mrs. Gruwé neglected her household duties; on the voyage over Mrs. Gruwé became acquainted with a German Baron, with whom she corresponded after her arrival. Dr. Butles testified that she first showed symptoms of insanity after the loss of her child several years ago.

FAILURE OF THE NOTORIOUS ELIAS BROTHERS.

William M. Elias and Ellis H. Elias, known all over the country under various firm names, made an assignment yesterday to Hamilton Fish Buntnett. For the past 10 years they reaped a rich harvest from their numerous enterprises, but lately they found business very dull, and they now find it convenient to make an assignment. The business in which their liabilities were mainly contracted was fancy goods and jewelry. They started the "Dollar Store" under the Grand Central Hotel, which was very profitable for several years, but recently they moved to Broadway and Twenty-first-street, where they endeavored to sell off the stock they had on hand. They also had a watch store on Twenty-second-street and Broadway, and until recently a jewelry store on Bond-street, under the name of Russell & Co. Their liabilities amount to $40,000, and their assets consist of watches, fancy goods, and other articles, the value of which is not known. They confessed to get an extension but failed. Ellis H. Elias has several trotting-horses, valued at $3,000, and displays a great quantity of diamonds. The men have had a very unenviable reputation, and were the instigators of the great sawdust game, by which they reaped a big harvest and in the height of their prosperity Ellis testified in court that he owned real estate, Government bonds, diamonds, and cash to the amount of $200,000. They also started numerous gift enterprises, concerts, and distribution schemes, some of which the Police stopped. They brought out the "Milton gold" jewelry, which they advertised extensively; "Kingston gold," and "Kohinoor diamonds." Their schemes were cunningly devised, and they generally managed to evade the law. They assumed various firm styles, such as Elias & Co., William M. Elias & Co., Elgin & Co., Russell & Co., Hetherington & Co., and in their numerous schemes, which they advertised in the country press. Among the creditors are J. M. Young & Co., A. Busbee & Co., J. F. Hopkinson & Co., Stephen Richardson & Co., E. G. Whitney & Co., and William Richardson.

ERNEST R. LUCKE'S WILL.

Senator Rabe yesterday presented to the Hudson County Orphan's Court, at Jersey City, for probate, the will of Ernest R. Lucke, partner of Mr. August Belmont, whose life was sacrificed by the sinking of the Pommerania. The probate was ordered. Mr. Lucke left an estate of $200,000. His will bequeaths for the use of his mother during her lifetime $20,000, which at her death is to go to his five sisters. The sisters are to receive, by the terms of the will, $20,000 additional for division among them, and another $20,000 is bequeathed to his sister Anna. The sisters and the mother live in Germany. The bulk of his property is to go to Mr. William Geissler, Lucke's brother-in-law. Mr. Geissler is of the firm of Kinsler & Geissler, gold brokers, of this City. Mr. Geissler, with Messrs. Rubsam and Stehr are named as Executors.

Mr. Lucke had intended to sail for Europe in October, but illness on his child's part kept him. He was haunted, before he sailed, with the belief that the unforeseen detention was an ill omen. There was a tinge of sadness, therefore, in his parting with friends. On the morning of the fatal collision he mailed a letter to a friend in which he expressed great fear that evil would befall himself and family. The day before he sailed he had Senator Rabe draw up the will, which has just been proved. His friends doubted whether, in the document, he had made provision for the distribution of the estate in the event of the loss of his whole family. The reading of the will showed that that contingency had been provided for. The final clause provided that if the testator, his wife, and children should all die, the property should go to his mother, sisters, and brother-in-law.

SUFFERING FROM FRACTURE OF THE SKULL.

Officer Charles E. Pierce, of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, about 10 o'clock yesterday morning saw some citizens pick up a man who had fallen in the City Hall Park, and place him on a bench. The officer went forward to the man, who appeared to be intoxicated, and took him to the station-house. Nothing unusual was noticed about the prisoner, and as he bore no external marks of having received any injuries, he was placed in a cell. As he was ascending the steps of the Tombs Court in the afternoon between two officers, a sudden change took place in his condition. His face assumed a deathly pallor, and he fell to the ground unconscious. Sergt. Woodruff had him brought into the private examination-room, where he was placed at length on the floor. Sergt. Woodruff applied water to his face and hands, and that remedy failing to have any effect, he telegraphed to Bellevue Hospital for an ambulance, which soon arrived. The surgeon, on a superficial examination, said that he thought the man was suffering from fracture of the skull, though the scalp had not been cut. The man when arrested gave his name as John Halpin, but on the lining of his hat—a silk one—was written, in pencil, Bernard Carney. His hat bears the brand of a Paterson firm. He is a man of middle age, was respectably dressed, and wore on his left breast a bronze medal of the Veteran Corps of the Grand Army of the Republic.

THE NINTH REGIMENT COLONELCY.

The election for Colonel in the Ninth Regiment has been ordered by Gen. Vilmar, commanding the Second Brigade, to take place on Thursday, Jan. 16, at 8 P. M. At the annual meeting of the Board of Officers of this command last Thursday evening the following civil officers were chosen for the ensuing year: Secretary, Lieut. Frederick S. Rice; Treasurer, Capt. H. Witthaus; Finance Committee—Capts. Witthaus and Sherman, and Lieut. Springer; Music Committee—Capt. Tallman, Lieuts. Griffith and Housman; Armory Committee—Capts. Walton and Hussey and Lieut-Col. Montgomery. To-morrow evening there will be a regular meeting of the officers of the Ninth, at which the election of a Colonel will be discussed. Every effort is being made by those interested in the welfare and usefulness of the regiment to induce Mr. Henry Clair, manager of the hotels of the Stewart estate, to take the position, to which certainty of election is guaranteed him if he will accept.

MISSING PERSONS.

The following persons were reported at the Central Office yesterday as among the missing:

James McArthur, aged 74, who left his home, No. 317 East Seventy-eighth-street, on New Year's Day, has not since been seen. He is 6 feet in height, slim built, has white hair, and smooth face, and when he left home wore dark mixed pantaloons and vest, blue overcoat, white shirt, red undershirt, black soft hat with cord and tassel, and gaiters.

On the 3d inst. Thomas Grady, aged 40, left his home at No. 190 Gold-street, Brooklyn, with a friend to attend a "wake" at No. 44 Rewick-street. He left there at 11:30 P. M., and went with a number of friends to the liquor store at Canal and Varick streets. After several drinks had been taken

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

The Royal Baking Powder is a pure Cream of Tartar powder.

Recommended for its wholesomeness by such eminent chemists as Dr. Jas. R. Chilton, New-York; Dr. Hayes, Boston.

Beware of the injurious Alum Powders. Manufacturers and dealers urge you to buy them, because they can make a larger profit. Alum costs but 3c. a pound; Cream of Tartar over 30c.

R. H. MACY & CO

14TH-ST. AND 6TH-AVENUE.

SEMI-ANNUAL INVENTORY COMPLETED AND STOCK DAILY REPLENISHED WITH SEASONABLE GOODS.

SPECIAL ATTENTION IS DIRECTED TO OUR VERY LARGE STOCK OF

WHITE GOODS AND DOMESTICS.

LINENS, TABLE DAMASKS, NAPKINS, AND LACE CURTAINS.

WE SHALL THIS SEASON, AS HERETOFORE LEAD THE MARKET ON

HAMBURG EMBROIDERIES.

OUR SPRING IMPORTATIONS ARE NOW BEGINNING TO ARRIVE.

ON THURSDAY, JAN. 9, WE SHALL OPEN A VERY LARGE LINE OF HAMBURG EMBROIDERIES AT EXTREMELY LOW PRICES. VERY CHOICE, AND IN MANY CASES OUR EXCLUSIVE DESIGNS, WORTHY THE SPECIAL ATTENTION OF THE PUBLIC.

R. H. MACY & CO

REMOVAL.

GILMAN COLLAMORE & CO., 731 Broadway, will remove about Feb. 1, 1879, to 19 Union-square. During January will sell their stock of CHINA, GLASS, FAIENCES, &c., at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

Gilman Collamore & Co., 731 BROADWAY.

A SHIP ON DIMOND REEF.

The ship Bonanza left Harbeck's Stores, in Brooklyn, yesterday morning, with a cargo of grain for Antwerp, and while passing between the foot of Whitehall-street and Governor's Island she struck heavily on the Dimond Reef, having probably been blown out of the course the Captain and pilot intended her to take by the strong wind which was blowing at the time. As the tug-boat which had the ship in tow was unable to get her off, Capt. Churchill went ashore and engaged three other tugs to come to the assistance of his vessel, but their united efforts were unable to move her from the reef until 3:30 P. M., when the tide had reached its height. The tide has been very low, owing to the westerly winds for several days past, and had the water been at its usual depth, even at low tide, when the Bonanza started, the reef might have been passed in safety. The rocks there are very rugged on account of the blasting which has been done to remove them, and the vessel, after pounding up and down on them for some five hours, must have received some damage, and although it is not yet known whether she is likely to leak much, it will be necessary to unload her cargo and put her on the dry dock for examination. Boyd & Hinchen, of William-street, are her agents. After being got off she was towed back to Harbeck's Stores.

CLOSING OUT SALE.

J. & C. JOHNSTON,

Broadway, 5th-av. and 22d-st.,

IN ORDER TO DISPOSE OF THE BALANCE OF THEIR

Cloaks, Dolmans, Jackets, Circulars, and Ulsters,

PREVIOUS TO STOCK TAKING,

ARE NOW OFFERING THE SAME AT A

REDUCTION OF FIFTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR,

AND AT

Prices ranging from $4 to $25.

IMPORTED SILK MANTLES AND COSTUMES

AT

EQUALLY ADVANTAGEOUS PRICES.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES AND SAMPLES OF DRY GOODS SENT GRATUITOUSLY TO ALL PARTS OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA ON APPLICATION.

J. & C. JOHNSTON.

THE SUGAR QUESTION!

A MEETING OF THE CITIZENS WHO FAVOR SUCH A REVISION OF THE TARIFF AS WILL PROVIDE FOR AN HONEST COLLECTION OF THE DUTIES ON SUGARS, AND ALSO TO PROTEST AGAINST ADULTERATIONS IN REFINED SUGARS AND SYRUPS,

WILL BE HELD AT

CHICKERING HALL,

ON MONDAY EVENING, JANUARY 6, 1879, AT 8 O'CL

The New-York Times.

VOL. XXVIII.....NO. 8524. NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JANUARY 6, 1879. PRICE FOUR CENTS.

THE CANVASS FOR SPEAKER

PROBABLE POSTPONEMENT OF THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

A LARGE NUMBER OF THE REPUBLICAN MEMBERS OF THE ASSEMBLY STILL SNOWBOUND—SLOAN AND ALVORD BOTH CONFIDENT, WITH THE CHANCES IN FAVOR OF ALVORD — NEEDED REFORMS IN METHODS OF LEGISLATION—TUESDAY'S "HOUSE-WARMING."

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 5.—The excitement over the contest for the Speakership, which has been at fever heat here all day, has greatly abated since the receipt of telegrams from the west this evening, which render it next to impossible that the Republicans can hold their caucus to-morrow evening, owing to the inability of members to reach the capital in time. The dispatches are to the effect that all trains west of Syracuse are snow-bound, with no prospect of communication to the eastward of that point to-morrow. Only 44 out of the 97 Republican members are now here, including the Albany delegation, and neither the friends of Sloan nor of Alvord will urge the holding of a caucus until all, or very nearly all, are on the ground. It is not likely, therefore, that there will be any attempt to elect a Speaker on Tuesday, but the Assembly will meet, as it is required to do by the Constitution, and after the Clerk has sworn in the members present will adjourn over to Wednesday. This will give another day to the rival candidates for the Speakership to prosecute their canvass, and will probably make it easier for outsiders to predict the result. Thus far it has been wholly a game of self-deception or brag. Both candidates have been, or have professed to be, not merely confident, but positive of success.

Mr. Sloan claims from 60 to 65 members among his supporters, of whom 50 are alleged to be "iron-clad," or beyond the possibility of capture by any arts or allurements of the enemy. He says that among the members now here, of whom he claims two-thirds, there is not one whom he counted as his supporter before leaving home who is not outspoken for him here, while there are two or three that he did not count on who have come over to his side. Among the 50 or more absent he claims with equal certainty at least 30, which would give him 63 votes, or 14 more than are necessary to a choice. Alvord and his friends do not pretend to figure so closely as this. In fact, they decline to enter into any computation of numbers, or to show their list of names, but they maintain an air of quiet assurance, and smile knowingly at the "freshness" exhibited in the calculations of the other side. They exhibit no uneasiness at the positive assurance of Sloan and his friends, and express surprise that any man of experience in the ways of Albany should think of crediting such nonsense. It is very evident that somebody is going to be badly disappointed, if not grossly cheated, and the surroundings of the present canvass for the Speakership would seem to indicate that Mr. Sloan is to be the victim this time, as Mr. Husted was two years ago. What is called the "political machine" is manifestly working mainly in the interest of Alvord, and it is charged against him that the corporate interests are also in his favor, although it is alleged by the other side that Jay Gould's private secretary is here lobbying for Sloan. There is no denying the fact, however, that the bulk of the lobby influence is for Alvord.

Senator Conkling, so far as appears, is taking no part in the contest, and it is certain that his henchmen are divided in their choice, although a majority are probably for Alvord. Sloan's supposed aspirations for the Gubernatorial nomination next year are affecting the canvass more or less, and are said to have secured him the active opposition of A. B. Cornell. In order to counteract this apprehension I am told that Mr. Sloan has written a letter expressly disavowing any aims, expectations, or desires for the Governorship. But in answer to this the Alvord men quote his letter, positively declining to be a candidate for the Assembly last Fall, and a subsequent letter declining, with equal emphasis, to be a candidate for Speaker. This, they say, is "his way."

Among Mr. Sloan's earnest champions during the last 48 hours is Fish, Jr., of Putnam, who makes his head-quarters at Sloan's room. He came up here undecided, or as he said to one of his friends, he was "not going to make a fool of himself, but was going for the winning man." He has finally made up what he calls his mind that the winning man is Sloan, and he sticks to him closer than a brother. The Alvord men say that he has extracted from Sloan what he failed to get from Alvord—a promise of the Chairmanship of the Committee on Cities—but this is not so. Mr. Sloan has made no promises of place to any one.

Whatever may be the result of the contest for Speaker, the position is not likely to be an enviable one to hold during the coming session, owing to the large Republican majority in the Assembly and the great number of prominent Republicans who are members. It will be impossible to make up the committees without giving great dissatisfaction. Shrewd Republicans who have had long experience in the Legislature predict that it will result in working important changes in the methods of legislation that have hitherto prevailed. The influence of standing committees in shaping legislation, they say, will be materially lessened this Winter. The dissatisfaction that will follow the make-up of the committees, and the large number of leading and influential members that must necessarily be left off leading places, will incite a general raid on the power and prestige of standing committees, and will reduce them to their original and proper function of aids and advisers of the House, instead of masters of legislation. It will be no uncommon thing during the coming session to see important bills referred by resolution directly to the Committee of the Whole instead of to a standing committee, and the false delicacy that has hitherto prevailed about withdrawing bills from committees that refuse to report them, or disagreeing with their reports, is likely to be ignored to a great extent this Winter. This, if it comes to pass, will be a decided reform, for the all-powerful influence of standing committees has had a baleful effect on legislation for years past. When once the ice is broken in this direction, it will be hard for the committees to recover their power and prestige in future legislation, and it will not be so easy hereafter for corporations to control the legislation of the State by securing the make-up of two or three standing committees.

The preparations for the grand opening of the new Capitol on Tuesday evening are nearly completed, and a very large attendance from abroad is expected. The entertainment at the Capitol, given by the citizens of Albany, will include music, a promenade, and supper, which will be followed by a ball under the auspices of the Burgesses Corps, at Martin Hall.

There is no contest over the election of Clerk of the Assembly or Sergeant-at-Arms. Edward M. Johnson, Clerk of the last Assembly, and Charles A. Orr, Sergeant-at-Arms, will be elected without opposition.

THURMAN'S PRESIDENTIAL HOPES.

THE SENATOR'S FRIENDS IN FAVOR OF NOMINATING A CLEVELAND EDITOR FOR GOVERNOR OF OHIO—A PARTY FIGHT AT COLUMBUS—WHO DOES JOHN G. THOMPSON SUPPORT?

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 5.—The quandary in which the leading Democrats of the State are in over the next Governorship is truly painful to contemplate, not that there is a lack of candidates of greater or less reputation who are willing to be sacrificed for the good of the party, but the difficulty is in getting a man who is neither too good nor too bad. He must be good enough to carry the State, and not good enough to steal honors from Thurman, who is being carefully nursed as the next Presidential candidate. If matters continue in their present shape until the convention meets, that body cannot fail to be one of the most discordant in the history of American politics. It has been learned that, at the meeting of Democratic chieftains in this city on the occasion of the viaduct celebration, an expression of John G. Thompson and the Thurman men was made in favor of Hon. W. W. Armstrong, editor of the Plain Dealer, of this city. Armstrong is not by any means a man of great ability, but still is one who would probably rally the Democratic hosts. The TIMES' correspondent has seen several letters since that time from prominent Democrats in regard to the matter, and all of these heartily indorse the proposed nominee. Armstrong has always been more or less of a politician, and has a strong following in Seneca and Wyandotte Counties—the strongest Democratic section of the State—where he formerly published a weekly Democratic sheet. He was elected Secretary of State on the Democratic ticket in 1862, at which time he displayed considerable strength. This movement is one of great significance, as it means war to the knife against the Ewing interest, and is in favor of Thurman for President. John G. Thompson, Thurman's henchman, and Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, expressed himself publicly, while here last week, in favor of Armstrong. It is known that Armstrong wants nothing but the Governorship, and should he obtain that, he would be content to let Thurman go on, and even help him in the Presidential fight. It is thought by Thompson, too, that a man from the northern part of the State would harmonize all discords in the party ranks, and by making it an open Thurman fight improve the latter's chances in 1880. Armstrong is thoroughly in sympathy with the desperate scheme that is on foot to steal away the city government by reorganizing the boards, &c., while Lieut.-Gov. Fitch, who is a resident of this city, by opposing the wicked scheme in the Legislature, has made himself obnoxious.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—The kid-gloved faction of the Young Men's Democratic Club in this city have carried their point as regards the 8th of January entertainment, and have knocked the old-liners out of time. The latter, favoring a mass-meeting with speeches from Thurman, Ewing, Pendleton, and other leaders of note, while the former faction, headed by the aristocratic portion of the club, insisted on the entertainment being strictly for the benefit of the "upper crust," who are desirous of making up the slate for the Governorship and perhaps the Presidency. It was believed that the rank and file would have some voice in the matter, but so completely has the ring of place-seekers gained control of the organization that the average Democrat has no voice whatever in the conduct of affairs. The result is a lively fight among the factions, which is extending throughout the city and county, many members of the club swearing that they will be controlled by the dictation of Democratic "bloods," who are professing to be Democrats. Elaborate preparations are being made for the reception of guests, and there is every indication that there will be the largest number of prominent politicians present that ever assembled in this city. It is believed that the wordiness of Senator Thurman will be dropped, and indicate the future policy of the Ohio Democracy. He will use his influence, it is said, among the members of the Legislature in favor of Gov. Bishop's renomination. It can be stated on authority that John G. Thompson is using his influence in that direction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Senator Thurman will not determine until to-morrow whether he will attend the Democratic celebration at Columbus, Ohio, on the 8th inst. He will do so if the weather moderates so as to render traveling less disagreeable than now, and he will leave Washington to-morrow night for that city. The theme assigned to him for a speech is "The Jackson Democracy," and to this subject he says he would devote his remarks, without discussing the financial question. He would also give the reasons why he does not desire his name to be used as a candidate for the Governorship of Ohio. The Senator is free and emphatic in the declaration that under no circumstances will he allow his name to be thus used, and of this determination he has advised numerous prominent Democrats in Ohio who have written to, or orally communicated with, him upon the subject.

THURMAN'S SECOND INSTALLMENT.

MORE SO-CALLED EVIDENCE OF FRAUD SENT TO THE TELLER COMMITTEE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—On Saturday Senator Thurman sent the following supplementary letter to Senator Teller:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4, 1879.

To Hon. H. M. Teller, Chairman Select Committee of Investigation:

DEAR SIR: In further compliance with the request of your committee, communicated to me by your letter of the 21st ult., I have the honor now to inclose to you "Installment No. 2" of facts relating to the late elections, and especially to the misconduct of United States Supervisors and Deputy Marshals, to wit:

First—A letter from James H. Paine, Esq., of Jacksonville, Fla., relative to the misconduct of United States Supervisors and Deputy Marshals at the late elections in the Second Congressional District in that State.

Second—An affidavit of Owen J. Somers, of Duval County, Fla., relating to the same subject.

Third—A statement of F. C. Randolph, Esq., of Montgomery, Ala., showing the misconduct of the United States Deputy Marshals at the late election in that State.

I am assured that these three gentlemen are citizens of high standing and respectability, and I beg leave respectfully to commend their statements to the earnest consideration of your committee. Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. G. THURMAN.

Here follow the statements referred to in the letter of Senator Thurman. Mr. Paine's letter refers principally to the employment of United States Supervisors of Election and Deputy Marshals at voting precincts throughout the counties comprising the "Black Belt" of Florida—Nassau, Duval, Alachua, Columbia, Suwanee, Marion, Madison, Jefferson, and Gadsden—and he concludes by saying that the Deputy United States Marshals who were present on election day at the various precincts in the black belt of counties were in no general sense deputies, but men solely engaged on special service, beginning and ending on election day; that there was no earthly necessity for their being present at all, as the State and municipal officers present were amply able to preserve order and conserve a fair election, as has been made evident time and again before. Owen J. Summers, whose affidavit is alluded to by Mr. Thurman, deposes that colored Deputy United States Marshals in Duval County, Fla., were engaged in the election of Nov. 5 in distributing Republican ballots, and persuading colored voters to vote the same. Mr. Randolph's letter concerning the conduct of the election in Montgomery County, Ala., evident that colored men were forced by Deputy United States Marshals to vote the Republican ticket, and that two Deputy Marshals, in violation of the State law, distributed whisky and other refreshments among colored voters.

NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—The Teller committee has not arrived. The train is reported delayed by snow. The weather to-night is clear and cold.

THE LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

EUROPE'S EASTERN INTERESTS.

SUBMISSION OF THE AFGHAN GOVERNOR OF KHOST—THE BRITISH TROOPS WITHIN THREE DAYS' MARCH OF KANDAHAR—SULEIMAN PASHA'S DEGRADATION—THE PORTE DECIDES TO SURRENDER PODGORITZA.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Standard's dispatch from Hazarapir says Gen. Roberts has arrived within sight of the residence of the Governor of Khost, who sent in his submission.

A special dispatch to the Daily Telegraph says: "The British are within three days' march of Kandahar. The hostile outposts have sighted each other."

A dispatch to the same journal from Jalalabad states that it is rumored that Yakoob Khan is preparing to flee, probably in the direction of Herat.

The Times, in its leading editorial to-day, says the rectification of the frontier will probably consist in the retention of Pishin, the Khurum Valley, and the Khyber Pass, but there is reason to believe that the intervening spaces will not be annexed.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Reuter's dispatch from Constantinople says Suleiman Pasha's appeal has been rejected. He has been degraded and exiled for life, and now appeals to the Sultan for pardon.

Safvet Pasha, the new Ambassador to Paris, has asked the Sultan to be allowed to remain in Constantinople, and is authorized to postpone his departure. It is possible that another Ambassador may be appointed.

It is stated that the Montenegrins intend to enter Podgoritza forcibly, without awaiting the arrival of the Turkish Commissioners at Scutari. The Porte has informed Prince Lobanoff that it has absolutely resolved to surrender Podgoritza. If the Commissioners fail to persuade the inhabitants, it will withdraw the Turkish troops and functionaries. Prince Lobanoff has replied that the surrender of Podgoritza will accelerate the evacuation of Turkish territory by the Russians.

SOPHIA, Jan. 5.—Four former leaders of the Macedonian insurgents, three of whom are Austrians, who are under arrest here, have been ordered to quit the country.

TUNIS, Jan. 5.—The French Consul has received telegraphic orders to demand the requisite satisfaction from the Bey.

A REPUBLICAN TRIUMPH IN FRANCE.

RESULTS OF THE SENATORIAL ELECTIONS.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The Senatorial elections, which took place to-day, resulted in a great Republican triumph. Of 47 Conservative Senators whose terms expired, only 13 have been re-elected. All the retiring Republican Senators have been re-elected. The general result shows the election of 15 Conservatives and 64 Republicans. The Republican majority in the Senate will be about 57. Second ballots are necessary in the Departments of the Haute-Garonne and Landes. The result of the election in Martinique is not yet known.

Among the newly-elected Republican Senators are MM. Fournier, Ambassador to Turkey; De Remusat, Faye, and Massy, and Gen. Faidherbe. Among the rejected Conservatives are MM. De Belcastel, Lacave-Behic, Dufaur De Gavardie, Adrien de Montgolfier, Viscomte de Meaux, M. Depeyze, M. De Rastard, Compte Daru, Gen. Boissonnet, M. Bernard-Dutreil, M. Bompard, Comte de Bouillé, Marshal Canrobert, and Gens. Pourcet, Loysel, and De Espeuilles.

Later returns show that M. Dufaur de Gavardie, Conservative, has been elected to the Senate on a second ballot.

Electoral statistics wonderfully corroborate the reports of the progress made by the Republican Party in France. Fifty-six Conservatives elected in 1876 received 115,948 votes, whereas in 1879 they only obtained 3,208 votes, thus losing 12,438 votes. Nineteen Republicans elected in 1876 received 5,636 votes, and in 1879 received 20,262, thus gaining 14,626 votes.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—All the details of the Senatorial elections add to the crushing character of the Conservative defeat. M. Renan, in the Bouchesdu Rhône, seems not to have obtained a single vote. M. Branne, Extreme Radical, was elected there. In the Gironde, which has been hitherto an Imperialist stronghold, all four Republican candidates were elected. Five Republicans were successful in the Nord, which was also formerly noted for its reactionary sympathies. The Departments of Herault and Ile-et-Vilaine have also completely abandoned their former conservatism. Conservatives are still dominant in Gers, where ex-Minister Batbie has been re-elected, and in Indre, where MM. De Bondy and Clement have been selected.

There are 13 vacancies in the Chamber of Deputies in consequence of Deputies being elected to the Senate.

CURRENT EVENTS ABROAD.

MORE DEATHS FROM THE EXPLOSION ON THE THUNDERER—THE STEAM-SHIP LOUISIANA GOES TO PIECES—DISASTROUS EFFECT OF THE CORNISH BANK FAILURE—DON ESPARTERO DYING.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 5.—The cause of the explosion on the British turret-ship Thunderer is still a mystery. The gun which exploded will be sent to Woolwich for examination. Several of the wounded have since died and many others have become blind.

PERPIGNAN, Jan. 5.—The court has sentenced the editor and manager of the newspaper La Republique des Pyrenees-Orientales to three and one months' imprisonment, and 2,200 francs fine respectively, for insulting the King of Spain.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Tsing, the Chinese Ambassador, has arrived in this city.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The State Line steam-ship State of Louisiana, from Glasgow for New-York, which went ashore in Lough Larne on Dec. 24, went to pieces on Saturday.

The striking employes at all points on the Midland Railway remain very firm. The company is filling their places with porters and others, but it is currently reported at Nottingham that the drivers will strike en masse if incompetent persons are engaged. It is said the drivers will hold a meeting at Nottingham on Monday. The pointsmen also threaten to strike.

It is believed that the liabilities of the Cornish Bank are over £1,000,000. Some persons say the bank can pay in full, but it seems to be the more general opinion that this is impossible in the present state of mining enterprise. It is believed the mines of Western Cornwall alone owe the bank £100,000, the calling in of which loans would have a most disastrous effect on the whole of West Cornwall.

MADRID, Jan. 5.—It is reported that the illustrious statesman, Don Espartero, is on the point of death.

Seven individuals, forming an International-ist Committee in Xeres, have been arrested and important documents found on them.

The Diario Español says Moncasi before his execution gave his confessor instructions to make a personal communication to the King.

Moncasi's death was speedy. His body remained on the scaffold till dusk.

PESTH, Jan. 5.—The Hungarian deficit for 1879 is estimated at 22,802,396 florins.

ROME, Jan. 5.—Ministers Depretis and Majorano, seeking re-election on taking office in the new Cabinet, have been returned by large majorities.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—It is said that Bayard Taylor's Goethe collection of rare volumes will shortly be sold.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Standard's correspondent at Berlin states that the Tariff Commission have received a notification from Prince Bismarck that he has not abandoned his tobacco monopoly scheme. The Federal Representatives of Bavaria, Saxony, Baden, Brunswick, and the Hanse towns are particularly guarded against committing themselves to approval of the Chancellor's letter.

The Post's Berlin dispatch says the Tariff Commission has been instructed to consider separately the advisability of imposing more than an ordinary increase on tobacco, petroleum, coffee, and sugar.

A CLAIMANT TO MILLIONS.

THE WIFE OF A BOSTON DENTIST SAID TO BE HEIR TO PROPERTY WORTH $10,000,000 IN MARYLAND AND SCOTLAND.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—A claimant to large estates in Maryland—the property of William Mackey, who died in the eighteenth century—and also in the City of Glasgow, Scotland, valued at over $10,000,000, appears in the person of Mrs. Mary Marter, of this city, wife of Dr. Charles Marter, a dentist, who has been for some time abroad in poor health and is now on his way home from India. In November last she read a paragraph in a Boston paper in reference to the claims of certain persons in Maryland to property left about 140 years ago by William Mackey. From him she claims to be directly descended, and she has put her claim in the hands of lawyers, and proposes to fight for her rights. Her story is that her father was Dr. Mackey, of Glasgow. Mrs. Marter says that when a little girl she often heard her father speak of his grandfather's brother, William Mackey, who had died in Maryland, and who had left a large property, to which he undoubtedly was an heir. She says her father's grandfather was John Mackey, a brother of William, who died in Maryland. John was dissipated, and died wealthy. William, early in life, with a roving disposition, wandered to Maryland, where he married and became the owner of a large number of slaves and vast estates. When he died, by his will, dated in 1722, he cut off his two sons, William and Robert, with "five shillings and no more," and left each of his daughters a certain amount, and the residue of his property to his heirs in the old country. Mrs. Marter says that William's sons died at an early age, and were cut off for some overt act which greatly excited the anger of their father. Soon after William Mackey's death, in Maryland, his heirs became also heirs to an immense property in Scotland, to which Mrs. Marter now lays claim, as well as to that at issue in Maryland. John Mackey, the brother, on dying, left a son Henry, who afterward was the father of Mrs. Marter's father, Dr. Robert Mackey. She says that the property in Maryland which belongs to her is valued at about $2,500,000, and that those in Maryland now presenting their claims to it are descendants of the daughters of William Mackey, whose claims were covered by the provisions made explicitly for them in his will. Included in the property in Scotland, which Mrs. Marter says is hers, is Lang Side and Clyde Terrace, the latter a very large business block. Mrs. Marter's counsel here has retained counsel in Glasgow to look after his client's interests when the matter comes up for settlement, which will probably be in February. The claimant is in very moderate circumstances.

FISHKILL'S BROKEN BANK.

STARTLING TESTIMONY IN THE REFERENCE BEFORE MR. BREWSTER—A NEW PHASE IN THE BARTOW CASE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Jan. 5.—In October last Alexander Bartow, Cashier of the Fishkill National Bank, was convicted of grand larceny in robbing that bank of a $1,000 bond, and sentenced to five years in the Albany Penitentiary. A stay of proceedings was granted, and a motion for a new trial will be argued at the General Term, in February next, at Brooklyn. In the meantime Bartow is held a prisoner in the witness-room of the jail in this city, where his wife and friends visit him daily, and his food is brought to him from the outside three times a day. The National Bank of Fishkill was ruined by the embezzlements, the stolen funds amounting to nearly $100,000. Bartow was not only Cashier of the National Bank of Fishkill, but also Cashier of the Fishkill Savings Institute, and thus handled the funds of both corporations. Nearly $70,000 of the stolen money belonged to the Fishkill Savings Institute, and a year ago that institution sued the National Bank to recover that amount, or rather sued the Receiver, Mr. Henry Bostwick. After the evidence of the plaintiff was in, defendant moved for a nonsuit on the ground that the National Bank was not responsible for the suit. The court, however, allowed plaintiff to amend the complaint, and then the case was sent before E. A. Brewster, of Newburg, as Referee. Sessions have been held in this city from time to time for nearly a year, more than a hundred folios of testimony having been taken. Some of it bore an important part in Bartow's trial, but yesterday evidence was given which startled not only counsel in the case and Referee, but all who were listening. In substance, it came out in the testimony that the savings bank books, ($65,000 or more,) assigned by the President of the savings bank to Wilmerding & Co., of New-York, were assigned by virtue of a power of attorney which, on investigation, proved to have no existence on the books of the savings bank. A copy of the resolution on which the bonds were assigned was sent from Washington from the Treasury Department, but, on inspecting the savings bank books, neither was such a resolution found. This presents a startling and, perhaps, controlling fact in the case. If the bonds were assigned by the Government on a forged resolution, then they were not assigned at all. If, as it looks, the resolution was a forgery, the question as to who perpetrated it becomes a very serious one. Further hearing in the case has been adjourned till the 15th, and, in the meantime, counsel will go to Washington to further investigate the matter. If a forgery has been committed the bonds are still the property of the savings bank, and the year's time consumed in the present suit will amount to nothing but heavy costs.

THE NORWICH MURDER TRIAL

MRS. COBB TO TESTIFY IN HER OWN BEHALF—BISHOP'S STORY TO BE DENIED—THE PRISONER EXPRESSES A DESIRE TO SLAP HIS FACE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NORWICH, Jan. 5.—Popular interest in the Cobb trial continues unabated, even though the proceedings are suspended for two days. It is thought that the State will rest its case by Tuesday night. Great curiosity is felt relative to the testimony which the defense will introduce. It was announced by Mr. Greene last week, when arguing for a postponement of the trial, that the defense had just discovered new evidence. This is supposed to refer to the alleged conversation which the deceased had with Floyd H. Crane, in which he acknowledged that he was taking arsenic voluntarily. Mr. Crane is now a station agent on one of the elevated railways in New-York. It was proposed to produce Dr. Cobb of Troy, the abortionist who was sent to prison two or three years ago, to prove that he had prescribed arsenic for the deceased, but this project has probably been abandoned. Rumor has it that several experts will be called to break down Prof. Doremus' testimony by criticising his methods of analysis. The general sensation of the week will probably be the appearance of Mrs. Cobb herself in her own defense. Of course, she will give Bishop the lie in all the essential parts of his horrible statements, and as she is credited with high dramatic power and has a tolerably pretty face, she may make a strong appeal to the feelings of the jury. It is said that Mrs. Cobb manifested much indignation over the testimony of her paramour. She remarked yesterday that if she could get a chance she would like to slap Bishop's face. It was noticeable that the jailer brought Bishop in and escorted him to the witness-stand before the prisoner and her friends entered the court-room. Had she taken her seat before Bishop came in, he would have been compelled to pass close to her to reach the witness-stand. This contingency was evidently foreseen by the diligent Beckwith. It has been learned that some one was seated on Friday so as to shield Bishop from Mrs. Cobb's gaze, lest it should disconcert him, but this seems to have been an entirely unnecessary precaution, for nothing, apparently, could move him in the least.

THE AMERICAN EXCURSION TO MEXICO.

CAIRO, Ill., Jan. 5.—The following message has been sent to Minister Zamacona by the American Industrial Deputation:

To his Excellency, Señor Don Manuel de Zamacona, Mexican Minister, Washington, D. C.:

The American Industrial Deputation hereby tender their respects to you for your broad and liberal views as a statesman, and thanks for courtesies shown to this deputation on behalf of your Government. On board train, Jan. 5, 1879.

JOHN F. FISK, President Deputation.
BYRON ANDREWS, Secretary.
DAVID D. WHITING, Manager.

EVADING UNION PACIFIC CHARGES.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Five hundred tierces of lard are being shipped from Chicago to San Francisco, via New-York and Cape Horn. This is occasioned by the excessive demands of the Transcontinental Railway. Two weeks ago 500 barrels of pork were sent to the same destination by the same route.

UPSETTING OLD NOTIONS.

GARY'S ELECTRICAL DISCOVERIES.

ELECTRICIANS AND SCIENTIFIC MEN INDORSE MR. GARY'S CLAIMS—THE INVENTOR PERFECTING HIS DYNAMO-ELECTRIC MACHINE AND MAGNETIC MOTOR.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—The dynamo-electric machine contrived by Wesley W. Gary, on the principle of his discovery of the neutral line and change of polarity in the magnetic machine, described at length in a recent dispatch to THE TIMES, has been further perfected, and now the inventor, with the indorsement of several electricians of prominence, is nearly ready to put it before the public. He has been prevented by illness from perfecting it as promptly as he wished, but meanwhile his work has been examined by experts and others; and a number of capitalists have made the preliminary arrangements for organizing a company to put the machine at once upon the market. Among those who have examined the invention is Mr. Moses G. Crane, a prominent practical electrician, who has long been and still is connected with the construction of fire-alarm telegraphs, and who has a large work-shop at Newton, near this city, for the manufacture of electrical apparatus. Knowing that there is a general wish to have the judgment of some recognized authority on the machine and its principle, I have obtained the opinion of this gentleman. Mr. Crane was visited this afternoon at his laboratory in Newton, and to the direct questions put to him regarding the Gary machine and the claim on which it is based, said that there was no doubt of Mr. Gary's having discovered a most important principle in magnetism. He had not examined the workings of the Gary magnetic motor, and would express no opinion as to the extent to which it could be developed, but he felt that there was good reasons for Mr. Gary's claims; the principle itself was the main thing after all. As to its application to the generation of electricity for light, he felt that there was every reason to expect a great result—perfect success. The experimental tests that had been brought to his notice, made with small magnets, indicated that Mr. Gary would accomplish everything which he expected to attain in this direction, and he felt the more confidence from the fact that Mr. Gary was first advised to develop his discovery concerning the utility of magnetism for the purpose of electric lighting by a gentleman, for whose judgment he, as well as all other both practical and theoretical electricians, had the highest regard.

The changes and modifications which Mr. Gary has made in his dynamo-electric machine are of much importance, simplifying its construction and increasing its capacity. They consist mainly of improvements in the way of obtaining the vibrations of the armature, in the balancing of the same, and in its position in relation to the magnets. It has been ascertained that by keeping the armature constantly within the magnetic field, as is done by Mr. Gary's principle, the entire power of the magnet is made available, a result impossible to obtain in the existing machines, since the revolving of the armature takes it out of the field and so weakens the currents. By the new process an astonishing quantity of electricity is derived from small magnets, and no greater application of power is required to generate electricity from a large machine than from a small one. In the working model which he has just completed, with the changes and improvements, the armature is accurately balanced on top of the magnets, being attached to a pivoted lever weighted at the other end and guarded by springs; only the slightest vibrations are necessary to induce a powerful current, and these vibrations are produced to the amount of thousands a minute by means of a simple arrangement of gearing. In a practical machine another pile of magnets would be used, the two piles being placed with their curved ends opposite; instead of weighting the lever the balance would be obtained by a corresponding armature at the other end, thus doubling the quantity of electricity generated.

The wide-spread interest felt in the invention is shown by the letters received by Mr. Gary from all parts of the country, including Memphis, Chicago, San Francisco, Washington, and many other large cities, asking his terms for the use of his machines by electric light companies organized in those places. He has also received many letters from large manufacturing establishments, stating that they wished to order his machines as soon as they could be turned out. In the meantime, Mr. Gary has not neglected his motor, but has made important improvements in it; and by a change in the position of the armature in the motor he has succeeded in doubling its power, so that he now expects it to be fully as practical for general use as the beam engine. Meanwhile the motor and its principle are receiving, quite naturally, savage attacks and severe denunciation from those who have not seen the one or mastered the other, and who dismiss the whole thing with the autocratic declaration that "if new discoveries are to be made in magnetism, one can safely affirm that it will not be by the employment of tenpenny nails and pocket magnets." To these Mr. Gary says he is too busy to reply, confident that the practical results will be the best answer. Whether or not it is "improbable, at this stage of the world's progress, that an ignorant or a merely practical man should discover a new force in nature," as one critic declares, it is the fact that the principle which Mr. Gary claims to have discovered is demonstrated by him to the satisfaction of men of intelligence, neither ignorant nor "merely practical," but book and college educated persons, and that his working models work. Whether any appreciable amount of power can be obtained in this way is a question warmly discussed by those who have examined the little machines the inventor shows. However this may be, with one of the small working models, constructed of a few 10-inch magnets, he has lifted a weight of seven pounds one foot from the floor within a minute's time, and he himself is satisfied that he can obtain by his principle the same amount of power from permanent magnets that has already been obtained from similar magnets, and which would have long since been made use of, had it not been for the great expense of the batteries. Mr. Gary has been invited to exhibit and explain his machines before the Society of Arts connected with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in this city, and will comply as soon as he has finished the work now in hand.

THE NEW SPANISH MINISTER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Señor Mendez Vigo, the new Minister from Spain to the United States, is expected to arrive here in a few days. He sailed from Spain for Havana about two weeks ago, and will come to Washington by way of New-York. Señor Vigo is a distinguished Spanish statesman, and, prior to his appointment as Minister to Washington, was a member of the Cortes and held a high position in the royal household. In politics he is an Alfonsist. Señor Vigo has a wife and nine children, but his family will not join him here for several months.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5, 1879.

On the 1st inst. the Post Office Department reduced the prices of stamped envelopes on an average of 20 per cent. throughout the entire schedule, and the result is seen in the largely-increased requisitions now being received. Those on Saturday footed up 4,466,600 envelopes, valued at $97,555, or more than double those of any single day in the history of the department. The entire requisitions for the day for postage stamps, stamped envelopes, and postal cards amounted to $517,589, included in which were 4,765,500 postal cards.

Notice has been given by the Government of Peru that it finds it impossible to take, before the 1st of April next, the necessary measures of execution required for the adhesion of that country to the General Postal Union. As Peru was formally admitted to the General Postal Union from the 1st of October, 1878, the correspondence from the United States for that country has since that date been subject to the Union rates of postage and regulations, and will continue to be so treated, in view of the embarrassment which would necessarily result from a change of instructions for so brief a period.

The Board of Regents of the Smithsonian Institution on the 11th of May last passed a resolution requesting the Executive Committee to make arrangements for a public demonstration in honor of the late Prof. Henry, Secretary of the Institution, of such a character and at such time and place as they might determine. The Executive Committee of the Board of Regents now announce that, in accordance with the above-mentioned action, a concurrent resolution was passed by Congress on the 10th of December to the effect that the Senators and Representatives will take part in the services, which will be held in the hall of the House of Representatives on Thursday, the 16th of January, at 8 P. M. The attendance of the public is invited.

THE SLANDERS AGAINST MR. PITKIN DENIED.

MR. JOHN P. SOUTHWORTH, OF NEW-ORLEANS, REPUDIATES THE STATEMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO HIM BY A WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Several days ago, what purported to be an interview with John P. Southworth, of New-Orleans, appeared in the Post, of this city. Southworth was officially connected with the United States Marshal's office at New-Orleans during Pitkin's incumbency, and in the publication alluded to he was made to charge Marshal Pitkin with issuing fraudulent vouchers in connection with the late Presidential election. The interview was telegraphed to Democratic newspapers, and is now going the rounds of the Democratic press, with regulation editorial paragraphs, denouncing Pitkin's alleged fraudulent practices. The allegations contained in the publication alluded to were given prompt and emphatic denial by Mr. Pitkin, and Mr. Southworth now comes forward in a letter over his own signature, and denies that he made the statements attributed to him in the Post's publication. In his letter Southworth says: "I now say, as a matter of justice to Marshal Pitkin, and to prevent all further questions, that the report that appeared in the Post does not correctly represent either my views or my statements. The gentleman who made the report misapprehended me in material points, and has thereby misrepresented me and done Mr. Pitkin injustice. The fact that I have brought suit in the Court of Claims, based upon the issue of the very warrants which I am represented to have denounced as fraudulent, ought to be sufficient evidence of itself of the incorrectness of the allegation that I made any statement, either in fact or by intendment, censuring Marshal Pitkin; nor did I reflect in any manner on the official integrity of Mr. Pitkin in connection with this or any other subject of conversation."

THE TARIFF ON SUGARS.

ARGUMENTS ON THE SUBJECT TO BE HEARD BY THE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE THIS WEEK.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The Committee on Ways and Means will resume its sessions on Tuesday, and, in accordance with a resolution adopted before the holiday adjournment, will devote Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday to hearing arguments upon proposed changes in the tariff on sugars. The bill relating to the duty on sugar prepared by the Treasury Department, and now before the Committee, retains the color test as established by the Dutch standard, and introduces the polariscope to determine the saccharine strength. It is claimed by the department that there is at least 15 times as much sugar imported below No. 10 Dutch standard as there is above No. 10, and that this large excess is mainly due to reducing the color of the sugar either by a natural or artificial process. The courts having decided that Dutch standard color is a well-known commercial phrase that enters into the contract between the importer and the Government, the Treasury Department cannot legally substitute anything which affects that standard. The polariscope, or any other scientific test, can only be applied now to sugars artificially colored, and in the cases recently tried by the Baltimore courts it was decided that the Government must prove affirmatively, when fraud is charged, that the sugar has been artificially colored. Secretary Sherman believes that the present rates of duty are fair and easily collected, and if a test can be found that will supersede the Dutch standard, which he says is not a correct standard, he favors their retention.

THE CHICAGO POST OFFICE FIRE.

GEN. SHERIDAN'S BRAVE EFFORT TO SAVE DOCUMENTS IN HIS OFFICE—A LARGE NUMBER OF GOVERNMENT PAPERS BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN DESTROYED—HOW THE FIRE ORIGINATED.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The Post Office Building, which was consumed by fire last night, has been the centre of much interest all day. The ruins present one of the most picturesque sights imaginable, the walls being covered with ice and the neighborhood resembling a broken arctic floe more than anything else. The fire was extinguished last night, but in some places the embers still smolder. The lower and the second stories are not burned as badly as was anticipated, but the upper portion of the building is a total wreck. It was the belief last night that the fire originated in the boiler-room, but investigation shows this to have been a mistake. Adjoining the engine-room were two rooms used by the carpenter of the building for making repairs. In a narrow passage between these rooms was a pile of lumber and signs, and it was there that the fire originated. In a partition had been placed three folding gas-brackets, which were used for lighting and for hoisting glue, paint, &c. In all probability the conflagration broke out there, as the partition was burned away with all the adjoining woodwork, while in the engine-room everything is still intact. The Dearborn-street elevator was only 15 feet from the at 8:40 P. M. on Monday, and the Central and Erie one each during the afternoon, while the Lake Shore expects to open by noon.

THE WEATHER ELSEWHERE.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The weather here is quite mild compared with the temperature for the past week and up to late last night. During no time within that period has it ranged above zero, but this noon the temperature rose, and to-night the mercury marks fully 10° above zero. The extreme and biting cold has interfered greatly with business, and particularly with the shipment of cattle.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 5.—The severely cold weather of the past three days has caused much suffering among the oystermen on the Chesapeake. A number of oyster pungies are frozen up at different points in the rivers and creeks emptying into the bay, and some have been abandoned by the crews, who were in want of provisions and badly frostbitten. The temperature to-night has moderated, the mercury ranging at 20° above zero.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. Jan. 5.—A drizzling rain, with sleet, fell last night, and the mercury fell to 30° above zero. Everything out of doors was covered this morning with a thin coat of ice. This is unprecedented here, nothing of the kind having been known for at least 30 years, if ever. It is not known yet whether orange trees and fruit are injured. Snow fell in considerable quantity as far south as Dupont, Ga., and trains arriving here this morning from Savannah are covered with it. A few flakes were observable here yesterday.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Owing to the snow blockade on the railway, there are nine New-York mails overdue here. The trains are running regularly and on time on all the Canadian main lines.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 5.—The wind on Friday night did considerable damage throughout part of the Connecticut Valley, uncoofing barns, houses, &c. Westfield suffered most, the damage there amounting perhaps to $3,000.

FATAL EFFECTS OF THE COLD.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—Gen. Sheridan has received a communication from Major Chapman, Third Infantry, commanding at Fort Missoula, conveying the intelligence that a few days ago the body of First Lieut. Thomas S. Wallace, Third Infantry, was found frozen in what is known as O'Brien's Cañon, Montana. He had left the post on the 8th of December, for the purpose of hunting in the Bitter Root Country, opposite the fort. Alarmed at his prolonged absence, Major Chapman sent parties out in search of Wallace, and every effort was made to trace him, but without avail until the day before this letter to Gen. Sheridan was written, when a citizen found the dead body on the right bank of the Missouri River, eight miles below Missoula.

LOYD BRACE, of Jamaica, aged 70 years of age, of this place, died yesterday morning from the effects of the intense cold experienced during a journey with her parents from Newark, on Friday.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 5.—G. Corbett, driver of a High-street chariot, was found dead on his box to-night, death having been caused by paralysis of the heart, induced by the extreme cold.

MARINE DISASTERS AND DELAYS.

YAPHANK, Long Island, Jan. 5.—Since yesterday the steamer Vindicator has become filled with water, and has moved nearer the beach. The Coast Wrecking Company's steamer Relief arrived at 10 A. M. from New-York, and began preparing to place pumps and other wrecking appliances on board. No cargo has been discharged yet, but it is intended to begin doing so to-morrow morning, if the schooner arrives to receive it. It is the opinion of the owners' agent, as well as of the inhabitants around where the steamer lies, that, if the weather continues to be fair and no high southerly wind should arise, she will be saved. Her cargo, as before reported, is a general one, consisting of sewing-machines, dry goods, &c., &c.

DELAWARE BREAKWATER, Jan. 5.—The American Line steamer Illinois, which had been detained at Dan Baker's Shoal in consequence of low water in the Delaware, passed out to sea at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 5.—The schooner Eliza Hooper, which had been hauled off the Jersey shore by wreckers, went ashore on the west end of Block Island at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 3d inst., with eight New-York wreckers on board. She lies high up on the rocks, is full of water, and probably will not get off. All hands were saved.

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 5.—Capt. Newcombe, of the Providence steamer McClellan, reports that the schooner Richard S. Newcombe is fast in the ice off Bonsnbiff Shoal; also, that a small sloop has been sunk off Smith's Point. The steamer Wyoming, of Baltimore, from West Point, is at anchor off Gloucester Point. The German steam-ship Leipzig is ashore off Seven-foot Knoll: an ice-boat is at work on her.

NEW CASTLE, Del., Jan. 5.—The Red Star steamer Switzerland, reported previously on Cherry Island flats, detained by a low tide, passed down this afternoon. The ice in the river is very heavy, and she may be compelled to anchor over night.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 5.—The steam-ship Leipzig, hence for Bremen, which has been aground since Friday at the mouth of the Patapsco River, on account of low water caused by the strong north-west winds, got off this afternoon and proceeded down the bay.

FAIR WEATHER IN THE CITY.

THE MARCH OF THE MERCURY IN THE THERMOMETER TUBES—ICE BELTS IN THE RIVERS—FEW DETENTIONS OF MAIL MATTER.

New-York's "fair weather Christians" had no excuse for staying away from church yesterday, for the bright and genial weather was all that they or anybody else could desire, during church hours at least. The mercury in Dr. Donhauser's big thermometer at the Signal Service Station in the Equitable tower was down to 15° above zero at 7 o'clock in the morning, and three hours before that it stood at 14°, but nobody cares how low the thermometer gets at 4 o'clock on a Sunday morning. The mercury continued on its journey up the thermometer tube all the forenoon, stopping long enough to register 24° at noon, and going on until 2 o'clock, when it had reached 25° above the zero point. Having left its mark at 25°, it started on a return trip down the tube with dignified slowness, not getting down to 23° until 4:30 P. M. At 9 o'clock the mercury had retreated 3° more, and at 11 o'clock last night it was at 18°, and with every prospect of reaching 12° or 13° before sunrise this morning. The afternoon reports received from the weather stations throughout the country yesterday gave no indications of the second "cold wave" which was reported to be following in the wake of the one New-York has just experienced. On the contrary, only three places were reported as having a temperature below zero. These were Breckenridge, Minn., 4° below; Leavenworth, Kan., 1° below, and Yankton, Dakota Territory, 8° below. A large majority of the stations report a slight increase in temperature, but the variation is so small that the Signal Service men designate yesterday's average temperature throughout the country as "very nearly stationary," as compared with that of Saturday. From the fact that the recent cold wave has extended so far South, and the snow-fall north of New-York has been so heavy, the influence is drawn by old observers that cold weather may be expected in this City all through the present month.

The ice in the North and East Rivers interfered with the regular trips of the various ferry lines very little during the day yesterday, but there is every reason to believe that the relief is only a temporary one, and last evening the boatmen spoke despondently of the prospects for to-day. The belt of ice along the New-York side of the North River, which so seriously blockaded all ferry travel on Friday and Saturday, released its hold on the many piers, and vessels, under the stimulating effects of the warm sunbeams yesterday morning, and aided by tide and current, began rapidly moving out into the Bay. The ice had been so thoroughly pounded by the strong ferry-boat paddles for two days that it became a sort of frozen "slush" of small blocks of ice, with here and there a larger cake that had escaped the paddle-wheels. These needed but little heat to loosen their hold upon each other, and once loosened the river was quickly cleared. So fast did the tide and current do their work that at noon there was a clear stretch of water all the way across the river from the foot of Cortlandt and Barclay streets, with only a remnant of the ice-pack floating here and there further up the river. But while the boatmen on the North River were watching the ice disappear with the greatest pleasure, the Brooklyn ferry companies were busily preparing for trouble on their side of the City, knowing that the incoming tide would sweep the ice up the East River. This was the case yesterday afternoon, but, fortunately, the expected blockade was not of sufficient extent to delay the regular ferry trips beyond 5 or 10 minutes at the most. The ice which floated out of the North River was caught by a strong flood tide beyond Governor's Island setting in toward the East River, and, as a consequence, the floating mass simply made a semi-circuit of the City, travelling around the south side of Governor's Island and up into the East River. There the west to north-westerly winds drove the ice over to the Brooklyn side of the river, where it stretched out in a long and narrow belt all the way up to Astoria. In the broad bend of the river at the Navy-yard the belt was greatly widened, and stretched nearly across the river. Through this belt the ferry-boats pushed into their Brooklyn slips with slight difficulty during the day and evening.

The North River remained comparatively clear after the disappearance of the ice in the forenoon yesterday, until early last evening, when the current began bringing down large cakes and fields of ice from above the City. The wind carried these over to the New-York side of the river, where they drifted into the ferry slips. As the evening advanced the cakes increased in number, and the ferry-boats began to experience much difficulty in reaching the ferry-bridges. Up to a late hour, however, the obstruction had not become serious, but it was feared that by morning there would be enough ice accumulated to cause a repetition of Saturday's annoying blockade. The ferrymen on the East River expected last night that some of this floating ice would be brought up the river by the flood tide which set in about 3 o'clock this morning, and that this ice, added to that already in the river, would give passengers on the Brooklyn ferries a taste of some of the discomforts experienced on the North River last week.

At the Post Office all the domestic mails due yesterday, excepting the Buffalo mail, were received, although generally behind time. No mails have been received from Buffalo since early Friday morning. A mail from the East, due at 6:30 yesterday morning, was received at 7:10 o'clock, and another one due at 6:40 came in at 8:10 o'clock. The Southern mail, due at 7:30, arrived at 9:45, while one from the West and South-west, by way of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, due at 7:30, did not get in until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and another over the same line, due at 11:15 A. M., was not received until 1:45 P. M. A mail from the same localities due at 11:35, by way of the New-York Central and Hudson River Road, reached the Post Office an hour late, and another over the Erie Railroad, which should have been received at 7:45 in the morning, did not get in until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The only mail received at the Post Office Sunday evenings is one from Pittsburg and the South and South-west, over the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, due at 10:30 o'clock. This mail was not received last night until midnight.

The cold snap was also indirectly the cause of two trifling fires in a tenement-house at No. 1,322 Fourth-avenue, yesterday. The water-pipes were frozen, and two attempts made by the occupants of the tenement to thaw them out resulted in setting the house on fire each time. The damage done was very slight.

The inclivility of the New-York Elevated Railroad employes continued without abatement yesterday, and the crowds which traveled over the road were subjected to all the petty insults and annoyances which the ingenuity of the half-paid trainmen could suggest. The gross mismanagement of the road was illustrated again in the irregularity of the trains as they were run with the least possible regard for the convenience of the public. It was a common experience for passengers to wait at a station 10, 15, or 20 minutes for a train, only to be refused admittance when it did arrive, as several instances three or four trains would pass within two or three minutes of each other without taking on additional passengers, and then, after a long delay, another train would come up, and the impatient crowd be permitted to squeeze into the comfortless cars as best they could.

GOVERNMENT WEATHER REPORT.

SYNOPSIS AND INDICATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6—1 A. M.—The barometer has risen somewhat in the Middle States and New-England, and remains highest in the North-west, but in the South-west is also very high. Temperatures have risen slightly over the lake region, Middle States, and Gulf States. Cloudy weather and snow prevail in the lower lake region; elsewhere clear or partly cloudy weather is reported. Diminishing north and west winds generally prevail. The rivers fell on Sunday at Cairo, Memphis, and Vicksburg. They are reported frozen at Weldon, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, St. Paul, and Leavenworth to Yankton.

INDICATIONS.

For the south Atlantic States, rising barometer, colder north-west winds, cloudy weather, possibly light snow or rain, possibly followed by north-east winds, falling barometer, and higher temperature.

For the Gulf States, cooler northerly winds, rising barometer, clear or partly cloudy weather, followed by higher temperature and stationary or falling barometer.

For Tennessee and the Ohio Valley, warmer south-west winds, falling barometer, cloudy weather, and possibly light snow.

For the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys and upper lake region, falling barometer, north-west, backing to warmer west and south-west, winds, clear, followed by hazy or cloudy, weather.

For the lower lake region, south-west winds, cloudy weather, with snow; rising, followed by falling, barometer, stationary or higher temperatures.

For the Middle Atlantic States, diminishing north-west, possibly followed by north-east, winds, stationary or rising barometer, warmer, cloudy, or partly cloudy weather.

For New-England, diminishing north-west winds, rising barometer, slightly warmer, partly cloudy, weather.

For the North Pacific region occasional light rain.

For the Middle and South Pacific region, clear or partly cloudy weather.

The rivers will generally fall.

Cautionary signals continue at Key West. Cautionary off-shore signals continue at Indianola, Galveston, Port Eads, Mobile, Cape May, Atlantic City, Barnegat, and Sandy Hook.

A COLORED VIRAGO.

SHE ATTEMPTS TO STAB POLICEMAN VALLELY AT THE EIGHTH PRECINCT STATION-HOUSE.

Clara Smith, a colored woman of bad reputation, residing at No. 254 Thompson-street, made an unsuccessful attempt last night to murder Patrolman Valley, of the Eighth Precinct, while she was being placed in a cell at the Prince-Street Police Station. The woman is a very disorderly person. She has been arrested a great many times, and has been a constant source of annoyance and trouble to the Police. At 10:30 o'clock last night she was parading along Thompson-street in a semi-intoxicated condition, creating a disturbance and insulting the passers-by. Officer Valley, who was on patrol, arrested her and took her to the station-house. On the way thither the woman annoyed the officer exceedingly, and he was compelled to use considerable force to secure her. When before the desk at the station-house, the prisoner was very abusive and noisy, and Sergt. Knight directed the officer to assist Doorman Burke in taking her into the prison. While the doorman and the patrolman were engaged in placing her in a cell the woman suddenly drew an open jack-knife which she had concealed in the sleeve of her dress, and made a savage lunge at the policeman. Instinctively, the officer sprang back, and this movement undoubtedly saved him from serious harm, as the point of the knife just struck the left breast of his overcoat, slightly penetrating the cloth. The woman then became very violent, and was overpowering the policeman and the doorman, when Capt. McDonnel and several officers came to their assistance, and the savage was disarmed, but not without a most desperate struggle. The would-be murderess, having been locked in the cell, freely admitted that she intended to kill the officer, and that she had purchased the weapon—a new jack-knife, with a large and well-polished blade—for the purpose. She said she had been arrested so often by the officers of the Eighth Precinct that she had got tired of the persecution to which she claimed she had been subjected, and had vowed solemnly to kill the first policeman that attempted to molest her. She had a particular hatred of Patrolman Valley, who, she said, had arrested her a great many times without cause, and had a grudge against her. The woman will be taken to the Jefferson Market Police Court to-day for examination.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

About 7:30 o'clock last evening fire was discovered in the editorial rooms of the Scottish-American Journal, which are situated in the World building, on the corner of Park-row and Beekman-street. The fire started in the wood-work surrounding several coils of steam-pipes, and, when discovered, had extended up a side wall to the floor of the World composing-room, on the floor above. The firemen extinguished the flames after the interior of the building had been damaged to the amount of about $400, and the furniture of the Scottish-American Journal about $100. The building is owned by Orlando B. Potter.

Roach's Building, at the corner of Woodland and Wilson avenues, Cleveland, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning, with its contents. The building was a large two-story frame, occupied by stores and families. Loss on building, $8,000; insured for $4,000—$1,000 each in the Forest City and Hibernian, of Cleveland; the Western Mutual, of Urbana, Ohio, and the Buckeye Mutual, of Shelby, Ohio. The loss on contents is estimated at $9,000; insured for $5,500 in various companies. The fire originated in the basement.

The extensive establishment of the St. Louis Beef-canning Company, at the corner of Fourteenth and Poplar streets, St. Louis, caught fire at 10:45 o'clock last night, and at a late hour that part of the building facing on Fourteenth-street was nearly destroyed. In the rear of this building is an alley, on the opposite side of which is another large building used by the company, which the firemen were trying to save with some show of success.

The building No. 61 North Queen-street, Lancaster, Penn., with its contents, was entirely destroyed by fire Saturday night. The first floor was occupied by Albert Hirsh, dealer in ready-made clothing; the second floor by Kinch & Co., as a billiard-room; and the third floor by Berner & Brother, picture-frame manufacturers. Westhaefer's bookstore, adjoining, was badly damaged by water. Three firemen were severely frozen, and it is thought one of them will die.

A fire broke out in Raphael Stern's fancy goods store, at Norwich, Conn., at a late hour Saturday night. The interior of the store was burned out and all the goods destroyed. Beebe's cigar store was also destroyed. The photograph gallery of Thurber & Shepardson and the tailor's shop of S. F. Keppler were considerably damaged by water. The total loss is estimated at from $2,500 to $3,000.

A fire destroyed a large portion of Merriman's saw-mill and factory, at St. Roches, Quebec, yesterday. A watchman, named Francois Philbert, was suffocated while endeavoring to escape by a window.

A large warehouse, in which the Post Office was kept, at Hawkinsville, Fla., has been destroyed by fire. Mail matter, including a number of registered letters, was destroyed.

A fire in Newport, R. I., early yesterday morning, damaged the house of Mr. Beach to the extent of $3,000. The building is insured in a Springfield office for $2,000.

REARRANGING THE ARMY.

OFFICERS COMPLAINING OF GREAT INJUSTICE.

ADVERSE CRITICISM OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE BILL—AN ABSTRACT OF THE VIEWS OF MANY OFFICERS—DESERVING OFFICERS FEARING DISCHARGE—EFFECT UPON PROMOTIONS—THE PRESIDENT'S PART IN THE CHANGE.

The proposed new Army bill meets with much adverse criticism from officers in the different branches of the service. The objections, which those who make them intend to lay before Congress, are to the effect that very many of the provisions are unfair and unjust to deserving officers, discharging many from the service, blocking the path of promotion, and giving the President undue power in the proposed reorganization. These general views, given below, are corroborated by a communication from one who has evidently studied the bill, and by the letter, in particular reference to his own corps, of an officer in the Ordnance Department.

OBJECTIONS CONCISELY STATED.

A REVIEW OF THE BILL AS GATHERED FROM MANY OFFICERS—WHY THEY THINK IT UNWISE AND UNJUST IN ITS PROVISIONS.

That certain powerful influences are to be brought to bear upon Congress to defeat, if possible, the new Army bill is no longer a matter of doubt. The staff, in particular, is earnest in its efforts to this end. It has combined its forces—social, political, and professional—and it will undoubtedly be assisted in its opposition by ordnance officers and others who are affected by the proposed measures for reorganization. The real objections to the proposed Burnside scheme (so called because Senator Burnside was Chairman of the joint committee that prepared the new bill) have been freely given by prominent superior officers, among them members of the staff, General officers, and officers of the retired list. These opinions as to the merits and demerits of the bill—the substance of which is given below—are obtained from officers who have seen many years of service, and who are really representative men in their respective corps or branches of the service.

The bill abolishes in the staff the offices of 1 Brigadier-General, 59 field officers, and 42 Captains, (in Quartermaster and Subsistence Departments;) also, 16 Lieutenants and 20 Captains in the Ordnance Department. Under existing laws any vacancy in the staff departments makes promotion in the line. For instance, any casualty in the Adjutant-General's Department makes a vacancy in the grade of Major in that department, which is filled by selecting a Captain of the line, and his selection makes promotion to the bottom of his corps. In other words, it is claimed that the company officers will lose just as much promotion by the abolition of the field offices in these staff corps as they would by the abolition of the same number of field offices in the line. But this relates mainly to the permanent result of this reduction. The immediate effect will send, it is claimed, to block promotion in the line for years.

Section 282 of the proposed bill, said one officer, "is adroitly drawn, and was meant to confer power on the Executive in this reorganization of the Army to transfer officers as he may see fit, to the unlimited prejudice of rank, and this without the advice and consent of the Senate." This he held to be clearly unconstitutional as well as unjust, and added: "When the President, in the reorganization of 1821, under a law authorizing him to arrange the officers in the reorganization, desired to make transfers, he did not presume to undertake it without the advice and consent of the Senate, and that body, discovering unjust action on his part in the effort to transfer Towson from the position of Paymaster-General to the Colonelcy of the Second Artillery, and Col. Gadsden from the position of Inspector-General to that of Adjutant-General of the Army, refused, and repeated its refusal, after full discussion, to confirm these transfers." Every promotion in the Army requires the advice and consent, and under the Constitution, it must be submitted to the Senate for confirmation. Now, these officers hold that a transfer from one corps or arm is also a new appointment, which, under the Constitution, cannot be valid until confirmed by the Senate.

Section 121 of the bill provides that details for duty in the general staff shall be made by the President, by selections from nominations submitted by the commanding General of the Army. It is held that the President's Constitutional authority as Commander-in-Chief is impaired by the restriction in this section. Besides, the bill does not create a commanding General of the Army; it only provides that the President may, if he chooses, assign one. But supposing the General does not see fit to make any nominations for detail in the general staff, that would be blocking the powers of the Commander-in-Chief. Moreover, the bill further provides (section 81) that when in time of war the commanding General of the Army takes the field, his duties at the seat of government shall be performed by a General officer specially assigned by the President "upon the recommendation of the commanding General of the Army," as Chief of Staff. It is held that the officer to be thus assigned is, in fact, to be the staff officer of the President, and they ask: "Should the President see fit to detail his staff officer upon the recommendation of the commanding General!" and if so, then "why not require the commanding General and other Generals, by law, to choose their aides from the same manner, on the recommendation of one of their subordinates!" One officer, who has been in service for over 30 years, said that under this section the President would have about the same freedom of action that certain firemen in Philadelphia had a few years ago, when "Baltz" Sowers was their chief. He closed the discussion on the subject of the color by saying: "Well, boys, I don't care what color ye paints her, so ye paints her red." They chose red.

Under the present law, courts-martial and courts of inquiry are endowed only with the same power to issue process and compel witnesses "which courts of criminal jurisdiction within the State, Territory, or District where such courts may be ordered to sit, may lawfully issue;" and this was quite an enlargement upon the preceding systems. But the new bill says: "General courts-martial and military commissions shall have the power to compel the attendance of witnesses, military or civilian, and to send process of attachment, which shall issue by order of the court, and be signed by the President and Judge Advocate thereof. A process so issued may be executed by any commissioned officer of the Army, and the officer in such duty by the officer appointing the court." This gives military courts absolute power over civilian witnesses. Nor does this extraordinary power end with the courts; it extends to a board. Section 40 directs the President to appoint a board of three of the highest general officers available, two Surgeons, and a Recorder, to examine into the qualifications and habits of all officers reported as unfit for the proper and efficient discharge of their duties. This has already been nicknamed the "Bounce Board," and it, too, has power to compel witnesses, military or civilian, to appear and testify.

Referring to the manner prescribed of bringing about the reduction and organization provided for by the bill, the speaking of the reserved list, one officer said: "This list, which is to be maintained for three years, will consist largely of officers of the present staff departments, rendered supernumerary by the abolishment of their offices. But the bill does not provide for the regular returned to vacancies which may occur in the staff departments during the three years' grace allowed. It, however, gives the President power to put them where he pleases, and as he is not likely to humiliate himself by putting them back on the staff from whence he has removed them, he will probably put them in the line." The opponents of the bill also ask why an officer 20 years in service is to be retired merely because he has served less than 20 years. This discrimination, they say, is against officers from the volunteer service, who entered the Regular Army during or shortly after the late war. All, or nearly all, others who are 60 years old have served more than 20 years. Much opposition is also shown to the provisions of the bill which provide for a reorganization of the retired list. This bill contemplates a degradation of the position of many of these officers. They are nearly all men who acquired their positions and privileges through services rendered during the rebellion. Most of them were allotted to the places they now occupy by the Administrations of Presidents Lincoln and Grant, and by the Senate during the periods of these Administration.

This bill creates "corps of General officers," consisting of the General, Lieutenant-General, three Major-Generals, and six Brigadier-Generals, now in service. This is the only part of the service which escapes immediate mutilation. The reductions prescribed for the rest, it is made only an object of economy, thus avoiding all violence to the present incumbents. Their retirement is not compulsory at any age, and only possible after they are 65. From this corps of General officers are to be selected the chief staff appointments, although holding the grade of Brigadier-General, are excluded by the bill. This is admitted to be quite right on general principles, but the bill proceeds to authorize that the positions of Brigadier-Generals at the heads of certain special staff corps may be filled by selection from the line of the Army, as if it were a position in the corps of General officers. It is held that the principle which would justify seeking the head of a staff from the Army at large for like reason would make it proper to select the head of an artillery or cavalry regiment in the same way. Objections are also made to that provision of the bill which gives the commanding General of the Army authority to station companies of artillery as guards at the arsenals and ordnance depots which, over in his opinion, such guards are necessary; to the section which permits cavalry and artillery to be equipped and employed as infantry; to the one which provides that brevet rank shall not entitle an officer to command beyond his staff, and had vowed solemnly to kill the first policeman that attempted to molest her. She had a particular hatred of Patrolman Valley, who, she said, had arrested her a great many times without cause, and had a grudge against her. The woman will be taken to the Jefferson Market Police Court to-day for examination.

SETTLED PRINCIPLES AFFECTED.

CRITICISM OF THE MANNER OF BRINGING ABOUT THE REDUCTION—THE PRESIDENT'S POWER OF ARRANGEMENT.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

This is an important measure, and one which should not be passed, if at all, without thorough discussion in Congress. Scattered through its 294 pages are provisions affecting established principles, as well as bearing heavily upon deserving officers. Section 40 prescribes the manner of bringing about the reduction and reorganization provided for by the act.

First—A reserved list is created to which, however, no one is transferred, prior to the reorganization, except such officers as at the passage of the act shall be between 60 and 62 years of age, and shall (at passage of the act) have served for 20 years as officers.

Second—The retired list is opened without limit as to numbers. The following classes go on it: Every officer who has been 30 years in service may, on his own application, be placed on it. As the purpose is "reduction and reorganization," it is presumed to be the intention of this clause to confer on officers of 30 years' service the right to go on the retired list if they apply for it—"may be placed upon" meaning shall be if they desire it. Every officer other than the corps of General officers who at the passage of the act shall be 62, and shall have served for 20 years as officers, goes on it. All officers who go on the reserved list on account of being over 60 are to be put on the retired list when they become 62.

Third—Every officer who shall be over 60 at the passage of the act, but who shall not then have rendered at least 20 years' service as an officer, (each year's service in time of war counting as two years,) is to be discharged from the Army, and unless of intemperate or vicious habits, is to receive one year's pay for each period of five years' service as an officer or soldier in the regular or volunteer service. As officers of this class are discharged because they have not served 20 years, they cannot get more than four years' pay; that is, they will receive on discharge about the same as those who resign from the reserved list. Why an officer 60 years of age should be discharged because he has served less than 20 years, does not appear. The discrimination is against officers from the volunteer service, who entered the regular army during or subsequent to the rebellion.

Fourth—All officers, except those of the classes just mentioned, who are unfit, from any cause whatever, for the proper and efficient discharge of their military duties, are to be either discharged or placed on the retired list. When unfitness results from intemperance or other vicious habits, the officer is to be discharged with a gratuity of one year's pay, provided he has served three years. If he has not served so long, no gratuity is provided for him. If the unfitness is not from vicious habits nor of any incident of service, the officer must nevertheless be discharged, but shall receive a gratuity at the rate of one year's pay for each period of five years' service rendered, either as an officer or soldier, in the regular or volunteer forces of the United States. An officer, therefore, who is unfit for duty, but not on account of vicious habits, nor of any incident of service, if he is under 60, and has served, say, 30 years, would on discharge receive six years' pay. If the unfitness is the result of injuries received or disease contracted in the line of duty, the officer is not discharged, but is to be placed on the retired list.

Having thus culled out those to be discharged, to be retired, and to be reserved, (for the purpose of retirement within two years,) the ninth clause of section 40 provides that, after this process of elimination has been completed, and before the 1st of January, 1880, the President shall from those officers remaining on the active list "arrange the proper complement of officers for each of the departments and bureaus of the staff, and to the several corps and regiments of the line in such manner as to him may seem best, due regard to their seniority, length of service and fitness; and, in the arrangement, he may at his option, under the foregoing injunction, retain officers in their present positions or transfer or promote them. There is nothing in the bill prescribing how much weight shall be given in the arrangement to seniority, to length of service, or to fitness, nor how or by whom the question of fitness is to be decided. In this connection, section 282 provides that in this reorganization transfers may be made to the prejudice of rank, and without the advice and consent of the Senate. The President's power of deciding what officers of the active list shall have positions in the new Army is absolute and unlimited. Having "arranged" to positions those whom he chooses to retain, all the remainder are by the bill to be transferred immediately to the reserved list. The bill then provides that this reserved list shall be maintained for three years, or until Congress shall otherwise direct. Unless there should be further legislation, therefore, all the officers on the reserved list would go out of the Army in three years. As an inducement for them to go, they are offered, by the bill, if they will resign within six months, three years' full pay, less what they may have received while on the reserved list.

UNJUST TO THE ORDNANCE CORPS.

AN OFFICER OF THE DEPARTMENT SPEAKS HIS MIND FREELY—VIEWS OF OFFICERS IN THIS BRANCH GENERALLY.

Following is a copy of a letter received by a gentleman in this City from an officer who graduated from the Military Academy in 1869, and who has been a First Lieutenant in the Ordnance Department for over four years. It is a fair statement of the feeling which exists in this particular branch of the service relative to the new bill, and the points made by the writer should be carefully considered by both houses of Congress. The letter is as follows:

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Dec. 22, 1878.

DEAR SIR: You send me word to keep up my spirits, but a perusal of the proposed Army bill renders that impossible. I will not speak of it as to consider the injustice and unfairness of the bill—that is a personal matter, and it has long been an adage that corporations had no souls, while republics are proverbially ungrateful—but I will try and show you, what doubtless you have already seen, the want of wisdom in some of its provisions—its short-sightedness, if the efficiency of the service is to be maintained. I will not go into the matter generally—that we are too long & work for the limit of a letter—but only as it affects my corps, premising that the same remarks, with slight changes, could be made by the officers of nearly all the other staff corps.

In the first place, by this bill all the Captains and Lieutenants of ordnance, as a corps, cease to exist as such. What becomes of them? They are either retired, (only two or three of them being eligible for this,) absorbed into the line, or placed on the reserved list, with the option of waiting for a possible future absorption, or resigning with three years' pay. Now, who are these men? Are they incapable or inefficient men that their services are thus abruptly terminated, or their line of duty changed? Not at all. They are all graduates of the Academy, retain being a graduate of the Military Academy of 1862, and men who occupy their present position by virtue of evident ability, the graduates being there on account of the recommendation of the Academic Board at West Point, or by reason of conspicuous service since leaving the Academy, and the civilian appointments being all men of marked ability, who are there by virtue of having passed what I am not overstepping the mark in characterizing one of the most searching examinations ever passed by officers in any service. No officer of the line, even a graduate or non-graduate, but has justified his fitness for his position by successive professional examinations, and our Ordnance Corps to-day is known and respected in the foreign services as a body of able, scientific officers.

Are these officers, then, unnecessary? If so, let them go for the public weal; but this is not claimed even by the framers of this bill, for section 29, after providing for the regular organization of the reduced Ordnance Corps, adds to it "such Captains and First Lieutenants of the artillery as may be deemed necessary by the President, not exceeding 30." These officers, only four less than the Captains and Lieutenants of ordnance to be displaced, are to be detailed for a term of not over three years. That is to say, that the present number of officers in a given corps is more than the needs of the corps, but skilled labor is to be dispensed with to replace it by the labor of green hands, who are to receive the same compensation as the skilled hands they displace. No reduction of the number of officers doing ordnance duty is made, but those who have learned how to do it are placed on the reserved list on half pay, while their work is done by inexperienced men of the same grade in another corps, who receive full pay for doing it. Is this economy? If any manufacturer in private life, any business man, practiced such he would soon figure in the list of bankrupts. In the list of officers put out of the ordnance by this bill, there are only three who have not already been officers of ordnance for more than the three years allowed by the bill as the extreme length of detail of the artillery officers who are to replace them, and of this three one had made valuable inventions in ordnance before coming into the corps. Is it not reasonable to call the work of these officers skilled labor in comparison with that of men as new to the work, and only allowed three years to master a branch of the profession that calls for a lifetime of study and application? And further, I would ask if an officer is going to work with the same zeal to fit himself for the duties of a position which he can only hold for three years as one will do who knows that he is working to fit himself for the higher walks of a branch of the service to which he can feel that he belongs? Good, bad, or indifferent, the artillery officer serving in the ordnance under detail, feels that at the end of three years he goes back to the artillery. Who then will be the applicants for these temporary positions? Good officers, enthusiasts in their profession? Not at all! These will say that the artillery is their branch, and will wish to stay in it to fit themselves for its duties, and it will be the poorer left who will go to the ordnance; men who have disagreeable stations, or commanders with whom they find their relations unpleasant; shirks, who will look to this detail as a sort of gratified leave of absence. To sum up, then: who is benefited by this? Not the artillery, for it has only lost the services of some of its officers for three years, who then come back, with no increased knowledge of artillery, but rather rusty by reason of their absence, and with but little increased knowledge of ordnance. Not the ordnance, for it has not only lost its experienced officer, but also its detailed men, just as they were beginning to know a little of their new duties, and has a new lot of green hands sent to it to educate for three years more. Then again it will lose them. Not the Government, for, as I said before, it has had the service of inexperienced men, instead of men who have already served longer than the full extent of the detailed men's service is allowed to be, and has paid as much for it, as well as paying the half-pay of the displaced men on the reserved list.

Are these ordnance officers, then, displaced to fill necessary places elsewhere? Not at all; for if they go into the line, they go either to new duties or to duties to which they have been strangers for some time, and they will be as inefficient in the line as the newly-joined officers will be in the ordnance. More than this: under the provisions of this bill none of these officers of ordnance thus displaced and absorbed into the line can even be assigned to do the duty of an ordnance officer—a duty, the details of which have been acquired by experience—unless in putting him in the line he is put in the artillery. There will not be room in the artillery for all the ordnance officers thus displaced, and hence it will follow that officers of many years' experience will be debarred from doing the duty for which they are best fitted by that experience, and will be sent to do some duty entirely new to them, while other officers, entirely inexperienced, will be sent to do the duty for which experience has fitted the first-named.

"I have but one lamp," said Patrick Henry, "by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience." I am a field officer, under the proposed new régime, may well paraphrase this, and say he has but one light, and that is the light of inexperience. This the result of this method of economizing will be, as the ordnance is concerned, an equal amount of pay for the officers necessary for it, plus the pay of the displaced officers on the reserved list, plus a tremendously increased cost of the establishment, owing to the lack of experienced officers in it. So far, so good, considering the personal side effects of the bill, so to speak, but there is another general aspect in which it affects the country at large, and that is in its effect upon the stability of an efficient organization. There is, and can be, nothing so demoralizing to the efficiency of an Army as uncertainty of tenure of office, and continual legislation produces this effect. Constant dropping wears away the stone, and I speak from personal experience when I say that the Army and the country generally, have lost the services of many valuable young officers in the past 10 years owing to their sense of the instability of their position. While the pay of officers is sufficient to keep them in the service, it is not sufficient to make any saving from, and while an officer would remain in the service had he the certainty of the continuance of this pay, many do not feel justified in rejecting any good opening outside of the Army, when experience teaches that at any time an officer may, through no fault of his own, and owing to no crying necessity, find his official career terminated, his connection with the Army dissolved, and himself, after years of service and endeavor to make himself a useful public servant, thrown, without resources, upon the world, to begin it anew. I have known several cases in which valuable officers have left the service impelled by such reflections as these; officers who loved the service, who would have remained and been useful in it could they have been assured of the stability of their tenure of office. I will venture the assertion that every Army bill, of the nature of the one under discussion, which is introduced costs the country as many valuable officers as a small battle, and every one passed as many as a general engagement.

I will also venture the assertion, and challenge any man, no matter what his political complexion, to disprove my statement, that the Army which Congress to-day is deliberating whether to destroy or not—under the guise of reform and reorganization—is one of the first in the world in efficiency, ability, equipment, and in the character of its officers, for its last in size. It has made its name in war and in peace, and the people of the country know it, respect it, and honor it. And in this Army no branch of it has proved its efficiency and ability in a more marked manner than the Ordnance Corps. What the Ordnance Corps, what the Army, will be if Congress passes this bill is something too painful to contemplate.

This letter is long, although I have written to avoid being tedious; and yet I have not touched upon one-fourth of the glaring points of the bill. If I have taken so much time it is because the bill presents so many salient points of attack. Yours, very truly,

* * *

OPPOSITION TO BURNSIDE'S BILL.

A PAMPHLET PUBLISHED BY ARMY OFFICERS CRITICISING THE PLAN OF REORGANIZATION—OPINIONS OF LEADING GENERALS IN FAVOR OF THE PRESENT STAFF DEPARTMENTS QUOTED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—A number of prominent Army officials in this city have published in pamphlet form a mass of matter in opposition to the radical changes proposed by the Burnside Committee bill in regard to the staff departments. The history of the present organization of the staff corps is briefly stated, showing that it is the carefully-considered work of Mr. Calhoun, Secretary of War in 1821, and Mr. Poindexter, Secretary of War in 1838. The pamphlet next quotes not only from Secretaries Crawford, Calhoun, and McCrary in favor of the present system, but also from Gen. Sherman's annual report for 1869, and from Gens. Sheridan, McClellan, Hancock, Pope, Franklin, Meade, Thomas, Marcy, Ferry, Kautz, Crittenden, and Getty, all of whom have expressed themselves impartially in favor of the present system of a subdivision of staff duties into departments under corps of trained specialists. The pamphlet supports these opinions by a quotation from Sir Archibald Alison, who, writing upon Army organization, says:

"It is not too much to say that an army sent into the field without efficient and thoroughly well organized and long previously trained staff and supply departments, is an army foredoomed to dogs and vultures, and that the expenditure at the moment, however lavish, can supply these wants or avert this doom. Our Army, which embarked for the Crimea in 1853, was the finest this country ever produced, but it was borne down in the midst of sand, and it melted away like snow before the first touch of the h

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

LIEUT. FLIPPER'S EXPERIENCE.

THE COLORED CADET AT WEST POINT. Autobiography of Lieut. HENRY OSSIAN FLIPPER, first graduate of color from the United States Military Academy. New-York: HOURTON LEE & Co. 1878.

Such incidents as might occur in the life of a young colored man, born in Georgia in 1856, who up to the present date is only some 22 years of age, cannot, of course, present much that is either startling or remarkable. Still, Lieut. Flipper's autobiography is interesting, as it gives in minute detail the history of the first colored graduate at the West Point Academy. In the examination of a book of this character, a question more or less pertinent must arise, and that is, as to its raison d'être. Possibly Lieut. Flipper was badly advised when the idea was presented to him of undertaking his autobiography. We are inclined to think that among his fellow-officers, where esprit de corps exists and precedent holds its sway, that this young gentleman's book, necessarily personal of its kind, will not be received without some disparaging comments. Such expressions of opinion as may be vouchsafed will be delivered across mess-tables or in frontier quarters, but will never find themselves in print. Though officers in our service have given us clever books of travel, exploration, and adventure, and leading Generals accounts of their campaigns, the writing youngster generally creates a prejudice against himself among his mates. In deviating, then, from the modest, unassuming manner adopted by Cadet Flipper, who worked his way up to be a Lieutenant, we think an error of judgment was made, which, in later life, the writer may regret. There is no possible law in America which prevents a man making a speech, writing a book, or having engravings made of his personal appearance. But then, in this peculiar case, though Lieut. Flipper may be very indifferent to it, many of those who are too ready to pick a flaw in the equal rights of the colored man might be inclined, without a perusal of the book, to declare that an autobiography of the first colored Cadet was ostentatious in character, and that public attention had been called in a most unnecessary way to what was by no means a very remarkable circumstance. Perhaps the wiser friends of Lieut. Flipper would have wished that he should have quietly gone through his usual round of duty, monotonous though it might have been. Very certainly, should there have arisen the time when this young cavalry officer had had the opportunity to show his skill or courage in an encounter with an enemy, public praise and honor would have been lavished on him.

Having explained ourselves rather at length on this, the only unfortunate phase of the book, it gives us great pleasure to notice the general excellence of this autobiography. It is written in a singularly straightforward style. Cadet Flipper is fully aware of the prejudices which exist, and manfully, never cringeingly, battles against them. He cites quite ingeniously several cases of young men in his class who must have been cads and snobs. His own exemplary conduct under vulgar aggressions redounds to his credit. The boy's isolation at the Academy is touchingly told: "I have been practically isolated from the Cadets. I have little or no intercourse with them. I have, therefore, had but little chance to know what was really the feeling of the corps as a unit toward myself. Judging, however, from such evidences as I have, I am forced to conclude that it is * * * * a feeling of kindness, restrained kindness, if you please." Mr. Flipper scouts at any power Congress may have to control personal whims or prejudices. "If my manhood cannot stand without a Governmental prop, then let it fall." No lad of bluest blood, born of Revolutionary sires, could be more imbued with the true military esprit de corps.

That high opinion of the thorough mental and physical development which West Point gives to the young soldier is pleasantly descanted upon. Lieut. Flipper appreciates fully the justice of his officers and Professors. In regard to the discomfiture of another colored Cadet the Lieutenant writes: "He was regularly and rightly found deficient, and duly dismissed." As a Cadet, Flipper strives to be "an officer and a gentleman," and no one can read this autobiography without feeling perfectly assured that the present cavalry officer, now at Fort Sill, fulfills not only the first, but certainly the second much more difficult function. He is honest in his complaints; there is no whine about them. They are inevitable, and he meets them with the best of common sense. "From the beginning to the close, my life has been one, not of trouble, persecution, or punishment, but one of isolation only," and certainly this honest declaration is painful enough. It is the honor, the dignity of the position which always holds this military aspirant steadfast in his plans. He is conscious that it is education and proper conduct which gives social equality, and he fights for this social recognition, and who so stupid as to affirm that he has not gained it? Lieut. Flipper's book, perhaps, gives a better insight than any work we have yet seen into all the methods of study undertaken at West Point, together with the drills and general rules of discipline. If there had been less cuttings from newspapers introduced into the body of the book, we should have liked it better. Such as are reproduced are, however, those both eulogistic and otherwise of the young gentleman, and many absurd and willful lies are calmly rebutted.

If we have somewhat hesitated as to the necessity for the writing of this autobiography, still it must certainly serve as an incentive, not only to boys of his own color, but to all boys. The grand lesson it teaches is, that pluck, manliness, and perseverance can elevate any one from an humbler sphere to a higher one. We feel quite certain that The Colored Cadet at West Point will be flatteringly received by the general public. It deserves to be universally read.

DR. HARTT'S IDEA.

THE COLUMBIAN INSTITUTE; FOR THE PRESERVATION OF HEALTH AND THE CURE OF CHRONIC DISEASES. By EDWARD H. HARTT, M. D. New-York: RUSSELL BROTHERS. 1878.

Dr. Hartt is a physician who thinks that some hospital ought to be established for the cure of chronic diseases as opposed to diseases of an acute nature. Whether the 300 physicians whose indorsement he has procured agree with all his ideas may be questioned, if only on the à priori ground that doctors disagree. But many of the names of his indorsers are unexceptionable, and the main idea, namely, of founding a hospital devoted to the cure of diseases that return again and again without destroying their victim, seems to find favor not only with a large number of influential citizens in other walks of life, but with a fair body of that most conservative class, the physicians. In his little book called The Columbian Institute, Dr. Hartt unfolds his reasons for the necessity of such a hospital and brings forward his letters of testimony signed by various well-known names: Drs. Marion Sims, Alonzo Clark, Gurdon Buck, John W. Draper, George A. Peters, William H. Draper, and A. B. Mott, are among the notable practitioners who have signed his paper. Many prominent clergymen support his project with letters. A committee of physicians and others was appointed to consider the matter; its proceedings comprise the bulk of the book. It is proposed to form a joint stock association, with a capital of $500,000, divided into 25,000 shares of $20 each. Dr. Hartt's plan is to throw the hospital open to a number of practices not generally in use among regular physicians, to refuse a trial to none of the harmless practices now almost monopolized by quacks, such as rubbings, magnetism, &c., and to conduct the institution on the most liberal principles. He holds that the reaction against methods and means of cure on which quacks have laid far too much stress has seriously impaired the ability of physicians to deal with chronic diseases. For the water cure, for example, so extravagant merits have been claimed that people now refuse to believe in its efficacy under any circumstances. The Columbian Institute, if it can be put into working order, is to afford a place where the excesses of quacks and the red tape of the medical profession are to meet on the ground of common sense. Dr. Hartt makes a very plausible showing, and certainly deserves credit for indefatigable zeal in the pursuit of his plan.

A NEW STORY.

THE BOHEMIAN. A Tragedy of Modern Life. By CHARLES DE KAY. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS.

In a small compass Mr. de Kay has drawn, with both delicacy and power, a dramatic incident. The Bohemian is an excellent example of neat finish, without over-elaboration, where true art conceals careful workmanship. To any one who, for business or pleasure, has to read no end of short stories, the evidence becomes more positive every day that we are producing much better work of this special character than in England. That minatory method of Wilkie Collins which insists that you shall eat mustard with your literary beef, has rightly passed out of vogue. Intelligent readers refuse to be stunned with sledge-hammer facts where no pleasurable emotions can be evoked. It is this finer sensibility, not the exaggeration of it, which we would like to point to. The younger school of American writers have thus created a special audience; it may be restricted as yet, but still it exists.

De Courcy Plantagenet Lee, from his resonant name, might excite prejudice, but these high-sounding appellations are in keeping with the man. Lee is intentionally a vague and sketchy personage. Though he is nothing but a hard-worked cash clerk in some Broadway shop, if he does not write sonnets, at least he dreams them. Such culture as he possesses ventilates itself in a club called the Expressionists, over which Harpalion Bagger, the master-mind, swaggers supreme. Such little Bohemian coteries do exist, where, under the influence of thin beer, the thickest canons for art, literature, and everything else are promulgated. Lee comes from a mixed stock. Through his veins, on the father's side, runs good Virginia blood: from his mother he derives that sadness which comes from her having been a Dunker, a peculiar religious sect, who have certain gloomy ideas respecting the hereafter. Miss Adelaide Brice has long thrown her cap over the windmills, and is indifferent to public opinion. Rich, handsome, elegant, she is a woman cynic. Lee falls in love with Adelaide as she passes a piece of money through the gilded bars of his cash den. A common-place incident, artistically worked up, brings the young man and the older woman in juxtaposition. Adelaide, who has discarded hosts of more elegant and eligible suitors, at last has an expansion de cœur, and glories in the man, who is nothing but a shop-clerk. The two are engaged. There is a natty stock-broker, Seward Peel, who dances in and out of drawing-rooms, inducing women to take flyers, not only in love but in Wall-street. Peel loves Adelaide, and though at the conclusion of the story he is married, he trifles with Lee's betrothed. There is a garden party, where Lee is present. He has spent his last $10 to buy decent clothes for the occasion. Lee sees Peel caress Adelaide. The woman shows no proper horror at this dalliance, and but half repels the man's advances. Lee is so dazed, so stunned, that he cannot fell his rival to the ground. He wanders off in a helpless way, and straggling along the railroad track, a locomotive crushes him. Such are the leading incidents in this little drama. Now, people who only care for the hard facts, whose criticism of a romance embodies itself in the expression, "so ingenious as to plot," might not appreciate The Bohemian. It is in the delicacy, the naturalness, in the artistic method of telling it all, that lies the main charm of this very clever little story.

LITERARY NOTES.

—The controversy about "Eternal Hope" still rages among the English clergy.

—The late Prof. Herbert wrote a book on The Realistic Assumption of Modern Science Examined, which Macmillan & Co. are about to issue.

—"Young Mrs. Jardine" is the title of the new story, by the author of John Halifax, Gentleman, to be begun in Good Words for January.

—Lee & Shepard will send out in a week or two Mr. Henry Ballantyne's Midnight Marches Through Persia, with an introduction by President Seelye, of Amherst College.

—A writer in the London Spectator says plainly that "Mr. Cook's style, which decidedly rises sometimes to the 'high falutin,' is much against him with English readers."

—An American edition of Gladstone's essays is announced by Charles Scribner's Sons. Gleanings of Past Years is the title of the forthcoming small volumes, five in number.

—The second edition of Dr. Alexander's (the Bishop of Derry's) "Bampton Lectures for 1876," the Witness of the Psalms to Christ and Christianity, is greatly enlarged in the notes.

—The third volume of Ewell's Commentary on the Prophets of the Old Testament, translated by Rev. J. Frederic Smith, has just appeared from the press of Williams & Norgate, London.

—The Living Age announces as its new serials for 1879 The Bride's Pass, a new story by Sarah Tytler, and The Romance of Calcot House, one of the best of Katharine S. Macquoid's stories.

—The writer of the article on "Journalists" in the December Blackwood gives vivid and powerful sketches of all the varieties of the genus "correspondent," and attributes the excellence of the work done to "nothing short of a species of real literary genius."

—The Art Journal for the current month has an illustrated paper by Llewellyn Jewitt, on "Art among the Ballad-mongers." Lucy H. Hooper reviews the Italian and Russian pictures at the late Exposition, and S. G. W. Benjamin talks foul of the art critics on the daily press.

—The Government of M. Thiers, by Jules Simon, will soon appear in English translation with Charles Scribner's Sons. Simon's book is a complete picture of the long period in which Thiers took a leading stand in French politics. His sketches of contemporary politicians are said to be vivid and biting.

—The question as to the genders, egg-bearing and breeding habits of the eel finds further elucidation in the American Naturalist of this month, where a paper by Prof. Packard is given, relating to this eccentric and much-devoured fish. He claims that Dr. Syeski has mistaken male for female eels.

—Harper & Brothers have added to their Franklin-Square Library Sport and Work on the Nepaul Frontier; or, Twelve Years' Sporting Reminiscences of an Indigo-planter, by "Miaori." Great tales of boar-sticking and tiger-shooting are here to be read, interspersed with graphic descriptions of jungle scenery and Indian life.

—The Atlantic for February will have for its opening paper "The Career of a Capitalist," by Mr. Harrison, the author of "Certain Dangerous Tendencies of American Life." It is said to be a real history. In the same issue Mr. W. W. Story, poet, sculptor, and what not, will have a graphic paper on a holiday in Rome 20 years ago.

—The Ornamental Penman's, Engraver's, Sign-writer's, and Stonecutter's Pocket-book of Alphabet, published by E. & F. N. Spon, includes church text, Egyptian, Egyptian perspective, French, French antique, French renaissance, German text, italic, italic shade, Italian hair-line, monograms, old English, old Roman, open Roman, open stone, ornamental, Roman, Latin, rustic, Tuscan, &c.

—John S. Hittell, the historian of the Society of Californian Pioneers, puts out a History of the City of San Francisco with A. L. Bancroft & Co., of his city. He divides his work into 243 sections, each containing some notable fact in the history of the place, or, incidentally, of the State of California. The book is a large octavo, printed in open type on tinted paper.

—The letters of Mary Wollstonecraft to Gilbert Imlay, recently found by Mr. C. Kegan Paul among the papers of the Shelleys, and already published in London, will be brought out on this side of the Atlantic by Roberts Brothers in a few days. The book will have two etchings by Ophie, and, as the writing of Mrs. Shelley's mother, the letters will have an interest for all who are familiar with the life of the poet.

—A popular article by Lucy Larcom, in the style of the old annuals, opens the January number of the Art Journal. J. Appleton Brown furnishes the illustrations, which are handsomely engraved by A. V. S. Anthony. The steel engravings for January are "Leaving Home," a picture of a soldier and family, by F. Holl; "Iceberg Lake," by R. T. Pritchett, and "The Lady in Comus," a piece of sculpture, by J. D. Crittenden.

—Lieut. A. W. Vogdes has found in a shell heap of West Florida the bones of a chief and the cooking places of an extinct race of cannibals who inhabited the Florida sea-coast before the advent of the Indians. His paper is in the American Naturalist. The same magazine has botanical articles by J. E. Todd, "On Certain Contrivances for Cross Fertilization in Flowers," and by A. W. Bennett, "Absorption of Water by the Leaves of Plants."

—The deeply interesting researches of Max Müller into the origin and growth of religion as illustrated by the religions of India, are issued by Charles Scribner's Sons, in one volume, crown octavo. They consist of lectures delivered at the request of the Hibbert Trustees, on the plan of the well-known Bampton lectures. Max Müller began the series with these researches: the lectures were delivered in the chapter-house of Westminster Abbey.

—Mr. Leslie Stephen's paper on "Landor's Imaginary Conversations," in the December Cornhill, is probably the most impartial analysis of these celebrated colloquies which has ever been made. Mr. Stephen is specially strong in his critical perceptions of character, and Landor, who is nothing if not critical, furnishes the finest possible field for the exercise of his peculiar gifts. Students of English literature will find this article, which is reprinted in Littell's Living Age for Jan. 4, (No. 1,803,) well worth their careful study. It interprets the conversations by Landor's life; and mercilessly sets forth the weakness and strength of both.

—Houghton, Osgood & Co. will publish Rev. Joseph Cook's volume of lectures on Heredity next Jan. 20. The other books which they have nearly ready are the Riverside edition of Dean Swift's Poems, in two volumes, a new edition of Mrs. Clement's Hand-book of Legendary and Mythological Art, and the one hundred and twenty-fourth volume of the Massachusetts Reports. Mrs. Clement adds 20 pages of new matter to her book, the materials being gathered during her recent journey abroad. She has also nearly completed a work on the Artists of the Nineteenth Century, in which she has been assisted by Mr. Lawrence Hutton. It will be brought out in two volumes, crown 8vo, by the same publishers, in February.

—The Bibliotheca Sacra for January will contain several articles of unusual interest and value. "Organic Forms," to be contributed by ex-President Hopkins, of Harvard University; "Note on Galatians III.: 16," by Rev. Prof. Frederick Gardiner; "American Pre-Revolutionary Bibliography," by James David Butler, LL. D.; "Mohammedanism as a Missionary Religion," by Prof. Charles A. Aiken, of Princeton. There is to be the first of a series of papers on the "Higher Theological Training," and two important translations are to be given. One is "The Incarnation and Atonement of God," translated from the German of Dr. Dorner; the other is "A Defense of the Catholic Faith Concerning the Satisfaction of Christ against Faustus Socinus, of Sienna, written by Hugo Grotius."

—Roberts Brothers will bring out in a few days M. Ernest Legouvé's Reading as a Fine Art. At the same time they will publish Chaucer's "Tales Retold for Children" under the title of Canterbury Chimes, and a London book, The Dramatic List, which is the record of the principal performances of the living actors and actresses of the British stage, with criticisms from contemporary journals. It is compiled and edited by Mr. Charles Eyre Pascoe, an Englishman who was employed several years ago upon the Boston press. His book will have biographical sketches of James Anderson, Miss Bateman, Dr. Beniecault, H. F. Byron, W. H. Chippendale, Helen Faucit, Mrs. Charles Kean, Adelaide Kemble, Fanny Kemble, Charles Mathews, J. L. Toole, Benjamin Webster, and others.

—The London Publishers' Circular claims that the death of the Princess Alice is a loss to the vast commonwealth of letters. The Life of the Prince Consort shows that the Princess filled a large place in her father's heart, and repaid his love with the utmost devotion of a daughter as she watched at his bedside 17 years ago. When her eldest brother, the Prince of Wales, was stricken down with the same disease which had proved fatal to her father, she returned to her native country to watch at his bedside, and on the very day her father died and her brother's disease reached its turning point, she herself was taken away. She is said to have been gifted with an exceptionally acute intellectual faculty, and to have shown in conversation that she was acquainted with the golden thoughts of the greatest thinkers. All the Queen's daughters are spoken of as gifted and thoughtful women, who have received in their exalted position the best literary and artistic training and known how to put it to practical use in homes of their own.

—Emile de Laveleye, in the last Fortnightly Review, thus states the general impression made upon European opinion by the figure of Prince Bismarck: "His superiority seems to consist in this, that he has perceived clearly what are the forces now active in Europe, and now effective in working the various transformations of Europe—the spirit of Nationalities, democratic aspirations, the press—and he has found out the secret of using them all in turn, and making them his instruments. His conception is definite and precise. He knows clearly what it is that he wants, while the others have only fugitive and fitting gleams. He has a will, while around him people have only velleities. His execution is powerful, violent, and mercilless. His passion is evidently the greatness of his country. He attaches no great value either to honors or wealth or pleasures. But he is hard, and pays little heed to the lives of men. War has no horror to him. The German of the primitive time survives in him; or, rather, he appears among us like the god Thor, of the Scandinavian Olympus, bearing in his hand his iron hammer, and unchaining the tempests."

—The Appletons have many books under way for the new year. In the "Handy-Volume Series" they will issue during the present month The Disturbing Element, by C. M. Yonge, and The Multitudinous Seas, by S. G. W. Benjamin; in the "Collection of Foreign Authors," Tales from the German of Paul Heyse, in independent form; My Guardian, by Ada Cambridge. Rev. George D. Boardman, D. D., is about to publish with this house his new volume, entitled The Lord's Prayer. The Science of Speech and Report on Finance and Taxation, from 1859 to 1878, by John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury, a stout 8vo of 600 pages, will be ready in a few days. Modern Fishers of Men, among the various sexes, sects and sets of Chartville Church and Community, is promised for the month. Other volumes, which are soon to follow, are Rebels and Cavaliers, by Cooke collectors, by Frédéric Vors; Commercial Products of the Seas; Marine Contributions to Food, Industry, and Art, an illustrated book, by P. L. Simmonds, and the Speaking Telephone, Electric Light, and Other Electrical Inventions, by George S. Prescott, a new edition, with 200 additional pages, including all Edison's inventions. The following "Health Primers" will be published in January and February: Premature Death: Its Promotion and Prevention; Alcohol: Its Use and Abuse; Exercise and Training, (illustrated;) The House and Its Surroundings; Personal Appearances in Health and Disease, (illustrated;) Baths and Bathing; The Heart and Its Functions. The editors are J. Langdown Down, Henry Powers, J. Mortimer-Granville, and John Tweedy, all English writers of high standing, and the series will be practically useful in current life.

ENDURANCE OF A HORSE.

From the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, Jan. 3.

The Haynesville Examiner states that a gentleman of North Lowndes came to this city some weeks ago. While here he bought a buggy and horse. On his way homeward, at Gunter's Hill, he got out of his buggy for some purpose, and the horse ran off with it. Darkness had set in, and the gentleman looked in vain for his missing property. He went home and gave notice of the escape, and was much troubled at the failure to recover the beast and vehicle. At last they were found in the woods of Pintada Swamp, near the place of escape. The buggy had become fixed among the trees in such manner that the horse could not draw it, and there the unfortunate beast had stood, without food or water, for 10 days! Though emaciated and feeble, the horse was driven home without being taken from the buggy. We view this fact, which is vouched for on the best authority, as a contribution to the science the knowledge and speculation of the day, and hardly leave it a parallel.

ANECDOTES OF CUSHING.

REMINISCENCES FROM HIS HOME.

SOME OF HIS PERSONAL CHARACTERISTICS —STORIES HIS OLD NEIGHBORS TELL ABOUT HIM.

From the Boston Herald, Jan. 4.

Caleb Cushing was never on confidential terms with anybody. To begin with, he was in youth as ambitious as Napoleon, and he elevated himself to the position he occupied at his death by sheer force of physical application. He had a memory probably unequaled by any man now alive. He could read 16 hours a day for a month, and never forget an important fact obtained in that time, and this faculty made him the profoundest authority on Federal laws in this country. His memory and his power of work were the secrets of his success. As an illustration of this, the following anecdote is told: In 1853, or thereabout, he was appointed Chief-Justice of the Supreme Bench of Massachusetts. He was out of practice, and, to use his own words, "very rusty." He set to work, however, and in 19 days had red 60 volumes on different laws—questions of precedent, laws of contracts, laws of exchange, &c. About 17 volumes were devoted to Massachusetts law; twice as many more were made up of reports, and the reading was altogether extremely varied.

Now for an example of his power of work: Between the ages of 27 and 54 he never knew what it was to be sick. He was accustomed in Washington to get up to work in the morning at 5 o'clock, and labor tremendously through meal hours, and without taking a rest, until 11 at night. Then he would smoke a cigar, get into bed, and read history until he fell asleep. In one Winter he finished in this manner 13 octavo volumes of scientific travel and recent history. While Attorney-General he would have his meals brought to him and laid on his writing-desk. His custom often was to eat the entire meal without looking at it or resting from his work. Friends or business associates during the time when he was trying to adjust the Hudson Bay Company's claims, and often on ordinary occasions, would find him buried in writing-paper or law-books at 4 o'clock in the morning, he having been at his desk for 23 hours without rest.

Caleb Cushing was a man of strong passions, animi and intellectual; there was probably not a moment in his whole waking life when he was not thinking profoundly. He smoked like a steam-engine, and as though there were utility in tobacco. He used profanity to impart intense emphasis to some angry expressions, but never idly or meaninglessly. He drank socially, but made the occasion invariably bear fruit by starting an argument or making a business friend.

Mr. Cushing used to say that literary labor was, with him, like the labor of a school-boy over his smeared and blotted essay. He had no fact for it, although his indomitable will and determination to conquer kept him making efforts all his life. He had no imaginative power, no skill of fancy whatever. He had little or no knowledge of common law, and Judge Bigelow said of him once that, in matters relating to the perfect and impartial adjustment of a case on the basis of right and wrong, Judge Shaw was vastly his superior; while, in cases where authority was involved, Cushing had no superior. In abstract law, that is, he was great; in precedent and authority he was powerful. An example of his great energy and force of character is contained in the following wonderful story. He was appointed Minister to China at a time when there was no treaty between the Celestial Empire and any country, except England. There were no steam-boats in those days. This extraordinary man, with the marvelous knowledge of international law, crossed the Atlantic, went up the Mediterranean, journeyed through Europe and India to China, established a treaty, and made the reluctant pig-tails accept it, came back across the Pacific, landed at San Francisco, went to Mexico, and helped to smooth diplomatic matters there, returning to Washington in 18 months after his departure therefrom. He then visited his home at Newburyport. The English Ambassador, on coming back to England from his successful mission in China, was courted, feted, and "addressed" by all the commercial people of England; yet, although the English complained that Cushing's American treaty was much more favorable to them, not the slightest notice was taken of him by the merchants of Baltimore, Philadelphia, New-York, or Boston, as he passed through these cities on his way home, so bitter was the feeling against John Tyler, who appointed him. Cushing had the adjustment of our relations with the United States of Colombia to handle some years ago, and found it necessary to go there; and, although nearly 70 years old at the time, he traveled 500 miles on horseback in search of that wandering Government.

Mr. Cushing was an intimate friend of Webster, and in some respects their tastes were similar. Webster, at the period of his death, owed Mr. Cushing quite a large amount of money. There were many secrets of State locked up in this old man's breast. Once he told a friend that he had himself written over 50 of Secretary Seward's dispatches; whether this statement needs revision or not probably no one now alive can tell. An acquaintance and classmate of Mr. Cushing, now dead, said once that Cushing's moral perceptions were not very high. His more intimate friends say that in ordinary business transactions, or questions of right and wrong, susceptible of mechanical adjustment, he was exactness itself; they also admit that his classmate's assertion may have been true enough, if interpreted so as to mean that he could easily convert his conscience to faith in any of his political plans or methods of action. It is related of Cushing as an instance showing his patriotism and interest in the Union cause during the war of the rebellion, that, in 1862, on the first day of his arrival at Newburyport, after the declaration of actual war, he made a speech earnestly in favor of the Union. Nevertheless, he was hated heartily in that city during the war. William Lloyd Garrison, another Newburyport man, probably believed him a rebel. At any rate, both men were extreme in their manner and views, one as a declared abolitionist, and the other as a strong pro-slavery man.

Mr. Cushing at home has never been much of a sensation. During his business and political life Newburyport rarely saw him, and since his enforced retirement he has continued his studies and kept himself shut up much of the time in his study. His great health broke down while he was in Pierce's Cabinet, but up to the moment of his death he had never been able to bring himself to believe that he was not destined to live many years more. Only a short time ago, and during the illness which carried him off, he appointed Wednesday as the day on which he intended going to Washington to adjust some of his law business. He lived with his step-brother's wife and her family in a large white house, not far from the business section of Newburyport. The house is plainly furnished, but its walls contain about 300 choice paintings picked up in Mexico, France, and Spain principally. Mr. Cushing had an understanding with the rest of the family that they should never enter his study for any purpose, even to dust it. He would never allow a woman to take care of his offices in Washington either, preferring to do the work himself. His library was large and miscellaneous; full of histories, works of travel, and many novels. His law library in Newburyport was large, but his friends say, not particularly important. He was a great novel reader, and read everything in this line, from the trashiest yellow-covered novel, through the light and heavy French schools, to the profound works on psychology that the novel of to-day are getting to be. He has always had a passion for novel reading, and, unless extremely busy, would keep one at his side all day long, ready to pick it up at his first spare moment. He could not converse on light, social topics, but would stop on the street and join in a discussion with strangers if a word was dropped while he was passing on any profound subject, or indicating a sober topic of discourse.

He knew everything in the encyclopedia and could talk about it, always quoting authorities. He once talked for two hours with a stranger, who, in his hearing, said that he believed in phrenology. Once the publishers of the first edition of Webster's Dictionary sent him from Springfield a presentation copy, requesting in return a critical notice. Cushing, having plenty of leisure time, glanced at the first page and found numerous mistakes; he read the second page and found as many more. He read the entire book, and wrote to the publishers that if they expected that he was going to write a complimentary notice of a book with 5,000 errors in it they were mistaken. The publishers of course found fault with his extraordinary statement, and wrote back to the effect that if he would point out to the satisfaction of Prof. Porter, of Harvard, the editor of the Dictionary, they would believe him. Angry at this imputation, this extraordinary man read the gigantic book over again, and wrote out the 5,000 mistakes and sent them to Prof. Porter. Mr. Cushing leaves no direct heirs. His property in Newburyport is estimated to be worth $80,000. Besides this, he owns large tracts of land in St. Anthony's Falls, in Virginia, and other places. His total wealth is variously estimated at from $300,000 to $800,000.

A NEW-YORK GOVERNOR OF APIA.

From the Washington Post, Jan. 4.

Gen. F. W. Bartlett, of New-York, writes to a friend in this city from the port of Apia, in the Samoan Islands, that he has been appointed Governor of the Province with supreme authority. The General says the natives are of an amiable disposition and easily governed. The commerce of the port is quite extensive, there being an average of 10 vessels in the harbor all the time. The revenue will, in consequence, be ample for the payment of the expenses of the Government from the beginning, with a prospect of a rapid increase. The General adds that there is a fine field for enterprising persons who desire to make fortunes by tilling the fertile soil, but no opening for commerce or trading, that being exclusively in the hands of the owners of vessels, who control the markets and shut out competition.

WHAT THEY CALLED SPORT.

From the Pittsburg (Penn.) Telegraph, Jan. 3.

About 250 persons, men and boys, had collected to see the bear fight and wolf chase at Finleyville, on Christmas Day. The bear was a very large one, and was bought by several persons and brought from Castle Shannon for the purpose of having dogs to fight it. At 11:30 A. M. the rope which tied Bruin was cut in trying to get him out of the box in which he was caged. The bear took advantage of his partial liberty and started rapidly away, followed by a hundred men and boys. The bear would likely have escaped as it rapidly left its human pursuers, but dogs were set on its trail, men and boys following in the rear. In a wood about three miles from Finleyville, it was found treed by the dogs. The unerring aim of the hunter's rifle brought the animal to the earth. A rope was tied to the carcass, and about 60 persons dragged it to Finleyville, where it was divided among the spectators, who will live on bear meat for a while. The wolf chase was not so exciting as the bear hunt. The wolf was set free, but did not seem to take advantage of its liberty, and did not make much of an effort to get away. Only two dogs were found brave enough to follow and "tackle" it. They soon caught it, but they were not allowed to kill it, and it was brought back for a wolf hunt on New Year's Day. The wolf was let loose on that day, and two or three persons started it by whipping, and followed it, whipping it to make it go. As soon after it was started, the dogs were permitted to follow, and it was caught and killed about three miles from Finleyville. The wolf hunt was a "fizzle," and the bear hunt not a "grand success."

LETTERS OF A LUNATIC.

THE LATEST THREATS AGAINST THE LIFE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

The letters to the English Home Secretary, containing threats against the Queen, were produced in the Bow-Street Police Court on the 19th of December, when the prisoner Madden was brought up for the examination of his case. They were as follows:

OFFICE OF THE MODERN PROPHET,
9 COUR DE LA FERME,
ST. LAZARE, PARIS, May 28, 1878.

RIGHT HON. SIR: Abdication of the Queen Victoria, by order of the Holy Spirit, and also by order of the Prince Albert, and his prophet, E. B. Madden, presently in his heavenly office, and by the grace of God, we proclaim the resignation of her Most Gracious Majesty, in favor of the Prince of Wales, as King of Great Britain, &c.

Done in the office of the Modern Prophet, and with the authorization of the Saviour of mankind.

Some century and centuries had passed; it was in the evening of one of those long days, which are the days of God, and my mind was absorbed in a deep stupor, and troubled in itself, when a voice, descended from heaven, said to me: Modern prophet, what do you see? And as I did not answer at all, it said to me, and receive $1,000 at the office of S. E. Lord Lyons, 39 Rue du Faubourg, St. Honoré, by order of Monsieur the Right Hon. Cross, year 1869, by order of the Queen Victoria, and also by Royal commandment to your modern prophet. Modern prophet have been four years at Hanwell Lunatic Asylum without insanity. The Rev. Dodwell was not insane. Give orders, if you please, by telegraph immediately, to pay me to-morrow the £1,000 in question, otherwise I will start at once for Balmoral, to see her Majesty the Queen, and change the form of Government. Have the kindness to remit to the post the inclosed letters if you please, and I hope soon to have the pleasure of seeing you in London officially for the present. Receive, Monsieur le Ministre, the assurance of my profound respect, and the whole of my devotedness.

E. B. MADDEN, Modern Prophète.

P. S.—Answer immediately; it is the will of God.
E. B. M.

Approved, by order of Prince Albert. (Signed)
To the Right Hon. R. A. CROSS. E. B. MADDEN.

OFFICE OF THE MODERN PROPHET,
9 COUR DE LA FERME,
ST. LAZARE, PARIS, May 27, 1878.

MY LORD: Anno Domini 1869. By order of the Queen Victoria, I have been kept four years at Hanwell Lunatic Asylum, without being insane. I am a spirit, immaterial, nor hindered by any material thing, so that I can pierce through the earth. I know all arts and sciences. I can disturb the elements. It will take to-day too long to describe my power. Every nation has a right to good government. In Great Britain we have a Government that is supposed to combine the monarchical, aristocratic, and republican elements, and yet there is room for great discontent.

The author of a great reformation is always unpopular in his own age. Rev. Dodwell is not insane. I am a second Dodwell. Hoedel, Vera Zasoulitch. Down in her Majesty's prisons. Be good enough, my lord, and for the interest of the Queen, and by order of the Prince Albert, £1,000 for the Modern Prophet, now in illegal keeping at Hanwell Asylum, or the life of the Queen is in danger. May the Lord be pleased to unite us all in the unity of the Spirit and in the bonds of love. Vox populi, vox Dei. Receive, my lord, the assurance of my profound respect.

E. B. MADDEN.
Lord LYONS. Modern Prophet and British Subject.

OFFICE OF THE MODERN PROPHET,
19 DUKE-STREET,
ALDGATE, E. C., Dec. 9, 1878.

RIGHT HON. SIR: Your silence to my letters since my discharge of Hanwell Lunatic Asylum is a crime on your part, and now, if I am a criminal, you are more guilty as myself. I am not insane. I was never insane, but I am a dangerous man to her Majesty—yes, I am a dangerous man. Abdication of the Queen. By order of the Holy Spirit, and also by order of Prince Albert and his Prophet, E. B. Madden, we proclaim the resignation of H. M. G. Majesty, in favor of the Prince of Wales.

Done in the office of the Modern Prophet, and with the authorization of the Saviour of Mankind.

Modern Prophet, E. B. MADDEN.
Right Hon. R. A. CROSS.

The card inclosed in one of the letters ran as follows:

"L'infortuné, E. B. Madden, interprete des langues Anglaise, Allemande, et Francaise, se recommande très respectueusement a M. Liddell pour de l'assistance ou la prison si vous plait."

19 DUKE-STREET, ALDGATE, E. C., Dec. 10, 1878.

HON. SIR: Since my discharge from Hanwell Lunatic Asylum, every one objects to give me some employment. The silence of Mr. Cross to my letters is a crime. If I am a criminal, Mr. Cross is more guilty as myself. I am not insane, and I have been never insane, but I am a State criminal. I am dangerous to her Majesty, to society, and to myself. Be good enough to order Col. Henderson to arrest me if you please, dear Sir, or I will, by order of the Prince Albert, and with your consent, send electric battery shoot her Most Gracious Majesty. I prefer to be in a prison. A lunatic asylum is a modern Bastille, and a work-house is a disgrace to England. Receive, Hon. Sir, the assurance of my profound respect and entire dévouement, but very unfortunate servant,

Hon. A. F. O. LIDDELL. E. B. MADDEN.

FOREIGN NOTES.

The uncovering of the statue of the late M. Berryer in the Palace of Justice in Paris—a ceremony which the French Government was alleged to have prohibited—is now fixed for the 15th of this month.

The heating apparatus in a school-house in Lancashire being out of order, it was determined to dismiss the school, but the children were detained to sing a hymn, and before it was over there was an explosion which nearly demolished the building.

Baron Weber, son of the famous composer, who was formerly an Austrian Councilor, and is now attached to the Prussian Ministry of Commerce, having been sent to England to gain information respecting the organization of the canals and waterways of the United Kingdom, has prepared a report which is said to be the most exhaustive work on the subject which has yet been written.

W. H. Payne, a veteran pantomimist of the English stage, died recently at Dover at the age of 71. He adopted theatrical pursuits in 1824, and made his first appearance at Covent Garden Theatre during Christmas, 1831, when he represented Madoc Maur, the Welsh ogre, in the pantomime of "Hop o' my Thumb and the Brothers." From that period till only a year ago Mr. W. H. Payne and his sons Frederick and Harry Payne have conspicuously figured in the annual holiday entertainments produced in the English metropolis and elsewhere.

A young man at Woolwich, England, recently committed suicide on the day appointed for his marriage for no discoverable reason, except that his affianced had made a trifling objection to some furniture purchased for their sitting-room. The sensitive youth left a note, in which he said: "They will not change the things, and it is the means of breaking my heart. My dear, only fancy how I have been waiting for the day for you to be mine, and now it cannot be. Do, my only and ever true love, forgive me, for I do not know where I am. I would that I were in your ever-loving embrace. Your broken-hearted Ted."

The strange announcement is made in England that Mr. Gladstone has answered, for the second (February) part of a new periodical, the Biograph, the following questions: "1. By what mental changes or external causes did Mr. Gladstone consciously pass from the Conservative to the Liberal side? 2. To what statesmen has Mr. Gladstone been most indebted for his tuition in the principles or the administrative art in politics? 3. Was Mr. Gladstone really surprised at the Irish University bill, or did he persist in dealing with the subject as a matter of duty, knowing that he risked almost all that followed? 4. In the event of carrying through his Irish University bill, what other Irish scheme, if any, was in his mind? 5. Does Mr. Gladstone's 'moral antipathy'—if it be wholly moral, as many persons contend—to Lord Beaconsfield date from the attacks made on Sir Robert Peel, or is it of more recent origin? 6. For what precise reason was the late Earl Russell excluded from the Liberal Cabinet in 1868?"

A dispatch from Copenhagen to the London papers, under date of Dec. 20, gives the programme of the marriage of the Duke of Cumberland and Princess Thyra as follows: "The marriage of the Duke of Cumberland and Princess Thyra will take place at 7 o

INDEX TO CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

AMUSEMENTS—Seventh Page—6th and 7th cols.
AUCTION SALES—Seventh Page—4th col.
BANKRUPT NOTICES—Seventh Page—6th col.
BOARDING AND LODGING—Seventh Page—6th col.
BUSINESS CHANCES—Sixth Page—4th col.
BUSINESS NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY HOUSES TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
CITY ITEMS—Fifth Page—7th col.
CITY REAL ESTATE—Seventh Page—2d col.
COPARTNERSHIP NOTICES—Seventh Page—7th col.
DANCING—Seventh Page—6th col.
DEATHS—Fifth Page—7th col.
DIVIDENDS—Sixth Page—6th and 7th cols.
DRY GOODS—Seventh Page—7th col.
ELECTIONS—Sixth Page—7th col.
FINANCIAL—Sixth Page—6th col.
FURNISHED ROOMS—Seventh Page—5th col.
HELP WANTED—Sixth Page—5th col.
HOUSES & ROOMS WANTED—Seventh Page—2d col.
INSTRUCTION—Seventh Page—5th col.
MARRIAGES—Fifth Page—7th col.
MISCELLANEOUS—Seventh Page—5th col.
MUSICAL—Seventh Page—5th col.
NEW PUBLICATIONS—Fifth Page—7th col.
POLITICAL—Fifth Page—7th col.
PROPOSALS—Seventh Page—7th col.
RAILROADS—Seventh Page—3d and 4th cols.
REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION—Seventh Page—2d col.
RELIGIOUS NOTICES—Seventh Page—5th col.
SHIPPING—Seventh Page—2d and 3d cols.
SITUATIONS WANTED—Sixth Page—5th col.
SPECIAL NOTICES—Fifth Page—7th col.
STATIONERY—Seventh Page—7th col.
STORES, &c., TO LET—Seventh Page—2d col.
TEACHERS—Seventh Page—5th col.
WATCHES, JEWELRY, &c.—Sixth Page—7th col.

The New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JAN. 6, 1879.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—Aida.
FIFTH-AVENUE THEATRE.—Rip Van Winkle.
WALLACK'S THEATRE.—At Last.
UNION-SQUARE.—The Banker's Daughter.
PARK THEATRE.—Babes in the Wood.
THEATRE COMIQUE.—Vaudeville.
GLOBE THEATRE.—Mischief.
OLYMPIC THEATRE.—Richard III.
NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Davy Crockett.
STANDARD THEATRE.—Miss.
THE AQUARIUM.—Afternoon and Evening.
SAN FRANCISCO HALL.—Love's Endurance.
MASONIC HALL.—Tom Thumb Troupe. Matinée.

THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

TERMS, POSTAGE PAID.

The Daily Times, per annum, including the Sunday Edition	$12 00
The Daily Times, per annum, exclusive of the Sunday Edition	10 00
The Sunday Edition, per annum	2 00
The Semi-Weekly Times, per annum	2 50
The Weekly Times, per annum	1 00

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day, in this region, diminishing northwest, possibly followed by north-east, winds, stationary or rising barometer, warmer, cloudy, or partly cloudy weather.

The extensive storm, which has broken off all communication between the capital and the State west of Syracuse, will have the effect of postponing the caucus for the nomination of a Speaker by the Republicans. The Legislature will meet on Tuesday, but only for a formal first session, and a prompt adjournment. In the meantime the contest between Messrs. Sloan and Alvord is practically suspended for want of members with whom to "labor." Both the aspirants are confident of entire and sure success, and it is obvious that, when the weather permits a final trial of strength, one or the other will be bitterly disappointed. Our readers will find in our Albany dispatches the latest attainable information regarding the contest, which is the absorbing topic there.

Our readers will see by our Washington dispatches this morning what a brood of financial bills has been laid to rest for the present by the unexpected success of resumption. The list of propositions before the Banking and Currency Committee, of which Mr. Buckner, of Missouri, is the Chairman, is very formidable. Most of them are with reference to silver, and indicate what line will be taken by the currency tinkers, if they should muster courage to move forward. But it is safe to assume that they will not do so during the present session. The Currency Committee itself is badly demoralized. Although there are seven opponents and only four friends of sound money on the committee, it is hardly possible that more than two of the former could be got to agree on any one proposition. It is, perhaps, too much to be expected that the committee should unite on Mr. Hewitt's bill making gold and silver interchangeable, though that bill would satisfy every legitimate demand for silver. Opposition to it can only come from those who desire silver solely in the form of debased coin, and who will not consent that the Government shall use it unless it also abuse it.

The Post Office Department has been very unlucky in Chicago. On Saturday its employes were driven from their quarters by fire—for the third time in seven years. In this instance, however, the valuable mails were nearly all saved, and the public will suffer but little, if any, serious loss. With characteristic promptness and energy, the postal authorities, while the flames were still at work, secured the building erected on the site of the former office, and will immediately enter it. There is no department of the Government in which its officers take more pride or appreciate more fully the responsibilities of their position than the Post Office. By their close and constant contact with the business public they seem to imbibe the restless and indefatigable American spirit, which is not often quelled by the influence of red-tape. It is seldom that an emergency, however sudden or considerable, does not find them equal to the demands made upon them. With the burning of the Post Office building, unfortunately, Gen. Sheridan's head-quarters were also consumed, with many valuable papers.

We are fond of denouncing certain evils of our civil service, and with justice; but we have reason to congratulate ourselves that it is not so hopelessly beyond the reach of honest public opinion as is sometimes the case in despotic Governments. A cablegram in our columns yesterday morning stated that a military court-martial, held to try charges of malpractice against Army officers in connection with supplies during the recent war, had dismissed one Captain from the service and sentenced two others and a Lieutenant to two months' imprisonment, while the noble instigator of the rascalities, rejoicing in the royal title of Prince Urussoff, escaped with a petty fine of 50 rubles. It must be remembered that the corruption thus lightly punished was of the most shameful character, and endangered and even destroyed many lives. Our Government sometimes does bad things, but it does not send political agitators to Alaska for life and fine a thief in high position $35.

The French Republicans achieved a most complete and astonishing success in the Senatorial elections yesterday. They gained forty-seven seats previously held by the Coalition, and will have a majority of about 57 in the Senate. M. Gambetta on the eve of the elections had felt safe in predicting no larger a majority than 25, and the Conservatives had been confident of reducing that number so far that there would practically be a tie between them and their opponents. As the departments in which the elections were held yesterday were situated in nearly every part of France, and as only 15 Conservatives were chosen, against 69 Republicans, the value of the result in establishing the Republic cannot be overestimated. The Conservatives, though much divided, used the most desperate efforts to prevent a decisive verdict for the Republic, and will be correspondingly discouraged. It is now evident that the more cautious French voters have become convinced of the stability and moderation of the Republic, and have given in their adhesion to it. M. Gambetta was quite correct when, last month, on the occasion of the election of a few Conservative Senators to fill vacancies, he remarked: "It is the last sigh of the Eight."

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE PACIFIC RAILROADS.

Excellent as they are, the two measures by which Congress has sought to protect the Treasury from ultimate loss and to enforce an independent audit, are insufficient to cover the requirements of the Pacific Railroad problem. Assuming that the Central as well as the Union Company will be compelled to make the necessary contributions to the Sinking Fund and to submit to the scrutiny of the Government auditor, it is evident that legislation is still needed to secure adequate protection. There may be reasons for doubting whether, with all the apparent protection which the Sinking Fund affords, the Government will ever be repaid the full amount of its cash outlay; but until this be done, the right of the Government to a supervisory control cannot be questioned. Repayment is but one of the things to be exacted. The maintenance of the roads in an efficient condition, with a due regard for the public interests and convenience in their management, are considerations quite as properly within the jurisdiction of the power to whose munificence the companies are indebted for their existence.

The little that is known in regard to the inner affairs of the Central Pacific renders necessary a fuller knowledge. The willingness of the Union Pacific to acquiesce in the operation of the Audit law cannot be regarded as a justification of its management. Common business prudence would suggest it, if only as a method of averting more unpleasant possibilities. On the other hand, the dogged refusal of the Central managers to respond to the demand for information urged under the law by both the California and the Federal authorities is unintelligible except on the supposition that there is rottenness or wrong to be concealed. The odium that attaches to the management among the people of the State which suffers most, is justified by facts. Railroad history does not supply a parallel to the extortion and insolence of the monopoly in whose profits the Central and Union Companies participate. Their charges are excessive and their methods oppressive. But, so far as the Central is concerned, there seems to be good ground for suspecting the integrity of the management. To this day, it hides as a secret, specific information as to its receipts, expenditures, and indebtedness. At different times holders of its stocks have begun legal proceedings to compel an exhibit of its affairs, and in every case a settlement has been mysteriously effected before the courts had taken decisive action. The popular interpretation of the fact has been that enormous prosperity makes concealment politic. It is hinted, however, that the financial strength of the concern has been sapped to sustain other enterprises and enrich the "rings" to which the management is tributary. Whatever the explanation, it is certain that the Federal Government cannot allow its purposes to be frustrated by the obstinacy of the Central managers, whose successful defiance of State authority may lead them to precipitate a conflict which will end differently.

The younger Adams' letter of resignation as one of the Government Directors of the Union Pacific detracts from the weight which the report of that body to the Secretary of the Interior should carry. No doubt Mr. Adams states correctly the causes of the failure of the Board of Government Directors to accomplish the results expected from it; the wonder being that he overlooked in the first instance these drawbacks to his own usefulness and that of his colleagues. The Board represents one of the vices of our system. The organization presupposes the desirableness of exercising an efficient check upon the management of the road, while the conditions are fatal to the independence essential to integrity and influence. As a rule, the members of the Board are selected with little or no reference to their qualifications. Knowing nothing of railroad details, they are dependent on the officers of the company for the data on which their judgment rests. Otherwise, their position is a false one. They are expected to watch the company, and they are made dependent on it for everything. Obviously, a Director who, as described by Mr. Adams, "is the guest of the corporation, lives at its expense, accepts every possible attention and hospitality from its officers, and is paid out of its treasury," cannot be a trustworthy judge of its errors and defects. He may start with the best intentions, but he becomes, perhaps unconsciously, an apologist instead of a censor. The anomaly is so flagrant that Congress should be asked to provide a correction. Secretary Schurz has shown his mastery of other features of the Pacific Railroad question, and here is an evil which lies at the root of Governmental supervision.

Bearing in mind the demoralizing influences under which the Government Directors perform their service, their report, as printed in The Times yesterday, is not calculated to elevate the management of the Union Pacific in the estimation of the public, or to strengthen confidence in its financial purposes. Notwithstanding its enormous net receipts, the general condition of the road can hardly be considered second class. Its rails are inferior, and its stations, with only two exceptions, miserable. Constructed hurriedly and under many disadvantages, comparatively little has been done to bring it up to even a passable standard. In no respect does it compare favorably with other great roads, which have had none of its subsidies. Some of the phrases used by the authors of the report sound like an attempt to whitewash. But the manifest disposition to speak gently only renders more damaging the evidence of the bad policy which prevails. The intention appears to be, to squeeze out of the road all that can be got, and to do as little as possible in the shape of permanent improvement. The owners of the stock, which represents not a dollar of cash investment, receive large dividends regularly, and only so much is expended on the road as is required to keep it in running order. Some of the statements prove, moreover, that the management is extremely loose. It is shrewd and keen as regards the getting of money, and negligent and weak in all other particulars. On the subject of rates, the report is contradictory. In one place they are declared not to be excessive; in another, facts are stated which prove that both extortion and unjust discrimination are practiced. Had the Government Directors investigated more thoroughly they would have found that extortion and arbitrary usage are the rule in the company's arrangement of its rates. Indeed, this is one of the points which, in connection with the Central and Union Companies, Congress cannot much longer overlook.

EXCISE LEGISLATION.

The farce that has been played for a year past with the bungling statutes which fail to regulate the liquor traffic in this State has become so utterly tiresome that the Legislature will be forced to give the subject serious attention this Winter. It ought not to be too much to hope that a little genuine statesmanship may be brought into play and a law devised which shall secure the real benefits of restriction, and be capable of clear construction and effective execution. For this purpose it will be necessary to exclude the schemes of persons interested either in removing, so far as possible, all legal control over the business, or in putting upon it an impracticable restraint in pursuance of theories that belong rather to the domain of social reform than to that of legislation. We do not admit that no effort should be made to enact or enforce laws that are founded on distinct principles of public right and having for their object an undeniable public good merely because they will fail to receive support in certain localities; but in this case, where there is a wide difference of opinion among people equally intelligent and sincere regarding the policy best calculated to promote the ultimate purpose in view—that of preventing, so far as may be the evils of intemperance—it is essential to any good result that the enactments should command the respect of citizens who are called upon to obey them or to co-operate in securing their general enforcement. Such enforcement must of necessity depend upon local authorities, and, to be effectual, must be sustained by public opinion. Any attempt to put in force, in any large community, a law which a majority even of its best citizens regard as unjust or inexpedient, is sure to result in a failure to secure not merely the object aimed at, but those benefits which might easily be obtained by a more moderate measure.

The prevailing sentiment on the subject of indulgence in stimulating drinks differs widely in the various communities, great and small, that make up a large State. There are still greater variations of opinion as to how far interference by law can serve a useful purpose. Hence the enormous difficulty of framing a general statute that shall apply to all these communities alike, and, while it depends in each on popular sympathy and support for its execution, be generally effective and satisfactory. The only obvious way of escape from the difficulty is to be found in a judicious application of the principles of "local option," which serves in some measure to adapt the working of a general law to the requirements of different communities. The law which has been in force some three years in Massachusetts embodies this principle, and has worked far more successfully than anything attempted before it, whether we consider the general satisfaction of the people with the mode of its operation, or the results attained in checking intemperance. Under this act all sale of intoxicating liquors of any grade without a license is strictly prohibited, and the prohibition is enforced by severe penalties. Then it is left to the authorities of each town or city to grant licenses or not in their discretion, and these authorities may be selected by the people with a view to their convictions and purposes on this subject. Hence, each town may have license or prohibition, according to the choice of a majority of its people, and the system is adopted that can secure the support of public opinion. Through the grading of licenses, the sale of fermented liquors alone may be allowed, or that of distilled as well, and other matters are left to the discretion of local authorities, which permit them within certain limits to make the restriction very rigid or somewhat relaxed. These limits should, of course, be very clearly defined in any such law. It might very likely be found that the local option idea could be advantageously carried further than it is in the Massachusetts statute.

But the most important preliminary consideration is that the framing of an Excise law should be in the hands of men animated solely by a purpose to devise a system calculated to secure the best results, and not those who are intent on serving some purpose of their own or of a particular clique or combination. The hired agents of liquor-dealers and of total abstinence associations should not be allowed to contend for the passage of antagonistic measures. The result of such contention is almost invariably a failure to obtain any legislation at all, or the final rushing through of some hasty patchwork that is incapable of consistent construction or systematic enforcement. At the present time the subject is comparatively free from complication with the plans and purposes of political parties. There is a very general agreement that prohibition is impracticable, and that a system of regulation and restraint, more or less stringent, and judiciously administered, is desirable. Differences of opinion concern mainly the degree of restriction that is advisable, and the best method of securing it. On these points there would be little difficulty in reaching an agreement if the subject were approached in a spirit of statesmanship and freed from the influence of private interests. A committee properly constituted, and interested only in promoting the public welfare, could give the subject thorough consideration for once, and devise a system calculated to secure the best attainable results and command general support. Unless we are to have careful or thorough work, it matters little whether the subject is touched, for there is no advantage in variety of absurdities or a succession of equally crude and futile experiments.

DEFECTS IN THE NEW ARMY BILL.

We have already expressed ourselves in favor of the general purposes of the pending bill for the reorganization and reduction of the Army. Nevertheless, it must be admitted that there are certain imperfections in its construction, which if not removed or modified will impair the strength of the proposed system and render the passage of the measure altogether uncertain. A closer examination of its provisions has convinced us that one of its most conspicuous faults is the method of reduction contemplated in one or two of the principal departments of the service. For instance, all officers disturbed in their position by the preliminary operation of the plan, who do not go at once on the retired list for age or disability, are placed on a reserved list, from which they may be taken during the next three years and assigned to regiments of the line to fill vacancies, or in place of officers transferred therefrom for that purpose by the President or the War Department. For at least three years, then, many line and staff officers will be in a state of suspense, one which will by no means be conducive to an undivided attention to duty. The element of uncertainty as to tenure of office—the curse of our civil service—will be in a measure engrafted upon the military system. The permission to officers just renewed by the War Department, "to advocate or oppose, either verbally or in writing, any pending measure of legislation touching military affairs," so excellent in spirit, would become an intolerable annoyance, as bearing upon the multitude of appeals for justice or special bills to "reinstate," likely to result from the intended method of reduction.

We have high authority for recommending a more gradual system, in the interests of the service. Many upon the active list have rendered distinguished war service and are entitled to equal consideration with others of the highest grade whose war records have very properly secured them from the axe of the reformer. By prohibiting appointments to the staff and stopping promotion therein, vacancies resulting from the special inducements offered to resign, or from ordinary casualties, would, within two years enable the "interchangeability" plan to go into successful operation without the objections which may now be urged. But the staff officers are not, however, the only ones who have reason to oppose the Burnside plan of reorganization. Its treatment of the ordnance officers cannot, in the nature of things, be looked upon with favor by any considerable portion of the public; and the letter elsewhere printed from an officer of that department now stationed at Fort Leavenworth, does not present an exaggerated view of the situation, looking at it from the Army stand-point. Capt. Taylor is also undoubtedly quite right when he says, "the country generally has lost the services of many valuable young officers owing to their sense of the instability of their position."

Take also the cases of those now on the retired list. The only pay reduced under this bill is that of retired officers. We cannot learn that any complaint has been heard on this point, although in the lower grades it will be undoubtedly felt as a hardship. A well-founded remonstrance, however, is that of officers who have been retired "with the rank of the command held when wounded in action" during the rebellion. This rank was conferred by Congress in 1866 as a special recognition of war service, in the nature of a promotion, and has been held by the recipients for more than ten years as a decoration for honorable scars. In 1870 "future retirements" of this nature were prohibited by law. The pending bill proposes to make that law retroactive, but permits this class of officers to be regraded on the list with "highest corps rank held when wounded, either in the regular or volunteer service." This does not disturb so seriously officers who commanded volunteers as it does others who lost limbs in command of regular regiments as Captains, to which rank they would (under the bill) be reduced from Colonels. It would be as unjust and as unworthy of the country to degrade these honorable soldiers as to reduce a Colonel of the line to a Captaincy, or to deprive an enlisted veteran of his medal of honor on the ground of reorganization. It is not claimed to be in the interests of economy, and the section in question and all others where injustice is similarly inflicted, should be so amended as to save worthy officers from unmerited disgrace and humiliation.

SENATOR THURMAN'S JOKE.

When Senator Thurman was asked to furnish the Teller committee with facts and evidence establishing the charge that terrorism was employed in the North during the late elections, he replied with a portentous document. This presentment was divided, like an old-fashioned sermon, into several heads, thus: 1, A newspaper editorial article; 2, John I. Davenport; 3, John I. Davenport again; 4, a speech by Senator Wallace, and a letter from W. D. Kelley on the Pennsylvania election; 5, another newspaper editorial article; 6, a copy of the President's civil service order of June 22, 1877, and a copy of a circular issued by George C. Gorham, Secretary of the Republican Congressional Committee of 1878. There might have been an extension of this list if Senator Thurman had chosen to put in another newspaper article and John I. Davenport encore. Why the Senator should have used only two newspaper clippings, and only two quotations of Davenport, will puzzle most people. But as he calls this return "Installment No. 1," we may presume that Davenport and the newspapers will appear duly in future numbers of this great work. The Senator's presentment of the case is like that famous bill of fare which, after giving clams in every possible style of cookery, concluded with "more clams."

But the most astonishing discovery of Mr. Thurman's is the President's civil service order of June 22, 1877. The Senator has a disagreeably tenacious memory. Doesn't he know that we live in a progressive age, and that a civil service reform, or appearance of reform, which is nearly two years old, is aged enough to be put under ground without words? Most people have forgotten the brilliant reform effected by the celebrated order of June 22, 1877, and there are not a few who are very glad that it has been so soon forgotten. That order was promulgated with great solemnity by our respected President. It was discharged at the heads of sundry civil officials, with deadly aim. And it was confidently expected, in certain high quarters, that the slaughter would be very great. Nobody fell, and when the smoke blew away it was observed that the President was much surprised. In fact, many worthy people, who had seen fifteen or twenty civil service reforms during the past five years, confessed that they did really think that something was to be done this time. But the President immediately began to treat the whole affair as a joke. As such it was dismissed to the limbo of the waste-basket of the Executive office, and the chief magistrate turned his attention to more serious concerns.

Mr. Thurman is like a mischievous boy who has rummaged in a garret. When he comes in with a ridiculously antique piece of wearing apparel everybody exclaims, "Where did he get that old thing?" The Senator from Ohio has put away in some odd corner a copy of the civil service order of June 22, 1877, and now brings it forth to confound its inventors. Of course, nobody pretends that there is the slightest relation, real or pretended, between that order and the alleged Northern bull-dozing. Indeed, Mr. Thurman, by coupling it with a circular begging for money, takes it out of category in which John I. Davenport and the newspaper editorial articles, by a stretch of courtesy, are admitted. The committee asked for facts relating to terrorism employed to influence elections in the Northern States. The Senator replies with the President's civil service order. "Have you any facts about you?" ask the Teller committee. "No," replies the Senator, "but I have got some first-rate opinions, which are quite at your service." And he hands out to the astonished investigators a musty, dusty order forbidding Federal officeholders to manage caucuses and conventions, with Secretary Gorham's plaintive letter asking for money for campaign purposes. The Senator might as well have presented a last year's bird's nest.

It is not easy to decide whether the Senator has "a confusion in his head" in reference to the object of his amendment to the Blaine resolutions, or has a propensity to jocularity. The playfulness with which he refers to his so-called facts as "Installment No. 1," encourages the belief that he has made an elaborate joke. Even the traditional Philadelphia lawyer would be puzzled to trace any connection between the President's civil service order (even when that document is handicapped by Secretary Gorham's begging circular) and alleged Northern bull-dozing of voters. To be sure, the Senator, with that caution which always characterizes his motions, suggests that "it is said" that this circular was sent to "persons having relations with the Government." But even this intimation is so vague that we must acquit Mr. Thurman of any attempt to prove that Northern voters were terrorized by a letter from the Secretary of the Republican Congressional Committee. That nobody was terrorized by the President's order of June 22, 1877, is too true. It remains, therefore, for us to receive Mr. Thurman's contribution to the latest edition of bloody-shirt literature as an expansive joke.

It is not uncommon nowadays for married persons who have been divorced to make new conjugal experiments, and finally marry one another again, and be quite contented with renewal of their first matrimonial experience. They can not clearly understand how much worse wives or husbands they can get until they have made a fresh trial. A man in Southern Indiana recently separated from his wife because she had such a temper. He said he would as soon live with the devil's daughter; and after he had procured a legal release, he removed to Ohio, and found another partner, from whom he secured a divorce in six months. He returned to Indiana, and resumed his wooing of No. 1. She rallied him on his asreasm, and he replied that she might be the devil's daughter; but that No. 2 was the devil himself, and he preferred, connubially, any member of the family to the head of it. Capt. Jack Kershaw, of Gonzales, Texas, has just been reunited to the bride of his youth. Incompatibility of temperament separated the young couple 30 years ago. She went back to her father's house in Tennessee with an infant daughter. She married again and removed to Texas, losing her legs during the rebellion. Kershaw married a Tennessee woman and made money; but his wife died, and he then opened correspondence with his former wife, through their daughter, now a mother of a small family in St. Louis, and they are conjoined again. Thirty years changes one's horizon, and ought to teach wisdom.

In the memoirs of Bunsen his daughter writes: "My father spoke of the secret societies—the Freemasons, about which he gave us a most interesting account. He said that Lessing had been the first to give a true idea of them, and that he had proved that Freemasonry, as it now existed, (although there might have been something of the kind among the Knights Templar,) went up no higher than the time of Sir Christopher Wren, and not, as most Freemasons insist, up to the time of Solomon. In the time of the former, party spirit ran so high, both in politics and religion, [see on this score Addison's essay, anent the fury of party feeling, temp. Anne,] that there was a general feeling of the want of having some common ground to meet upon, and with Sir Christopher the idea originated of forming a society, the members of which should be initiated with the greatest secrecy, as well as of adopting the signs used by the Guild of Masons as common means of recognition." The connection between professional architects and Freemasons certainly appears to have been closer in the last two centuries, in England at least, than nowadays. In the reign of Charles I., Inigo Jones presided as Grand Master; in 1666 Sir Christopher Wren became Deputy Grand Master, and in 1685 Grand Master, when he appointed Gabriel Cibber, sculptor, and Edward Strong, master mason of St. Paul's, the only master mason employed during the whole period of the erection of the edifice, his Warrant. Wren was born in 1632, in the reign of Charles I., and died in that of George I., 1723; thus living under seven sovereigns and the Commonwealth. To-day, were an Englishman to die at the age of 118, he would only have lived during four reigns. The Queen and her grandfather have between them reigned 100 years.

Taine's method as a critic consists in the application of extremes. He finds truth by a rigorous exclusion of extremes; he explains beauty as a harmonious blending of extremes. This method, which he has applied with eminent skill and considerable success to art, to literature, to philosophy, he is now applying, in his last work, The Origins of Contemporary France, to history. He looks at history as a perpetual movement from one extreme to another. Every historical phenomenon is forced into existence by some one extreme, and again killed by some other. But on its way from the one point to the other it passes through a third, where it stops for a moment; representing itself as the perfect reconciliation of both—free, independent, subject to neither, imposing by its truth, charming by its beauty. On this plan he has sketched the history of the French Church in one chapter, the history of the French aristocracy in another, &c., and everywhere he has discovered much new truth. Nevertheless, however brilliant and striking the results may be which this method has produced in details, there is still room for considerable doubt with respect to the final result, the sum total, which will issue from it. If history is nothing but such a perpetual see-saw motion, the human intellect ought to be satisfied by following one of its curves, as a repetition can produce nothing but that kind of mental sea-sickness which we call skepticism; and if history is something more, if those moments of truth and beauty are not glittering bubbles that burst, but real diamonds, rolling down into the lap of the coming generations as their inheritance from the past, the method is incapable of dealing with it.

A curious way of catching turtles off the coast of Cuba is employed by the natives, and with entire success. A species of remora, or bové, inhabits those waters; it has an oval disk on the top of the head and the adjacent parts of the back, the surface of which is crossed by transverse cartilaginous plates, and on the middle of the under surface are hook-like projections, connected by short bands with the skull and vertebræ, and their upper margin is set with fine teeth. By means of this apparatus, partly suctorial, partly prehensile through the hooks, the remora attaches itself to rocks, vessels, floating timber, and the bodies of other fish, using them either for anchorage or labor-saving transit. Boatmen seeking for turtles carry several bovés in a tub, and when near their game a properly equipped bové is cast off. The fish fastens itself to the turtle so firmly—it will permit itself to be torn asunder before it will release itself from any object to which it is attached—that the turtle can readily be secured. The living fish-hook is held by a ring in the tail, and a strong line made of the fibre of palm bark. By a peculiar manipulation, the fish is made to let go its hold of the turtle when both have been hauled into the boat. The remora is then returned to its tub to await the discovery of another turtle. We should introduce the remora as a simile into our language, to express extreme adhesiveness. Who has not known to his cost remora men and remora women!

The Reign of Terror had a very discouraging effect upon the time-honored custom of dueling in France. An illustration of it is furnished by what befell the Marquis de Croix, who, when Danton had refused to accept a challenge, gave him the choice, as he put it, to be kicked like a coward or shot like a dog. The arch-demagogue, who said that nature had bestowed on him the athletic form and harsh features of liberty, replied, with diabolical humor, that, having the selection of weapons, he would name the guillotine. This was no idle boast. Before the week was out the head of the Marquis rolled upon the scaffold. What terrible days were those! They seemed to differ from one another only by a difference in the decapitations. Danton met the same fate that he had appointed for Croix. He foresaw his end. When he declared, "All will go well so long as the people say 'Robespierre and Danton.' If they should ever say 'Danton and Robespierre,' woe to me," he proved himself a prophet. He had stout stuff in him, but no virtue. His speech at his condemnation was signally French. "My name is Danton. My dwelling will soon be in annihilation. But my name will live in the Pantheon of History." The axe in the great revolution simplified personal encounters. When two politicians quarreled—and all men were politicians then—it was much easier for one to denounce the other to the bloody tribunal than to get surgeon and seconds and go into the suburbs on a pinking or shooting excursion. One of the grim wags of the Terror was wont to say: "The guillotine saves me many duels. It always kills its man at the first fire."

A writer for the press, giving some of the incidents of the "good old days" when the South ruled the North so despotically at Washington, mentions that John Quincy Adams, representing the Quincy District of Massachusetts 34 years ago, had a personal difficulty with a Mr. Sangster, a Southerner. He was called from his seat in the House by a page, who said that Mr. Sangster desired to speak with him. He went out, and was met by a man who accosted him angrily with the words, "You are wrong, —— you; you are wrong, and I intend to kick you." Then the angry fellow passed his hand before Adams' face, and drew back to strike, but the latter seized his wrists and held them in a vise-like grasp until by-standers interfered. Sangster—for it was he—was arrested and locked up, but wrote a letter to the member from Massachusetts, ascribing his behaviour to sudden and uncontrollable passion. Sangster was tried the following March, when Adams, after describing the attempted assault, said his resentment had ceased as soon as an apology was made, and that he regretted the prosecution of the case. The court sentenced Sangster to 30 days' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of $100. The old man eloquent felt confident that the man had been instigated by some jackal of Jackson, as he expressed it, or that such conduct would recommend him to the patronage of John Tyler, from whom he was seeking an office. He was then 77, though still very vigorous in body not less than in mind, and at that, as at all periods of his life, refused to be frightened—a fact of which Southerners were fully aware.

GENERAL NOTES.

Gen. Robert Toombs has returned home from Washington.

There are four oldest newspapers in America, unless three of them lie.

Gen. Longstreet has accepted the Postmastership at Gainesville, Ga.

It is said of Hon. Edward L. Pierce that he has filled more offices than any other man of his age in Massachusetts.

Diphtheria is prevalent in Boston, also, and the Health Board does not seem to think it worth while to take any especial steps to prevent its spread.

The Philadelphia Law Association has purchased a portrait of the late Chief-Justice Taney, painted by a daughter of Justice Strong, of the Supreme Court.

The Norfolk Virginian gives evidence of enterprise in a double-sheet number for New Year's, containing full statistics of the business of that city and Portsmouth.

"Old Pomp," a horse owned by Seth S. Collins, of Columbia, Conn., has just died, at the age of 44 years, if the New-Haven Journal's "reliable authority" can be relied upon.

One hundred Northern men residing in the South have already expressed their intention to attend Mr. Dumont's conference in Charlotte, N. C. All the railroads are to carry such persons at half fare.

The Reading (Penn.) Times says that four men recently skated from Shoemakersville to Hamburg on the Schuylkill Canal, a distance of five miles, in 40 minutes, and returning made the distance in 30 minutes.

By a new law in Georgia murder is to be punished by death, unless the jury shall recommend imprisonment for life, or the Judge shall, in his discretion, extend that clemency where the conviction has been found solely on circumstantial evidence.

Speaking of the late Caleb Cushing, the Petersburg (Va.) Index-Appeal says: "He took the side of the Union during the war for 1861, believing he ought not to be blamed, considering the pressure of every kind that was brought to bear on even the most independent and honest minds at that time of fanaticism and popular frenzy in the North."

Senator Ben. H. Hill, of Georgia, has written another letter, reasserting that he acted in the truest friendship to Gov. Colquitt in the railroad bond indorsement matter, and that he has never entertained the slightest hostility to him. Somehow the Senator finds it necessary to make explanations often, and there are those in Georgia who scoff at them.

The Vicksburg Herald of Sunday, 5th inst., was printed in a much-enlarged form, and contained lists of the names of all the victims of yellow fever during the past Summer in that city and a dozen others in Mississippi, including Jackson, Holly Springs, Meridian, Port Gibson, Grenada, Water Valley, and Greenville. The compilation was made with much care and labor, and will be of value hereafter.

Speaking of the condition into which the financial affairs of Louisiana have been plunged under the Democratic Administration, (the rule of honesty and intelligence, you remember,) the New-Orleans Times of the 2d inst. says: "With a reduced debt, and with resources amply sufficient to meet all expenses, and steadily improving every year, the financial condition of the State has been retrograding, until the situation to-day is, in the last degree, grievous and discouraging."

AMUSEMENTS.

"AIDA" AT BOOTH'S.

A good deal is expected of the performance of "Aida" this evening by the members of Mr. Strakosch's opera company. With the names of Miss Kellogg and Miss Cary in the fore-front of the cast, and with a general distribution of parts that should prove eminently satisfactory, there is every reason to presume that the public anticipation in respect to Mr. Strakosch's venture will be amply realized. Special care will be taken that Verdi's popular work shall lose nothing of spectacular effect on the occasion of its present representation, and in choral and orchestral equipment, it is believed that it will be most complete. A military band on the stage will co-operate with the orchestra, and there will be an elaborate ballet led by the Minzelli sisters. The following is the distribution of parts:

Aida	Miss Kellogg
Amneris	Miss Anna L. Cary
Amonasro	Sig. Pantaleoni
Radames	Mr. Chas. Adams
Ramfis	Mr. Geo. Conly
King	Mr. Gottschalk

FOREIGN NOTES.

Over a dozen theatres in London have been given over to pantomime during the holiday season.

Mme. Essipoff, the Russian pianist, has been delighting the amateurs at Zurich with her performances.

An amusing little comedy entitled "Entre Deux Trains" has been produced successfully at the Théâtre Cluny.

At the Imperial Opera-house in Vienna, German adaptations of M. Massenet's "Roi de Lahore" and of M. Massé's "Paul et Virginie" are in preparation.

M. Massenet has in hand a new opera called "Herodiade," which is intended for the La Scala Theatre, at Milan. The first three of the five acts are already terminated.

Signor Coronaro's new opera, "The Creole," has been eminently successful at Bologna. The Maestro Ronchetti-Monteviti has been appointed Director of the Conservatorium at Milan by the Minister of Public Instruction in Italy.

The Minister of Fine Arts in Paris has under consideration a plan for rebuilding or enlarging the Conservatoire of Music, which is now insufficient for the number of classes. M. Charles Garnier has submitted plans which would entail an outlay of 8,000,000 francs.

Mme. Volpini was Elvira and Signor Murini Arturo in Bellini's "Puritani" at the opening of the Italian opera season at Moscow last month. Mme. Albani appeared in "Lucia" on the 25th ult., not knowing of the accident which had happened to her father-in-law, Mr. Frederick Gye.

The London Gluck Society, under the conductorship of Mr. Malcolm Lawson, has commenced its third season. The works announced for performance during the present year are the "Orfeo" of Gluck, the "Amphytrion" and "King Arthur" of Purcell, and the "Roland" of Lully.

Victor Massé's delightful opera "Galathée" has been revived at the Paris Opéra-Comique, with Mlle. Isaac and Mme. Engally in the parts of Galatée and Pygmalion. The former proved herself a brilliant vocalist; and the latter, a Russian lady of rich musical acquirements, was thoroughly effective.

At the Fantaisies Parisiennes, formerly the Beaumarchais Theatre, an operetta called the "Droit de Seigneur," has been brought out. It treats rather crudely of the legendary feudal marriage custom which Count Almaviva, as related in the "Marriage de Figaro," first abolished on his estates, but which he afterward wished to revive on the marriage of Figaro with Suzanne.

The musical circles in Paris have been much shocked at the sudden death, from cerebral congestion, of M. Pierre Eugène Schoeffer, the nephew of Mme. Erard, at the Château de la Muette, Passy, on the 13th ult. The deceased was the director of the piano-forte manufactory in Paris of Mme. Erard. He was only in his thirty-ninth year, and was much respected.

Miss Hopekirk, a pupil of Herr Lichtenstein in Edinburgh, and afterward a student at the Leipsig Conservatoire, made her appearance at the seventh of the Gewandhaus concerts, and achieved marked success in Chopin's piano-forte concerto in E minor and in the larghetto from Herr Henzelt's concerto in the same key. The Leipsig journals praise her performance highly.

Says the London Athenæum: "There seems little hope that the unfavorable verdict passed upon 'La Princesse Borowska,' the new five-act drama of M. Pierre Newski, produced at the Ambigu-Comique, will be reversed. Though not wanting in dramatic situations, the piece is cumbrous; its dialogue is weak, and lacks the Parisian cachet. The acting, moreover, is far from satisfactory."

The direction of M. Capoul, and the performances of "Les Amants de Vérone," at the Paris Ventadour, terminated recently, before a crowded house. It now appears that the sale of the theatre to the La Foncière Insurance Company for offices is not definitive, the deed not yet being signed. Should the negotiations not be concluded, two projects are put forward for reopening the theatre in January; the principal, and that which has the best chance of being adopted, is a two month's season under the direction of MM. Strakosch and Merelli, with Mme. Patti and Nicolini.

GEN. GRANT IN DUBLIN.

HIS SPEECH AT THE BANQUET GIVEN HIM AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

From the Herald.

Dublin, Jan. 4.—Owing to the lateness of the hour last night I did only scanty justice to the speech of Gen. Grant at the banquet given him at the Mansion House. The company rose and gave the Irish welcome when the General's name was proposed. The ex-President made, in response, the longest speech of his life, speaking in a clear voice, and being listened to with rapt attention. He referred to himself as a fellow-citizen of Dublin, and int

LONDON IN A DISMAL FOG.

THE CLOUDY ASPECT OF EVERYTHING.

EGYPTIAN DARKNESS IN THE STREETS—MISTY CONDITION OF EASTERN AFFAIRS—MUDDLE OF DOMESTIC POLITICS—FRENCH INVASION OF THE STAGE—LITERATURE AND JOURNALISM—"TRUTH" TRIUMPHANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, Dec. 21, 1879.

A week of frost and snow. The ornamental lakes in the parks frozen, the roads white and hard, everybody in a bustle of activity. The streets alive with Christmas buyers and sellers. Between whiles an occasional fog that closes the picture. One afternoon during the week, an Egyptian darkness settled upon city and suburb. It was a black fog, not even relieved by the yellow, smoky hue which is common. A black, inky fog—darkness in fact, at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Every store was lighted up, but gas only served to show how dark it was. Omnibuses, carts, carriages, wagons, all creeping along the roads. At the American Exchange a handful of disconsolate-looking men, recent arrivals from the other side, smoking big cigars and wondering at the strange phenomenon. Yesterday morning we had the genuine native fog, whitish in the suburbs, where the smoke is less dense than in the city, a yellowish brown in London proper, the shop lamps looking like witch lights; voices belonging to people you could not see, sounding strange and weird, and figures darting upon you out of the darkness, startling you into exclamations. "Now, then, where are you running to?" "How stoopid!" "Beg pardon!" "Ass, keep to the right!" "O, you idiot!" "Very sorry, Sir, pray forgive me!" "I ask your pardon, Madam!" "O, you jolly fool!" "Now, look out!" "Don't you get a-shoving me!" Such are the varied remarks, expostulations, and denunciations, according to the education and position of the speakers, which you hear as you work your way from East to West. The voices, like Tennyson's bells, answer each other in the mist, and the crowds come and go like shadows on a river at night, when trees and locks and hills are exaggerated into monsters that threaten to overwhelm the venturesome row-boat slipping homeward between the banks that in daylight were green with foliage and at night are heavy with funereal plumes.

The present condition of politics, foreign and domestic, the present condition of trade, the future prospects of the nation generally appear to be just as misty as the streets of London were yesterday, just as dark as the black fog on that afternoon early in the week. Voices answer each other in the darkness, voices from all quarters; voices that croak bad tidings, voices that prophesy good, voices that chide and denounce and cry aloud the hopelessness of the times. They come from all parts of the world, and from the most local corners of our own island—these warning cries, varied by occasional hopeful whispers. "The Czar has recalled the Kabul mission," says a diplomatist. "It is true," rejoins an inspired journalist, "and what is more he has fixed the date for the troops to leave European Turkey—we are to have peace, after all." The hopeful messages hardly die away before the croaker comes: "Russia says she will recall the mission; she says she will fulfill her treaties; that is only to gain time; she is concentrating troops on the Oxus; she is even now doing battle with the Turcomans and is on the way to Merv; in the Spring the great war for India will begin." Then come the political cries: "Beaconsfield wants to override the Constitution;" "Gladstone is a trafficator;" "The Liberals have come to their senses at last—they chuck Russia over;" "Conservative Ministries mean bad trade; it was always so, and will be to the end." And now we have touched the chord which vibrates the fog, and even starts a dull echo throughout the land. "There never was so sad a Christmas;" "Our trade is ruined;" "Sheffield is starving;" "Bradford is closing all its mills;" "The North is in the shadow of a crisis;" "The Liberals are to blame;" "The Tories have done it;" "Free trade is a failure;" "Give us protection;" "These cursed foreigners are underselling us;" "The workmen have ruined England with their strikes;" "The masters have grasped all and lost all." And so the cries come and go in the fog, and it is difficult to say which is right and which is wrong. Meanwhile, following in the footsteps of THE TIMES, your English contemporaries are now sending members of their staff to inquire into the real condition of the industrial districts. They call their representatives "commissioners." But the misfortune is that, like everything else the English journals do, they give a political color to their work. The Daily News of yesterday has followed me to Sheffield, but you get no fair, impartial account of the condition of trade, no financial investigation of exports and imports; no treatise on the relationships of foreign and home competition; but you are treated to a clever and graphic sketch of the suffering of the people, the misery of the wives and children of the unemployed operatives, and coupled with this sketch you have an editorial intended to excite the working classes against the Government. It is possible that to neutralize this political trick, the Standard will now send down to the same place and show that all this suffering comes from mistaken Liberal measures and wrong-headed views of liberty on the part of workmen and their self-created tyrants, the leaders of trades-union organizations.

THE POLITICAL FOG.

Gladstone says the Ministry does not represent the sentiments of the people of England. Yet on the eve of a general election the Ministry counts in the Legislature such overwhelming majorities as even Liberalism has never known. Members of Parliament have no fear of meeting their constituencies, which is a strong illustration against the ex-Premier. Mr. Gladstone's personal admirers and political followers declare that the policy of the Ministry on foreign affairs is unpopular, not only in England, but among all English-speaking peoples. Yet the Liberals cannot hold a single harmonious meeting on the subject; Canada and Australia send complimentary messages to Beaconsfield, and a deputation from the English in California comes over the sea to present the Premier with their approving words in a gold box. Nevertheless, there are unmistakable signs that the Liberals have changed their views on foreign affairs. They have come back to the old hostility to Russia. Not that this is a merely political move; it is not; it is the result of Russia once more appearing in her old form. The leading Liberals honestly believed at the outset of the Turkish troubles that Europe would be the better for putting Turkey down, and that Russia was honestly obeying a high and noble instinct. They felt that to war against Russia was to obstruct civilization, and they accepted, in good faith, Russia's emphatic declaration that she had no designs upon India. At the back of all this was the great horror of war which moves minds that are influenced by John Bright, who appears to think that nothing can justify war. Therefore, it is quite possible that the Liberal Opposition to the Ministry had in it a mainspring of honest philanthropy, and a real faith in the pacific and generous assurances of the Czar. The Afghan business has turned them against the Russians. The fact that the Kabul mission started after peace was signed; the fact that Cavagnari had solemnly undertaken not to send an Envoy to Afghanistan; the fact that Shere Ali took the opportunity of the Russian presence at Kabul to insult the British mission; the fact that Russian help of money and ammunition has been given to the Ameer, and the general disposition of Russia to trespass on the British sphere in the Afghan Mountains—these clear and definite breaches of honor and treaty, and the ingratitude they show toward Liberal sympathizers with Russian ambition, have alienated the great bulk of the Czar's political friends in England; and should an Anglo-Russian war be the outcome of the present difficulties, you will see a united power in and out of Parliament doing battle against the Colossus of the North, the Emperor of all the Russias. So far, then, some little light pierces the political fog of foreign politics; but nothing relieves the gloom of trade; and the other questions which will come before the country when the present Parliament dies are not of vital moment to either party in the State. An extension of the franchise in counties does not represent a warcry on one side or the other; the disestablishment of the Church will not be ripe for a fight for some time to come; and both parties may find an honorable meeting-ground touching trade disputes, sanitary reform, educational questions, and poor-law amendments.

THEATRICAL FOGS.

Just as native dramatic authors in America complain that their work is looked down upon by managers and doubted by the public, so in London we have arrived at the pass which welcomes the foreigner and pooh-poohs the native. In operatic art this has always been so; in regard to drama the same condition of things is rapidly being established. If a theatrical manager has the courage to produce an original work, the dramatic critics settle down upon it with newly-sharpened sensitiveness and newly-ground knives. No allowance is made for originality; not the smallest margin is given to the English playwright; the fact that the work is not an adaptation brings out every flaw with magnifying power. Gilbert's "Charity" was damned, it was original; Gilbert's "Ne'er do Weel" was crushed, it was original; Coghlan's "Lady Flora" was sneered at by the entire press, it was original; Lytton's posthumous play, "The House of Darnley," failed, it was original; Burnand's comedy, "Proof Positive," was a fiasco, the critics thought it was original; Byron's "Wrinkles" was laughed out of existence, it was original; "Conscience Money" was hissed, it was original; but "Pink Dominos," which had it been an English work would not have lived a week, makes a fortune for Wyndham & Henderson. "La Marjolaine," a filthy piece of the filthiest type, is again revived. "Proof," from the French, was damned, but the proprietors fought and pushed it into success; they would have let it go had it been English. "Diplomacy" is being played to empty benches, but its prestige must be maintained; it is French. "The Crisis" cost Wyndham in France $5,000; it is advertised at the cost of $250 a day; it will succeed; it is French; had it been Albery's own work the critics would have driven it from the London boards as promptly as they did his original comedies. "Forgiven," "The Spendthrift," "The Man in Possession," "Apple Blossoms," "The Two Thorns." A new comic opera. "Baby," has hit them at the Strand; it is French. The Comédie Française company is coming to play in London next July; the seats are being booked already by the enterprising management of the Gaiety, and places in the value of $50,000 have already been taken! French dramatic authors are having a new pull over their English contemporaries. A Frenchman sells his play sometimes before it is acted at from $2,500 to $5,000. An English manager buys it just as Wyndham bought "Les Fourchambault." He has then to pay the English adapter from $1,000 to $2,500. Thus he begins with a large investment, and he loses no chance that will contribute to success. He leaves not a stone unturned. In the case of "Les Fourchambault" the best possible company is engaged, the best theatre secured, the piece is magnificently mounted, it is rehearsed for six weeks, and the weight of the whole action every point the critics objected to is altered. Supposing "The Crisis" had been an original work; the English author would have been content with an nightly fee, leaving to the management only the risk of the cost of production. The manager would have engaged a company for a run of the piece; seven or ten days rehearsals would have been deemed enough; the piece would have been badly done, and the "Frenchy morality" of it would have been fatal; it would have run a fortnight; the author would have got $100 for his work and his damaged reputation; the specially engaged actors would have been dismissed, and an old play revived until a new French work could be secured.

LITERARY FOGS AND JOURNALISTIC MISTS.

War and depressed trade do but little harm to journalism. War, indeed, has made more than one journal, such, for instance, as the Daily News, the battle-cries of which will live again in military history. Depressed trade is less felt by newspapers than by magazines; it hurts newspaper proprietors very little when compared with the damage it does to publishers and sellers of books. As professions, those of literature and journalism in England are ruined by amateurs. To distinguish oneself in writing become, and, to some, so profitable, that the nobility and society press into the trade, while law, science, divinity, crowd pell-mell to partake of the rewards which, though few, are not despicable. The proprietor of the so-called organ of the Upper Ten, Vanity Fair, has produced a Wilkie mine in the gold dollar. Not every author is a titled person, a Duke, a lord, or a lady, except Bret Harte. It is a London puzzle how the famous American found himself in such society. Minor publishers do a large business by publishing books that never sell, written by authors who "pay the piper" in that they may be known in their own circle as having written a book. The Nineteenth Century, one of the few able publications that live upon names, would rather have a contribution from a Bishop, a Cabinet Minister, an Earl, or an eccentric ex-Minister than from a recognized literary man or woman. It is a common practice for a newspaper to procure an article from a distinguished person in political or clerical society, and having published it anonymously to paragraph right and left the news that such and such an article was written by such and such a lord. The worst of this system is that it popularizes inferior work and bad styles. Vanity Fair, for example, is the worst written Christmas number that England has ever seen. The lords and ladies may have been edited a little here and there, but the reviser has grown impatient of the work, and left the aristocratic matter full of grammatical blunders and absurdities. A journalist in the World has taken the trouble to collect some of the most startling examples of the Upper Ten's literary style. Here are a few of them. Lord Londonderry, writing about yachting, says: "May I ask you to insert in your excellent journal a few lines descriptive of a few scenes in the life of an amateur yachtsman—for I never pretended to be anything else, and am so represented in that popular publication, Bayly's Magazine," which prepares one for some of the literary gems that follow. For instance, here is a sentence which I recommend to your famous contributor, Mr. White, who, however, I will venture to predict, will not be less puzzled to understand the sense in which the substantive "lotus-eater" is employed than he is as to the grammatical structure of the sentence: "The expenses of the table depend upon your own luxurious taste and your own feelings of hospitality, according to the size of your vessel, and whether you are a 'lotus-eater' or not." Lord Desart is equally humorous; he makes the hero of his story "move one arm feebly to look out for the matches"; while an anonymous Duke is neither funny accidentally nor on purpose, but simply vulgar and cold-blooded, when he writes of the "only known persons who were in London during August" as those "who had remained for strategical reasons"; of "the Brame gathering and the Inverness meeting being successful to such a degree as to cause many a Southron to forgive the subsequent little accident of the failure of the Glasgow Bank." Is it to suit the tastes of its readers, or as the result of a course of blue-blooded visits, that the Whitehall Review has mixed its metaphors about the Princess Alice to a pitch of bewilderment which realizes the worst of literary fogs. "Queen of the rosebuds" is hardly typical of the the wife and mother, and it becomes confused when in the same line she is called "a casket that can fade and perish." Further on she is called "a matchless mercy of Providence," "Prince Consort's ideals," the daughter of "our glorious nugget," the late Prince Consort; while the Queen has achieved "a pinnacle of glory," and the writer unconsciously describes her Majesty sitting upon the pinnacle and weeping—as well she may, poor Queen.

Another view of journalism nowadays is the personal. Newspapers are started and conducted to avenge personal wrongs or to crush men to whom the proprietor objects. Truth, the cleverest and most fearless of journals, was evidently started to crush Wybrow Robertson. Mr. Labouchere might not admit that this was his primary object in giving Truth to the world, but you can trace its raison d'être from the first number. Robertson is the founder of the Westminster Aquarium. He induced Labouchere and others to join the Board of Direction. By and by there were misunderstandings, and Labouchere, the Chairman, as the spokesman of the board, charged Robertson with also using the pa

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Jan. 4, 1879.

The receipts of the principal kinds of Produce since par last have been as follows:

Beans, bols	46	Leather, sides	5,385
Cotton, bales	269	Molasses, hhds	2,900
Eggs, pkgs	397	Oil, Lard, bbls	19
Flour, bbls	8,212	Oil, Lubricat'g, bbls	50
Corn-meal, bbls	160	Pork, pkgs	511
Wheat, bushels	38,600	Cut-meats, pkgs	2,141
Corn, bushels	10,200	Lime, bbls	1,130
Oats, bushels	9,425	Butter, pkgs	4,334
Malt, bushels	5,075	Cheese, pkgs	2,568
Barley, bushels	3,300	Dressed Hogs, No	300
Oat-meal, bags	200	Tallow, pkgs	137
Grease, pkgs	128	Tobacco, hhds	147
Grass-seed, bags	200	Tobacco, pkgs	42
Hops, bales	129	Whisky, bbls	319
Lead, pigs	23

COFFEE—Firm and in fairly active request, with sales of 3,500 bags Rio per Bradley; 5,307 bags do. per La Plata. 2,812 bags do. per City of Rio, 4,264 bars Santos per Graf Bismarck, on private terms, and as Baltimore, 3,400 bags do. per Realism, on private terms; also, 400 bags Maracaibo and 500 picals Java on private terms.

COTTON—Has been very dull for early delivery at unchanged quotations....Sales were reported for prompt delivery of 508 bales, (of which 306 bales were on last evening,) including ——— bales to shippers. 508 bales to spinners. The speculation in options was very limited....Low Middling quoted at 9 1-16c.@9 3-16c.; Strict Low Middling at 9¼c.@9⅜c.; Middling at 9 7-16c.@9 9-16c.; Net receipts, 11,113 bales; gross, 13,213....And for forward delivery, Cotton has been less freely dealt in, but sold nearly stronger.....Sales have been reported since our last of 65,900 bales, of which 13,000 bales were on last evening, and 52,900 bales to-day, with 8,100 bales on the calls, on the basis of Middling, January, 9.49c.@ 9.50c.; February, 9.69c.@9.70c.; March, 9.85c.@9.86c.; April, 10c.; May, 10.15c.@10.16c.; June, 10.30c.@ 10.32c.; July, 10.29c.@10.31c.; August, 10.38c.@ 10.37c., showing an advance of 4@7 points, closing firm.

Closing Prices of Cotton in New-York.

	Uplands.	N. O.	Texas.
Ordinary	7 9-16	7 11-16	7 11-16
Strict Ordinary	8	8	8
Good Ordinary	8 3-16	8⅛	8⅛
Strict Good Ordinary	8 13-16	8 15-16	8 15-16
Low Middling	9 1-16	9 3-16	9 3-16
Strict Low Middling	9¼	9⅜	9⅜
Middling	9 7-16	9 9-16	9 9-16
Good Middling	9 13-16	9 15-16	9 15-16
Strict Good Middling	10 3-16	10 5-16	10 5-16
Middling Fair	10⅞	11	11
Fair	11 11-16	11 13-16	11 13-16
Stained.
Good Ordinary	7 13-16	Low Middling	8 11-16
Strict Good Ord	8 3-16	Middling	9 1-16

